STAR DETROIT SLUGGER

Sam Crawford, outfielder of the Detroit American leaguers, is having one of the best seasons of his career as a baseball player. His fine and consistent batting has helped greatly to make his team a strong contender for the pennant.

NO ROOM FOR SENTIMENT IN BASEBALL OF TO-DAY

Kindly Spirit Among Players of Winning Teams Is Conspicuously Absent.

Sentiment and good baseball can not jibe. What you did yesterday on the ball field matters nothing. It's what you do to-day. The star who won a flag for his team one year may find that the next season brings a faster and younger man to take his place if the team is properly run.

And this spirit is carried out to the players. There is no sentiment during the game. The player who is hurt is seldom given a cheering word. They feel sorry, of course, but they haven't time to offer regrets—the getting hurt is all in the game.

In the recent 17-inning game in Philadelphia, when Freddie Payne made his famous throw to second which caught Topsy Hartsel off the bag and saved the day, the Athletic left fielder was heart-broken. But little cared the Tigers. As O'Leary tagged him out, he didn't say: "I got you that time, old boy," or anything like that; my, no. Here's what he said:

"Now sneak back to the bench and get alongside of Connie Mack; tell him all about it, how you threw the game away, you big bonehead. Get under the bench with Rube Waddell and cry yourself to sleep. Let men play the game."

Kindly spirit, no; but it impressed upon Hartsel's mind the fact that he had lost the game, that his sleepiness had brought on the turning point of the struggle, that if anybody was to win it would be the Tigers. That mental suggestion made him a bad ball player the rest of the day.

When George Moriarity tossed away a two-hit game at Cleveland for Jack Chesbro by throwing the ball into the bleachers on a grounder from Crawford, did Sam say anything about tough luck as he passed third? Nope. Sam said:

Moriarity was so blazing mad that during the rest of the game he could not have thrown to first on a bet without taking plenty of time to steady himself.

There is no sentiment in baseball, with a winning team. When there is, the fight, the dash, the fire that makes the game what it is, is gone. Sentiment and good baseball are like oil and water.

FINE RECORD OF LEEVER

Pittsburg "Schoolmaster" One of Greatest Pitchers of Game.

Many fans have alluded to the Pittsburg "schoolmaster" as the lucky pitcher. The fans may some day cease talking about "Lucky Leever," and give the Goshen veteran credit for being what he is—one of the greatest twirlers the game has ever known. Look over the records, and you will discover that it is mighty hard to find a man with a record as good as that of the former schoolmaster.

This is Leever's eleventh season with the Pittsburg baseball team. He joined the Buccaneers in 1898, but had a sore arm and pitched but a single game, which he won. He went back to Richmond, from which team he had been secured, and remained there until the next spring, when he again joined the Pirates, and has been a Pittsburg twirler ever since. He is the only player now with the team who was with Pittsburg prior to the coming of President Dreyfuss and the consolidation of the Colonels and the Buccaneers.

Leever has a record that cannot be duplicated—that of winning almost two-thirds of his games every season he has been in the league. His average since he joined the Pirates, up to the beginning of the present season, is .661, he having won 164 games and lost 81. His record by seasons follows:

	W.	L.	Pct.	Place
1898	1	0	1.000	1
1899	20	21	.488	27
1900	15	12	.556	8

1902	15	7	.682	7
1903	25	7	.781	1
1905	20	5	.800	1

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION ALLITERATIVE ASSEMBLAGE

Teams of B's and C's Would Make Strong Showing, While W's Would Also Run Strong.

Any artful alliteration overdone is an example of audacious effrontery, or so say the great literary sharks of all time. The Greeks started it by framing up a maxim: "Nothing to excess." The Romans made only one exception to the rule, fighting, and handed it on down. When the Germans found it they immediately excluded beer from the law, and passed it on over to the Irish, who in turn took baseball out of the list affected by the nothing-to-excess maxim. Therefore, anything goes in baseball, even artful or artless alliterations. What started all this, however, was a glance over the batting averages of the American association and the noting of the fact that strong alliterative teams could be selected.

There are not enough A's to form a team, but the B's would do with a little judicious padding here and there. Beckley, Brashear, Bush and Burke on the infield would push Brown, Bateman and Barbeau to the outfield; Beville could catch and Braadom pitch. Mixing the metaphors slightly, these B's certainly would make hay. The C's are also to the marshmallows.

Put Cook, Coulter and Congalton, outfielders; Carr, Carlisle, Cross and Clark, infielders; Crisp, catcher, and Curtis pitcher, together in the same bottle; shake well before using, and a strong mixture will be the result. If McCormick, McChesney and McCarthy could get rid of the Mc's, they would strengthen the C's wonderfully. No D's, E's or F's appear numerous enough to form teams, and there are only four G's.

The H's are strong, with Hughes and Howley, catchers; Hall and Hitt, pitchers; Hopkins, Hayden and Hallman could fill the outfield, with Harley as shortstop and Hugh Hill on first base; Hopke and Hitchman would complete the infield. Going on down the list again, there are six K's, five L's and eight M's, counting Mc's, of course. The only other letter in the A. A. alphabet that sports a team is W, and it puts up a great crowd.

Nobody would kick on Wood, Wilson and West for pitchers, and Wakefield for the backstop. Woodruff, Welday and Wisser would work well in the gardens, while Otto Williams, Clyde Williams, Zeke Wrigley and Eddie Wheeler could be shuffled around most any way in the infield. If anybody objects to Wrigley under the reformed spelling rules, one of the pitchers would have to play second base.

Adopt Shin Guards.

It is a rather remarkable fact that two of the toughest catchers in the major leagues, Roger Bresnahan and "Nig" Clarke, should be the first to adopt the shin guards. Both are the hardiest sort of players and look as if they would be able to stand a whole lot of banging. The reason for their adoption of the protectors might be found, however, in the fact that both are the hardest sort of workers. They are after everything and are always playing fighting baseball. For this reason they are more likely to be injured than many of their less active contemporaries. The only possible objection to the guards is that the time used in taking them off and putting them on sometimes delays the game a trifle. Otherwise they look like sensible innovations.

New Fielder for Lajoie.

Lajoie is trying to build up his team. Tom Raftery, outfielder, is the newest Nap, and, according to his last season's record, he probably will make Ty Cobb and Hans Wagner look like they are standing still when it comes to stealing bases. Last year Raftery pilfered 96 cushions. He stole 80 in 120 games at Charleston, S. C., and copped 18 more in 41 games at Portland, Ore., to which team he was sold by Charleston. At Charleston he batted .201 and at Portland .295.

Thrift in the Family.

An elderly gentleman, her mother's father, and an elderly lady, her father's mother, were sitting on the porch talking pleasantly with each other. The little girl had often wished her grandparents were of the same name, like other children's grandparents.

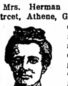
"Oh, yes," she said, with a sigh, "but they don't match."

SAVED AT THE CRISIS.

Delay Meant Death from Kidney Troubles.



Mrs. Herman Smith, 901 Broad Street, Athens, Ga., says: "Kidney disease started with slight irregularity and weakness and developed into dangerous dropsy. I became weak and languid, and could do no housework. My back ached terribly. I had bearing down pains and my limbs bloated to twice their normal size. Doctors did not help, and I was fast drifting into the hopeless stages. I used Doan's Kidney Pills at the critical moment and they really saved my life."

OLE MIS' MOON WITH THEM.

No Chance of the Visitors Being Homesick in the City.

Mme. Fairfax was wont to stand on the porch of her old Virginia home and rejoice on moonlight nights in the beauty, says the Youth's Companion. "There's my moon," she would say, as it rose from behind the eastern hills. "Look, Dahlie, see how beautiful it is," and her tiny colored maid, who was ever at hand with shawl or fan for her beloved mistress, would answer, enthusiastically: "Your moon certainly do look pow'ful handsome to-night."

When Mme. Fairfax journeyed to the city to visit her son, Dahlie, looking out of the window with wondering eyes on the first evening of her life away from home, exclaimed, in a voice of mingled astonishment and relief: "Well, I declar' to goodness, if ole Mis' Moon ain't done come along to Washington wif me an ole mis'! We can't be homesick nohow, wif ole Mis' Moon shining on us."

WONDERED WHY

Found the Answer Was "Coffee."

Many pale, sickly persons wonder for years why they have to suffer so, and eventually discover that the drug—caffeine—in coffee is the main cause of the trouble.

"I was always very fond of coffee and drank it every day. I never had much flesh and often wondered why I was always so pale, thin and weak.

"About five years ago my health completely broke down and I was confined to my bed. My stomach was in such condition that I could hardly take sufficient nourishment to sustain life.

"During this time I was drinking coffee, didn't think I could do without it.

"After awhile I came to the conclusion that coffee was hurting me, and decided to give it up and try Postum. I didn't like the taste of it at first, but when it was made right—boiled until dark and rich—I soon became very fond of it.

"In one week I began to feel better. I could eat more and sleep better. My sick headaches were less frequent, and within five months I looked and felt like a new being, headache spells entirely gone.

"My health continued to improve and today I am well and strong, weigh 148 lbs. I attribute my present health to the life-giving qualities of Postum."

RECEIVERS FOR THE BIG MILLS

PILLSBURY-WASHBURN COMPANY LARGEST MILLERS IN THE WORLD.

Due to Peculiar Conditions and Not Expected to Affect Other Milling Interests. The Trouble Will be Only Temporary.

Minneapolis, Aug. 10.—The Pillsbury-Washburn, Limited, the largest flour milling company in the world made application Saturday, for the appointment of receivers. The financial embarrassments of the company are admitted, although it is denied that the company is insolvent.

The petition for the appointment of receivers was granted by U. S. Judge Milton G. Purdy, and A. C. Loring, A. C. Cobb and Charles S. Pillsbury were appointed receivers.

The company's mills will not cease operations, and, pending the receivership, which, it is expected, will be temporary, the business will be continued. Other companies, all subsidiary to the Pillsbury-Washburn company, included in the receivership are the Minneapolis and Northern Elevator company, with 100 elevators along the Great Northern railway lines; the Minneapolis Milling company and the Minneapolis Power company. No concerns other than these are affected.

Henry R. Little has been the general manager of the company.

Management Criticized.

Minneapolis and St. Paul banks and John S. Pillsbury, a heavy stockholder in the company, petitioned the court through an attorney for the appointment of receivers and the issuance of a restraining injunction on the continuance of the business under the former management.

The company's indebtedness amounts to about $9,000,000 and the deficiency between the assets and the liabilities is said to be $1,500,000.

In the complaint filed with the court a criticism is made on the manner in which the business has been conducted in the past few years. The company's present financial embarrassment is stated as due to extravagant management.

No admission of insolvency is made and it is stated that any action for the purpose of showing the company to be insolvent would be stoutly opposed by the company, but the defendant, through its attorney, Clark Hemstead, united with the complainants in praying for appointment of receivers.

BURNED TO DEATH

Three Tots, Imprisoned in Burning House, Are Cremated.

Minneapolis, August 8.—Three children imprisoned in their room, were burned to death at noon yesterday. The three children of Bengt Lindberg, 3324 Nineteenth avenue S. were locked up in the house while their mother went out. In some unknown manner the house was fired and before the room could be broken into all three were burned to death.

The children were Bert, aged four years, Gertrude, aged two, and Doris, aged one.

The lives of the children might have been saved but for an earlier mistake on the part of the neighbors, who mistook the house fire for a prairie fire, and did not go to the children's help at once.

Two of the charred bodies were found in bed, and one near the gasoline stove, indicating that the fire was caused by at least one of the children playing with the stove.

DIE IN BURNING BOAT

Steamer Premier Burns at Warren's Landing on Lake Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, August 8.—The steamer Premier, Capt. Stevens, was burned to the water's edge at Warren's Landing, the northern terminus of Lake Winnipeg, Thursday morning.

Six passengers and two of the crew lost their lives and docks and other buildings in the vicinity were destroyed.

The fire started in the hold near the engine room during the night and spread with frightful rapidity, and those who lost their lives were either smothered or burned to death in their berths.

When the cry of fire was raised those who escaped did so in scanty attire by jumping overboard when they either swam to shore or were picked up by boats.

Several of the passengers and crew were severely burned.

Burglars Loot Camp.

Farris—About 11 o'clock at night burglars entered the camp of M. N. Koll at this place and succeeded in carrying away all the provisions on hand, together with revolvers, guns and other valuables. When the employes of Mr. Koll's lath mill arose next morning they were surprised to see their provision room emptied. Then they recalled the fact that at about 11 o'clock they heard some one pounding at the door, but thinking it was one of the other men working around they paid no heed. No clue has yet been secured that will lead to the capture of the burglars.

SENATOR W. B. ALLISON DEAD.

AGED IOWAN DIES SUDDENLY AT DUBUQUE, IA.

Long a Big Figure in the Upper Branch of Congress—Cummins Candidate for Toga.

Dubuque, Ia.—Senator William Boyd Allison died in his Locust street home at 1:33 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, aged 79 years. With him at dissolution were members of the household and a physician. In a bulletin announcing the death, Drs. Hancock and Lewis assigned heart failure as the cause.

Announcement of the senator's death came as a shock to his neighbors and the community, as few were aware of his illness. While for the last two years he was in declining health, and while he suffered loss of much vitality during the months of the present summer, there was no news emanating from his home indicating the seriousness of his condition.

Senator Allison passed through a serious illness at Washington last winter. Three weeks ago he consulted a Chicago physician and a fortnight ago went to his country home a few miles from this city to escape the heat and secure the benefits of country air and quietude. He remained there until last Saturday morning, when he was brought back to his city home.

During last week nurses were employed to care for the senator for the first time since his illness, and this was the first intimation anyone had of a change for the worse in his condition. The senator lost consciousness after Saturday and did not fully recover his mental faculties up to time of his death. He had been under the constant surveillance of physicians for the last few days.

Lake Forest, Ill.—Gov. Albert B. Cummins of Iowa Tuesday night announced himself as a candidate to succeed Senator Allison in congress. The governor paid a glowing tribute to his late political adversary's services to Iowa and the country at large, then frankly declared his ambition to be elected to the upper house by the legislature of his state. He also announced that "some one will be appointed at once to occupy Senator Allison's seat for the remaining months of his unexpired term."

Tribbey said he had been taken from his home by 18 masked men, who had tortured him.

Aid in Form of Provisions and Clothing Sent to Sufferers.

Fernie, B. C.—Relief for the sufferers from the terrible forest fires in the Elk river district, which destroyed a dozen large and small towns, was generously tendered from the northern part of the United States and from all over Canada. Great trainloads of provisions, clothing and everything else which the sufferers most need were sent to the stricken towns.

The latest estimates on the loss of life range in the neighborhood of 200, although the authorities declare that when the final calculations are made the number dead will not exceed 250. The monetary loss was $7,500,000, the insurance on which is estimated at not over $1,500,000. More than 6,000 persons were rendered homeless by the awful conflagration.

At latest reports such towns as Michels and Hosmer were still fighting the fires. Many bodies were recovered in this city as soon as the heat from the smouldering ruins reduced and made it possible for rescue parties to go into the stricken parts of the city. Trains bore the people away in large numbers, but now they are returning in family groups, and it is the intention of authorities to again build up the town. This intention has been expressed also in most of the other villages and towns which suffered by the fire.

PERISH IN ARCTIC.

Danish Explorer Erichsen and Two Companions Lost.

Copenhagen.—Mylius Erichsen, the Danish explorer, met death in the far north. According to information in a telegram to the committee of the Denmark-Greenland expedition Erichsen and two companions who sailed with him from Copenhagen June 24, 1906, to the unexplored regions of the northeastern coast of Greenland, perished in a snowstorm. The three men were on a journey over the ice when disaster overtook them.

A later telegram brings the information that Erichsen and his companions were on an ice floe when they were overtaken by the snowstorm, and that the floe drifted out to sea. They drifted for several days, growing weaker and weaker. When the floe finally was driven back to land the three men did not have sufficient strength to make the effort necessary to return to the station. They must have perished on the shore. The Eskimo who brought the news of the disaster arrived at the station in a dying condition and succumbed immediately after making his report.

Paris in Dark for Two Hours.

Paris.—Paris was plunged in darkness for two hours Thursday night because of an attempt of electricians to carry out a general strike similar to that of March, 1907. The maneuver, which fortunately proved abortive, is attributed to a desire of the revolutionary laborites for revenge for an order issued by the prefect of the Seine closing the labor exchange to the federated unions of the department of the Seine because of the part the labor exchange played in the recent disturbances.

Lighter Full of Naphtha Blows Up.

Bangkok, Siam.—While the British bark, Lyndhurst was discharging naphtha into lighters in Koh-Si-Chang harbor, one of the lighters, containing 8,000 packages of naphtha, blew up.

THAW IS BANKRUPT

RECEIVER APPOINTED AT PITTSBURG AT HIS REQUEST.

LIABILITIES ARE $453,140

Petition Says Many Creditors Are Seeking to Enforce Unjust Claims—Loans from Mother Not Disputed.

Pittsburg, Pa.—A voluntary petition in bankruptcy was filed after eight o'clock Friday night in the United States court by Attorney Morschauser of New York, representing Harry K. Thaw, who is now confined in the Duchess county (N. Y.) jail.

Roger O'Mara, a well-known Pittsburg detective and personal friend of the Thaw family, was appointed as receiver. His bond was placed at $200,000, and John Newell and James W. Platt, two prominent business men of this city, became securities for Mr. O'Mara.

The most interesting information given regarding the proceedings is to be found in the petition asking for the appointment of a receiver in which it is alleged that the action is taken for the purpose of preventing his property being dissipated in litigation over claims, many of which are unjust. The figures in the bankruptcy petition show that this refers to the lawyers and doctors.

Thaw states that he is confined in jail in Duchess county, N. Y., and is likely to be there for some time. He says some of his creditors have commenced suits against him and others are contemplating similar action. He is unable, he says, to give the litigation his attention, owing to the confinement.

Among the disputed claims are the following: John B. Gleason, New York, $80,000; Hartridge & Peabody, New York, $60,000; J. J. Graham, Newburg, N. Y., $2,954; Dr. Hammond, New York, $1,000; Dr. Wagner, Binghamton, N. Y., $4,040; Dr. Jolliffe, New York, $5,245; Dr. Jones, Morristown, N. J. $6,000; Martin Littleton, New York, $8,055; Dr. Hamilton, New York, $12,000; Dr. Dana, New York, $1,600.

WOMAN FALLS 900 FEET; LIVES.

Balloonist Drops Into Tree and Is Saved from Awful Death.

Abbottsford, Wis.—Dropping through the air, 900 feet, when the rope attached to her parachute snapped, and caught in the branches of a tree 30 feet from the ground where sure death awaited her, had she landed, Mrs. Eva Jones, woman balloonist for a carnival company which is conducting a street fair here, still lives. The branches broke the fall, and the woman was taken from the tree in an unconscious condition. An examination showed that Mrs. Jones was suffering from several broken ribs and was otherwise internally injured. Physicians state that she will recover.

SEVERE STORM IN BOSTON.

Rainfall Is Heavy and Store Basements Are Flooded.

Boston. — From a meteorological standpoint Friday was "black Friday" in Boston, the city being visited in the afternoon by the heaviest electrical disturbance in years.

The storm lasted for nearly an hour, during which time the rain gauge at the United States weather bureau registered a fall of 1.65 inches.

Heavy damages resulted from the flooding of basements in the downtown sections of the city. In some of the newspaper offices on Washington street there was two feet of water in the press rooms.

Close Call for Fifty Passengers.

Springfield, Ill. — Fifty passengers on board a Chicago, Peoria & St. Louis train, bound from Peoria to Springfield Friday afternoon, narrowly escaped death on a burning wooden bridge which spanned a high embankment. The locomotive and the baggage car ran 50 feet on the bridge when the rails spread and the locomotive bumped over the ties until nearly across then it turned over and stopped the passenger coaches clear of the fire. The baggage car caught fire and was consumed.

Minnesota Bank Closes.

Washington.—The First National bank of Belle Plaine, Minn., was closed Thursday by order of the comptroller of the currency upon advice received from National Bank Examiner Frank O. Hicks that the bank was insolvent, followed by the suicide of the president of the bank, J. G. Lund. George C. Ball was appointed receiver.

GREAT AIRSHIP WRECKED

ZEPPELIN'S MACHINE BLOWS UP AND IS BURNED.

Echterdingen.—A dramatic end came Wednesday to Count Zeppelin's long-awaited endurance flight in his monster dirigible balloon, and the proud airship which Tuesday was cutting rapidly through the air and outdistancing pursuing automobiles, lies in an open field near here, a mass of twisted, useless metal. The count, almost heart-broken and unable longer to endure the sight of his shattered craft, left by train for Friedrichshafen.

The airship had left Neckenheim, and over night had visited Mayence and begun the homeward journey, when misfortune overtook it. Soon after its departure it was found that the front motor was working badly. A landing was made here and repairs were being made when suddenly a violent storm sprang up.

The balloon swayed to and fro, sometimes rising a few feet from the ground. Then a formidable gust of wind struck the airship broadside. At first the craft heeled over and then her bows rose in the air, carrying with them a number of soldiers holding the ropes. After poising a moment at a height of 50 feet, the airship came crashing to the ground. With a thunderous report the forward motor exploded. From the bows of the balloon shot forth a livid flame, while from the rear escaped thick clouds of black smoke which caused the entire structure to disappear from the view of the thousands of spectators.

When the air cleared the balloon was seen lying in an open field on a high plateau with only the ragged, tangled strips of aluminum envelope still remaining. The metal stays and bands and portions of the motors were strewn about in pieces like old iron, and blackened with smoke and scorched.

Officers rushed forward and found that several soldiers had been hurt. The four engineers who were on the forward platform of the airship had escaped death, but were suffering from injuries.

PRESIDENT SAYS HE DID IT.

Assumes Entire Responsibility for Discharging Negro Soldiers.

Oyster Bay, N. Y. — President Roosevelt in a statement issued late Friday night made it clear that the entire responsibility was his for the issuance of the original order discharging the battalion of negro soldiers for alleged participation in the Brownsville (Tex.) rioting and the refusal to permit a suspension of that order.

The president was shown the interview which was had in Washington with Gen. Henry C. Corbin, U. S. A., retired, in which Gen. Corbin stated that no credit or blame in the matter rested with Mr. Taft. After reading the interview the president, through his assistant private secretary, Rudolph Forster, gave out the following:

"Gen. Corbin's statement is absolutely correct, and it was entirely proper that he should make it. The substance of the message from the president which he quoted was made public long ago. In the Brownsville matter the entire responsibility for issuing the original order and for declining to allow its suspension was the president's."

GREAT STRIKE IN CANADA.

Twelve Thousand Canadian Pacific Mechanics Quit Work.

Winnipeg, Man.—Trade unionism in Canada has given defiance to the Canadian Pacific railway. Without any untoward incident and ostentatious show, the mechanics and kindred workmen quit work Wednesday, and all shops, big and little, on this great system are idle.

It is estimated that 12,000 men went out, the largest number being 2,200 in Montreal and 1,500 here. Two thousand men left work between Fort William and Vancouver, all at the dictates of the executive. Even old workmen in line for pensions went home and it seems to be the most complete tie-up in the history of railway shops in Canada.

Turkish Cabinet Resigns.

Constantinople.—Said Pasha, the grand vizier, and the newly-formed ministry have resigned. The sultan has accepted the resignations and invited Jemalledin Effendi, the Sheik-ul-Islam, and Kiamil Pasha to form a new cabinet. The newspapers assert that Mehmed Ali Bey, minister to the United States, has been relieved of his functions. It was reported that the sultan was stabbed in the breast Monday night by a minor palace official, but that his vest of mail turned the point of the weapon.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Entered as Second-class matter August 20 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879

The railroads have at last consented to make excursion rates of a cent and a half a mile to the state fair.

The Republican state committee have promised to make a warm campaign for the election of the entire state ticket.

There are ten candidates for sheriff in Polk county, so the people can have some choice but up here it seems to be IT or nothing.

Had the people of Highlanding put fifteen hundred dollars into ditching and work instead of a grader they would they would have had something to show for it besides a "rake off" for a few of the rightly chosen ones.

A farmer living in the town of Garnes made the statement to us a short time ago, that he thought it was the duty of the newspaper through the county to inform the people of the drinking habit of sheriff Nelson so they would not again elect him for sheriff.

We can not understand why some of the newspapers of the northern part of state continue to make pettie attacks on Judge Mills. They never cite an instance where he has neglected his duty as Railroad and Warehouse Commissioner, but say he should not be elected. Give us one or two good reasons why Judge Mills is not entitled to the full support of the republican party, as one of their nominees, or shut up.

Public Opinion Rules.

Without public approval a newspaper cannot live; the people can destroy it any day by merely refusing it. In its analysis nay, in its first and every analysis step by step day after day, the existence of a newspaper is dependent upon the approval of the public. Editors submit their work to the only real referendum and recall that of a constituency having virtual power of life and death over their journals. Yet a newspaper can never be influential if it seek no more to please the unthinking or echo the cries of ignorance and passion. Indeed to become truly commanding a newspaper must have convictions, must sometimes fearlessly oppose the will of the very public upon which its existence depends.

Editors who are worthy of their calling do not mistake the clamor of a demagouge for the voice of the people nor the schemes of the cunning for the counsels of wisdom They do not confuse true democracy with partisanship. They maintain a fearless independance. Their work is performed with integrity public spirit and self sacrifice Their thoughts, their energies and virtually their lives are devoted to a ceaseless study of public affairs, and to work for the public good. Thus the newspaper becomes a public institution —Olberg Journal.

CHAOS IN A LIBRARY.

Francisque Sarcey had a splendid library, of which he was very proud, and there are many stories told in Paris about the singular fates, comic and tragic, that overtook the librarians who successively looked after the late critic's books.

The first was a released convict, who pleaded that to be much among good books would reform him. Sarcey, pugnacious in print, was the kindliest of men in practice. He yielded to the plea. Unfortunately his protege carried the ethical cure too far, for one day he decamped, taking with him the best of M. Sarcey's good books.

The second was a distinctly minor dramatist, Debrit by name and debris by nature. He had worn himself into an incurable melancholy by persistent addiction to the humorist vandeville habit. Sarcey saw that abstinence from further composition could only be secured if the man had some light occupation with a living wage. He established him in the vacancy left by the convict. A few days later as the critic, returning from the theater, drew his carriage up before his door he heard a smash of shivered glass above him, followed a minute later by what he no longer dared to call a dull thud on the pavement below. The woe begone librarian, wearied of life, had thrown himself out of the window With his last breath he cursed Sarcey as his murderer.

Third in order was one Bernard, a gladsome youth, whose blithe temperament promised relief from the gloom cast by his predecessor. In the height of his glee he pulled out all the books so as to rearrange them in more logical order on the shelves. He stacked them in craggy pyramids all over the floor. But it happened to be the special day of the week whereon Sarcey was wont to have a few of his theatrical friends, male and female, to lunch with him. After lunch a dance followed as a matter of course. Nothing could dismay the librarian. He whisked the pyramids to four walls and joined in the dance. Next day he asked permission to go home and see his mother. He never returned. The pyramids had to be sorted out by Sarcey's manservant and put pellmell on the shelves again.

The last librarian was Mlle. Blouska, an elderly Polish maiden, who proved an invaluable assistant until she perished miserably in the fire at the charity ball in Paris.

INDIAN MARRIAGES.

Marriage among the Hopi, a tribe of the Pueblo Indians, is an institution regarding which those most concerned have least to say When the parents of a girl find it expedient for her to get married, they look up an available man and negotiate with his parents. After the matter has been arranged the principals are notified. The girl goes to the home of the groom's parents and grinds corn for them for three weeks, while the groom makes a kind of sash for the bride Then one morning at sunrise they both bathe their heads in cold water, which completes the ceremony. There have been instances of the groom's refusing to go through the performance, which has then proceeded without him and been accounted valid, and several weeks later he has yielded and had his head bathed.

The Navajo ceremony is much more elaborate and impressive, but then the Navajo girls are much nicer The regular tariff on a Navajo girl entering the port of matrimony for the first time is twelve horses. On the second occasion the tax is nine horses, while subsequent entries are free.

This is not purchase money, but is merely a tribute of respect to a mother-in-law and a token of appreciation of the care and expense involved in bearing and rearing the lady, a recognition not unworthy of consideration by civilized grooms. On the other hand, and deserving of great condemnation, is that law of many tribes, unwritten, but of much sanctity, that a man and his mother-in-law shall never meet after the ceremony.—A. W. Dimock in Outing Magazine.

Coral Islands.

A coral island is sometimes torn to pieces by a great storm, showing that islands disappear in more ways than one. This happened to an atoll in the Marshall group in 1905, when it happened to be in the path of a terrible hurricane. Waves about forty feet high swept over the hapless speck of land, carrying every particle of verdure and every form of life into the sea, and not a human being was saved. The upper part of the coral was broken off and swept away, and a few days later nothing but the placid waters of the ocean was seen where the atoll had stood.

Smells in Great Cities.

The man with a nose always recognizes the smell of the place, and he has only to land at Calais to smell garlic. London's smell—when the Londoner returns—is just soot and fried fish. Paris always smells of chocolate and wood smoke. Florence is violets and sewage. But so soon as you get to Russia the smell is quite different. Moscow, the city of fruit that comes from the Crimea, has a special smell of the cranberry (which has various names) in late summer. And you cannot land in St. Petersburg without noticing instantly the smell of the place. —London Chronicle.

Pyramids.

The largest of the Mexican pyramids, that of Cholula, has a base measurement of 1,488 feet and a height of 178 feet. The Great pyramid of Egypt, sometimes called the pyramid of Cheops, stands on a base each side of which was originally 764 feet long; but, owing to the removal of the coating, it is now only 746 fet. Its height, according to Wilkenson, was originally 480 feet 9 inches, its present height being 460 feet.—New York American.

Weeds Worth Millions.

New Zealand flax is one of a number of wild weeds that yield their gatherers great wealth. The flax, the strongest known, grows wild in marshes When it is cultivated it dwindles and its fibers become brittle and valueless.

Indian hemp grows wild, and out of it hasheesh, or keef, is made. Keef looks like flakes of chopped straw. It is smoked in a pipe; it is eaten on liver; it is drunk in water; it produces an intense, a delirious happiness, and among orientals it takes the place of beer and whisky.

The most valuable weed of all the wild growths is the seaweed. The nitrate beds of South America, which yield something like $65,000,000 a year, are nothing but beds of seaweed decomposed.—Columbus Dispatch.

A Substitute.

Mrs. Millsap's new girl, who never had gone out to service before and had had scarcely any experience as a cook, appeared to be willing and industrious and was quick to learn. In view of her inexperience she had readily agreed to work for $3.50 a week. Mrs. Millsap, who was an expert cook, had taken much pains with her education in that line, and at the end of five or six weeks Jemima was equal to any demands upon her in the line of kitchen work. The mistress was greatly surprised, therefore, when the maid one morning gave her a week's notice.

"What does this mean, Jemima?" she asked. "Haven't I treated you fairly?"

"Yes, ma'am," answered the girl, "but I've learned how to cook now, and I've found a place where I can get $5 a week right at the start."

"You didn't ask me to raise your wages. Do you think you are acting fairly with me?"

"Oh, I'm going to do the square thing with you, Mrs. Millsap," said Jemima. "I've got a sister about a year younger than I am, and she's perfectly willing to come here and work for $3.50 a week—till she learns cooking anyhow."—Youth's Companion.

Old Time Mountebanks.

Coryat, describing the mountebanks he saw at Venice in the seventeenth century, who were adepts in the art of advertising, speaks of the "oration to the audience of half an hour long, wherein he doth most hyperbolically extol the virtues of his drugs and confections, though many of them are very counterfeit and false." And the author of a "Tour Through England" (1723) writes of a mountebank he saw in Winchester: "He cures all diseases and sells his packets for sixpence apiece. * * * It is a prodigy how so wise a people as the English are gulled by such pickpockets."

Dogliks.

As usual, he complained that the biscuits were heavy, the coffee weak, the bacon burned, and so forth.

It's Results That Count

In cooking, it's the results that count. So when a housewife starts to make Bread or Rools or Pies, naturally she wants her cooking to have that rich crisp, pleasing odor. But it must also have that whiteness, lightness and wholesomeness which is so essential to good cooking.

Much of this depends upon the flour—and thousands depend upon,

A Bibliophile's Reply.

Mandell Creighton, who was bishop of London, had a horror of lending his favorite books. A fellow clergyman once visited the bishop and took a fancy to an old edition of Shakespeare. He borrowed the volume and did not think to return it for several months. Finally the minister returned it with a letter, saying. "My Dear Bishop—I have great pleasure in returning the volume you lent me."

The bishop answered, "My Dear Brother—All the joy is thine."

Between Supper and Breakfast.

Many persons, says a well known doctor, though not actually sick, keep below par in strength and general tone, and he is of the opinion that fasting during the long interval between supper and breakfast, and especially the complete emptiness of the stomach during sleep, adds greatly to the amount of emaciation, sleeplessness and general weakness we so often meet. It is logical to believe that the supply of nourishment should be somewhat continuous, especially in those who are below par. If we would counteract their emaciation and lower degree of vitality, and as bodily exercise is suspended during sleep, with wear and tear correspondingly diminished, while digestion, assimilation and nutritive activity continue as usual, the food furnished during this period adds more than is destroyed, and increased weight and improved general vigor are the results.—London Gl[illegible]

GOOD CAUSE FOR WRATH.

Art Collector and Irritated Waiter Had the Same Feelings.

A Chicago art dealer was talking about the wrath of William T. Evans, the New York collector upon whom so many bogus paintings have been imposed.

"He's awfully angry," said the art dealer, repressing a smile. "Some of his costliest pictures, you know, have turned out fakes. His blood boils when he thinks of the way he has been duped.

"He told me the other day that he could hardly understand the rage that possessed him against every petty little insignificant dealer that had cheated him. He said it was like the rage of a waiter that he had noted one afternoon at luncheon.

"At luncheon, Mr. Evans said, he called his waiter's attention to a dead fly in some dish or other.

"The waiter, as he took the dish away, muttered with a malevolent look at the limp insect:

"'I'd give a two-dollar bill if I knew for certain that this was the fly that's been buzzing about my nose all the morning.'"

For Months—Burning Humor on Ankles —Opiates Alone Brought Sleep —Eczema Yielded to Cuticura.

"I had eczema for over two years. I had two physicians, but they only gave me relief for a short time and I cannot enumerate the ointments and lotions I used to no purpose. My ankles were one mass of sores. The itching and burning were so intense that I could not sleep. I could not walk for nearly four months. One day my husband said I had better try the Cuticura Remedies. After using them three times I had the best night's rest in months unless I took an opiate. I used one set of Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills, and my ankles healed in a short time. It is now a year since I used Cuticura, and there has been no return of the eczema. The General Demand of the Well-Informed of the World has always been for a simple, pleasant and efficient liquid laxative remedy of known value; a laxative which physicians could sanction for family use because its component parts are known to them to be wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, acceptable to the system and gentle, yet prompt, in action.

In supplying that demand with its excellent combination of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the California Fig Syrup Co. proceeds along ethical lines and relies on the merits of the laxative for its remarkable success.

That is one of many reasons why Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is given the preference by the Well-Informed. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

COLLEGE SPRINT IS BIG BASEBALL ASSET

Money Spent for That Feature Is Well Invested—Makes Men Keep In Training.

The time will come when the men behind the baseball money bags will realize that one of the wisest investments they can make will be the price of a high-class player spent for a trainer, whose control over the players will be absolute, not only during the training season, but throughout the championship race.

It is no attempt to curb personal liberty to insist that players follow rigid training rules during the time they are getting into condition or playing for a pennant. Rather it is recognized by the brightest stars in the game that such a course will not only mean better and faster baseball, but will reduce the number of accidents and lessen the danger of serious injury.

It is probable that when first tried this plan would meet with opposition. But the opposition would come, not from the earnest, conscientious player of good habits, who is willing to give a dollar's worth of endeavor for every 90 cents he is paid, but from the careless, mayhap brilliant player like Rube Waddell, whose natural ability keeps him in the game when his habits ought to bar him.

The spring trips of the major league clubs are not real training trips. They no more resemble the training of a college team than the English idea of fair play resembles the simon pure article.

Under the absolute control of a trainer like Mike Murphy or Keene Fitzpatrick, armed with authority, some actual benefit might be returned for the expenditure of the $5,000 or $8,000 spent now in the southern tour.

A little college spirit in baseball would be a good thing. College spirit means among other things a willingness to stick to training rules, no matter how painful it may be, and to cut out minor dissipation, such as 99 out of every 100 men in everyday life indulge in, but which do an athlete no good.

It was college spirit that, years ago, gave Yale teams the reputation of never quitting, even when defeated, and many a great victory has been snatched from almost certain defeat by the sons of Eli, through bulldog determination to win in the face of all odds.

The life of a man in training is not one of ease. It means abstaining from much that is pleasant. It means early hours and careful dieting. It means that the no-smoke and no-drink signs hang out all of the time.

It also means a clean and healthy body; a clear eye and quick wit; more speed on the bases and in the field; a careful supervision of physical conditioning and the minimizing of accidents such as have weakened teams in the present race.

It would seem that by a siege of practice the left-handers could be educated into hitting effectively against these sidewheelers. Why should it not be policy to take all the left-handed hitters on a team, and allow them to hit nothing but left-handed pitchers during the four or five weeks that the team is in training? In this way it would seem a majority of the left-handers would become accustomed to this delivery, and the weakness which they show nowadays against southpaws would diminish.

STAR BATTER FANS ON NON-BREAKING CURVE

Mordecai Brown Tells How to Find the Man at the Plate—Gives Examples.

BY MORDECAI BROWN.

Feint the batsmen into expecting a certain ball, then give him something else, is the simple explanation for success in the pitcher's box. That is my advice to youngsters breaking into the game who aspire to be successful twirlers.

Almost every young pitcher that breaks into the big leagues possesses everything in the way of speed, curves, change of pace and other styles of delivery that the old-timers have, but the man with the greatest speed and the best breaking curves often gets an awful thumping. These are invaluable assets, of course, but the whole plan must be to outguess the opposing batter. If you do he hasn't a chance; if you don't, then you have not.

There was a degree of truth in that remark. Every slab artist must know his opposing batsman. They differ greatly, and to cross them is the whole purpose in life of the pitcher. So vary the degree of your curves. That is what I did to that batter who struck out on a curve ball that didn't break. I shot him one of those big benders, and a little later handed him another curve only this time the break was very small. He looked for a wide curve, and it wasn't there, so he missed it.

I don't know when I have ever enjoyed striking out a man more than I did Ty Cobb in that last game in Detroit last fall. I got him twice in that game, in the fourth and in the ninth inning. It was the first time I fanned him that gave me the greatest pleasure. Sam Crawford had opened the fourth with a two-base hit. Then came Cobb and everyone looked for the great Ty to do something.

The first ball I pitched was a fast curve with a sharp hook, close in to him. Ty tried to hook it, but missed. Back I came with another right in the same place; short, sharp and fast. Ty wasn't looking for just the same thing and had to hustle to even swing on it. He hooked again and missed just as far. That nettled the champion batsman; two strikes and no balls and both swung on.

I waited a few seconds, looking at him and let him stand there watching. Then I shot a straight, fast one right at him, neck high. Cobb had to duck it, but the ball was straight over the plate, and only breast high when he was standing up naturally. He knew it and swung desperately, missing the ball more than either of the others. Then he walked to the bench, took his drink of water and sat down.

NOTES OF THE DIAMOND

Physicians attending John Freeman of the Minneapolis American association team, who was injured in an Indianapolis game while sliding to the home plate, informed him that one of the bones in his right shoulder was broken and he was compelled to retire from baseball this year.

The New York Americans signed a new pitcher and let one go. "Doc" Newton has been turned over to Stallings' Newark club, and a twirler named Billiards has been signed. Billiards has been pitching for the Meriden (Miss.) team of the Cotton States league.

Manager Armour of Toledo returned from a scouting trip of the western league. He could find no good material there. He set out after Swacina and Wilson of Pittsburg.

The Cincinnati Reds bought Marty O'Toole, pitcher, of the New England league. He had been playing with Brockton.

Mother's Accomplishment.

In the Bohemian set of New York two of the popular members are a well known writer and his wife, who also has written several books. They have a daughter about four years old. Recently the little girl was visiting at the home of a friend and her small playmate asked her: "Can your mamma sew?"

The daughter of the literary pair evidently was a bit chagrined. She could not remember that she had ever seen her mamma sew. She is a truthful child and would not claim any advantages she was not sure of, yet she felt that mamma's honor was at stake.

"I don't know if mamma can sew," she replied, dubiously, "but she can smoke a cigarette."

English Idea of It.

Little things frequently illustrate the English view of American geography very picturesquely. An Englishman had taken the Pacific Express at Philadelphia, and, feeling tired, had retired to his berth. Just before he fell asleep he happened to remember that he had forgotten something, so he put his head out between the curtains and called:

"Portah! Portah!"

The porter came.

"What is it?" he said.

"Please wake me when we get to San Francisco, you know.'

Astonished Great Pianist.

A collection of anecdotes of musical celebrities just published at Leipsic contains this one under the head of Anton Rubinstein. When the great pianist was making his tour of the United States he sat one day in a railroad train looking out upon the scenery. Suddenly a man sitting across the aisle spat over Rubinstein's head out of the open window. The master drew back and gazed in astonishment and anger at the vulgar American, who smiled and said, soothingly: "Don't worry; I know my distance."

ALMOST A SHADOW.

Gained 20 lbs. on Grape-Nuts.

There's a wonderful difference between a food which merely tastes good and one which builds up strength and good healthy flesh.

It makes no difference how much we eat unless we can digest it. It is not really food to the system until it is absorbed. A Yorkstate woman says:

"I had been a sufferer for ten years with stomach and liver trouble, and had got so bad that the least bit of food such as I then knew, would give me untold misery for hours after eating.

"I lost flesh until I was almost a shadow of my original self and my friends were quite alarmed about me.

"First I dropped coffee and used Postum, then began to use Grape-Nuts although I had little faith it would do me any good.

"But I continued to use the food and have gained twenty pounds in weight and feel like another person in every way. I feel as if life had truly begun anew for me.

"I can eat anything I like now in moderation, suffer no ill effects, be on my feet from morning until night. Whereas a year ago they had to send me away from home for rest while others cleaned house for me, this spring I have been able to do it myself all alone.

"My breakfast is simply Grape-Nuts with cream and a cup of Postum, with sometimes an egg and a piece of toast, but generally only Grape-Nuts and Postum. And I can work until noon and not feel as tired as one hour's work would have made me a year ago."

"There's a Reason."

Dishonest Politician Gets Little Satisfaction from Promise.

"Honest politics alone pays in the end," said he. "Your dishonest politician comes out like Lurgan of Cincinnati. Lurgan was canvassing for votes. He dropped in at a grocer's.

"'Good morning,' he said. 'I may count on your support, I hope?'

"'Why, no, Mr. Lurgan,' said the grocer. 'I've promised my support to your rival.'

"Lurgan laughed easily.

"'Ah, but, in politics,' said he, 'promising and performing are two different matters.'

"'In that case,' said the grocer, heartily, 'I shall be most happy to give you my promise, Mr. Lurgan.'"

Her Reason.

Not long ago there was tried in an Ohio court a suit for damages wherein the principal witness, a woman living near Dayton, was induced to come to court only after several subpoenas had been served upon her.

When the dilatory witness was finally brought before his honor, he said in his severest tone:

"What reason can you assign, madam, for disobeying the summons of the court?"

"I ain't got none, Jedge," answered the woman, meekly, "only we've got small-pox down to our place, an' I thought mebbe you'd be kinder prejudiced agin it."—Illustrated.

ABLAZE, LEAPS FROM WINDOW

MRS. FANNIE DUDOVITZ BADLY BURNED BY FIRE STARTED BY GASOLINE.

Heroic Rescue of Baby. J. O'Connor Enters Blazing Room at Great Peril and Carries Out the Young Infant.

St. Paul, Aug. 17.—Maddened by pain caused by flames which covered her body, Mrs. Fannie Dudovitz, 59, Temperance street, leaped through a window of her home yesterday morning following the flight of her ten-year-old daughter Eva, through the same exit, leaving a two-months-old child in the room in which the fire was raging. The flames had already began to devour the buggy in which the baby was sleeping when J. O'Connor rushed into the house and carried the child to a place of safety. The fire department was called to extinguish the blaze.

The mother was seriously burned and was taken to the city hospital.

Mrs. Dudovitz was preparing a meal for a son on a gasoline stove while her daughter was arranging the table. The mother went into another room to attend to the baby.

Suddenly her daughter Eva saw flames raging in the kitchen in the center of the floor and she screamed with fright. Her mother responded quickly, but before she could reach her the little girl had jumped from the window to the ground, escaping injury.

The flames had gained rapid headway in the room and they were surging towards the ceiling when the mother entered. Exit by the door was shut off by the fire. To reach the open window through which her daughter had leaped she had to pass through the body of the fire.

Covered with only a light morning wrapper, Mrs. Dudovitz rushed through the flames, and when she went flying through the window her body was a mass of fire.

She was injured by the leap and she was unable to move from the ground while the flames continued to consume her body.

Neighbors quickly came to her rescue. After some time the flames in the woman's clothing were extinguished.

Despite the pains the mother wailed about her infant still in the house. Grasping the situation Mr. O'Connor with rare courage ran into the kitchen, passed through the fiery furnace and reached the room and grasped the baby from the buggy.

The flames had already attacked the baby carriage and a few seconds later they would have reached the child.

Mr. O'Connor who rescued the baby was slightly burned about the lower limbs.

Beulah Cox was found dead at the home of Mrs. Wright Tuesday, and since then the town and county authorities have been prosecuting a searching inquiry, which resulted in the arrest.

GETTING TIPS FOR TEDDY!

AEROPLANE IS WRECKED

WRIGHT TRIES NEW METHOD OF DESCENT AT LE MANS.

Le Mans, France. — The Wright aeroplane suffered an accident Thursday which will require several days and possibly a week to repair.

After two superb flights Wilbur Wright essayed a new and daring method of descent. He stopped the motor at a height of 75 feet and tried to come to earth on a gradual descending glide. The calculations were not absolutely correct and the left wing of the aeroplane came in contact with the ground. This tore the frame of the machine. Mr. Wright was not injured.

Mr. Wright said he did not regard the accident as serious, and explained that these were only incidental experiences devoted to acquiring complete mastery of the difficulties of aviation and the execution of new maneuvers.

Mr. Wright's first flight Thursday eclipsed all his former efforts. He made seven complete tours of the field over the tops of the trees. According to the official time he was in the air eight minutes and 53 seconds. The aeroplanist was incommoded by a 15-mile breeze, but in spite of this he showed greater facility in maneuvering than he did when there was a dead calm. His landing was easy and successful in every way.

Mr. Wright's second flight, which lasted two minutes, was a novel one. The aeroplanist soared and descended at will, executing bewildering turns. Suddenly, as viewed from the grandstand, the machine lost its speed and began curving slowly toward the earth. All appeared to be going well until it was tilted to leeward and the delicate frame-work struck the ground, with the result that it was damaged and torn.

Mr. Wright calmly stepped out and examined the wreck. He was quickly surrounded by anxious friends, to whom he explained that there had been no accident in the air, but that he had merely decided to try a new descent. He shut off the motor at a height of 75 feet and endeavored to float downward.

DISASTER IN FRENCH NAVY.

Six Men Killed on Gunnery School Ship Couronne.

Toulon.—Six persons were killed and 18 injured in a gun explosion aboard the gunnery school ship Couronne Wednesday off Les Salins d'Hyeres.

The accident occurred while a number of recruits were receiving instructions in handling a 164-millimeter gun, the breech of which blew out. Three of those wounded are in a desperate condition.

Acquitted on Fifth Trial.

Roanoke, Va.—The fifth trial at Floyd courthouse of John Richards, the Floyd county school teacher charged with the murder of his rival in love, Maurice K. Francis of Roanoke, ended Friday in acquittal. The first, second and fourth trials resulted in disagreements. The third trial resulted in conviction of murder in the first degree and Richards was sentenced to be hanged. The supreme court granted a new trial.

FLEET LEAVES NEW ZEALAND.

American Battleships Sail from Auckland for Sydney.

Auckland, N. Z. — The American Atlantic fleet departed for Sydney at 8:15 o'clock Saturday morning. The weather was fine and large crowds were ashore and afloat to bid farewell to the Americans. Excursion craft loaded to the rails dotted the harbor.

As anchors were hoisted and the flagship pointed her nose toward the mouth of the harbor, pandemonium reigned. The shore batteries belched forth parting salutes which were answered by the American ships, and the whistles and sirens on the excursion flotilla resounded across the harbor and were re-echoed by the distant hills. The American ships were kept busy dipping their flags in answer to the salutations of the New Zealanders.

Sir Joseph Ward, the premier, and a large number of officials were aboard a government steamer, and as each battleship passed Sir Joseph led the rousing cheers for the Americans. The battleship Kentucky, which was the last in the line, responded lustily with cheers for New Zealand and the bands on both vessels played the British and American national anthems and "Auld Lang Syne."

AUTO DASHES INTO CROWD.

Many Hurt in Accident at Hill Climbing Contest.

Algonquin, Ill.—Two persons were seriously injured and a dozen others were painfully hurt when an automobile that was taking part in a hill climbing contest, swerved and ran wild into a throng of spectators here Friday evening.

The machine, which was running 50 miles an hour, had arrived at the brow of the hill and was within 100 feet of the finishing line, when a tire burst, sending the car into the crowd.

Long Branch, N. J.—E. R. Thomas, former banker and racehorse owner, was seriously injured here Friday night, when his automobile struck and wrecked a carriage.

FOUR CHICAGOANS DROWN.

Launch Is Capsized in Dells of the Wisconsin River.

Kilbourn, Wis.—By the capsizing of a pleasure launch on the Wisconsin river Thursday afternoon four Chicago people were drowned, as follows: Miss Mabel Ward, Mrs. W. G. Heath and E. G. Pfeiffer and his son Ralph.

The launch containing nine persons, among them Mrs. Pfeiffer and daughter, was returning from a trip through the Dells. When near the dock the boat got into the waves of a passing steamer and capsized, throwing all the occupants into the water.

Enterprise, Kan.—William Q. Hinz, 21 years of age, of Milwaukee, Wis., was drowned here Thursday evening while bathing in the Smoky Hill river. He was an insurance man.

IRA D. SANKEY DIES

FAMOUS SINGING EVANGELIST HAS PASSED AWAY.

BLIND AND BROKEN DOWN

He Wrote the Gospel Hymns of the World and Traveled with D. L. Moody for Many Years.

New York.—Ira D. Sankey, known as an evangelist throughout the Christian world, died Thursday night at his home in Brooklyn, but the news of his passing did not become generally known until Friday. Mr. Sankey was 68 years old.

For the last five years he had been blind and had suffered from a complications of diseases brought on by overwork. But almost to the very last he worked at hymn writing. His tours throughout this country and Europe with Dwight L. Moody, the evangelist, brought him into wide prominence.

Sankey, it might be said, wrote the gospel hymns of the world. In China, Egypt, India, Japan, in almost every language known to man, Sankey's hymns are sung. He received a large income from his publications and leaves a considerable estate. Among Mr. Sankey's most familiar compositions are "The Ninety and Nine," and "When the Mists Have Rolled Away." His songs are said to have had a circulation of more than 50,000,000 copies.

He was a rapid composer and wrote book after book of gospel hymns. During the last five or six years of his life he was interested in preparing and publishing the story of the gospel hymns. At the same time he saved his wonderful voice for posterity by singing into phonographs. The records were sent all over the world.

Sankey first met Moody at a Y. M. C. A. convention in Indianapolis. Moody was so charmed with the young man's voice that he urged him to accompany him on his evangelistic tours. Sankey explained that he was married and could not give up his position. "You must come," said Moody; "I can't get along without you." Sankey consulted his wife and they cast in their lot with Mr. Moody. They visited Great Britain from 1873 to 1875, and again in 1883, and made many tours throughout the United States.

PITTSBURG MAN DEFRAUDED.

Invests $600 in Faro Game and Has Dealer Arrested.

New York.—A story of a faro game at high stakes in a luxuriously furnished private dwelling in the fashionable section of the upper West side was disclosed Thursday at the hearing of Martin Phillips, who was arrested, charged with larceny. Phillips was arraigned in the West side court and was held in $1,500 for trail.

Neville R. Moxley, formerly of Pittsburg, Pa., who gave his present address as this city, was the complainant, alleging that he lost $600 in a faro game dealt by Phillips. In his story to the court, Moxley said he came to New York to work "a system" with Phillips. Moxley said Phillips wrote to him saying they could make $2,000 out of Phillips' employer. Moxley, it was alleged, was to put the necessary money and to get 60 per cent. of the proceeds, the remaining 40 per cent. to go to Phillips. Moxley said he came to this city with $600, to which Phillips added $300, saying that much was needed to work the "system." When the magistrate asked Moxley if he did not know the arrangement he had entered into was illegal. Moxley hesitated and he was severely lectured by the court for his part in the matter.

BIG BENEFIT FOR CY YOUNG.

Great Crowd, Loving Cups, Traveling Bag and Flowers Presented.

Boston.—Nearly 20,000 persons from all over the New England states, attended Thursday's benefit game for Denton Tecumseh (Cy) Young of Paoli, O., the Boston American league baseball team's veteran pitcher, at the American league grounds. Three silver loving cups, a traveling bag and two big floral pieces were presented to Young.

The main attraction, besides "Cy" himself, was a game between Boston and a team of star players picked from the other American league clubs. The all-stars won by a score of 3 to 2.

Three Killed in Collision.

Piqua, O.—Three persons were killed and probably 25 fatally injured in a collision between two limited traction cars on the Western Ohio Traction line, nine miles north of Piqua, Monday night.

The dead: William Bailey, car inspector, Piqua, O., legs cut off and skull crushed; William C. Quillen, Lockington, O., skull crushed; James Kohl, Detroit, Mich., skull crushed.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

Burn Slashings.

Hibbing—The disastrous forest fire in British Columbia has aroused Minnesota officials to a consideration of the necessity of a law requiring lumbermen to burn "slashings."

"Slashings" were undoubtedly the main cause of the Fernie fire, that has cost a hundred lives and millions of dollars worth of property.

"Slashings" made it impossible to fight effectively the terrible Hinckley fire that swept Northern Minnesota in 1894, demanding a sacrifice of 418 lives and 300,000 acres of valuable timber lands.

Minnesota has since enacted legislation to protect its forests from fire, but as yet has no law requiring lumbering companies to burn their "slashings," and there is still a possibility of a repetition of the Hinckley holocaust.

Uncle Sam Is Foxy.

Duluth—The state of Minnesota is inclined to believe that the government of the United States is slipping one over on it. The state has protested to the interior department against the resurvey of the swamp lands in Northern Minnesota. The officials of Minnesota suggest that if the survey of the lands on the Indian reservations is in error, it is very probable that mistakes were made in the entire appraisement, and the governor asks that if any survey be made it include all the lands in dispute and thus settle the entire controversy.

Much Stripping.

Aurora—While mining work is being prosecuted much less vigorously this season than last year, a tremendous amount of stripping is in progress on the Mesaba range. Operators in general and the Steel Corporation in particular are making ready for the time when ore will be needed, and it will be necessary to bend every energy to supply it. Dozens of steam shovels and large forces of men are engaged in removing overburden. Some great holes are being dug. A number of pits that already are producers are being enlarged.

Music at State Fair.

Hamline—Minnesota's "semi-centennial" state fair this year will be a musical event and not a mere exposition of field and factory products. Miss Nellie A. Hope, director of music at the fair, has arranged orchestral concerts for no less than four of the exhibition buildings. From the Minnesota Ladies' Symphony orchestra, an organization of forty-two players, she will select the musicians for these four daily concerts. Several of these players have state-wide reputations as soloists, and all of them are carefully trained in orchestral work.

Butter Contest Ends.

St. Paul—The scores of the third monthly butter contest were not as high as those made in former contests, and the quality of the butter, tho high, is not quite up to the mark for which the North Star state is famed. The scores of the contest just closed are:

J. L. Wallstioo, Harris	96½
James T. Pomeroy, Lake Bentoo	96
A. G. Schandle, Rapidan	95½
Ollie Olson, Fairmont R. F. D.	95
R. Wishart, Le Sueur	93

One hundred and sixty tubs were entered.

Pitchfork Stabs Child.

Rochester—At the farm of Philip Cassiday, three miles north of Rochester, John Cassidy, a 15-year-old boy, threw a pitchfork down from a grain stack, not knowing that his brother Edward had come close under the stack. The fork struck the little fellow on the side of the neck, felling him to the ground. The accident happened in the afternoon, and the boy did not recover consciousness until late in the evening. The fork penetrated over an inch and a half into the child's body, but it is believed that he will recover.

Drowned in Rain Barrel.

Cokato—Jons Paulson, a pioneer resident of Cokato, was drowned in a rain barrel. His body was found in the morning, head foremost in the cask. He was 78 years old and was in feeble health. Early in the morning he left the house to get some water at a rain barrel near the dwelling. Evidently he lost his balance, for later his body was discovered with the legs protruding from the cask.

NEWS NOTES.

St. Paul—Judge Bunn holds that the city and not the property owner is liable for injuries caused by defective sidewalks, altho the property owner laid the walk.

Hamline—The Minneapolis Automobile club will have charge of Automobile day at the Minnesota state fair. This conclusion was arrived at at a meeting held in the Commercial club rooms. It was attended by President Nelson, of the state fair management, and a number of members of the Automobile club.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Red Lake County Minnesota.

Subscription price $1.00 per year in advance. If not paid in advance $1.50

Some voters will vote for McGinty, some for Linihan and some for Jones, while a few special deputies will vote for IT.

Attorney Funkley of Bemidji has been sending his pictures around to be posted up as a candidate for representative from this district. About all the remarkable feature we can see about him is that he is very bald headed.

Herman F. Anderson of the town of Sanders has filed for the republican nomination for superintendent of schools. Of course no one up this way knows him but it said that he is a man well qualified in every way for the position.

If you can not personally visit all the voters, they might appreciate a request for their vote made thru the colums of their local paper, as there are a large number of people that are of the opinion that a favor that is not worth asking for is not worth granting.

It is certainly unplesant to have work and advertising done by a man that calls himself a business man and when you send him statements never receive any reply. We dont know whether they handle all their bills that way but we do know it would not do in the newspaper business, as we have to pay our bills or get off the earth.

Ex sheriff Dan Linihan has filed for the Democratic nomination for sheriff of Red Lake County This will make a fight between him and J. W. McGinty of Thief River Falls, for the Democratic nomination, that will keep pace with the republican scrap. We now have three candidates for sheriff, besides It.

We had a peculiar dream the other night to the effect that a county official declined to be re elected to office, and when we inquired for the cause we were informed that the socialist party were in power and that he did not get any more wages for being a county official than the farmers were getting for farming or the coal heavers for heaving coal.

S. A. Swanson, of Red Lake Falls, is a candidate for the republican nomination for the office of probate judge this year. Mr. Swanson has run for office a number of times in the past, but always fell a few short of getting enough votes to elect him. His opponent N. W. Tarrant is a competent and able official and it is not probable that the voters will want to make any change. - Thief River Falls News.

Had the present sheriff of Red Lake county conducted the office in a respectiable manner in the interests of the tax payers and people, there would undoubtly be no opposition to his re election, but when a man is placed in a position of honor by the people he should try to fill it with honor and dignity. Instead of getting filled up with "booze" and swearing in large flocks of deputy sheriffs in Thief River Falls to go to Red Lake Falls to replevin an old automobile The tax payers have to foot the bills for this kind of tomfoolery and they don't prepose to stand for any more of it.

Bryan At The State Fair.

In spite of rumor to the contrary William Jennings Bryan Democratic candidate for the presidency of the United States is to speak at the Minnesota state fair, and has announced Monday Aug. 31, as the date of his one and only public appearance in this state during the comming campaign.

The official announcement of his coming followed upon a visit of invitation paid him by President B. F. Nelson of the Minnesota state fair and Frederick Lynch former campaign manager for Gov. John A. Johnson. In a previous telegraphic correspondence Mr. Bryan had sent his compliments to Gov. Johnson but was unable to accept the invitation of the Minnesota state fair as he was "in the hands of the committee"

The eloquence of Messrs Nelson and Lynch so pervaded Fairview however' as to take Mr. Bryan out of the hands of the committee and place him among the stellar attractions at the semi centennial

As a presidential candidate Mr Bryan refuses to speak when those who hear him must pay an admission fee, so Mr. Nelson has ridden grandly between the horns of the dilemma by planning for a "Forum of 1908." Several acres nearest the Snelling avenue gate of the state fair grounds are to be fenced off, and this section of the groud is to be thrown open to the public while the peerless one is preaching the doctrine of Democracy.

For Sheriff.

I herby announce myself as a candidate for the republican nomination for sheriff of Red Lake County at the Republican Priamaries on September 16th and respectfully ask for the support of the voters.

A. R. JONES.

A Long Dance.

The longest dance on record is probably that of William Kemp, an actor of some celebrity in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. He was a comedian and danced all the way from London to Norwich.

He was attended by a taborer, a servant and an overseer, and it was doubtless a good thing for him that there were no omnibuses or police then, for they would probably have imposed more impediments in the way of his progress than did the country people.

He started with several presents of groats and crooked sixpences for luck, and, laden with these, he danced to Stratford with out rest.

Subsequently he went in for early rising to avoid market people, and, though suffering from a sprain of the hip which he received, he danced it well again, to the delight of the crowd which accompanied him, some 200 in number.

When he reached Norwich he had to dance in and out of the city twice, for his overseer missed him in the crowd and made him do the distance over again to avoid any possibility of error.—London Graphic.

Live Mule, Dead Boar.

An odd hunting adventure recently befell a British officer in India. He was mounted on a fleet mule and was running down a wild boar, intending to lance it, when the animal turned, bit the mule's leg and then fled again. The mule screamed savagely, and in a minute she had deposited the officer on the ground. Then, kicking out vigorously five or six times, as if to see that her legs were all right, she started after the unfortunate pig at lightning speed, with fury in her eyes and vengeance in the crook of her ears. The race was not long, and the wild boar soon realized that he had exasperated a relentless enemy. He was soon winded, and the mule, coming up with him, caught him by the backbone with her teeth, crunched it and threw him to the ground and then, before he could rise, kicked him so viciously that he was a dead boar in less than no time. Then the mule returned to her master and gave utterance to a "heehaw" of triumph.

HE GOT THE TICKET.

A Simple Little Errand That Made a Lot of Commotion.

One of the most amusing accidents imaginable happened to an old gentleman in one of our large eastern cities. He was asked to buy a ticket to a fireman's ball and good naturedly complied. The next question was what to do with it. He had two servants, either of whom would be glad to use it, but he did not wish to show favoritism.

Then it occurred to him that he might buy another ticket and give both his servants a pleasure. Not knowing where the tickets were sold, he inquired of a policeman, and the officer suggested that he go to the engine house. So the old gentleman went to the engine house that evening, but there was no one in sight. He had never been in such a place before and stood for a moment or so uncertain how to make his presence known.

Presently he saw an electric button on the side of the room, and he put his thumb on it.

The effect was electrical in every sense of the word. Through the ceiling, down the stairs and from every other direction firemen came running and falling, the horses rushed out of their stalls, and, in short, all the machinery of a modern engine house was instantly in motion.

Amid all this uproar stood the innocent old gentleman, who did not suspect that he had touched the fire alarm until the men clamored around him for information as to the locality of the fire.

Then he said mildly, "I should like to buy another ticket for the ball, if you please."

The situation was so ludicrous that there was a general shout of laughter, and the old gentleman bought his ticket, and the engine house resumed its former state of quiet.—[illegible]

A SURPRISED SWORDSMAN.

Judge Goffe's Play With a Bragging Fencing Master.

A fencing master appeared in Boston one winter in the seventeenth century and had erected a stage on which he strutted up and down at certain hours, defying any and all to engage in sword play with him.

After this had gone on for several days and the man's boasts had become insufferable Judge William Goffe and Edward Whalley, the famous English political refugees, disguised themselves in rustic costume and appeared before the alleged master. Goffe held in one hand a cheese wrapped in a napkin, which he used for a shield, and carried a mop which he had soaked in muddy water as he passed a puddle.

Thus equipped, the judge mounted the stage. The fencer railed at him for his impudence, asked him what business he had there and ordered him to begone. The judge stood his ground. Then the gladiator made a pass at him with his sword to drive him off. The judge received the sword in his cheese and held it there till he had drawn the mop over the professor's face and smeared him with mud. Another plunge by the enraged maitre d'armes resulted similarly, this time the judge poking the mop into his eyes. This operation was repeated a third time.

Then the maddened fencing master dropped his ordinary sword and grabbed up a huge broadsword. Thereupon the judge said:

"Stop, sir! Hitherto, you see, I have only played with you and not attempted to do you harm, but if you come at me now with the broadsword know that I will certainly take your life!"

The master was impressed by the firmness with which the judge spoke, for he dropped the point of his weapon and exclaimed: "Who can you be? You must be either Goffe, Whalley or the devil, for there was no other man in England that could beat me!"—Boston Post.

In Praise of Cockneys.

Cockneys are the best natured people under the sun. It is notorious that a big London crowd is of all crowds in the world the most harmless and the easiest to manage. But see them also in their ordinary collections, outside the gallery door of a popular theater or crowding in the carriages of an excursion train—what fun and kindness and wholesome give and take! A deliberately rude or offensive cockney is hardly to be met.—G. S. Street in Pall Mall Gazette.

The Mortality List.

It's Results That Count

In cooking it's the results that count. So when a housewife starts to make Bread or Rools or Pies, naturally she wants her cooking to have that rich crisp, pleasing odor. But it must also have that whiteness, lightness and wholesomeness which is so essential to good cooking.

WONDERFUL MIRAGES.

False Peak of Teneriffe and Illusions in the Dardanelles.

The peak of Teneriffe is known among deep sea sailors as the "false peak." Owing to some peculiarity of the atmosphere it is always seen by mirage in exactly the opposite direction from which it lies, and only the fact that all captains know that the mirage appears long before the true peak is visible through the most powerful glass prevents many a ship from sailing many miles out of her course. It is hard for a greenhorn to believe that the majestic purple mountain towering astern or on the port beam apparently only a short distance off is in reality miles away in exactly the opposite direction and the seemingly solid earth at which he is gazing is only a reflection on the clear mirror of the air. Many weird tales are told of shipwrecked men who have steered for the false peak in the expectation of finding land and have perished of hunger and thirst while pursuing the phantom mountain.

Sometimes the passengers and crew of a vessel on the lookout for the false peak see a much rarer and more beautiful mirage, that of a ship in the sky. It usually appears about 10 o'clock in the morning, about ten degrees above the horizon and under full sail, every delicate spar and tapering mast clearly visible against the blue ether and even the play of light and shadow in the bellying canvas plainly discernible to the naked eye. It generally remains in sight half an hour or more before gracefully fading away. The oldest mariner can never remember having seen the mirage of a steamer in that latitude, but always that of a full rigged ship, and this peculiar fact has given birth to many romantic legends about the ship in the sky, all connecting it in some way with the false peak.

The vicinity of the Dardanelles is the real home of mirages, and it is seldom that any vessel sails along the Syrian coast without seeing one or more. Oddly enough, the mirages of the Dardanelles are always the reflections of objects that can be seen with the naked eye and are invariably distorted in grotesque and fantastic caricatures of the things reflected. It is certainly startling to see a steamer bearing down with her masts where her water line and should be and the water line where the tops of the masts and funnel ought to show, while her decks are in the right place, thus adding to her uncanny appearance, but this is a frequent sight near the Dardanelles. There is one peculiar feature of the mirages which hover near the false peak—the real objects of which they are reflections are so far away that very often they are never sighted until long after the reflection has vanished, and sometimes not at all.—New York Press.

The Lion's Attack.

As to a lion's method of attack Frederick Courteney Selous says in his book: "As a rule, I think, a lion seizes a sleeping man by the head, and in that case, unless it is a very old and weakly animal, death must usually be instantaneous, as its great fang teeth will be driven into the brain through the thickest negro skull." Similarly when a lion attacks an animal it tries to get at the head or the throat—at the vitals of the animal. Says Mr. Selous: "My experience is that when a single lion tries to kill an ox or a buffalo it invariably seizes it near the muzzle with one paw and usually succeeds in either breaking its victim's neck or causing it to break it itself by its own weight in falling. When several lions attack an ox or a buffalo they will often bite and tear it all over and take a long time to kill it."

Curious Old Laws.

Some of the old laws of Nepal, India, were curious. Killing cows ranked with murder as a capital offense, for instance. Every girl at birth was married with great ceremony to a betel fruit, which was then cast into a sacred stream. As the fate of the fruit was uncertain the girl was supposed never to become a widow. To obtain divorce from a husband a wife had only to place a betel nut under his pillow and depart. In Nepal the day is considered to begin when it is light enough to count the tiles on the roof or distinguish the hairs on a man's hand against the sky.

A Theater Ch[illegible]

The curtain had fall on the first act at a Broadway theater when man, correctly attired and apparently of refinement, leaned toward a woman occupying a seat directly in front of him—a woman who had naturally removed her hat, but whose hair was arranged in the extreme of fashion aided by "boughten" puffs.

"I beg your pardon, madam," said the man in an audible whisper, "but if you would remove your hair and substitute your hat I believe I would be able to see something more of the stage."

The woman didn't scream. She didn't even faint. She merely turned around and replied:

"Jack, if you weren't my brother I'd slap your face."—New York Globe

Her Little Confidence Game.

"We're playing railroad train," she said as she pulled her father's paper away, "and I'm the conductor. Tickets, please."

He took a card from his pocket and handed it to her. She looked at it intently for a minute and then handed it back. "That was issued yesterday," she said, "and isn't good today. You'll have to pay cash or get off the train."

He gave her a dime. He knew he had been "worked," but what else could he do?

Pitched It.

A boy was asked what Moses did with the tabernacle in the wilderness when the people murmured.

He replied, "He chucked it away."

When asked to explain he read the seventh verse of the thirty-third chapter of Exodus, "And Moses took the tabernacle and pitched it without the camp, afar off from the camp."—Liverpool Mercury.

What a Poultry Man Says About 20-Mule Team Borax.

As I am in the poultry business, I had ten white chicks to wash and prepare for a show. I used "20-Mule Team" Soap for washing the birds, and I can say from years of experience washing white birds, never before have I found a soap or Borax that cleaned my birds so fine and easy. I had a great deal of comment on my birds being so white. J. A. Dinwiddie, New Market, Tenn. All dealers—½, 1 and 5 lb. cartons. Sample and booklet, 5c. Pacific Coast Borax Co., Chicago.

Is Pe-ru-na Useful for Catarrh?

Should a list of the ingredients of Peruna be submitted to any medical expert, of whatever school or nationality, he would be obliged to admit without reserve that the medicinal herbs composing Peruna are of two kinds. First, standard and well-tried catarrh remedies. Second, well-known and generally acknowledged tonic remedies. That in one or the other of these uses they have stood the test of many years' experience by physicians of different schools. There can be no dispute about this, whatever. Peruna is composed of some of the most efficacious and universally used herbal remedies for catarrhal diseases, and for such conditions of the human system as require a tonic. Each one of the principal ingredients of Peruna has a reputation of its own in the cure of some phase of catarrh or as a tonic medicine.

The fact is, chronic catarrh is a disease which is very prevalent. Many thousand people know they have chronic catarrh. They have visited doctors over and over again, and been told that their case is one of chronic catarrh. It may be of the nose, throat, lungs, stomach or some other internal organ. There is no doubt as to the nature of the disease. The only trouble is the remedy. This doctor has tried to cure them. That doctor has tried to prescribe for them.

No other household remedy so universally advertised carries upon the label the principal active constituents, showing that Peruna invites the full inspection of the critics.

NO SURPLUS FUNDS THERE.

Beggar Satisfied with Evidance of Poverty in Sight.

Two old Hebrew beggars were traveling together through the residence section of Pittsburg not long ago, in quest of contributions toward their joint capital.

Presently they passed a handsome residence, from which sweet sounds of music issued. It was Ike's turn and hopefully he ascended the steps to the front door, eagerly watched by Jake, who expected quite a handsome addition to their funds.

His consternation was great consequently when he beheld Ike returning crestfallen and empty-handed.

Anxiously running to meet him, he said: "Vell, Ikey, how did you make out with the good people?"

"Ach, Jakey," replied Ike, "there was no use asking in there, because they are very poor people themselves. Just think—two lovely ladies playing on one piano!"—Judge's Library.

OF COURSE HE WOULDN'T.

"Of course not; neither would I have the heart to let her become an old maid because she happened to be well off."

India-Gestion.

Here is a story the bishop of London told John Morley the other day, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. They were holding an "exam." in an East-end school, and the teacher was explaining the chief products of the Indian empire. One child recited a list of comestibles. "Please, miss, India produces curries and pepper and citron and chillies and chutney and—and—" "Yes, yes, and what comes after that?" "Please, miss, I don't remember." "Yes, but think. What is India so famous for?" "Please, 'm, India-gestion."

"Ladies First."

In this age of leveling up and leveling down, and of attempting to place women on the same plane as men in everything, chivalry is nearly a dead letter. Many wish it were altogether so, regarding it as a bar to the full emancipation of women. There can be no traffic here with such wrong-headed and wrong heart-notions. In the healthy atmosphere of sport such notions wither and fade like exotics in an alien soil. "Ladies first!" is an abiding principle with all who are sportsmen.—Frye's Magazine.

Absorbing.

Silas—Ha! Ha! Reuben got bunkoed again.

Cyrus—Do tell! What was it this time?

Silas—Why, Reuben saw an ad that stated that for one dollar they would send him some of the most absorbing literature he ever read.

Cyrus—And what did they send him?

Silas—Why, they sent him a pamphlet entitled "How Blotters Are Made" and another entitled "Points on Turkish Towels."

SELF DELUSION

Many People Deceived by Coffee.

We like to defend our indulgencies and habits even though we may be convinced of their actual harmfulness.

A man can convince himself that whisky is good for him on a cold morning, or beer on a hot summer day—when he wants the whisky or beer.

It's the same with coffee. Thousands of people suffer headaches and nervousness year after year but try to persuade themselves the cause is not coffee—because they like coffee.

"While yet a child I commenced using coffee and continued it," writes a Wis. man, "until I was a regular coffee fiend. I drank it every morning and in consequence had a blinding headache nearly every afternoon.

"My folks thought it was coffee that ailed me, but I liked it and would not admit it was the cause of my trouble, so I stuck to coffee and the headaches stuck to me.

"Finally, the folks stopped buying coffee and brought home some Postum. They made it right (directions on pkg.) and told me to see what difference it would make with my head, and during the first week on Postum my old affliction did not bother me once. From that day to this we have used nothing but Postum in place of coffee—headaches are a thing of the past and the whole family is in fine health."

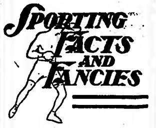
Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

SPORTING FACTS AND FANCIES



Every team should have at least one winning pitcher, a twirler who could be counted on to win at least three-quarters of his games. Some of the major league teams have such a man—many of them have not. The very best asset a team can have is a pitcher who can jump into a battle at any stage and hold the opposing batsmen in check. Chance has such a man in Mordecai Brown, Fielder Jones in Doc White, Lajoie has Addie Joss, Jennings has Bill Donovan, McGuire has Cy Young, McGraw has Mathewson, Connie Mack has Dygert. There you are forced to stop, or at best at only a few more. The other teams have no real stars. Without such men as named a manager has about as much chance to win the pennant as Bill Squires would have to knock out Jim Jeffries. How many times during the season are Joss or Donovan chased from the mound by a fusillade of bingles? Scarcely ever. There is a long list of twirlers who have their good days, when they are invincible, but until the last man is out it's a good thing not to bet any real money on the outcome of the contest.

Robert Edmonson of Washington is not exactly a youngster in the baseball realm, but he has been put down in diamond circles as one of the best all-round men in his especial position to be found in major league company.

ROBERT EDMONSON

Hitting is little if anything in baseball these very advanced days, says a critic. That's because hitting is practically impossible. Figures show that, and figures, you know, never lie. In the two big leagues in 1907 there were just nine .300 stickers among the regulars. Back in 1894, the first year Baltimore won the championship, there were 94 in the National league alone. Ed Hanlon had 14 players that campaign and 11 of them soused the sphere at louder than a .300 clip. Here's the list:

More Lionizing of Dorando.

The glorification of Dorando, the Italian runner, who strove gallantly to win the Marathon race at the Olympian games, continues in the London newspapers. Combined with it, of course, is the depreciation of the triumphs of Hayes, the American winner of the Marathon. Hayes is held guilty of an unpardonable lack of "true sportsmanship" in finishing the race when he saw Dorando, perfectly exhausted, almost senseless, being carried to the tape. Helen Mathers, the novelist, expresses the general feeling here in an open letter: "I venture to think that had Hayes, as a true sportsman, declined to lodge a protest against what, but for interference, must have been an actual as well as a moral victory, the American would have received a magnificent ovation." But for interference, but for being massaged and helped to stagger along by officials of the British Olympic committee, a flagrant violation of every rule of justice and fair play, Dorando could not have arisen after even his first fall. Yet true British sportsmen talk about the Italian's "moral victory." Their reflections on Hayes' sportsmanship because he did not surrender the crown, won by an achievement superior in every way to Dorando's, are as ignorant as spiteful. For had Hayes done anything so absurd, even the British Olympic committee would have been powerless to give the race to Dorando.

The magnanimity of the British sportsman is wonderful, but unfortunately it is almost invariably vicarious in its manifestations.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. F. Gerald Blattner, of Buffalo, N. Y., says: "Your Castoria is good for children and I frequently prescribe it, always obtaining the desired results."

Dr. Gustave A. Eisengraeber, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "I have used your Castoria repeatedly in my practice with good results, and can recommend it as an excellent, mild and harmless remedy for children."

Dr. E. J. Dennis, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have used and prescribed your Castoria in my sanitarium and outside practice for a number of years and find it to be an excellent remedy for children."

Dr. S. A. Buchanan, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have used your Castoria in the case of my own baby and find it pleasant to take, and have obtained excellent results from its use."

Dr. J. E. Simpson, of Chicago, Ill., says: "I have used your Castoria in cases of colic in children and have found it the best medicine of its kind on the market."

Dr. R. E. Eskildson, of Omaha, Neb., says: "I find your Castoria to be a standard family remedy. It is the best thing for infants and children I have ever known and I recommend it."

Dr. L. R. Robinson, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria certainly has merit. Is not its age, its continued use by mothers through all these years, and the many attempts to imitate it, sufficient recommendation? What can a physician add? Leave it to the mothers."

Dr. Edwin F. Pardee, of New York City, says: "For several years I have recommended your Castoria and shall always continue to do so, as it has invariably produced beneficial results."

Dr. N. B. Sizer, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I object to what are called patent medicines, where maker alone knows what ingredients are put in them, but I know the formula of your Castoria and advise its use."

BABY CRIED AND SCRATCHED

All the Time—Covered with Torturing Eczema—Doctor Said Sores Would Last for Years—Perfect Cure by Cuticura.

"My baby niece was suffering from that terrible torture, eczema. It was all over her body but the worst was on her face and hands. She cried and scratched all the time and could not sleep night or day from the scratching. I had her under the doctor's care for a year and a half and he seemed to do her no good. I took her to the best doctor in the city and he said that she would have the sores until she was six years old. But if I had depended on the doctor my baby would have lost her mind and died from the want of aid. But I used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and she was cured in three months. Alice L. The Old-Time Boy.

The boy of to-day who complains of anything should be made to read the rules and regulations laid down for boys in old colonial days. He had to stand up at the table. He must go to bed at candlelight. He must not sit down in the presence of a visitor. He must not shout. He must not run without cause. He must not throw stones at animals or birds. He must not idle on the street, and if he had been found trying to stand on his head he would have gone to jail for a week.

Attorney General—M. E. Matthews, Marshall.

The democratic state convention would consider no other name for head of the state ticket. In the face of Governor John A. Johnson's positive statement that he would decline if nominated, the determination of the delegates was to name him and adjourn.

Hennepin county put up the deal, selecting A. B. Cheato to make a nominating speech for Johnson. After the convention had met Aitkin county, which is first to be called on the roll for nominations, was asked to yield to Hennepin and consented.

Frank A. Day made a plea for Governor Johnson in calling the convention to order, declaring that in face of his statements he should not be nominated, but his plea was unavailing.

The rest of the state ticket was selected by a committee of nineteen, chosen from the judicial districts. Nominations were deferred until after the noon recess.

Frank A. Day, as chairman of the state committee, called to order, and asked the convention to keep still while they had a speech from "our great leader, William J. Bryan."

A phonograph was turned on, and gave a five minute talk from Bryan on "The Labor Question." Cheers followed and then the delegates stood and waved flags while the band played "The Star Spangled Banner."

Chairman Day invited all democratic mayors to the platform. Mayor Haynes was not present, but Mayors Lawlor of St. Paul, Armson of Stillwater, Wolf of Staples, Donaghue of East Grand Forks, and Shirley of Breckenridge were cheered as they went up. Mayor Haynes got a hand when he entered a few minutes later.

Chairman Day then delivered his message to the convention from Governor Johnson. He began by saying that his term of office as chairman should and would come to a close after four years.

"You ought to applaud that," he said reprovingly.

Mr. Day said that while he had not been in entire harmony with all elements of the party during his service as chairman, but notwithstanding his mistakes and differences the democratic part had gotten along fairly well.

Richard Tatterafield of Minneapolis was named for secretary, Frank S. Battley of St. Paul and Andrew Nelson of Duluth, assistant secretaries.

On motion of Frank A. Day, the members of the committees were chosen by judicial districts, and a recess was taken so the districts could caucus.

Frank A. Day made a suggestion that a committee be appointed to make up a list of candidates for state offices other than governor. He said there were usually candidates agreed on for each place, but owing to the demoralized condition of the party as to the nominee for governor, there had been no consideration given. He did not believe it possible to make up from the floor a well balanced ticket. A motion was adopted to have each judicial district select one member of a committee to consider and report on a ticket, aside from governor.

Hennepin had quite a contest over a place on this committee. Five candidates were named and a vote was taken to eliminate all but the two highest. This left S. A. Stockwell and W. H. Williams, and Williams withdrew in favor of Stockwell.

A recess was then taken till 2 p. m. to give the committees a chance to do their work.

The Johnson tide swept everything before it, from the first gathering of the clans in the hotel lobbies today. Several friends of the governor, including Frank A. Day, A. C. Weiss of Duluth and S. D. Works of Mankato, went through the crowd, declaring that Johnson would not accept and must not be nominated. Their words fell on deaf ears.

"It is no use," said Senator Works. "The more we talk the stronger they are determined to nominate him."

The delegates had their minds made up, and while a few were talking for Armson, the accepted plan was to name Johnson and adjourn, leaving him to handle it.

Nothing else was considered. The making of a slate on the minor offices was deferred till the big question was settled. M. E. Mathews of Marshall was around trying to head off his boom for attorney general, but had poor success. Declinations did not seem to go today.

Congressman Hammond did not make his appearance at the convention hall or around the hotels. He remained in his room at the Majestic hotel.

Some tried to get up a scheme for a committee to wait on Governor Johnson and tell him that the convention was beyond control and he must alter his determination. This was turned down, as it was felt that such a step would only bring another refusal and put the governor farther in the hole than ever.

The sixth district held a caucus, but postponed action until after the convention. The only name mentioned for congress was Dr. A. J. Gilkinson of Osakis.

Committees Are Chosen.

Committees were selected as follows:

St. Paul, Aug. 20.—John A. Johnson will make the run for governor in obedience to the command of the state convention.

"I don't see how I can get away from it," he said today when asked what he intended to do with the nomination.

"If a committee had come to me to notify me of the nomination," he continued, "I should have declined it. But I did not have the opportunity. I am unable to decline the nomination now without putting the party in a hole, which I have no desire to do."

"I wish it had been otherwise; but I have studied the matter very carefully since yesterday afternoon, and I cannot see anything to do but yield to the demand of the party."

GROSSCUP UNFAIR?

ATTACKED IN PETITION FOR OIL CASE REHEARING.

FILED FOR GOVERNMENT

Document Asserts the Federal Court of Appeals Was Unjust to Judge Landis and Misstated the Facts.

Chicago.—The government filed Friday its petition for a rehearing of the Standard Oil case. The court of appeals is asked to reconsider the reversal by Judge Grosscup, Baker and Seaman of the $29,240,000 fine imposed on the Indiana corporation by Judge Landis, and to ask the advice of the supreme court of the United States on certain vital questions at issue.

This, it is urged, should be done by the court of appeals before that tribunal, in passing final judgment on the case, places an interpretation on the interstate commerce act that practically would nullify the law, making of it "a mere will-o'-the-wisp of legislation, a phantom statute, destitute of strength and substance."

The attorneys for the government rally valiantly to the defense of Judge Landis from the harsh, and as they assert, unjust, criticism which Judge Grosscup and his fellow jurists took occasion to voice in their opinion. They declare that the criticism of Judge Landis by the appellate judges and the reasons for reversing the ruling are based upon misstatements of the records and misinterpretations of his rendering of the law.

"The opinion as it stands," the government's petition concludes, "erroneously states material portions of the record; does injustice to the trial judge; leaves doubtful in a new trial the rule of law to be applied, both as to knowledge on the part of the shipper and as to the number of offenses; appears to be in conflict with the language of the supreme court and with the previous language of the presiding judge of this court, and with the great weight of legal authority; and, if permitted to remain unmodified, will tend to encourage disobedience to law, to impede the enforcement of salutary statutes and largely to defeat their purpose."

Judge Grosscup.

The petition, 5,000 words in length, was filed for the government by Chief Clerk William A. Small of the district attorney's office. Counsel for the oil company have 20 days in which to file an answer, and then the petition may be considered by the appellate judges. They may reconsider their decision or they may ignore the government's petition without hearing any further arguments.

Troops Riot in Atlanta.

Atlanta, Ga.—Late Wednesday police reserves were called to the Terminal station to quell a riot that broke out among two companies of United States regulars en route from Fort Slocum to the Pacific coast.

When the local police officers were unable to curb the soldiers, a call was made upon Fort McPherson for troops, and Capt. Bankhead with a company of regulars responded and soon suppressed the riot. One soldier was seriously stabbed.

Lusitania Sets a New Record.

New York.—With the best previous record for a trans-Atlantic voyage lowered by more than three hours, the Cunard turbine steamship Lusitania arrived off Sandy Hook lightship at ten o'clock Thursday night, having made the run across the Atlantic over the short course in 4 days, 15 hours and 25 minutes. The Lusitania's former record, which was also the ocean record, was 4 days, 18 hours and 40 minutes.

RECEIVER HAS WALSH ROAD

SOUTHERN INDIANA RAILWAY IS INVOLVED IN ACTION.

Myron J. Carpenter Is Selected to Take Charge of Property—Notes Are Owned by Bank.

Chicago. — Judge C. C. Kohlsaat of the United States circuit court appointed Myron J. Carpenter receiver for the Southern Indiana Railway Company owned by John R. Walsh.

The action followed the appearance of various lawyers who went before Judge Kohlsaat. With the attorneys was E. K. Boisot, who appeared on behalf of the First Trust and Savings bank, the representative of the associated clearing house banks of Chicago, to apply for the receiver.

John R. Walsh.

"Attorneys James C. Hutchins, Ovid B. Jameson (Indianapolis) and Lessing Rosenthal, appeared with E. K. Boisot before United States Circuit Judge Christian C. Kohlsaat at a late hour last night on behalf of the First Trust and Savings bank, the representative of the associated clearing house banks of Chicago, to apply for the receiver. Three similar bills were filed by the First Trust and Savings bank, one in the northern district of Illinois at Chicago, one in the eastern district at Danville and one in the district of Indiana at Indianapolis. James Rosenthal appeared on behalf of the railroad companies."

The notes under which this receivership was procured are owned by the First Trust and Savings bank for the account of the associated banks and were acquired at the time these banks took over the assets of the Walsh banks.

CALLS OFF INDIANA STRIKE.

President Lewis Tells All Miners to Return to Work.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Having been defied by the Indiana state executive board of the organization, President T. L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers Friday afternoon issued from headquarters a letter advising all miners now on strike in Indiana to return to work immediately.

It now rests with the miners to obey the terms of President Lewis' letter or suffer the revocation of their charters. The words of the president are not harsh, but they carry an import of determination and authority. In his letter President Lewis intimates that the case at the Hudson mine, which started the strike, is not meritorious.

COAL PRICES MAY ADVANCE.

New Company That Plans to Control St. Louis' Supply.

St. Louis.—Announcement was made Thursday that a corporation is being formed to be known as the Commonwealth Fuel company, embracing 153 Illinois coal mines within a radius of 59 miles of St. Louis, supplying practically all the coal consumed in St. Louis and in East St. Louis.

It is stated the new combination proposes not only to control the output of the mines, but also to control the prices. According to dealers, if the negotiations are consummated an increase of ten to fifteen per cent. in the price of coal may be expected, meaning an increase of from $600,000 to $1,000,000 in the coal bill of St. Louis and East St. Louis.

Seventy-Six Dead in Wigan Mine.

Wigan.—It is now known that 76 miners perished in the explosion and the fire that followed it in the Maypole mine. The directors have decided to flood the mine.

National Editorial Association.

St. Paul—The annual session of the National Editorial association began promptly on time, and in the absence of Governor Johnson Mayor Lawler extended the glad hand of the city and the state to the pencil pushers.

There was little during the first day beyond making acquaintance, and the second day was given to sight-seeing after organization had been effected. In the morning the editors listened to the reading of several papers of special interest. Don C. Seitz, of the New York World, sent a paper on "Print Paper Combines and Prices." It was read, in the absence of the author, by W. J. Driscoll, of St. Paul. It severely criticised Joe Cannon and his associates for their "stand pat" attitude on the paper pulp tariff. It strongly recommended that every editor urge his local congressman to work for elimination of the paper pulp tariff.

A. L. Lawshe, third assistant postmaster general of Washington, D. C., gave an able address on the relation of his department to the publishers, with special reference to the late strict regulations about mailing second class matter. He said the new regulations were to aid the department, the publisher, the advertiser, and the people. John Diamond of New Orleans wanted to debate this, claiming the department has exceeded its authority by attempting to enforce regulations which congress had declined to enact into laws. The subject will be further discussed at this morning's session.

John A. Sleicher, of New York, editor of Leslie's Weekly, read a paper on delusions of the press. He lamented the public demand for the sensational, but admitted that newspapers that cater only to the good "are as lonesome as a solitary tombstone in a new graveyard." He asked that in filling the demand for sensational the editors confine their work to "the field of legitimate endeavor." Frank O. Edgecomb, of Geneva, Neb., read a paper on circulation.

In the evening the marble state house was ablaze with electric lights in reception by Governor Johnson and the state officers.

W. H. Hayes, of Texas, was chosen president and Seattle selected as next place of meeting.

The Old Red River Cart.

Hamline—According to the best authorities and the oldest citizens thirty-five years elapsed between the last appearance of a yoke of oxen and a Red river cart on the streets of St. Paul and a visit by the strange institution of pre-railroad days to the busy Saintly City thoroughfare recently. The ox cart of the old Red river days, the same old ox cart in which settlers from Pembina used to travel to the state capital, has been recreated by some genius at the state fair grounds so that the picture of the attack on Fort Ridgely, to be given each evening of the Minnesota state fair, Aug. 31 to Sept. 5, may be complete.

During the progress of the great historical spectacle, which will call for the appearance of 300 Sioux Indians and 600 white men, a wagon train of the olden days will be seen wending its way across the prairie to a farm house in the neighborhood of the historic fort of '62, and it is in the building of this farm house and its environs that the amusement department of the state fair has taken the greatest pride. For each detail, from the double bucket well to the rail fence, the haystacks and the chimney built on the outside, is complete, and the yoke of oxen dragging the old Red river cart is to be the principal feature of this part of the picture.

Bad Milk Shipper Fined.

Crookston—Deputy State Creamery Inspector A. O. Storvick, of Crookston, has secured the punishment of the first violator of the pure cream and milk laws recently implicated by discoveries at Crookston express transfer. Charles A. Carlson, of Kennedy, Minn., north of here on the St. Vincent line, pleaded guilty and was fined $15 and costs. Carlson admitted that the milk and cream were a week old before he shipped them and brought them into Kennedy on Saturday. No local trains run thru Kennedy on Sunday, and consequently the cream and milk remained in that station all night, all day Sunday and Sunday night, until late Monday afternoon. The amount was ten gallons. Judge C. V. Johnson, of Kennedy, heard the case.

NEWS NOTES.

Crookston—Ald. Peter Snyder, of Crookston, received notice from Secretary G. H. Becker, of the state board of examiners, that the next meeting of that board will be held in this city on Thursday, Sept. 10.

State Banks.

There were only 486 state banks a year ago, and despite the fact that the Security Bank of Minneapolis, with a capital of $13,000,000, was made a national bank, the total assets of the banks is practically the same, $90,000,000.

The purpose of the meeting is to organize employes of all branches of the service to fight hostile legislation from its inception, and the movement is expected to have a considerable influence at the party primaries September 15.

It Didn't Come Natural.

"I have heard that man tell the truth once or twice," said one Wall street man talking of another. "He can tell the truth, I admit, but it does not come natural to him. He reminds me of the Russian moujik.

"A Russian moujik sat one day in the anteroom of the military commissioner of his town. There was an anxious frown on his face. A friend approached and said:

"'What is the matter, Piotr?'

"'I am worried,' Piotr answered, 'about my son. I don't know what to say when the commissioner asks me about his age. You see, if I make him younger than he is he will be sent back to school, and if I make him out older they'll stick him in the army. What the deuce am I to do?'

"'How would it do,' said the friend thoughtfully, 'if you told the commissioner his exact age?'

"Piotr slapped his leg and laughed delightedly.

"'The very thing!' he cried. 'I never thought of that!'"

Pay of Army Officers.

On graduation the West Pointer is commissioned a second lieutenant and receives a salary of $1,400 if unmounted or $1,500 if mounted. Increases at each five year period bring the pay at the end of twenty years up to $1,960 in the one case and $2,100 in the other

The pay of first lieutenants begins at $1,500 and $1,600; captains, $1,800 and $2,000; majors, $2,500; lieutenant colonels, $3,000; colonels, $3,500. Each officer attains a 40 per cent maximum increase in twenty years.

On the average the salary of the army officer is higher than that of the college professor, the minister or the graded civil service employee. The officer has allowances for residence and personal attendance. He may buy household supplies from a government commissary at cost.—Detroit News-Tribune.

A TENDERFOOT'S REVENGE.

Bully of New Mexico Town Had the Tables Turned on Him.

The average tenderfoot is not a coward. He simply lacks ranch experience. An illustration of this fact occurred down in New Mexico several years ago. One day a pale looking, thin and sickly young man alighted from the train and put up at the little adobe hotel at Bernal Springs. The tenderfoot walked up to the bar and called for a bottle of soda pop. "'Tain't allowed to drink that sort o' stuff out here," said a toughy. "What you want is a stiff drink o' red liquor. Mr. Barkeeper, set out the pison for this young feller." "You have the best of me," replied the tenderfoot, "and I'll have to drink the stuff, but I hope the time may come when I can make you drink my choice of liquid."

The tenderfoot raised the glass and gulped down the whisky. Sandy had had his way about it, and he made no effort to comprehend the vague remark of the stranger. The tenderfoot left for a ranch down the Pecos the next day after the incident in the saloon, and he was forgotten until one afternoon more than a year afterward a strong, healthy looking young man rode up to the hotel on a broncho, dropped the bridle reins upon the ground and dismounted. He had the appearance of a typical young man of the range. His face was bronzed and his eyes clear and penetrating. "I owe a fellow a debt which I believe I will pay right now," the stranger said.

No sooner had he made the remark than he walked off in the direction of Sandy, who had his gun in his right hand and was firing it into the air every few steps. The stranger approached Sandy, pulled his gun and unceremoniously dragged the bully up to the saloon and led him in that fashion up to the bar. "Get me a pan of water and set it upon the floor," he said to the barkeeper.

The order was complied with, Sandy standing there meekly, wondering what was going to happen to him. "Now, get down on the floor and drink water out of that pan like a dog," the former tenderfoot ordered. Sandy at first refused, but when the stranger began twirling his gun around on his forefinger and said the order must be obeyed the cowed fellow unlimbered and lay down upon the floor and began drinking water out of the pan.—Denver Field and Farm.

WATERLOO.

The Immutability of the Famous Old Battlefield.

One of the most striking features of a visit to the battlefield of Waterloo today is the immutability of the entire scene in which one of the greatest battles of history took place. Notwithstanding the many years that have passed since the memorable day of June 18, 1815, the entire scene of the battle remains practically unchanged and untouched, and the very buildings around which the tide of battle surged the fiercest, save for the necessary restorations of the damage they sustained in the conflict, remain exactly as they were, nor has any encroachment of building or progress marred the historic field.

The battlefield of Waterloo is an open, undulating stretch of good farming land. On the day of the battle the greater part of it was covered with crops of rye, wheat, barley and oats, and the same crops are still grown there each season. The field is intersected by two highroads branching at Mont St. Jean, the one on the right leading to Nivelles, while that on the left, which lay in the center of both armies, led south to Genappe, Charleroi and Namur. Upon the crest of the ridge which formed the first of the allied positions a crossroad runs east and west. This road, on approaching the spot where the "Lion of Waterloo" now stands, ran through a cut in the crest some twelve to fourteen feet deep, and it was this point that was known after the battle as the Hollow Road. Some 500 yards to the southeast of the "Lion" is the farm of La Haye Sainte, while about 900 yards to the southwest stands Hougoumont, the old chateau, farmhouse, outbuildings, walled garden and orchard, which played such an important part in the fate of the day. These buildings are nearly 300 years old and were built with a view to their defense, as many old stone loopholes still to be found testify. — Robert Howard Russell in Metropolitan Magazine.

Insomnia.

Insomnia is the not uncommon fate of the brain worker who after years of continuous mental strain retires from active life. The reason is that mental activity demands a large supply of blood for the brain, and the blood vessels gradually accommodate themselves to this large supply. But when the hard work is over the brain does not always realize that it needs less nourishment, and hence the condition of excessive mental activity which is what insomnia is.—London Mail.

What ripens fast does not last.—Shakespeare.

A Bibliophile's Reply.

Mandell Creighton, who was bishop of London, had a horror of lending his favorite books. A fellow clergyman once visited the bishop and took a fancy to an old edition of Shakespeare. He borrowed the volume and did not think to return it for several months. Finally the minister returned it with a letter, saying, "My Dear Bishop—I have great pleasure in returning the volume you lent me."

The bishop answered, "My Dear Brother—All the joy is mine."

Coral Islands.

A coral island is sometimes torn to pieces by a great storm, showing that islands disappear in more ways than one. This happened to an atoll in the Marshall group in 1905, when it happened to be in the path of a terrible hurricane. Waves about forty feet high swept over the hapless speck of land, carrying every particle of verdure and every form of life into the sea, and not a human being was saved. The upper part of the coral was broken off and swept away, and a few days later nothing but the placid waters of the ocean was seen where the atoll had stood.

It's Results That Count

In cooking it's the results that count. So when a housewife starts to make Bread or Rools or Pies, naturally she wants her cooking to have that rich crisp, pleasing odor. But it must also have that whiteness, lightness and wholesomeness which is so essential to good cooking.

Much of this depends upon the flour—and thousands depend upon,

Treat All Alike.

Owing to the strong sentiment against having entertainments and meetings in the school house the building will not be used for any other purpose than school in the future. Of course if this is to be the rule it must be enforced as some people want one kind of a meeting and others another kind, So we hope those that are opposed to socials will not complain when they find the doors locked to some meetings that they desire to hold there. Treat all alike shall be the rule, hereafter.

A Yoga Story.

For fourteen years Bava Luchman Dass received from the priests of the Black Caves of central India the necessary education in order to become a yoga, as a yoga must be capable of taking the forty-eight postures of the Hindoo idols. Perhaps the greatest trick consists in balancing himself on the ends of his fingers while the whole of his body is in the air. Bava stated that in order to obtain the rank of yoga in the Black Caves of India he had to continue in this position on the ends of his fingers under the eyes of the judges, without a second's interval, for seven days and nights!—Strand Magazine.

Melancholy.

The old time herbalists did not regard melancholy as an affection of the temperament, but as an illness or disease, and many were the "secrets" they purported to cure it with. HOW UMPIRE TIM HURST HANDED IT TO COOLEY

Latter Tried to Be Put Out of Contest, But Veteran Was On to His Game.

Of all umpires before or since there are none that have had so much newspaper space accorded to them as the chubby little umpire, Tim Hurst, says the Washington Post. There has never been one who has ruled the field with the same rod of iron as has Sir Timothy, and this in the days when ball players were men who would as soon trim an umpire as they would attend to any of the ordinary avocations of the day.

Such fistic giants of the grassy diamond as Pat Tebeau, Jimmy McAllister, Jack O'Connor, Glasscock, Virgil Garvin and many others too numerous to mention, who made it a point to go after the umpires of a decade and more ago, never tried any of their games on Hurst and came out of the big end of the horn. Tim always won out hands down, and, in addition, made the other fellows eat crow of the bitterest variety. Hurst always adapted himself to the situation in hand, and, as the song goes in the opera of "The Mikado," he invariably made the "punishment fit the crime."

Bill Bernhard, when in Washington last year with the Cleveland Club, told a story concerning Hurst and Dick Cooley, who was then a member of the Philadelphia team, as was Bernhard himself. The story, which has perhaps never before been in print, treats of one day when Cooley, in running backward to make a difficult catch, fell over on his head, and, in addition, got such a shaking up that he asked his manager to allow him to retire from the game, but Dick was a swell batter, and the manager, thinking that he was faking, refused his request.

But Cooley was surely hurt badly, for he began to miss balls and also to strike out, and then he suddenly thought of a plan that would enable him to get out of the game, and he started in to abuse Hurst, but Tim was wise to the situation, and he let Dick "chew the rag" to his heart's content, and, as Bernhard says, it was estimated by Tom Sampson, the mathematician of the Philadelphia team, that Dick did enough to be fined, at the smallest calculation, $11,000, and to be put out of the game for 355 years.

Every decision made Dick would come running in and would abuse Tim frightfully, but Hurst, with a knowing smile on his face, would wave him to one side. Finally after an unusually fervid burst of billingsgate, Dick, sticking his face close up to Tim's, shrieked:

"Going to chase me from the game, eh?"

"Naw," leisurely replied Tim; "I'm going to keep you in the game, just to show the people what a bum ball player you really are."

Jeffries Likes Baseball.

James J. Jeffries is about to take a hand in baseball. Unless the unexpected happens he will buy an interest in the new Los Angeles, Cal., franchise, which was awarded at the last meeting of the Pacific Coast league. Jeffries has always been a baseball crank. When he was traveling about the country defending his title against all comers he never overlooked a chance to take in a game, and since he has retired from the ring he has been an ardent supporter of the Angels. Several prominent sporting men will join Jeffries as a stockholder.

Minor Leaguers Come High.

According to a baseball official who knows, purchase prices for minor league players are running pretty stiff this season. The $11,000 paid by the New York Nationals for Pitcher Marquard is a sample. That amount was paid, too. One American league club bid $8,500

LIFE OF THE AVERAGE BALL PLAYER IS SHORT

Just now while the annual Cy Young and George Van Haltren stories are going the rounds and the baseball writers are using up reams of paper telling how long these men have been in the game, a lot of folks are wondering why so many ball players last a few seasons, go back to the minors, and then disappear entirely.

The average baseball life is generally conceded to be somewhere between 10 and 12 years. A man may work in a rolling mill 12 hours a day for 20 years, he can make duplicate watches and high-grade works of art for a score of years, he can engage in all sorts of work that requires skill and good eyesight for perhaps twice as long as an average ball player retains his skill, and there must be some good reason for this.

It is a noticeable fact that all the ball players who have been in the game for years and who still play as they used to, never lay off and loaf for long periods. Ball players by the hundreds quit all kinds of work when the season ends in the middle of October and do not do a tap of work until March, when their clubs go south.

Then the winter laggards have to swelter and work in a hot climate to get down to playing weight. Taking off weight rapidly always saps a man's strength, as those who grow fat in the winter are in a weakened condition for several weeks and cannot do themselves justice.

The temptations to drink and lead a fast life are greater in baseball than in the more prosaic occupations. A star ball player is much sought, and hundreds of hangers on in places where a ball player shouldn't be are tickled half to death if the diamond hero will join them in a "good time." A lot of the younger fellows fall for it and in consequence come back in the spring in mighty poor shape.

An observer could name two dozen veterans of the American league who slow up just a little each season, who work and work to distraction each spring to catch on by the time the season starts, yet who spend their winters in luxurious idleness. It seems a queer way of doing.

Some one has suggested that club owners sign up their players in a 12 months' contract, and run a wood chopping brigade or a pedestrian club in the winter time. But the managers and magnates have enough woes keeping the men going during the season

GOSSIP OF THE DIAMOND

Manager Murray made a good move when he pulled Lefthander Foxen from Jersey City. He has more than made good.

"Managers who stand for players who insult umpires are worse than the players, and poor baseball assets," declares an eastern baseball man.

Thomas Tuokey, a pitcher of the Meriden team of the Connecticut league, has been sold to the Boston Nationals for $1,500. It was announced that Capt. Gus Soffel of the Meriden team will go with the Boston team at the end of the Connecticut league season.

Jimmy Kane of Cincinnati is the lightest man in the National league. He weighs about 122 pounds, but is as fleet as any fielder in the game and can stick nicely.

The Cincinnati Reds will surely have a great string of young pitchers on hand next spring. They have already signed about a dozen, the latest being Russell Ford of Atlanta in the Southern league.

Big Ed Walsh of the Chicago Americans has pitched more games than any other big league pitcher. He has now performed in excess of 30 games, which is a season's work for many so-called crack pitchers. He certainly is a willing horse.

SHE WAS NO HASBEEN.

Smoking Car Just the One Old Woman Was Looking For.

"Madam," said the brakeman as the train stopped at a village station and a little old woman started to enter the smoking car, "the car back is the one you want."

"How do you know?" she tartly asked.

"Because this is the smoking car."

She pushed past him and climbed up the steps, and after taking a seat she pulled out and filled a pipe, struck a match on the sole of her shoe, and after drawing a few puffs she said to a man smoking a cigar across the aisle:

"That young feller out there don't know half as much as he thinks he does."

"How so?" was asked.

"He took me for an old woman that had never rode on the cars before, and told me this was the smoking car."

"And you wanted this car?"

"Why, I never ride in any other—not unless my pipe is broke, my tobacco all out and none o' you menfolks will lend me a cigar."

ECZEMA FOR 55 YEARS.

Suffered Torments from Birth—In Frightful Condition—Got No Help Until Cuticura Cured Him.

"I had an itching, tormenting eczema ever since I came into the world, and I am now a man 55 years old. I tried all kinds of medicines I heard of, but found no relief. I was truly in a frightful condition. At last I broke out all over with red and white boils, which kept growing until they were as big as walnuts, causing great pain and misery, but I kept from scratching as well as I could. I was so run down that I could hardly do my work. I used Cuticura Soap, Ointment, Resolvent, and Pills for about eight months, and I can truthfully say I am cured. Hale Bordwell, Tipton, Ia., Aug. 17, 1907."

"I cheerfully endorse the above testimonial. It is the truth. I know Mr. Bordwell and know the condition he was in. Nelson R. Burnett, Tipton, Ia."

"Oh, Willie, wot yer goin' ter shoot?"

"Indians, of course! You didn't suppose I was goin' out to hunt sparrows, did you?"

Sporting Offer.

As he entered the restaurant the cut of his clothes betrayed him as a member of the sporting fraternity. Choosing a corner seat, he ordered oyster stew. When the dish was brought to him, he looked at it with a critical frown, and then he began excitedly to peel off his coat and vest.

"What's the matter? What's the matter?" said the landlord, hurrying to the table.

The man looked at the stew, then at the landlord, and said:

"Bet you a dollar I can swim from one oyster to another.

Bishop Fyson of Hokkaido, Japan, tells of coming across a Japanese soldier who had been converted to Christianity through having been saved from death at the hands of a Russian simply because he chanced to be wearing a little silver cross that had been taken from one of the Russian dead.

FRIENDLY TIP

Restored Hope and Confidence.

After several years of indigestion and its attendant evil influence on the mind, it is not very surprising that one finally loses faith in things generally.

A N. Y. woman writes an interesting letter. She says:

"Three years ago I suffered from an attack of peritonitis which left me in a most miserable condition. For over two years I suffered from nervousness, weak heart, shortness of breath, could not sleep, etc.

"My appetite was ravenous, but I felt starved all the time. I had plenty of food but it did not nourish me because of intestinal indigestion. Medical treatment did not seem to help, I got discouraged, stopped medicine and did not care much whether I lived or died.

"One day a friend asked me why I didn't try Grape-Nuts, stop drinking coffee, and use Postum. I had lost faith in everything, but to please my friends I began to use both and soon became very fond of them.

"It wasn't long before I got some strength, felt a decided change in my system, hope sprang up in my heart and slowly but surely I got better. I could sleep very well, the constant craving for food ceased and I have better health now than before the attack of peritonitis.

"My husband and I are still using Grape-Nuts and Postum." "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

OPEN DEALING IN PAINT.

Buying paint used to be like the proverbial buying of a "pig in a poke." Mixtures in which chalk, ground rock, etc., predominated were marked and sold as "Pure White Lead," the deception not being apparent until the paint and the painting were paid for. This deception is still practiced, but we have learned to expose it easily.

National Lead Company, the largest makers of genuine Pure White Lead, realizing the injustice that was being done to both property owners and honest paint manufacturers, set about to make paint buying safe. They first adopted a trade mark, the now famous "Dutch-Boy Painter," and put this trademark, as a guaranty of purity, on every package of their White Lead. They then set about familiarizing the public with the blow-pipe test by which the purity and genuineness of White Lead may be determined, and furnished a blow-pipe free to every one who would write them for it. This action was in itself a guaranty of the purity of National Lead Company's White Lead.

As the result of this open dealing the paint buyer to-day has only himself to blame if he is defrauded. For test outfit and valuable booklet on painting, address National Lead Company, Woodbridge Bldg., New York.

NATURE AND A WOMAN'S WORK

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

Nature and a woman's work combined have produced the grandest remedy for woman's ills that the world has ever known.

In the good old-fashioned days of our grandmothers they relied upon the roots and herbs of the field to cure disease and mitigate suffering.

The Indians on our Western Plains to-day can produce roots and herbs for every ailment, and cure diseases that baffle the most skilled physicians who have spent years in the study of drugs.

From the roots and herbs of the field Lydia E. Pinkham more than thirty years ago gave to the women of the world a remedy for their peculiar ills, more potent and efficacious than any combination of drugs.

Mrs. Bertha Muff, of 515 N.C. St., Louisiana, Mo., writes:

"Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my troubles public.

"For twelve years I had been suffering with the worst forms of female ills. During that time I had eleven different physicians without help. No tongue can tell what I suffered, and at times I could hardly walk. About two years ago I wrote Mrs. Pinkham for advice. I followed it, and can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice restored health and strength. It is worth mountains of gold to suffering women."

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Muff, it will do for other suffering women.

AUGUSTA LOSS BIG

MILLS AND WAREHOUSES ARE RUINED BY FLOOD.

DEAD MAY NUMBER SIXTY

Great Damage and Widespread Distress in North and South Carolina—Fayetteville Is Submerged.

Augusta, Ga. — The flood water at Augusta is receding rapidly, and as the water leaves the streets it is apparent that the loss has been underestimated.

In addition to the disasters already reported, the Riverside mills, in damage to plant and loss of cotton which floated away, sustained a loss of $100,000; the Reid cotton warehouse, the finest in the south, was greatly damaged, but it will require a survey to determine the loss; the Triangular block, where the wholesale houses are assembled, was badly damaged. The Nelson Morris & Co. warehouse has collapsed and is being razed; the Augusta Grocery company's building was damaged to the extent of $5,000; the National Biscuit company building was wrecked. The Central grammar school and the Davidson grammar school were also damaged severely.

In addition to the fires already reported, ten smaller houses were burned in different sections of the city.

Death Rate May Reach Sixty.

Twenty-two bodies have been recovered and corpses are being found every hour or so. The captain of the river steamer Swee, which arrived Friday reported that he saw on the trip up the river at least 25 corpses, all negroes except one. There are reports of many drownings among negro farm hands in the lower valley. The Chronicle estimates the death list at 60.

The citizens in mass meeting and the city council and the board of health in special session have taken measures to relieve the distress. Citizens are subscribing to a fund to help the poorer people in the submerged district, for portions of the town are still under water. There is sure to be the greatest suffering, and relief must be quick to prevent starvation from swelling the death list.

South Carolina's Flood.

Columbus, S. C. — The crest of the great freshet, which, starting in the Piedmont section of the state, has swept through South Carolina, leaving ruined farms and crippled railway lines in its wake, has now passed Columbia and is moving toward the lower part of the state. The railroads are making strenuous efforts to restore lines of communication and have succeeded in some measure.

Kingville, 25 miles south of this city on the Wateree river, is seven feet under water and every house in the town is deserted. The water at that point is still rising and will probably reach its highest point about three o'clock Saturday.

No accurate estimate of damage can be made, but it probably will run well into the millions.

Fayetteville Is Submerged.

Fayetteville, N. C.—The Cape Fear river at this point has reached a height of 79 feet, breaking all records of former floods. The river valleys on the east side are covered for miles with a rushing torrent of muddy waters. Houses and bridges are swept away for miles around, and the estimated damage to the cotton and corn crops will go beyond 35 per cent.

The greater portion of Fayetteville is covered with water backed up to the city hall from the river, which is a mile and a half distant.

Three thousand people are homeless and a proclamation was issued by the mayor at noon Friday. The city was in total darkness Friday night, the power plant being submerged.

Many Die in Colorado Flood.

Trinidad, Col. — Citizens of Folsom are dazed over the result of the awful flood which spread death and destruction Thursday night, and anything like accurate details are impossible owing to interruption of wire communication. Casualties are variously estimated at from 15 to 25. Folsom had about 500 population and was built on both sides of the Cimarron, which is dry except on occasions of heavy rainfalls. A 12-foot wall of water came down the canyon while the inhabitants slept.

Japanese Bank Closed.

San Francisco.—The Imperial Japanese bank, at 1543 Laguna street was closed Friday by the state bank commissioners. It is alleged that the officers of the institution have been making loans to themselves. The bank is capitalized at $27,000 paid up with a reserve fund of $7,000.

Montana Socialists Nominate.

Helena, Mont.—The Socialists of Montana in state convention Thursday adopted a platform and nominated a full state ticket, headed by Harry Hazelton Nissoula, for governor.

MELBOURNE GREETS TARS

AMERICAN BATTLESHIPS REACH AUSTRALIAN CAPITAL.

Seventy Thousand Visitors Arrive in City to Participate in the Entertainments.

Melbourne.—The American battleships steamed into Melbourne harbor Saturday. The warships were in column formation. The warships arrived at Port Phillip Head on schedule time Saturday morning.

Melbourne was on the tiptoe of excitement when welcoming the American battleship fleet. The weather cleared and the day was beautiful. The warships were due at the Head at about noon, but arrived earlier. A wireless dispatch from the fleet said that since leaving Sydney the fleet experienced good weather and smooth seas.

The visit of the American fleet to the capital of the Australian commonwealth is the most remarkable military event in the history of Australia. The welcome to the American officers and men by the people of Australasia which began at Auckland and which Sydney continued, reached its climax here.

The federal state and municipal authorities were busily planning to receive the fleet for about three months. Private organizations eagerly co-operated with the authorities to give the Americans a cordial welcome. The Salvation Army chartered a steamer and, accompanied with several of its best brass bands, proceeded to the heads at the mouth of the harbor to welcome the fleet upon its arrival.

There are fully 70,000 visitors in Melbourne during "American week." As this city and its suburbs have a population of above 500,000 the streets of the city were thronged to their fullest capacity. Hotels and boarding houses entertained their overflow guests at private houses.

The public entertainment of the Americans was on a more extensive scale than has ever been known here. The state government expected to spend about $50,000 in entertainments, not to mention the expenses of the federal government and the municipality composing "Greater Melbourne."

PERISH IN BLAZING MINE.

McAlester, Okla.—Nearly 30 miners are believed to have perished in Hailey-Ola coal mine No. 1, at Haileyville, 14 miles east of McAlester, Wednesday morning, when fire destroyed the hoisting shaft and air shaft and cut off air from the mine below. Twenty-five bodies had been recovered by Wednesday night.

After the entombed miners had gone down in the cage a fire broke out, occasioned by the ignition of a barrel of oil which a miner was trying to divide. The flames spread at once to the hoisting shaft and the air shaft, and all communication with the top was cut off. Hundreds of miners rushed to the scene and tried to get into the air shaft, but this was impossible, as flames and smoke were coming up with such force as to drive them back. Then an effort was made to operate the cages running up and down the hoisting shaft, but it was found that the cages, the cables and the guides had been burned. There was absolutely no help for the imprisoned miners.

THREATENS ATLANTIC CITY.

Gov. Fort May Send Troops to Enforce Sunday Closing.

Seagirt, N. J.—In a startling proclamation issued Thursday from the summer capital, Gov. Fort declares that unless the excise law is observed in Atlantic City Sunday and all saloons and cafes are closed, he will call an extraordinary session of the legislature and may send the New Jersey troops to the famous resort, declaring the city to be under martial law. This is the most drastic action ever threatened to enforce a general law in New Jersey. The executive refers to Atlantic City conditions as a "saturnalia of vice."

FIVE DIE IN MINE ACCIDENT.

Runaway Car Strikes Train Loaded with Workmen.

Wilkesbarre, Pa.—Five men were killed, another fatally hurt, and five seriously injured in a collision Friday afternoon at the Warrior Run colliery of the Lehigh Valley Coal company, six miles from this city. The men were being hoisted up a slope when a runaway mine car struck a train of cars on which were 20 men who were employed in the mine. Only six of them escaped injury. Those killed were horribly mangled.

COL. VILAS PASSES AWAY

WELL-KNOWN WISCONSIN MAN SUCCUMBS TO PARALYSIS.

Madison, Wis.—Col. William F. Vilas died at 10:45 o'clock Thursday following five weeks of illness.

When Dr. Philip Fox called upon the colonel Thursday he found him unusually cheerful and bright and believed he showed signs of remarkable improvement.

Shortly after ten o'clock, while the nurses were administering a bath to the patient, they noticed that he weakened very quickly. An attempt was made to reach the doctor, but Col. Vilas died before he could be reached.

Dr. Fox believes that the immediate cause of the death was a second stroke of paralysis.

Col. William Freeman Vilas, former United States senator and noted lawyer, was born at Chelsea, Vt., July 9, 1840. He was a pioneer of Madison, his family having settled there in June, 1851. Col. Vilas graduated from the University of Wisconsin law school at the age of 18, in 1858. In 1860 he graduated from the Albany law school and set up his shingle in Madison. In July, 1851, he enlisted in Company A, Twenty-third Wisconsin regiment, and took part in the Vicksburg campaign. After carrying off his share of civil war honors he returned to Madison in 1853 and resumed the practice of law. He was elected a member of the Wisconsin legislature in 1885. He was made permanent chairman of the national Democratic convention in 1884. He was postmaster general of the United States from 1885 to 1888. He was secretary of the interior 1888 and 1889. In 1891 he was elected a member of the United States senate, which office he held until 1897. He held many positions for the civil war veterans.

EARLE IS OUT ON BAIL.

"Affinity" Man Immediately Begins Search for His Wife.

Goshen, N. Y. — After spending two sleepless nights in the jail here on a charge of beating his wife, Ferdinand Pinney Earle, he of "affinity" and "soul-mate" fame, was released Thursday on furnishing $2,000 bail. Immediately upon leaving the jail he began a search for his wife, Mrs. Julia Kuttner Earle, whom he married after inducing his first wife to go to France and get a divorce from him.

Earle was surrounded by newspaper correspondents the moment he stepped from the jail, but he stopped only long enough to say:

"I am going to find my wife no matter where she is. I know that if I can talk with her for ten minutes she will forgive me and everything will be all right again. This whole trouble has been twisted and I have been misrepresented. I must hurry to find my wife."

Burglar's Conscience Hurt Him.

Philadelphia.—Joseph G. Mantell surrendered himself to the police here Friday, declaring that he was wanted for robbing the home of Miss Bertha Brand in City avenue, Brooklyn, on October 28 last, and also the home of William Glinck, fourth assistant examiner in the patent office at Washington. The latter robbery was committed, he said, on November 9, 1907. "I have been tortured by my conscience and can get no rest day or night, so I want to face trial and end it all," Mantell told the detectives.

SHOT ON THE BOARD WALK.

Mystery in Fatal Attack on Baltimorean at Atlantic City.

Atlantic City, N. J.—A mysterious shooting, the details of which became known Thursday, occurred on the board walk late Wednesday night during a heavy rain, when Charles B. Roberts, president and treasurer of the National Supply company of Baltimore, Md., was probably fatally shot by an unknown man who dashed from a hotel pavilion and, after firing, fled. The bullet penetrated Roberts' side.

Roberts was being pushed along in a rolling chair with Mrs. W. F. G. Williams, also of Baltimore, when the stranger appeared suddenly. He commanded Roberts to get out of the chair and as the latter was about to respond, brandished a revolver and shot. Mrs. Williams fainted and the colored attendant called a policeman, who had Roberts removed to his hotel suite.

Mr. Roberts is 38 years old. He is a member of all the leading clubs of Maryland, including the Maryland club, the Baltimore Country club and Elk Ridge Hunt club.

WOMAN MOB CHIEF A SUICIDE.

Mrs. Howard of Springfield Takes Poison When Indicted for Murder.

Springfield, Ill. — Mrs. Kate Howard, leader of the mob in the recent race war in Springfield, Wednesday night killed herself by swallowing poison while being taken to the jail following the return of an indictment against her charging murder. The woman had made threats to commit suicide if indicted for the lynching of Scott Burton and William Donnegan.

Mrs. Howard was arrested following the destruction of Loper's restaurant and was released on $1,000 bail. Then came four indictments charging her with the destruction of property and malicious mischief. A saloonkeeper furnished bond on the indictments while the grand jury prepared to indict her for murder.

Springfield, Ill. — The Seventh Regiment, I. N. G., was ordered to withdraw from the city and left at ten o'clock Wednesday morning. At a conference held between Gov. Deneen, Sheriff Werner and representatives of the military forces in the city, it was decided that the further presence of the armed men was unnecessary.

KERMIT ROOSEVELT IS BRAVE.

Stops Runaway, Saving Woman and Children from Death.

Oyster Bay, N. Y. — It was stated here Thursday night that Kermit Roosevelt, second son of the president, stopped a runaway pair of horses after a wild chase on horseback along the shore road into Bayville, and probably saved the lives of Mrs. Frank Hilton of New York and her two small sons.

Kermit seized the horses' reins while the animals were galloping at full speed and brought them to a standstill. Mrs. Hilton and her two children were in the carriage. They were unhurt. Mr. Hilton was thrown out when the horses took fright but was not injured.

Hains Are Held Without Bail.

New York. — Capt. P. C. Hains, Jr., and his brother, T. Jenkins Hains, were held without bail over the action of a grand jury Friday on a charge of the murder of William E. Annis.

Three witnesses testified for the prosecution. Patrolman Charles W. Baker, who arrested the brothers after the shooting, said that when he arrived on the yacht club float Annis was lying there wounded.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

Preached His Own Funeral Sermon.

Rev. G. L. Morrill, pastor of the People's church, prepared his own funeral services. He made five phonographic records, heard them played over afterward and then deposited the wax cylinders in a safety deposit vault.

The records made by the preacher consisted of the Twenty-third psalm, the song, "Shall We Gather at the River," verses from the poem "Immortality," "The Lord's Prayer," and Gottschalk's "Last Hope." This last the Rev. Mr. Morrill, who was formerly a musician, played on a piano.

"These verses and music have all been rendered by me at the funerals of my father, mother and two brothers. I wanted to have them said at my own funeral, too, and thought to say them myself was the best way about it. I am 50 years old now, but do not expect to die yet for a great while, but I thought it best to have my services prepared. These records will all be played over at my funeral. I tell you it sounds strange to hear them played over and realize that I had prepared selections for my own funeral."

Minneapolis.—Louis Lienhart, who has charge of the dog pound conducted by the Minneapolis Humane society at Twenty-first avenue N and the river, has been adopted by a big black and white spotted dog.

The dog's days were numbered. He had been picked up as a stray by the dog catcher, and was doomed to die, when one day last week a man came along, and, paying the $2 required for redeeming dogs, took the dog away.

This was in the morning and that night Lienhart was awakened by the touch of something cold on his face. Rubbing his eyes open he gazed into the countenance of the spotted dog he had sold. The dog had not only made the return trip to the pound, but had hunted up Lienhart's apartment and crawled in thru the window which had been left partly open.

Fort Ridgely Anniversary.

Fairfax.—More than 5,000 people assembled to-day in the grassy amphitheater cast up out of the rugged rock by nature at Fort Ridgely, to commemorate the forty-sixth anniversary of the last great battle fought in the historic old post with the Indians. Every village and town in Renville county was represented by a heavy delegation, while spectators traveled from all points of the state to witness the celebration. D. W. Moore, who was located on the Upper Agency at the time of the uprising, and who brought the first news to St. Paul of the surviving missionaries, journeyed all the way from Colorado Springs, accompanied by his wife, to attend the anniversary celebration, and delivered a reminiscent address on the early days.

Polk County Fair Exhibit.

Crookston.—After having been prepared in many different planning designs by twenty Polk county girls, the Polk county agricultural exhibit for the Minnesota state fair was shipped from Crookston and will be erected at the fair grounds by Magnus Lundberg, J. M. Stevens, and J. Henry Stair of Crookston, who organized the parts of the exhibit at Crookston. By invitation the exhibit will be taken from St. Paul after the state fair to the Illinois state fair at Springfield, Ill., where it will also be shown under the auspices of land men of the Northwest. The exhibition has been on display at the auditorium at Crookston for some time and promises to rate very high.

State Fair Races.

Hamline.—Minor Heir, one of the greatest pacing horses of the country, and the probable successor of Dan Patch, is to try for a new world's record for unpaced horses on the Minnesota Fair track, Monday, Aug. 31.

Minor Heir has a record of 2:00¼, and is a horse new to the racing game this year, which makes his record all the more wonderful, especially as he has won the three races in which he has entered this year, going in 2:05½, 2:05¾ and 2:01.

NEWS NOTES.

Hamline.—State fair officials select 600 supers to represent settlers in "Fort Ridgely in '62" at fair this year.

Hamline.—William Pitt Murray, president, and A. L. Larpenteur, secretary of the Old Settlers' society, composed of men that were in Minnesota and twenty-one years of age on New Year's eve of 1849, have called a meeting of their society on the state fair grounds for Thursday, Sept. 3, at 10 a. m.

Faribault.—O. E. Emery, living on a farm northeast of here, was attacked by a vicious bull, while he was in his stall, and knocked down. Mr. Emery was badly injured in numerous places, including a compound fracture of his left leg. But for the timely rescue by his son, who was close at hand, he would undoubtedly have been killed.

What is Pe-ru-na.

Are we claiming too much for Peruna when we claim it to be an effective remedy for chronic catarrh? Have we abundant proof that Peruna is in reality such a catarrh remedy? Let us see what the United States Dispensatory says of the principal ingredients of Peruna.

Take, for instance, the ingredient hydrastis canadensis, or golden seal. The United States Dispensatory says of this herbal remedy, that it is largely employed in the treatment of depraved mucous membranes lining various organs of the human body.

Another ingredient of Peruna, corydalis formosa, is classed in the United States Dispensatory as a tonic.

Cedron seeds is another ingredient of Peruna. The United States Dispensatory says of the action of cedron that it is used as a bitter tonic and in the treatment of dysentery, and in intermittent diseases as a substitute for quinine.

Send to us for a free book of testimonials of what the people think of Peruna as a catarrh remedy. The best evidence is the testimony of those who have tried it.

CURED HER CHILDREN.

"Some years ago my three little girls had a very bad form of eczema. Itching eruptions formed on the backs of their heads which were simply covered. I tried almost everything, but failed. Then my mother recommended the Cuticura Remedies. I washed my children's heads with Cuticura Soap and then applied the wonderful ointment, Cuticura. I did this four or five times and I can say that they have been entirely cured. I have another baby who is so plump that the folds of skin on his neck were broken and even bled. I used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and the next morning the trouble had disappeared. Mme. Napoleon Duceppe, 41 Duluth St., Montreal, Que., May 21, 1907."

When the Little Man Scored.

A meek-looking little man with a large pasteboard box climbed on the car. As he did so he bumped slightly into a sleepy, corpulent passenger with a self-satisfied look and two little dabs of sidewhiskers. As the car rounded a curve the box rubbed against him again and he growled: "This is no freight car, is it?" "Nope," returned the meek little chap with the box, "and when you come right down to it, it ain't any cattle car, either, is it?"

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Red Lake County Minnesota.

Subscription price $1.00 per year in advance. If not paid in advance $1.50

Entered as Second-class matter August 28, 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879

There will be some changes in the state capitol crew after January first.

If there is no other man in the state of Minnesota fit for governor, only John A. Johnson, why not elect him for life, and establish and name the state of Minnesota the "Johnson Kingdom?"

We are pleased to see Hon. F. H. Eddy in the republican campaign, in earnest this year, as he certainly has the reputation of being a vote geter in the northern part of the state.

Gov. Johnson when told of his nomination said. "I am up in the air." He will come down the day of election in time to be buried tenderly and kindly under several thousand ballots, bearing the X after the name of Jacobson.—Thief River Falls News.

There is no complaint inside the republican ranks this year by the rank and file of the party against our nominee for governor. Of course there are a few in the state that are of the opinion that they should have been nominated instead of Jacobson that are not working for his election.

Be it said to the credit or the better element of Thief River Falls that they are not supporting Lewis Nelson for reelection for sheriff. Of course there is a large following of special automobile deputies that are supporting him for what there is in it, but they have only thirty two votes. What action Red Lake Falls will take in the matter will show up at the primaries, but notwithstanding some sensational reports that are being circulated we hardly look for him to receive any solid vote from Red Lake Falls.

Just To Feed The Calves.

Of course Gov. Johnson is aware of the long chances he took in accepting a third nomination but the feeders at the public crib were so anxious for two more years of licking at the trough that they insisted on him accepting a nomination that means his political death.

Greater love than this hath no man shown, that he would lay down his political life to run the chance of feeding his friends at the public crib.

An Unexpected Burns Lecture.

John Augustus O'Shea used to be in considerable request as a lecturer on his military experiences. Once, at Dumfries, he came upon the platform wearing in his buttonhole a daisy, which he quietly removed and held up. "Ladies and gentlemen," he began, "I hold in my hand a 'wee modest flower' I plucked this evening from the grave of Robert Burns." The audience was interested and became inthralled as the lecturer went on to speak of the national poet. Then, suddenly recollecting that Burns had nothing to do with his subject, he stopped abruptly. "And now," said Mr. O'Shea, "I will proceed to relate my experiences in the war."

But by this time he had thoroughly engaged the sympathies of his listeners, who would not hear of another subject. "Never min' the war, sir," they vociferated; "gie us Robbie Burns!" And he did. This extempore oration afterward became one of the most popular of Mr. O'Shea's lectures.—London Chronicle.

Murder In Spain.

Spain has a death penalty, but rarely imposes it, the customary sentence for premeditated homicide being penal servitude in chains for life. A parricide is punished by being imprisoned in chains "in perpetuity until death."

He Got The Beer.

Did you ever hear of the part our sheriff of Red Lake county took in the Anderson wedding, at Plummer last winter?

At the time of the marriage It was in Plummer, and immediately seized this opportunity to satisfy his thirst for beer. Going after Anderson he demanded money to buy liquor to treat the crowd. Mr. Anderson informed him that he was a church member and a temperance man and did not like to buy intoxicating liquors for anyone to drink, but in order to pacify him he gave him, (our sheriff) $5 to treat to the cigars. After he had got the five dollars of Anderson he (our sheriff) threatend to take Anderson, who is a small man, by the neck and take him to the saloon and pour liquor down him, but the marshal of Plummer interfeered to protect the little man from an assault by "our sheriff." A man elected by the people of Red Lake County to inforce the laws, and uphold the poace and dignity of the state of Minnesota. After he, "our sheriff", and candidate for reelection, had been driven away from Anderson he turned his attention to the woman that Anderson had secured through a matrimonial agency, and had repudiated, and bought beer and carried to her. * * * * *

Here follows facts that are entirely unfit for publication, but were given us by an eye witness, and the above is published by, and at the request of many voters that are ready to swear to the facts, in any court.

If you want a man of this charecter for your sheriff of Red Lake County, vote for Nelson. We have placed the facts before you, and it is up to you to do the voting.

For Sheriff.

I herby announce myself as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for sheriff of Red Lake County at the primary election to be held September 15th Your support and Vote is respectfully solicited.

I ask your support for the nomination and if nominated one more vote for election.

J. W. McGinty

Superintendent Of Schools.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for County Superintendent of schools at the Republican primaries September 15th and respectfully solicit your vote and support. Twelve years experience in school work in Red Lake County.

H. T. McAnulty

For Sheriff.

I herby announce myself as a candidate for the republican nomination for sheriff of Red Lake County at the Republican Priamaries on September 15th and respectfully ask for the support of the Voters.

Family Secrets.

A father complains that his little six-year-old girl is too talkative. He says: The worst of it is when we have visitors she is continually making mistakes of the worst sort, mistakes that tend to rattle the dry bones of the family skeleton in the cupboard. Recently she allowed her tongue to run away with her, as usual, the result of which was that she very much embarrassed both her father and mother, although the guests seemed delighted.

I had a very serious talk with her and impressed upon her, or tried to, that she must not tell any family secret. The next time we had company she was permitted to come to the table only by promising that she wouldn't utter a word.

She behaved beautifully and had nothing to say until the dessert was about to be taken away. Then her lips began to quiver, and finally she burst into tears.

"Why, what's the matter, darling?" her mother asked.

"I—I want some more ice cream, if that isn't a family secret," she wailed between sobs.—London Telegraph.

A Wash Twice a Year.

A charming Hungarian countess once said to me, "What is so nice about the men from England is that they look so clean, as if they had just come from a swim." Of course we pride ourselves on our morning tubs, splash and splutter and shiver and polish up with rough towels. "What dirty people those English are," remarked an Italian, "when they find it necessary to wash all over every day! Why, I only wash twice a year!" I have met Chinese who regard washing all over as a proceeding decidedly improper. A Chinese is washed when he is born, and he has no other altogether wash till he is dead. But we British people have adopted cleanliness only of recent years. Small houses have their bathrooms, but very few houses built over half a century ago were provided with bathrooms. I suppose those must have been the days of the Saturday night wash in the kitchen. Certainly our gay cavalier ancestors in silks and ruffles must have been a dirty gang. Handkerchiefs were not invented, and the velvet cloaks must often have been greasy. The rollicking old times were very dirty old times.—"Baths, Pleasant and Otherwise."

The Don't Worry Theory.

The usual advice given to the worrier is, "Don't worry." This advice is foolish because impractical. No one can stop thinking one type of thought except by substituting for it another. Besides, it is dangerous advice, for, even supposing one could mechanically put an end to a worrying state of mind, he would simply be like an engineer who should plant himself on the safety valve of his engine. The energy expended in worry, turned inward on itself, would tear the mental mechanism to pieces. No! What the worried man or woman needs evidently is to be taught how to find a healthful outlet for his or her nervous power thus going to waste. If we say "Don't worry," let us also be careful to add, "But work," and let us also point out what kind of work should be undertaken and the spirit in which it ought to be done. In other words, what the worrier needs is re-education.—Rev. S. S. McComb in Harper's Bazar.

Jefferson Davis' Ambition.

Jefferson Davis was a man of most sincere conviction and courageous action, and when the Southern Confederacy was about to be organized his single ambition was the command of the Confederate army. This I had from his own lips at his residence at Beauvoir, Miss., some fifteen years after the war. He told me that when he started for Montgomery, Ala., when the movement began for the organization of the Confederacy he hoped to be called to the command of the army, but before he reached Montgomery he was advised of his election as provisionary president. When he reached the new capital of the Confederacy he found it impossible to change conditions, and he was compelled to accept the presidency, and he entered upon that duty as conscientiously as any public man ever entered upon an official career.—Colonel A. K. McClure in "Confederate Veterans."

A Bibliophile's Reply.

Mandell Creighton, who was bishop of London, had a horror of lending his favorite books. A fellow clergyman once visited the bishop and took a fancy to an old edition of Shakespeare. He borrowed the volume and did not think to return it for several months. Finally the minister returned it with a letter, saying, "My Dear Bishop—I have great pleasure in returning the volume you lent me."

Lord Penzance's Acquaintance.

When the late Lord Penzance was plain Mr. Wilde, he once took an early morning stroll round Covent Garden market. There he entered into conversation with an old man of genial aspect who had just made a purchase of a geranium. Mr. Wilde soon found that the stranger was an enthusiastic amateur gardener, and the pair had an interesting chat on horticultural topics as they walked toward Oxford street. Suddenly the fare in a passing hansom cab signaled to the driver to pull up, and within the vehicle Wilde saw his friend, Sergeant Ballantine. Bidding the old man adieu, Wilde entered the cab.

In surprised accents Ballantine exclaimed, "How on earth did you come to know that man?"

"Picked him up just now in Covent Garden market," said his companion.

"The Editor of the Rapier;

"Dear Sir—Is there no way to put a stop to begging along the line of the railroad? Melancholy.

The old time herbalists did not regard melancholy as an affection of the temperament, but as an illness or disease, and many were the "secrets" they purported to cure it with. SPORTING FACTS AND FANCIES

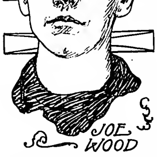
A good example for young ball players to follow is that of "Dummy" Hoy, the former Red outfielder, who retired from baseball a few years ago, says a Cincinnati scribe. Not very many fans are aware that Hoy is living a prosperous and useful life just outside the limits of Cincinnati. When his big league career was over the dummy went to the coast for a short time, but soon decided not to spend the best part of his life in careening around the minor leagues. He therefore returned to Cincinnati and settled near there. Hoy had always been wise enough to save his money, and he had drawn a good salary for a number of years. He was not broke when he found himself through with baseball, but had a snug fortune in the bank. So he went out into the suburbs and purchased a beautiful little farm of 21 acres, about a mile from College hill, paying the round sum of $10,000 for the same. Then he settled down to a quiet life with his family, and there he is living as happy as anyone could wish for. Hoy keeps his place under cultivation, not for profit, but simply for his own satisfaction and enjoyment. He does nearly all the farm work himself, rising and getting busy at four o'clock every morning during the summer. He keeps a horse, several cows and some 700 or 800 chickens. He raises all the fresh vegetables his family can use, with some left over. He has fields of hay and corn which are the envy of surrounding neighbors. In the summer he and his wife take a few boarders into their capacious house and treat them so well that one who has been there is always eager to repeat the experience. Hoy is happily married to a charming woman, has a boy of five years and a girl less than two years old. Both of the children talk and hear perfectly, though both Hoy and his wife are mutes. Hoy rarely comes to town, but he takes a daily paper and reads the baseball news with as keen interest as he did when he was a player himself. When the Giants are here "Dummy" Taylor always goes out to see him, and they have a quiet chat about old times. It would be hard to find a man in the whole state of Ohio say happier than William Hoy. And all because he took care of his health and his money while he was a professional ball player and was wise enough to make suitable provision for the future.

Joe Wood, one of the three no-hit pitchers of the American association this season, who has gone to the Boston Americans, is 19 years old, and should his future advancement correspond with that of the past season he bids fair to become one of the greatest pitchers in the country. Wood is a native of Kansas. He was born in Hutchinson, and, after he left high school, joined the pitching staff of the Hutchinson club, in the Western association. He is the son of a well-to-do Kansas merchant and farmer. Wood has two brothers who are promising ball players. Wood got his first experience in pitching as a member of the Hutchinson high school team, and he showed up so well that he was given a try-out in the Western association. He made good from the start and was one of the best pitchers in the association last year. His good work attracted the attention of George Tebeau, who bought him from the Hutchinson club. Wood made his debut with the Kansas City Blues by pitching very effective ball against Pittsburg, Washington and the Chicago White Sox when those clubs met the home team in ante-season games. Not one of the major league clubs was able to do much with Wood's delivery. At the beginning of the American association season Wood pitched great ball, but he was unfortunate in receiving poor support in nearly all of his games. The hits per game made off him this season average 5.8.



Cincinnati is going to tour Cuba after the close of the season. Many believe that the pleasure trip of the Reds from the middle of April to early October is long enough to satisfy most players.

HER GOOD FORTUNE

After Years Spent in Vain Effort.

Mrs. Mary E. H. Rouse, of Cambridge, N. Y., says: "Five years ago I had a bad fall and it affected my kidneys. Severe pains in my back and hips became constant, and sharp twinges followed any exertion. The kidney secretions were badly disordered. I lost flesh and grew too weak to work. Though constantly using medicine I despaired of being cured until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. Then relief came quickly, and in a short time I was completely cured. I am now in excellent health."

On the Doctors.

Mrs. Mary G. Baker Eddy, who, of course, has no faith in medicine, told a Western Christian Scientist, at one of her latest audiences, an anecdote about a friend of hers.

This friend, a thin and nervous woman, could not sleep. She visited her physician and the man said:

"Oh, no, doctor," the patient replied.

"Well," said the physician, "just keep a pitcher of milk and some biscuit beside you, and every night, the last thing you do, make a light meal."

"But doctor," cried the lady, "you told me on no account to eat anything before retiring."

"Pooh, pooh," said the doctor, "that was three months ago. Science has made enormous strides since then."

A Unanimous Vote.

A German-American who had recently arrived at the estate of riches attended his first banquet. The wine was particularly vile, and so several gentlemen who were seated near the German were quite satisfied to have him empty the bottles that had been set apart for their common use. Neither the quality nor the quantity of the wine in the least disturbed the Teuton, and, after draining the last glass, he looked around jovially and said: "Sheatlemen, I haf now drunken all your wine and safed you the trouble of trinking vat you did not like. I tink you ought to vote me a public tank." They did.—Lippincott's.

THE LAND OF GRAIN

—BY—

JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD

Author of "American Farmers Building a New Nation in the North"—"Canada—The Land of Greater Hope"—"The Invasion of Canada by American Farmers"—"A Thousand Miles on Horseback Across the Dominion Provinces," Etc., Etc.

Not so very many years ago the majority of people in the United States laughed at the prediction that the day was coming when Western Canada would far outstrip this country in the raising of grain—when, in other words, it would become the great bread-basket of the world. During the past three or four years the enormous production of grain in the Dominion West has thinned the ranks of those who doubted the destiny of Canada's vast grain growing regions; the crops of this year will dispel the doubts of the remaining few. From Winnipeg westward to the foothills of Alberta, over a country nearly a thousand miles in width, the grain production this year will be something to almost stagger the belief of those hundreds of thousands of American farmers whose average yield is not more than from ten to fifteen bushels of wheat to the acre, and who are finding that their product is also outclassed in quality by that of their northern neighbors.

The enormous grain crop of this year in the Canadian West may truthfully be said to be the production of "a few pioneers." Only a small percentage of the unnumbered millions of acres of grain land are under cultivation, notwithstanding the fact that tens of thousands of homesteads were taken up last year. And yet, when all the figures are in, it will be found that the settlers of the western prairies have raised this year more than 125,000,000 bushels of wheat, 100,000,000 bushels of oats and 25,000,000 bushels of barley. It has been a "fortune making year" for thousands of American farmers who two or three years ago owned hardly more than the clothes upon their backs, and whose bumper crops from their homesteads will yield them this season anywhere from $1,500 to $2,500 each, more money than many of them have seen at one time in all their lives.

Very recently I passed through the western provinces from Winnipeg to Calgary, and in the words of a fellow passenger, who was astonished by what he saw from the car windows in Manitoba, we were, metaphorically speaking, in a "land of milk and honey." The country was one great sweep of ripening grain. In fact, so enormous was the crop, that at the time there were grave doubts as to the possibility of GETTING ENOUGH BINDER TWINE TO SUPPLY THE DEMAND. A situation like this has never before been known in the agricultural history of any country.

Before I made my first trip through the Dominion west I doubted very much the stories that I had heard of this so-called "grain wonderland" across the border. I believed, as unnumbered thousands of others believed, that the stories were circulated mostly to induce immigration. I quickly found that I was wrong. As one Alberta farmer said to me a few weeks ago, "If the whole truth were told about this country I don't suppose you could find one American in ten who would believe it."

This year the prospects of the wheat crop of Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Alberta are an average of over TWENTY-FIVE BUSHELS TO THE ACRE, and that this grain is far superior to that raised in the states is proved by our own government statistics, which show that American millers are importing millions of bushels of B "Canadian hard" to mix with the home product in order that THIS HOME PRODUCT MAY BE RAISED TO THE REQUIRED STANDARD. It is a peculiar fact that while the Dominion Government is anxious for its western provinces to fill up with the very best of immigrants, there has been no blatant or sensational advertising of those lands. For this reason it is probable that not one American farmer out of fifty knows that Canada wheat now holds the world's record of value—that, in other words, it is the best wheat on earth, and that more of it is grown to the acre than anywhere else in the world.

A brief study of climatic conditions, and those things which go to make a climate, will show that the farther one travels northward from the Montana border the milder the climate becomes—up to a certain point. In other words, the climate at Edmonton, Alberta, is far better than that of Denver, 1,500 miles south; and while thousands of cattle and sheep are dying because of the severity of the winters in Wyoming, Montana and other western states, the cattle, sheep and horses of Alberta GRAZE ON THE RANGES ALL WINTER WITH ABSOLUTELY NO SHELTER. This is all largely because sea-currents and air-currents have to do with the making of the climate of temperate regions. For instance, why is it that California possesses such a beautiful climate, with no winter at all, while the New England states on a parallel with it have practically six months of winter out of twelve?

It is because of that great sweep of warm water known as the "Japan current," and this same current not only affects the westernmost of the Dominion provinces, but added to its influence are what are known as the "chinook winds"—steady and undeviating air-currents which sweep over the great wheat regions of Western Canada. There are good scientific reasons why these regions are capable of producing better crops than our own western and central states, but best of all are the proofs of it in actual results. This year, for instance, as high as one hundred bushels of oats to the acre will be gathered in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta, and some wheat will go AS HIGH AS FIFTY BUSHELS TO THE ACRE, though of course this is an unusual yield.

Last spring it was widely advertised in American papers that Alberta's winter wheat crop was a failure. In fact, this is Alberta's banner year in grain production, as it is Saskatchewan's and Manitoba's, and from figures already in it is estimated that Alberta's wheat will yield on an average of THIRTY-FIVE BUSHELS TO THE ACRE. In many parts of the province returns will show a yield of as high as FIFTY bushels to the acre and it is freely predicted by many that when the official figures are in a yield of at least forty-five instead of thirty-five bushels to the acre will be shown.

At the time of my last journey through the Canadian West, when my purpose was largely to secure statistical matter for book use, I solicited letters from American settlers in all parts of the three provinces, and most of these make most interesting reading. The letter was written by A. Kaltenbrunner, whose postoffice address is Regina, Saskatchewan.

"A few years ago," he says, "I took up a homestead for myself and also one for my son. The half section which we own is between Rouleau and Drinkwater, adjoining the Moosejaw creek, and is a low, level and heavy land. Last year we put in 100 acres of wheat which went 25 bushels to the acre. Every bushel of it was 'No. 1.' That means the best wheat that can be raised on earth—worth 90 cents a bushel at the nearest elevators. We also threshed 9,000 bushels of first class oats out of 160 acres. Eighty acres was fall plowing AND YIELDED NINETY BUSHELS TO THE ACRE. We got 53 cents a bushel clear. All our grain was cut in the last week of the month of August. We will make more money out of our crops this year than last. For myself, I feel compelled to say that Western Canada crops cannot be checked, even by unusual conditions."

An itemized account shows a single year's earnings of this settler and his son to be as follows:

2,500 bushels of wheat at 90 cents a bushel	$2,250
Total	$7,020

It will be seen by the above that this man's oat crop was worth twice as much as his wheat crop. While the provinces of western Canada will for all time to come be the world's greatest wheat growing regions, oats are running the former grain a close race for supremacy. The soil and climatic conditions in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta are particularly favorable to the production of oats, and this grain, like the wheat, runs a far greater crop to the acre than in even the best grain producing states of the union. Ninety bushels to the acre is not an unusual yield, whole homesteads frequently running this average. And this is not the only advantage Western Canada oats have over those of the United States, for in weight they run between forty and fifty pounds to the bushel, while No. 1 wheat goes to sixty-two pounds to the bushel. In fact, so heavy is Canadian grain of all kinds, and especially the wheat, that throughout the west one will see cars with great placards upon them, which read:

When I made my first trip through the Canadian West a few years ago I found thousands of settlers living in rude shacks, tent shelters and homes of logs and clay. Today one will find these old "homes" scattered from Manitoba to the Rockies, but they are no longer used by human tenants. Modern homes have taken their place—for it has come to be a common saying in these great grain regions that, "The first year a settler is in the land he earns a living; the second he has money enough to build himself a modern home and barns; the third he is independent." And as extreme as this statement may seem to those hundreds of thousands of American farmers who strive for a meager existence, it is absolutely true. I am an American, as patriotic, I believe, as most of our people—but even at that I cannot but wish that these people, whose lives are such an endless and unhappy grind, might know of the new life that is awaiting them in this last great west—this "land of greater hope," where the farmer is king, and where the wealth all rests in his hands. As one American farmer said to me, "It is hard to pull up stakes and move a couple of thousand miles." And so it is—or at least it appears to be. But in a month it can be done. And the first year, when the new settler reaps a greater harvest than he has ever possessed before, he will rise with 200,000 others of his people in Western Canada and thank the government that has given him, free of cost, a new life, a new home, and new hopes—which has made of him, in fact, "A man among men, a possessor of wealth among his people."

Thoreau's Sensible Answer.

When the forest-haunting hermit Thoreau lay on his deathbed, a Calvinistic friend called to make inquiry regarding his soul. "Henry," he said, anxiously, "have you made your peace with God?" "John," replied the dying naturalist, in a whisper, "I didn't know that God and myself had quarreled!"

WHAT THE TRADE MARK MEANS TO THE BUYER

Few people realize the importance of the words "Trade Mark" stamped on the goods they buy. If they did it would save them many a dollar spent for worthless goods and put a lot of unscrupulous manufacturers out of the business.

When a manufacturer adopts a trade mark he assumes the entire responsibility for the merit of his product. He takes his business reputation in his hands—out in the limelight—"on the square" with the buyer of his goods, with the dealer, and with himself.

The other manufacturer—the one who holds out "inducements," offering to brand all goods purchased with each local dealer's brand—sidesteps responsibility, and when these inferior goods "come back" it's the local dealer that must pay the penalty.

A good example of the kind of protection afforded the public by a trade mark is that offered in connection with National Lead Company's advertising of pure White Lead as the best paint material.

That the Dutch Boy Painter trade mark is an absolute guaranty of purity in White Lead is proved to the most skeptical by the offer National Lead Company make to send free to any address a blow-pipe and instructions how to test the white lead for themselves. The testing outfit is being sent out from the New York office of the company, Woodbridge Building.

Too Much Afraid of Dirt.

It is quite true that "cleanliness is next to godliness," but in this day of fads and scientific frills the question is whether we are not getting altogether too afraid of a little dirt. Dirt has been defined as matter in the wrong place, and hygiene is the science of keeping it in the right place. But we are inclined to think that we are all a little bit too much up in the air on the matter of cleanliness; a little too afraid of coming in contact with the clean-smelling, kindly earth, and are in danger of becoming nasty-nice.—Washington Herald.

Baseball Technicality.

A few weeks ago some boys were playing ball in an apartment house yard. A colored waiter came out of the kitchen and in a very cross manner told them to stop right away. One boy, who had gone to get a drink came back and found the others making ready to leave; he asked, wonderingly, "What is the matter?" and another one calmly answered, "the game was called off on account of darkness."

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

New Laws.

St. Paul—New laws to provide for accurate public records of all corporations doing business in Minnesota by a plan that would materially increase the state revenues without hardship to the corporations will be recommended to the legislature by Julius A. Schmahl, secretary of state, in his annual report now in preparation.

Briefly stated, Mr. Schmahl's plan is that all corporations operated for pecuniary gain, whether they be state or foreign corporations, shall be required to file in the office of the secretary of state annual statements of their business status and to pay a filing fee of $5 or $10 each year.

He suggests that this annual statement should show the officers and directors of the company at the time of filing the report, the principal place of business, and the location of its plants and warehouses, and should state the amount of stock sold or transferred in the year and give a list of the stockholders. The proposed law, he says, should contain a clause giving the secretary of state the right, in case no statement be filed within a reasonable time after the date fixed, to declare the charter of a corporation forfeited.

Habits of Deer.

Duluth—"It seems rather odd, but it is a fact, nevertheless, that the best deer hunting in northern Minnesota is within ten or fifteen miles of the limits of cities, towns and villages in this section of the state," said S. T. Austin of Bemidji, a timber cruiser who passed through Duluth yesterday. "The farther one gets from civilization, the better moose hunting he finds, and the fewer deer. In what I consider the best moose districts of the state there are no deer at all. In some sections where there were none of these animals five or six years ago, the hunting is now good. The deer seem to have gone in with the settlers.

"I don't know how to explain this, unless by saying that the deer are attracted by the gardens of the settlers. There is nothing dearer to a deer's heart than a turnip patch, and he will travel miles, and take all kinds of risks, to get into one. I know men who make it a practice every spring to plant turnips out in the woods, or somewhere in a burning, so they may hunt deer there in the fall. All they have to do is to watch along about dusk, and the animals come in to feed."

Dock is Damaged.

Duluth—The almost finished new steel dock of the Duluth & Iron Range railroad, at Two Harbors, and the machinery used in constructing the dock, was damaged to the extent of $15,000 during the night by unknown men. The men escaped without being detected.

No dynamite or other explosives were used. The damage consisted in bending, twisting and breaking machinery and ironwork of the dock, and throwing whatever could be worked loose into the water.

This outrage is believed to be directed against the bridge company, which furnished material for the Two Harbors structure, and which, it is opposed to labor unions.

Increased Valuation.

St. Paul—From the preliminary reports of the state tax commission, as compiled from the returns of the county auditors of the state, it appears that the taxable property of the state has increased about $80,000,000 during the past year. The total amount is now $1,155,000,000. This will probably be cut several million dollars by the state board of equalization which meets next month.

The increase this year is but slightly larger than that of a year ago, although the increase in some counties has been remarkable. Isanti county shows the largest increase, it appearing that there has been an increase of $9,000,000 in the value of property there. This increase is largely in mineral lands.

NEWS NOTES.

St. Paul.—Evan Rees won the state tennis championship yesterday from Harry Belden, who held that title the past year.

Crookston—A well known authority on paving material states that he believes the clay that exists in this section can be used for the manufacture of an excellent quality of paving brick.

Hamline—For the forty-ninth time since its inception and organization, the gates of the Minnesota state fair swung open for the Northwest's annual outing week at 8 o'clock Monday morning.

Costly Ore.

Aurora—It was decidedly costly ore that was sent out some days ago, when for the first time this season a shipment was made from the Canisteo district of the western Mesaba. It is estimated that already $8,000,000 have been expended by the United States Steel Corporation in opening the new mining field, yet to date there have been forwarded only 13,000 tons of ore, of which 600 tons comprised the latest shipment.

Velvet Chaff Classified.

Minneapolis.—Velvet chaff wheat is now graded as Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 4 and will be designated as such on all grain reports of the Northwest.

This decision was reached late yesterday afternoon after the appeal boards of Minneapolis and Duluth had gone into secret session in order to quell the differences of the opinions on the new grain. The separate classification was given owing to the inferiority of the wheat.

The result of the decision was received with evident satisfaction to all concerned and the meeting terminated with but little discussion, though it was expected that exciting arguments would be held.

Minneapolis.—The re-election of Dr. J. S. Johnson of St. Paul, as president, and the choosing of Sioux Falls, S. D., as its next meeting place, were the features of the closing day of the eighth biennial sangerfest of the Norwegian-Danish Singers' association, which has been in session in Minneapolis.

Minneapolis.—This city was invaded by a gang of hold-up men and as a result three men were held up, robbed and slugged, two of them rendered unconscious, while their pockets were rifled of their contents, and their shoes and coats were taken away so they could not summon assistance before the thugs made their escape.

Lake Crystal.—While the family was absent from the room, the infant child of Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Hughes, who was left alone in a high chair, in some manner slipped from the seat of the chair and when the mother returned to the room it was found that the child had caught its neck in the fastenings and had choked to death.

St. Paul.—Local assessors throughout Minnesota have added $80,000,000 to their assessment rolls since last year according to the returns of the county auditors to the state auditor which have just been completed. This makes the total $1,155,000,000, and it is not expected that it will be changed materially by the state board of equalization which will meet next month.

London, England. — Mrs. Marshall Field, Jr., of Chicago, was married at the Westminster registry office Thursday morning to Maldwin Drummond, second son of the late Edgar Atheling Drummond and the Honorable Louisa Theodosia Pennington, who was a daughter of the third Lord Muncaster. The wedding, which was extremely quiet, was celebrated in

The wedding was celebrated in the little registry office opposite Buckingham palace. The only persons present to witness the ceremony were the duke of Westminster, who is a great friend of Mr. Drummond; Craig W. Wadsworth, second secretary of the American embassy, and Mrs. Field's two sons. The boys have been living in England with their mother since the death of their father and they are to enter Eaton in the autumn.

Mrs. Field had known Mr. Drummond for about ten years, having met him during her frequent visits to England. She renewed her acquaintance when she came here after her husbands death to practically take up her residence and educate her sons in an English school.

To the world at large Mrs. Drummond was chiefly known as the guardian and mother of the Field grandchildren, who are to receive a fortune of more than $100,000,000 left by their grandfather.

Waterville, Me.—In full view of 25,000 horrified spectators assembled on the Central Maine fair grounds here late Wednesday, Charles Oliver Jones, a well-known aeronaut of Hammondsport, N. Y., fell 500 feet to his death. Among the witnesses of the frightful plunge were Mrs. Jones and child, and they were almost the first to reach the side of the dying man. The aeronaut died an hour and a half after the accident.

HORRIBLE MURDER IN BOSTON.

Man Kills His Actress Wife and Dismembers the Corpse.

Boston.—The most brutal crime in Greater Boston since the death of Susan Geary, a chorus girl, four years ago, was disclosed Thursday night by the discovery of the torso of Mrs. Honorah Jordan, an actress aged 23 years, of Somerville, in a trunk in a boarding house at 7 Hancock street on Beacon hill, this city. Later the head and the bones of the limbs were found in the furnace of the Jordan home at Somerville and the scalp, hair and other gruesome remains were taken from the kitchen range of the house.

Chester Jordan, aged 29 years, an actor of Somerville, is held by the police charged with the murder and, according to the officers, he made a complete confession of the crime.

According to Jordan's confession he accidentally killed his wife Tuesday night in a quarrel at their home and, becoming desperate over what he had done, took a butcher's knife, razor and shears and cut up the body and placed the torso in a trunk. He then planned to take the steamer Harvard Wednesday night for New York and throw the parts of the body overboard. The fact that the Harvard was laid off owing to an accident disarranged his plans and he was obliged to hire a hackmen to take the trunk to a Boston boarding house to await a more favorable opportunity.

The discovery of the crime was due to the suspicions of the hackmen, who notified the police.

BIG FIRE IN NEW ORLEANS.

Property Loss is Between One and Two Million Dollars.

New Orleans.—Fire which broke out in the center of the commercial district Sunday afternoon swept over portions of three blocks, destroying a large number of wholesale houses, manufacturing plants and small stores. Originating at Bienville and Chartres streets, the flames worked their way north as far as Conti street, and west towards Royal, bringing about a loss of between one and two million dollars before they were finally subdued.

Several circumstances combined to give the fire a headway which proved hard to overcome. At the time the alarm was turned in, shortly before three o'clock, the New Orleans firemen were in the midst of their annual picnic at a suburban park, and the engines and patrols responded with a mere handful of men. It was fully an hour before the department was in a position to make anything like a successful fight against the fire, and then the handicap against it was added to by an inadequate supply of water.

Ruined by Gifts to a Town.

Bowling Green, O. — C. S. Strong proprietor of a private bank in Prairie Depot, this county, and benefactor of the town, has made an assignment. Between $80,000 and $90,000 is on deposit in the bank. According to Strong's statement the assets amount to about $70,000. The assignees gave bond in $150,000. Strong's civic benefactions are said to have been the cause of his failure.

Y.—Dean Liberty Bailey of the New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell University, announced Thursday that he had accepted the appointment of President Roosevelt as head of the commission which is to investigate the condition of farmers and report recommendations for the betterment of rural life.

COL. NEVIUS CHOSEN

ONLY ONE BALLOT NEEDED

Other Officers Are Elected—Mrs. Gillman of Roxbury, Mass., New President of Woman's Relief Corps.

Toledo, O.—Col. Henry M. Nevius of Red Bank, N. J., was elected commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic Thursday. The election occurred on the first ballot, which gave Mr. Nevius 454 votes compared with 254 for former Gov. Van Sant of Minnesota, and 90 for L. T. Dickason of Illinois. On motion of the former Minnesota executive the nomination of the New Jersey man was made unanimous.

Other officers were chosen as follows: Senior vice-commander, J. Kent Hamilton of Ohio; junior vice-commander, C. C. Royce of California; chaplain-in-chief, J. F. Spence of Tennessee; surgeon-in-chief, G. Lane Tonehill of Maryland.

Col. Nevius, a native of New Jersey, was studying law with the late Russell A. Alger of Michigan when the war broke out, and enlisted from the state with the Lincoln cavalry. He rose to a commission with the Seventh Michigan and the Twenty-fifth New York cavalry regiments, and lost an arm in front of Fort Stevens when the union army was engaged with Gen. Early.

March of the Veterans.

Toledo, O.—For an hour or more Wednesday the great parade of the Grand Army of the Republic, with its attendant throngs, served merely as the background of as dramatic an incident as has enlivened a political campaign in some years, namely the public meeting of William H. Taft and his erstwhile rival, Senator Joseph Benson Foraker.

The Republican leader and his antagonist politically of the pre-convention canvass met in the official reviewing stand, shook hands, smiled and exchanged greetings, while from thousands of throats came cheer after cheer as the significance of the incident dawned upon the beholders.

Mr. Taft, bronzed from much golf and some fishing in Middle Bass island, ignorant of the impending meeting, arrived from the island on Commodore Richardson's power boat Jassemine at 10:30 o'clock in the morning. His progress along the streets in an automobile, accompanied by Gen. Corbin, President Lewis of the Middle Bass Fishing club, and Mayor Whitlock, was a continued ovation. The thousands in the reviewing stand stood when he entered, and for some time after he had become seated. Then Senator Foraker appeared and the two shook hands cordially and chatted together.

Parade a Great Success.

The parade was remarkable for the absence of accidents and cases of exhaustion, and for the good order which prevailed, not only among the dense crowds along the line of march, but throughout the city. Mayor Whitlock stated that despite the crowd of 100,000 visitors there had been fewer accidents, fewer misdemeanors and less work for the police generally than on any average day of the year. Aside from a veteran who was slightly bruised by being hit by an ambulance, there were no accidents, and not more than a dozen visited the hospital as the result of fatigue.

Estimates of the number of veterans in line varied from 8,000 to three times that number, but it is doubtful if there were more than 12,000. The various posts marched with half a block between them, and the departments were even further apart. There was a good ten feet separating each row of marchers and it was this liberality of space which made it require four hours to pass the reviewing stand. Fully half the veterans wore the badges of either Michigan or Ohio.

Giant Trees Are Saved.

Sonora, Cal.—The forest fire which threatened the famous big tree grove in this county has been brought under control and the great trees are safe. Considerable damage has been done to the big trees, but it is not thought many of them will die from the scorching, especially if the fall rains begin early. Several of the dead giants of the forest have been badly burned.

Wealthy Woman Kills Herself.

San Francisco.—Miss Helen Cullen, a young woman of wealth who had been ill for some time, swallowed the contents of a bottle of iodine and leaped from a third-story window at the Waldemar apartments to the courtyard below. She died a few hours later.

THREE CURES OF ECZEMA.

Woman Tells of Her Brother's Terrible Suffering—Two Babies Also Cured —Cuticura Invaluable.

"My brother had eczema three different summers. Each summer it came out between his shoulders and down his back, and he said his suffering was terrible. When it came on the third summer, he bought a box of Cuticura Ointment and gave it a faithful trial. Soon he began to feel better and he cured himself entirely of eczema with Cuticura. A lady in Indiana heard of how my daughter, Mrs. Miller, had cured her little son of terrible eczema by the Cuticura Remedies. The lady's little one had the eczema so badly that they thought they would lose it. She used Cuticura Remedies and they cured her child entirely, and the disease never came back. Mrs. Sarah E. Lusk, Coldwater, Mich., Aug. 15 and Sept. 2, 1907."

HOUSE WORK

In order to keep the home neat and pretty, the children well dressed and tidy, women overdo. A female weakness or displacement is often brought on and they suffer in silence, drifting along from bad to worse, knowing well that they ought to have help to overcome the pains and aches which daily make life a burden. It is to these faithful women that comes as a boon and a blessing, as it did to Mrs. F. Ellsworth, of Mayville, N. Y., and to Mrs. W. P. Boyd, of Beaver Falls, Pa., who say:

"I was not able to do my own work, owing to the female trouble from which I suffered. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped me wonderfully, and I am so well that I can do as big a day's work as I ever did. I wish every sick woman would try it.

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

The voter that supports Wilhelm Michelet republican candidate for county attorney, is voting for a first class man for the position

Next Tuesday is primary election day and it is your duty to go and vote for this is the election that we nominate our candidates to be voted for in November.

Last year Dan Patch the famous race horse, was the chief attraction at the state fair on the opening day, and the attendance was 82,199. This year with Bryan as chief attraction the attendance dwindled to 41,032 and the fair managers admit they made a mistake. Norman County Index

The democratic press is rather up against it for an issue, with Jacobson as the nominee of the republican party. Jacobson made his campaign when he was in the legislature, and you bet it will elect him for governor of the state of Minnesota next November.

Country school teachers are warned to be on their guard relative to a couple of smooth grafters who are working the country with a proposition to give the teachers a membership in a reading club and furnish them with ten books and a course of study. The expense is $12.56 and notes are taken which in turn are turned over to the local bankers at a discount and the books fail to put in an appearance. In one Iowa county 200 teachers were caught in the swindle.--Fairmont Independent

Two years ago when Jacobson failed to get the nomination at Duluth, democratic papers all over the state were quick to proclaim the fact that the will of the people had been defeated—that Jacobson was so honest and so true to the people's interests that the republican party would not nominate him for governor, But now, after two years have elapsed the republicans have nominated Jake, yet one don't find the democratic press proclaiming in loud tones that the people have been victorious. To them Jacobson was a great and good man as long as he remained the defeated candidate of his party, but once he is successful in the convention, the story is quite different.. Inter Lake Tribune.

Did you know that the last notice to the county commissioners to meet and act on the county seat removal petition was not published and compleated? The reason for this was that our sheriff Nelson did not serve the papers correct the last time. He served them correct three times but the last time he was either to intoxicated to serve them right or else he made the mistake on purpose. While we have been accused of being rather opposed to any county seat fight at the present time yet we beleive that the people that favor county seat removal had ought to have a sheriff for Red Lake county that could and would serve their papers correct. If he made the mistake on purpose he is not fit for sheriff and if he did not know enough to do the business right he is not fit for sheriff. Put these facts in your pipe and smoke them. Next Tuesday is election day.

A Wash Twice a Year.

A charming Hungarian countess once said to me, "What is so nice about the men from England is that they look so clean, as if they had just come from a swim." Of course we pride ourselves on our morning tubs, splash and splutter and shiver and polish up with rough towels. "What dirty people those English are," remarked an Italian, "when they find it necessary to wash all over every day! Why, I only wash twice a year!" I have met Chinese who regard washing all over as a proceeding decidedly improper. A Chinese is washed when he is born, and he has no other altogether wash till he is dead. But we British people have adopted cleanliness only of recent years. Small houses have their bathrooms, but very few houses built over half a century ago were provided with bathrooms. I suppose those must have been the days of the Saturday night wash in the kitchen. Certainly our gay cavalier ancestors in silks and ruffles must have been a dirty gang. Handkerchiefs were not invented, and the velvet cloaks must often have been greasy. The rollicking old times were very dirty old times.—"Baths, Pleasant and Otherwise."

The Don't Worry Theory.

The usual advice given to the worrier is, "Don't worry." This advice is foolish because impractical. No one can stop thinking one type of thought except by substituting for it another. Besides, it is dangerous advice, for, even supposing one could mechanically put an end to a worrying state of mind, he would simply be like an engineer who should plant himself on the safety valve of his engine. The energy expended in worry, turned inward on itself, would tear the mental mechanism to pieces. No! What the worried man or woman needs evidently is to be taught how to find a healthful outlet for his or her nervous power thus going to waste. If we say "Don't worry," let us also be careful to add, "But work," and let us also point out what kind of work should be undertaken and the spirit in which it ought to be done. In other words, what the worrier needs is re-education.—Rev. S. S. McComb in Harper's Bazar.

Jefferson Davis' Ambition.

Jefferson Davis was a man of most sincere conviction and courageous action, and when the Southern Confederacy was about to be organized his single ambition was the command of the Confederate army. This I had from his own lips at his residence at Beauvoir, Miss., some fifteen years after the war. He told me that when he started for Montgomery, Ala., when the movement began for the organization of the Confederacy he hoped to be called to the command of the army, but before he reached Montgomery he was advised of his election as provisionary president. When he reached the new capital of the Confederacy he found it impossible to change conditions, and he was compelled to accept the presidency, and he entered upon that duty as conscientiously as any public man ever entered upon an official career.—Colonel A. K. McClure in "Confederate Veterans."

The Uselessness of Worry.

Sympathy is loving understanding, and the expression of it helps a lot. Worry is sympathy run to seed—and that doesn't help in the least.—London Sketch.

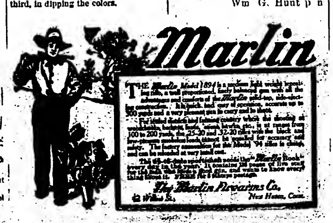
How British Ships Salute.

A salute in the British navy between two ships of equal rank is made by firing an equal number of guns. If the vessels are of unequal rank, the superior fires the fewer rounds. A royal salute consists, first, in firing twenty-one great guns; second, in the officers lowering their sword points, and, third, in dipping the colors.



THE Marlin Model 1894 is a medium light weight repeating rifle, a well proportioned, finely balanced gun with all the advantages and comforts of the Marlin solid-top, side-ejecting construction. A Political Talk.

There is to be a union meeting at Thief River Falls Saturday night to talk politics and we understand a movement will be made to unite on our representativ from this county. It seems to us to be rather late in the campaign to talk primary politics altho it would certainly be for our interest to have a member of the legislature from this County.

Flocks Of Deputies.

We understand that IT has grown desperate over being defeated for sheriff and is trading deputy ships for votes wherever there is an opportunity, and as he takes $2 at a lick he can get lots of votes that way. We are pleased to note that his scheam is not being indorsed by the better element of Thief River Falls and that he will not receive their votes next Tuesday. We are of the opinion that if it is the intention to have the farmer tax payers support flocks of deputy sehriffs in exchange for their votes that they would hesitate before voting to change a county seat to a city that indorsed this kind of a deal,

Coral Islands.

A coral island is sometimes torn to pieces by a great storm, showing that islands disappear in more ways than one. This happened to an atoll in the Marshall group in 1905, when it happened to be in the path of a terrible hurricane. Waves about forty feet high swept over the hapless speck of land, carrying every particle of verdure and every form of life into the sea, and not a human being was saved. The upper part of the coral was broken off and swept away, and a few days later nothing but the placid waters of the ocean was seen where the atoll had stood.

Melancholy.

The old time herbalists did not regard melancholy as an affection of the temperament, but as an illness or disease, and many were the "secrets" they purported to cure it with. SPORTING GOSSIP

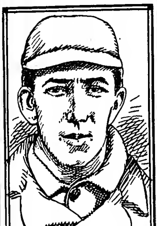
When is a player legally at bat? The other day National League Umpires Johnstone and Klem decided that a player was legally at bat the instant he put his foot in the batsman's box with a bat in his hand and faced the pitcher. This question has not bobbed up in the big leagues for many a year. Moreover, there is nothing in the rules covering the case. Consequently, the ruling made by the umpires is interesting. Umpire Johnstone says that a pitcher is legally in the game the instant he puts his foot on the pitcher's rubber with the ball in his hand. He decides also that if a fielder took his place on the field during a game and was taken out before a ball was pitched he also was legally in the game. In each case, Johnstone says the batsman, the pitcher or the fielder, if taken out, could not return to the game even though not a ball had been pitched while he was in his position. This is what Umpire Klem says: "There is no rule covering the point. To my knowledge it has never come up before and I had to use my own judgment. If a batsman can come into the batsman's box with his bat prepared to bat and then be taken out and another batsman substituted, and the same batsman be permitted to repeat the trick, there would be an endless chain of substitutions. It would open up a field for dilatory tactics which would be taken advantage of when teams were trying to delay the game for rain. I believe that my ruling is the right one and that it will stand." As is the custom when a new ruling is made in baseball, all the facts in the case will be reported to President Pulliam by Umpire Klem. Mr. Pulliam will then decide just when a batsman is legally at bat and when he is legally taken out of the game. It's a mighty fine point of baseball to argue over, but Klem's decision appears to be the correct one.

The Los Angeles Times has the following to say about the sale of Pitcher Gray to the Washington club: "The long-expected explosion went off with a bang yesterday, for Manager Henry Berry of the Los Angeles baseball team sold Pitcher Dolly Gray to the Washington American league team. Berry would not announce the price he would receive, but stated that it was the largest sum ever paid for a coast league player. While this will be news to the fans of the Pacific Coast league, the sale is not entirely startling, for several big league teams have been after Dolly for some months, but Manager Berry has heretofore turned all the offers down. He was once offered $4,000 for him, but wanted $7,000, and it is presumed the real figure is about $5,000. However, the coast fans will have him all the year, for he is not to be delivered until after the close of the present season."



"DOLLY" GRAY

"Germany" Schaefer of Detroit and "Billy" Sullivan and Fielder Jones of Chicago enjoy the unique distinction of being put out of ball games without uttering a word to the umpire. Their offenses were clearly cases of pantomime. What they said about the poor arbitrator after being ejected will not be printed here. The veteran "Jack" Sheridan tied the can on Schaefer, while the cub "ump" Egan handed out the decision to Jones and Sullivan. Egan's trouble took place in Chicago. He called one of Walsh's spitters a ball. Evidently Sullivan disagreed, for he carefully brushed off the plate with his big mitt. When he finished Egan told him his work for the day was over and he could hike to the clubhouse. He started on his way and then Fielder Jones rushed in to investigate, only to learn before he had covered half the distance that he also had been banished. Schaefer, when at bat, disagreed with Sheridan over a strike by brushing off the plate with his cap. When he got through with his job he learned that he was out of the game. He orated all the way to the clubhouse.

A SIMPLE SAFEGUARD IN BUYING PAINT.

Everybody should know how simple and easy it is to avoid all uncertainty in buying paint materials. There are many so-called white leads on the market, which contain chalk, zinc, barytes, and other cheap adulterants. Unless the property owner takes advantage of the simple means of protection afforded him by reliable white lead manufacturers, he runs great risk of getting an inferior and adulterated white lead.

It is to protect the paint-buyer against fraud and adulteration that National Lead Company, the largest makers of genuine Pure White Lead, place their famous "Dutch Boy Painter" trademark on every keg of their product, an absolute guarantee of its purity and quality. Anyone who wants to make a practical test of white lead, and who wants a valuable free book about painting, should address National Lead Company, Woodbridge Bldg., New York, and ask for test equipment.

Critical Eye for Babies.

The five-year-old daughter of a Brooklyn man has had such a large experience of dolls that she feels herself to be something of a connoisseur in children.

Recently there came a real live baby into the house.

"Isn't it a nice baby?" asked the nurse.

"Yes, it's nice," answered the youngster hesitatingly. "It's nice, but its head's loose."—Lippincott's.

Peonies as a Medicine.

Peonies were originally esteemed less for beauty of bloom than for value as a medicine. In recognition of its curative virtues, the peony was named after Paeon, the physician of the gods. An old writer says: "About an infant's neck hang peonie. It cures Alcydes cruell maladie." Nor did the use of the plant stop there, for peony water was esteemed and drank in bygone times, though whether as medicine or merely as a refreshing temperence beverage is more than modern writers can say.

Boy Grades the Clergy.

Bishop Potter, at an ecclesiastical dinner in New York, read a Cooperstown schoolboy's essay on "Clergymen." The essay, which created much amusement, was as follows:

"There are 2 kinds of clergymen Bisbups recters nad curats. the bishups tells the recters to work and the curats have to do it. A curot is a thin morried man but when he is a recter he gets fuller and can preach longer sermons and becums a good man."—Washington Star.

MOTHER AND CHILD

Both Fully Nourished on Grape-Nuts.

The value of this famous food is shown in many ways, in addition to what might be expected from its chemical analysis.

Grape-Nuts food is made of whole wheat and barley, is thoroughly baked for many hours and contains all the wholesome ingredients in these cereals.

It contains also the phosphate of potash grown in the grains, which Nature uses to build up brain and nerve cells.

Young children require proportionately more of this element because the brain and nervous system of the child grows so rapidly.

A Va. mother found the value of Grape-Nuts in not only building up her own strength but in nourishing her baby at the same time. She writes:

"After my baby came I did not recover health and strength, and the doctor said I could not nurse the baby as I did not have nourishment for her, besides I was too weak.

"He said I might try a change of diet and see what that would do, and recommended Grape-Nuts food. I bought a pkg. and used it regularly. A marked change came over both baby and I.

"My baby is now four months old, is in fine condition, I am nursing her and doing all my work and never felt better in my life." "There's a Reason."

Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless: Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food: Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. B. Halstead Scott, of Chicago, Ills., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria often for infants during my practice, and find it very satisfactory."

Dr. William Belmont, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place."

Dr. J. H. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent."

Dr. R. J. Hamlen, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoria extensively, as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's."

Dr. Wm. J McCrann, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."

Dr. J. R. Clausen, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endorsement of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy."

Dr. R. M. Ward, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Physicians generally do not prescribe proprietary preparations, but in the case of Castoria my experience, like that of many other physicians, has taught me to make an exception. I prescribe your Castoria in my practice because I have found it to be a thoroughly reliable remedy for children's complaints. Any physician who has raised a family, as I have, will join me in heartiest recommendation of Castoria."

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

New Variety of Rye.

A new variety of winter rye, called Minnesota No. 2, has been originated by the Minnesota Experiment Station, and is now ready for distribution. This rye was obtained by selection from the Swedish rye and is an exceptionally high yielder. The average yield upon the station grounds for the past eight years is 40.4 bushels per acre, while the average yield of other varieties for the state in the same time was 19.2 bushels per acre. One field of 1.9 acres yielded 48 bushels per acre this fall.

Minnesota No. 2 rye is offered to the farmers of the state in two to five-bushel lots at the price of $1.25 per bushel, including sacks. Seed will be supplied either by the station or by farmers who have co-operated with the [illegible] as seed growers. Communications in regard to the rye should be addressed to Andrew Boss, agriculturist, Minnesota Experiment Station, St. Paul, Minn.

Packing Plant Assured.

Minneapolis—A three million dollar packing plant for Minneapolis, to be established by the Armour Packing company of Chicago, is now assured. J. Ogden Armour of Chicago, head of the immense Chicago concern, was in Minneapolis to meet with B. F. Nelson, president of the Commercial club, and arranged the preliminaries for the construction, beginning early next spring, of the largest and most modern plant of its kind in the world.

What will be of especial interest to Minneapolis people is that the Armour plant is to be much larger than at first contemplated. Sufficient property was purchased at the outset to provide for a plant much larger than at that time planned. Minneapolis is to lose nothing by the delay, now that it has been decided to so enlarge the plant that it will not only be the best equipped plant in the world, but will also be the largest single packing plant in operation.

Minnesota River.

St. Peter—Anticipating action by the legislature in regard to the improvement of the Minnesota river, George A. Ralph, state drainage engineer, has prepared a set of maps covering all surveys made of that river. The improvement of the Minnesota has been a subject of much discussion for several weeks, and the indications are that this will be crystallized by action in the coming legislature.

If the legislature sees fit to appoint committees to investigate the subject, Mr. Ralph will be able to give them full information concerning the course of the stream, the nature of the surrounding country, the number of drainage ditches now emptying into the river and the rainfall for the past twenty-five years.

The State Fair.

Hamline—Attended by 40,075 more persons and netting in ticket sales $31,150 more than the fair of 1907, the Minnesota state fair of 1908 showed, by the balancing of its books last night, that its gratifying success had been attended by a wonderful increase in attendance and profits.

The total for ticket sales for the week amounted to $162,707, which is not including about $11,000 worth of tickets for which the money has not yet been returned. Last year the grand total for tickets was $131,557. Saturday night's receipts were $14,919 as compared to $13,058 for the last day, last year.

The total attendance for the week was 326,753 as compared to 286,678 for the entire week last year. Saturday's attendance was 34,459 as against 32,536 for the same day last year.

Grasshoppers.

St. Paul—F. L. Washburn, state entomologist, foresees a grasshopper plague next year unless farmers take active measures now to prevent it.

"I note that grasshoppers have been troublesome this season from the various complaints I have received from many localities," said he. "The outlook for next summer is somewhat alarming possibly, unless measures are taken this fall to prevent an outbreak. I would therefore suggest that the farmers who note grasshoppers laying eggs this month, or early next month, in their land, should not fail to plow as late as possible after all eggs have been laid, thus turning them under and preventing their issuing next spring."

NEWS NOTES.

St. Paul.—Paris Fletcher, a well-known real estate man, was instantly killed and his wife severely injured in an automobile accident which occurred one mile from Minneiska, Wabasha county.

Minneapolis. — Suddenly overcome by an attack of apoplexy in his home, Boston W. Smith, a well known evangelist, lay down on a lounge at his home, 2309 James street north, and a few minutes later was found dead by his wife.

The five children of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Burdette, living on a farm near New Brighton, outside the city limits, were suffocated in a fire that attacked the home at a late hour last night. The parents were away on a visit at the time.

Lake City.—The freight depot of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway at this point was destroyed by fire. Sparks from a passing locomotive lighted the roof and the building burned to the ground. The loss was about $3,000.

East Grand Forks.—Peter Scherer, aged seventeen years, owner of a Grand Forks messenger service, was held on the charge of receiving stolen goods. Art Wickwire, employed by Scherer and accused of a similar crime, was discharged. Scherer is alleged to have received and disposed of large quantities of goods stolen from the Northern Pacific depot.

Hibbing.—Blackened and desolate, left stripped and barren beneath the hand of the fire demon, Chisholm, first victim of the range forest fires, must undergo another horror. A gang of thugs, gathered from the four winds by the knowledge that a city lay helpless before them, has invaded the charred wilds, plundering and sacking.

Biwabik.—Little time was wasted in beginning pursuit of the five yeggmen who broke into the first National bank, plundered the safety deposit vaults and shot Peter Hotland. Officer Oscar Johnson, of the Superior, Wis., police force, is on his way with two police bloodhounds. The hounds will be given the scent and started on the trail of the desperadoes.

Hamline.—President B. F. Nelson and Secretary C. N. Cosgrove of the board of managers of the state fair admitted that the big grand stand at the race tracks was in such condition that the building inspectors of Minneapolis and St. Paul had refused to certify to its safety. Both admitted that the condition of the stands had caused them much worry and anxiety throughout the week, and their greatest trial of the week was over when the crowds left the stand after the closing performance of the week.

THE CORN RAISERS' NIGHTMARE.

TO JOIN IN GENERAL WAR

LABOR MEN TO TAKE PART IN FIGHTING TUBERCULOSIS.

Announcement Made That American Federation Will Join in Fight Against Plague.

Washington. — American workingmen and workingwomen, represented by the American Federation of Labor, will co-operate with the coming world's congress on tuberculosis to prevent the spread of consumption in workshops, homes and public buildings.

This developed at the session of the executive council of the federation, when the council decided to assume charge of a mass meeting to be held in connection with the congress on Sunday, October 4.

John Mitchell will preside and make an address emphasizing the importance to workingmen of the tuberculosis crusade. Samuel Gompers, president of the federation, will make the principal address. The effect of tuberculosis upon the workers will be proved by statistics, which show that 25 per cent. of all deaths between the ages of 15 and 45 are due to consumption.

It was decided that the American Federation of Labor make every effort to aid in furthering the movement among the people of our country to secure legislation for the conservation of our natural resources.

A resolution was adopted to urgently request President Roosevelt to intervene and prevent the surrender of Jon Pouren to the Russian government. Pouren participated in the revolutionary movement of the Baltic provinces to obtain a freer form of government for the people of Russia. When the revolution failed he escaped to the United States and obtained employment which he followed for more than eight months. Russian spies in the United States ferreted him out and now demand his extradition.

KAISER DOESN'T ENTER FRANCE.

William Changes His Mind About Ascending the Hohnack.

Altenberg, Alsace.—Emperor William disappointed the general expectation that he would set foot on French territory Friday in the course of a sight-seeing trip along the Vosges range. The French authorities forwarded his majesty a hearty invitation to do so and had made every preparation to welcome the imperial visitor. He had intended to ascend the Hohneck, the highest point in this vicinity, which is situated in French territory. From it a splendid view may be had of Remiremont and the valley of the Moselle river. Emperor William arrived here late in the afternoon and decided not to proceed across the frontier.

Commodities Clause Hit.

Philadelphia. — The commodities clause of the Hepburn railroad act was Thursday declared to be unconstitutional by the United States circuit court for the eastern district of Pennsylvania. Judges Gray and Dallas agreed in an opinion, covering 75 typewritten pages, that the clause is unconstitutional. Judge Buffington dissented, but did not file an opinion.

Gans Beaten by Nelson.

Colma Arena, San Francisco.—Battling Nelson clinched his claim to the lightweight pugilistic championship by defeating Joe Gans for the second time at Colma arena Wednesday afternoon. The fight ended in the twenty-first round when Gans, beaten down by a succession of blows from his sturdy conqueror, failed to get upon his feet within the count of ten.

DELAY IN BIG LABOR CASE.

Legal Proceedings Against Gompers and Others Are Postponed.

Washington. — The legal proceedings against President Samuel Gompers, Secretary Frank Morrison and John Mitchell of the American Federation of Labor, in which they were charged with contempt of the supreme court of the District of Columbia on account of acts and utterances apropos of the judgment of that court directing them to cease publishing the name of the Bucks Stove & Range company in their "We don't patronize" list, were virtually postponed for two weeks after a brief hearing Wednesday. Justice Gould of the supreme court presided.

The postponement was taken at the instance of counsel for the stove company and in opposition to the expressed wishes of Mr. Gompers and his associates, who complained of the delay as expensive and unnecessary. It was stated on behalf of the company, however, that it would be necessary to examine witnesses as to the issues made by the petition and the answers, and Justice Gould, saying that he saw no necessity for great haste and urging the desirability of affording both sides a full opportunity to be heard, granted the request. He appointed an examiner to take testimony, gave each side 30 days, and announced his own willingness to sit in the case after the facts shall have been ascertained.

BISHOP SPALDING RESIGNS.

Head of Peoria Diocese Retires Because of Ill Health.

Peoria, Ill.—The resignation of Rt. Rev. John Lancaster Spalding, bishop of the diocese of Peoria, was officially announced from his residence Thursday in the following note:

"Bishop Spalding having been ill for three years and a half, and foreseeing that some years must elapse before he has hope to resume active duty in the diocese of Peoria, has, after due consideration, resolved to tender his resignation as bishop of Peoria to Pope Pius X." The bishop is now in his sixty-ninth year and still suffers from the paralysis which brought him near to death."

Bishop John L. Spalding.

Deposit Guaranty Law Upheld.

Guthrie, Okla.—The supreme court Thursday upheld the validity of the depositors' guaranty law, denying the injunction prayed by the Noble State bank to restrain the state from levying a one per cent. assessment upon the deposits of the bank. It was contended that the law is unconstitutional in that it levies on and takes private property without consideration. On this point Judge Huston in the Logan county district court overruled the bank and denied an injunction, the case then being appealed.

FLAY JUDGE LANDIS

LAWYERS FOR STANDARD OIL FILE THEIR ANSWER.

DECLARE FINE EXCESSIVE

Jurist Is Charged with Yielding to Outside Influences and the Prosecution Is Called "Malicious."

Chicago.—Judge Kenesaw Landis, who fined the Standard Oil Company $29,000,000, is charged with having permitted outside influences to govern his decision by the attorneys for the company in their answer to the application for a rehearing filed in the United States court of appeals.

The answer refers to the judgment of that court as an "unheard-of fine," and says that the court was "governed by evidence and considerations which were not proper to influence a judicious magistrate."

District Attorney Sims, who conducted the prosecution, was referred to as a "zealous prosecutor."

The answer to the government's appeal for rehearing is submitted by Attorneys John S. Miller, Moritz Rosenthal and Alfred D. Eddy, counsel for the oil company, and cites numerous reasons why Judge Grosscup and his associates in the court of appeals should not grant the government's petition.

The principal argument presented is in regard to excessive fines, and it is declared absolutely that District Attorney Sims could find no authority to support Judge Landis in his action of fixing the "unheard-of fine." Regarding this the answer states:

"The provision of the bill of rights in the eighth amendment to the federal constitution forbidding the imposition of excessive fines enacts a cherished principle of Magna Charta, which is the foundation of American and Anglo-Saxon laws and jurisprudence, and which required that fines imposed for faults or crimes should be 'after the manner of the fault,' or 'according to the heinousness of it,' and forbade fines so large as to deprive a defendant of that which was necessary to his vocation or livelihood."

The action of the government in bringing the oil company to trial is referred to as "malicious prosecution," and it is reiterated that no evidence and law has been brought to bear on the case by the federal attorneys.

Freed in Subtreasury Case.

Chicago. — George W. Fitzgerald, accused of having stolen the $173,000 which disappeared from the United States subtreasury, was discharged by Judge Chetlain Thursday after it had been shown on the witness stand that the government had instructed the treasury department heads in Chicago and other government employes to not testify in the case nor make public the evidence which the secret service men have been gathering since the time of the robbery.

WRIGHT BEATS OWN RECORD

AEROPLANE GOES 65 MINUTES AND 52 SECONDS.

Ten-Mile Wind Causes Machine to Pitch, But Does Not Stop Its Flight.

Washington.—Orville Wright Thursday broke the world's record for time and distance for a heavier-than-air flying machine which he established Wednesday. In a flight requiring great skill on account of a ten-mile wind, he circled around the drill grounds at Fort Myer 58 times in 65 minutes and 52 seconds, exceeding the time of Wednesday's record flight by three minutes and 37 seconds. The flight was witnessed by nearly a thousand people.

At 5:08 Mr. Wright signaled C. E. Taylor, his mechanic, to release the machine. The aeroplane rose from the ground almost immediately after leaving the single starting rail. It continued to climb higher with each successive round of the field, until it reached an altitude of 75 feet. For the first 30 seconds the machine flew as smoothly as on its previous flights, but from that time on it was seen to pitch at the turns, as the breeze from the west struck it.

Whenever the machine pitched, it could be plainly seen from below that it responded promptly to every move of the levers by the operator. One of Mr. Wright's assistants marked the time in large figures at intervals on the roof of a shed, in order that Mr. Wright might see how long he had been in the air.

A gust of wind, unusually strong, struck the aerial flyer during its forty-second round, and it plunged sharply, causing the crowd to exclaim in alarm. Mr. Wright then brought his machine lower, but on the fifty-third round he had reached an altitude of 200 feet. He came down at the northern end of the field at the end of the fifty-eighth round, landing easily.

Washington.—In a flight lasting one hour, ten minutes and 26 seconds, Orville Wright Friday surpassed all his exploits for a time and distance flight for a heavier-than-air machine. Two flights were made at Fort Myer, Va., the first being of ten minutes and 50 seconds' duration. The test demonstrated, according to the aviator's calculation, that the speed of the aeroplane during the record-breaking flights of Wednesday and Thursday was 39.55 miles an hour.—Changes in the aeroplane are to be made.

HURRICANE RUINS GRAND TURK.

Great Storm in West Indies Costs Many Lives.

Grand Turk, Turks Islands, B. W. I., —A hurricane of great fury swept over Turks Islands Thursday night and Friday morning, and at daybreak the town of Grand Turk was devastated. A number of lives have been lost, but just how many cannot be sold.

Grave anxiety is felt for the safety of Dr. T. R. Robertson, district commissioner of Caicos, who was making a tour of the islands when the storm broke.

Much damage has been done to property here and the streets of Grand Turk are a mass of wreckage. Trees have been uprooted, portions of buildings blown away and many houses have been partially wrecked.

The Haitien sloop Telegraph, which had taken shelter at Hawks Nest, foundered with all hands. The schooner Don Leon, belonging to the East Caicos Fiber Company, broke away from her anchorage and has not been seen since. All the salt lighters which were moored at the riding ground and the Hawks Nest are missing.

RECEIVER FOR A. BOOTH & CO.

Chicago. — A. Booth & Co., the $12,000,000 fish, game and sea food corporation, with branches extending from coast to coast, passed into the hands of a receiver late Thursday afternoon.

On petition of Alfred E. Booth and the Linen Thread Company of New York, Judge S. H. Bethea in the United States circuit court named William J. Chalmers, president of the Commercial National Safe Deposit Company, who took charge of the company's general office.

The general assets are placed at $8,000,000, exclusive of the company's good will, valued at $4,000,000, and the liabilities, according to the bill, approximate $5,500,000. Mr. Chalmers gave bond for $50,000.

Too great an expansion of the company's business and a large amount of outstanding short-time notes are the reasons given for the corporation's predicament.

The Tea Taster.

What are a tea taster's duties? He must distinguish the mixture of two blends; point out in each separate instance if the mixtures are of equal grades; he must know to a nicety the difference between a pure brand and an inferior one; he must know the taste of every individual sort of tea—not an easy thing, when it is remembered that brands of tea are many and the blends are constantly being reblended. In ten years' time a tea taster cannot be deceived as to the history or nationality of any tea in the world. He can prevent his firm from being deceived, for he has drunk tea with milk, cream, lemon, straight, served according to the peculiar wish of every nation. He is sent to China, Japan, Russia, India, to study the tea brew of each tea drinking nation.—Boston Herald.

REPUBLICAN PARTY AND LABOR

An Equality of Opportunities Secured for Wage Earners.

William H. Taft's Speech of Acceptance Gives Party Record in Behalf of Labor.

We come now to the question of labor. One important phase of the policies of the present administration has been an anxiety to secure for the wage-earner an equality of opportunity and such positive statutory protection as shall place him on a level in dealing with his employer.

The Republican party has passed an employers' liability act for interstate railroads, and has established an eight hour law for government employes and on government construction. The essence of the reform effected by the former, is the abolition of the fellow-servant rule and the introduction of the comparative negligence theory by which an employe injured in the service of his employer does not lose all his right to recover because of slight negligence on his part.

Then there is the act providing for compensation for injury to government employes, together with the various statutes requiring safety appliances upon interstate commerce railroads for the protection of their employes and limiting the hours of their employment.

Doubtless a more comprehensive measure for compensation of government employes will be adopted in the future; the principle in such cases has been recognized and in the necessarily somewhat slow course of legislation will be more fully embodied in definite statutes.

The interests of the employer and the employe never differ except when it comes to a division of the joint profit of labor and capital into dividends and wages. This must be a constant source of periodical discussion between the employer and the employe, as indeed are the other terms of the employment.

To give to employes their proper position in such a controversy, to enable them to maintain themselves against employers having great capital, they may well unite, because in union there is strength, and without it, each individual laborer and employe would be helpless. The promotion of the industrial peace through the instrumentality of the trade agreement is often one of the results of such union when intelligently conducted.

There is a large body of laborers, however, skilled and unskilled, who are not organized into unions. Their rights before the law are exactly the same as those of the union men, and are to be protected with the same care and watchfulness.

In order to induce their employer into a compliance with their request for changed terms of employment, workmen have the right to strike in a body.

They have a right to use such persuasion as they may, provided it does not reach the point of duress, to lead their reluctant co-laborers to join them in their union against their employer, and they have a right, if they choose, to accumulate funds to support those engaged in a strike, to delegate to officers the power to direct the action of the union, and to withdraw themselves and their associates from dealings with or giving custom to those with whom they are in controversy.

TAFT'S KINDNESS TO BLIND.

Overrules Washington Monument Regulation for Benefit of the Sightless.

The kind heartedness of Mr. Taft and his sincere, common sense sympathy with the unfortunates in this world has just been brought to the attention of the blind in a peculiar way.

Away up in the top of the Washington monument, where thousands go to behold the beauties of the nation's capital, the Columbia Polytechnic institute, which seeks to make it possible for the adult blind of the United States to rise above conditions of dependence by becoming self sustaining, placed on sale souvenir post cards manufactured by its blind. Some sentimental persons took the view that this was undignified and succeeded in having the superintendent of public buildings and grounds order the cards removed. F. E. Cleaveland, principal of the institute, appealed to Mr. Taft, then secretary of war and within whose jurisdiction came the office of public buildings and grounds. It took only a few words to convince the secretary that the blind should have the benefit of this privilege, and the cards were again placed on sale in the monument.

"For this action," said Principal Cleaveland in discussing the incident, "Mr. Taft deserves the gratitude of every blind person, particularly the progressive blind, who are striving to help their less fortunate fellows."

In Georgia the electors must have a majority, and with Watson, Hisgen and Chafin pulling away from them the Bryanites are becoming apprehensive.

WHERE SHERMAN STANDS.

Approves Legislation to Improve the Conditions of Labor.

(From Sherman's Speech of Acceptance.)

The Republican party believes in the equality of all men before the law; believes in granting labor's every request that does not seek to accord rights to one man denied to another. Fair-minded labor asks no more, no less, and approves the record of the Republican party because of that party's acts.

I have helped to make my party's record in the enactment of the Eight-Hour law, the Employers' Liability act, the statutes to minimize the hazard of railroad employes, the Child Labor law for the District of Columbia and other enactments designed especially to improve the conditions of labor. I cannot hope to better state my position on injunctions than by a specific endorsement of Mr. Taft's Cincinnati declaration on that subject. That endorsement I make.

But He Runs on Forever.

(From the New York Sun.)

What will Mr. Bryan say
After next election day?
Mr Bryan will insist
That he is an optimist.
Beaten three times! What of that?
He's the one great Democrat
Willing for his fellow men
To be beaten once again.

Read the Commoner and learn!
Mr. Bryan, Mr. Kern,
Sail together on this trip
In the old, oft stranded ship.
(They have quarters in the stern!)

In this antiquated craft,
While they gaze at Mr. Taft
Miles ahead—the race near done
And by Taft and Sherman won—
Mr. Bryan, ever wise,
Doubtless will philosophize
And to Mr. Kern recite
That remark, already trite,
All prepared and often sprung!
"Beaten? Yes, but I'm still young!
I can wait another four Years, then try the race once more,
I have got this thing down pat,
I'm the one great Democrat!"
—Julian Durand.

Making or Keeping Promises.

The difference between Mr. Taft's promise of tariff revision and Mr. Bryan's pledges in the same direction is that Mr. Taft if elected will be in position to redeem his pledge, while Mr. Bryan if elected would be powerless to accomplish anything with a Republican Senate arrayed against his free trade plans.—Omaha Bee.

DEMOCRATIC HOPE SIDETRACKED

Taft and Foraker Shoulder to Shoulder for Republican Principles.

Another Democratic hope has been sidetracked. That was that United States Senator Foraker would not support the Taft candidacy, and would thus impair his chances of carrying the State of Ohio.

The two big Ohioans fittingly met at the G. A. R. reunion in Toledo, and publicly and good-naturedly cast what differences may have existed between them to the air.

Mr. Taft's contribution to the treaty of peace was as follows:

"It is a pleasure for me to be here with Senator Foraker, because when governor of Ohio he gave me my first chance and took a good deal of risk in putting a man of 29 on the bench of the Superior Court of Cincinnati. We are about to enter—or rather have entered—a great oratorical campaign. It is a pleasure to think in this presence that we are going to stand in the campaign shoulder to shoulder, with the full strength of the Republican party."

In response Senator Foraker denied that enmity had existed between Mr. Taft and himself, and said:

"Under the circumstances I hope I may be pardoned if I say here in this presence—the first time I have had opportunity to say it—that there is not now and so far as I know there never has been the slightest ill feeling of any kind between Mr. Taft and myself.

"If there is anything I have a right to claim beyond another, it is that I am Republican three hundred and sixty-five days in the year. I have my preferences sometimes as to who should receive the honors of the party, and everybody generally finds out what they are. But I am one of those old-fashioned Republicans who settle every such question at the convention. When the Chicago convention nominated Mr. Taft to be the Republican candidate for the Presidency this year, that instant he became my leader. He has been my leader ever since, and he will be my leader until the polls close on the night of the election."

Mr. Foraker followed with an estimate of Judge Taft's fitness for the office he seeks by repeating what Bishop Fallows had said before him.

"I want to repeat it," he said, "that his experience on the bench, in the Philippines, as Secretary of War, in the construction of the Panama Canal, in all the positions he has filled, has been such as to qualify Mr. Taft almost beyond every other man for the Presidency. We are going to elect him, and if he does not make a success of it, it will be his own fault."

Senator Foraker followed this statement with a review of his early acquaintance with Judge Taft, and the favorable impression he then gained of him.

"MISERY AND DISHONOR."

"Just as I was again free came W. J. Bryan's effort to capture the Presidency, which, in my opinion, would have resulted in widespread misery at home and in dishonor to the American name throughout the world."—From the Autobiography of Hon. Andrew D. White, LL.D., former President of Cornell University and Ambassador to Germany and Russia.

Another Labor Leader for Taft.

(New Britain Record.)

Ben Chapin, editor of the Railroad Employe, a labor organ, is out for Taft. This will no doubt call for additional explaining from the Great Samuel Gompers, who promised to deliver the solid labor vote to William Jennings Bryan.

BRYAN TRUE TO SILVER IDOL

Belief in His Panacea Will Remain Unshaken.

Declaration of Faith Made to Cover the Past, the Present and the Future.

It would be extremely unkind to say that Mr. Bryan is fickle in his political belief. His best friends would be the last to make such an assertion, for they realize thoroughly that their leader, when he has once implanted a conviction firmly in his mind, clings to it like grim death.

This is especially true of Mr. Bryan's attitude on the silver question through which he first rose to prominence. He has very little to say about that question at present, but that he is absolutely certain that it is a subject of the greatest importance and that his own particular financial panacea is the only safe guide for the United States may be plainly seen from the following extracts from his collected wisdom:

In an address at the Jefferson Club banquet at Lincoln, Neb., December 26, 1900, Mr. Bryan said:

"The principles for which we contended in the last campaign still live, and we who believe in them must continue to fight for them. An election does not change principles: it only determines what principles shall for the time being be applied."

"To consider this election as decisive of the money question would be as absurd as to have regarded the election of 1896 as decisive of the tariff question. It would be more reasonable to regard the late election as conclusive upon the question of imperialism or upon the trust question, both of which were discussed more by our people than the money question. * * *

"The increased production of gold has lessened the strain upon gold, and had to some extent brought the relief which Democrats proposed to bring in a larger measure by the restoration of silver; but there is no assurances whatever that the gold supply, even with the new discoveries, will be sufficient to maintain the level of prices. Favorable conditions have given us an abnormal share of the world's supply of gold, but the scarcity of the yellow metal abroad is already leading to the export of gold, while the increase in the issue of banknotes is evidence that we are still short of money here. The Republicans defend the gold standard not by logic, but by giving it credit for better times. When prosperity fails, the gold standard will lose its charm."

PERFORMANCE VS. PROMISE.

Response of Republicans to People's Wishes Contrasted with Democratic Proposals.

(From Gov. Hughes' Youngstown Speech.)

"When we consider the inevitable conflict of many opinions and the importance of the questions involved the record of progressive legislation is extraordinary. The creation of the bureau of corporations, the railroad rate bill, the employers' liability bill and the laws passed for the better protection of labor constitute a record of legislation which no just critic can afford to minimize, and which attests in a marked manner the response of the Republican party under its forceful leadership to the demands of the people.

"If all that Mr. Bryan has favored during the last twelve years had been enacted into law we should have been overwhelmed with disaster, and would regard it as our chief business in the future to find a way of escape from the meshes of ill considered legislation in which we would have been entangled. It is fortunate for him as well as for us that he was defeated, and whatever may be his present political potentiality may be ascribed to the fact that hitherto he has not been permitted to carry out his program. No doubt much remains to be accomplished in the way of necessary reform, but the record already made by the Republican party is a noteworthy one, and we must make further advances with care and needed reflection. Our progress will be intrusted to safe hands, and we shall be fortunate in having a sailing master who knows his chart and who will take quite as much account of reefs and shoals as of the speed of the vessel. We have got our direction, we have a most precious cargo, and we must have a safe and experienced pilot."

Rate Law Amendments.

The rate law does not go far enough. The practice under it has already disclosed the necessity for new amendments and will doubtless suggest more. Such is the true method—the empirical and tentative method—of securing proper remedies for a new evil.—Hon. Wm. H. Taft, at Columbus, Ohio.

Three Great New World Deeds.

NO RETREAT

THE SENTINEL STANDS FIRMLY IN DEFENSE OF HIS FLAG.

—From the Baltimore American.

WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT.

A Man Who Has Done Things.

Responding to the call of the nation for a man equal to the emergencies confronting the Republic, the people themselves have found him and presented him to the electorate.

Naturally, the people sought among themselves for one truly representative to the highest ideals of American citizenship. Their self-understanding and correct valuation of men led them to the individual who more thoroughly than any other fulfilled their requirements—and that was William Howard Taft.

William Howard Taft, of Cincinnati, Ohio, probably is the way he would designate himself. That designation, however, is grossly inadequate. For while Mr. Taft is an American of Americans, he is also a citizen of the world who, as invited guest, counselor and adviser of foreign governments, has exerted an influence for peace and international good will unsurpassed by that of any other American statesman, living or dead.

The dignity of private citizenship, which he enjoys to-day, is in perfect accord with his temperament and inclination. There never has been, nor will there ever be, anything in official honor sufficiently alluring to draw Mr. Taft away from his lifelong identity with the plain people.

As a boy in Cincinnati he was ready to give and take in all the stirring controversies, mental and physical, which give effect to the law of the survival of the fittest. As a student at Yale he displayed all the qualities of wholesome young manhood which have made that university famous, and the endearing traits of his character were honored at the reunion of his class during the recent summer by a celebration more delightful to him, perhaps, than any other demonstration of public favor possibly could be.

In the frank, fearless, boyhood and college life of William Howard Taft there was the promise of an earnest, generous, upright manhood. That promise has been completely and splendidly fulfilled. The serious affairs of life appealed irresistibly to the young collegian after his graduation, and at the early age of twenty-four he appeared as Assistant Solicitor in his home country.

Mr. Taft's professional advancement from the position of Superior Court Judge and Solicitor General to a seat on the bench of the United States District Court was due solely to a frank recognition of his proved integrity, his diligence and impartiality in the administration of justice and his loyalty to the loftiest standards of judicial conduct. It is said of him by one who, as a lawyer, knew him well: "He was the gentlest, fairest and most upright of all judges before whom I have practiced. He was as incapable of doing an unkind or an unjust thing as snow is of turning into soot."

It is, however, in his career since his voluntary—though reluctant—retirement from the bench that we shall find the most remarkable evolutions in Mr. Taft's development as an American statesman.

"The country had gone through an unsought war, the successful outcome of which imposed new and enormous responsibilities upon the National Government, and placed the United States in the attitude of a first class power, obliged to face the perils of permanent contact with Old World nationalities. Momentous problems arose—partly racial, partly religious, partly constitutional—all complex and urgent. They required an immediate revision and enlargement of American foreign policy. They required also the services of a new school of American statesmen and diplomats, who should be constructive, self-reliant and capable of dealing with grave conditions in a manner creditable to the National honor and just to international interests.

Among the patriotic, broad-minded statesmen whom this changed condition of international affairs called into the service of the United States none has exerted so wide or so wholesome an influence as William Howard Taft. Porto Rico and the Philippines had become American territory, requiring American treatment. Cuba, an independent nation by the grace of the United States, had become an object of kindly solicitude to the Government at Washington, and has been ever since. The Republic of Panama came into existence, bringing with it the territorial understanding essential to the construction of the isthmian canal, but with it also came enlarged possibilities of discord in Central America against which the United States is of its own volition the guarantor.

That these vexatious problems have all thus far advanced toward an honorable solution is due more to William Howard Taft than to any other individual. He has been the builder and exemplar of the new American policy. He has given to the inhabitants of our insular possessions a convincing assurance of the integrity of American purpose. To the Philippines, to Hawaii, to Porto Rico and to Panama he has gone as a messenger of American good will and fair play—and in all those territories he is gratefully recognized as their friend and protector. In him they have an advocate of the forces and methods that make for peace, progress and brotherhood under American sovereignty.

Mr. Taft is a many-sided man. He works hard and plays hard. He radiates geniality and sunshine. As a judge he was both just and gentle. As Governor of the Philippines his courtesy, tact, sympathy and forbearance gave to the people of the Orient an exalted ideal of American dignity and American manhood. As Secretary of War he elevated the standards of the military service and gave increased security to the National defenses. He combines the executive faculty with the judicial in the highest degree, and his rule of life, both public and private, may be summed up in a single sentence:

"I dare to do all that may become a man; Who dares do more is none."

The call of the people is for William Howard Taft. They know him. He is one of them. There is need this year of a leader of practical experience in public affairs whose principles and policies are not subject to change over night, and whose record in high office is a sufficient guaranty for his future performance. Mr. Taft fulfills that requirement in every detail. His record is an unbroken story of accomplished results for the public welfare. No act or utterance of his requires apology or explanation. He is neither a dodger nor a trimmer. He has encountered many difficulties and mastered them all. His cheerfulness, broad humanity, integrity and devotion to the principles which have made the Republic great and powerful distinguish him as an ideal of American citizenship.

In the great political campaign upon which the country is about to enter nobody will have the slightest excuse for misunderstanding the attitude or the purpose of William Howard Taft. The record of the Republican nominee is an open book in which there is neither evasion nor contradiction. He stands by the party platform and by the history of the party's achievements. The Republican party presents him to the people as a statesman and patriot worthy to rank in succession with the great leaders of American progress whose names, from Lincoln and Grant to McKinley and Roosevelt, are unseparably associated with the noblest triumphs of the Republic.

SHALL THE PEOPLE RULE

Declared to Be a Paramount Issue in Democratic Arkansas.

The Situation Intolerable to Free People.

In his speech of acceptance Mr. Bryan said: "Our platform declares that the overshadowing issue which manifests itself in all the questions now under discussion, is, shall the people rule? No matter which way we turn; no matter to what subject we address ourselves, the same question confronts us."

If Mr. Bryan will turn towards almost any Southern state which has been under permanent Democratic control, he will quickly find a field for practical work in the direction of having the people rule. Let him, for instance, turn towards Arkansas, where there is a campaign in progress involving, above all other issues, the reform of the present electoral system of the state.

The Issue in Arkansas.

Of this system, and of some of the issues involved in the campaign, George L. Mallory, Secretary Arkansas State League of Republican Clubs, in an address delivered August 21, 1908, at Maumelle, Arkansas, said:

"In the last national contest the Republicans of this state polled 42 per cent of the total vote cast. Roosevelt received only 17,000 fewer votes than Parker, and this with the returns held back for twenty days by the election boards before the results were announced. If it required twenty days to patch up a majority of only 17,000 for Parker, who is there who will not say that by every application of circumstantial evidence Roosevelt actually carried Arkansas in 1904.

"The Democrats often say they grow tired of hearing the Republicans everlastingly talking about the Arkansas election law. But just as long as this iniquitous system remains with us and the machine that it has created continues faithfully and unerringly to grind out majorities for the dominant party, giving the minority no representation of their own choice on the county boards or at the polling places, just so long will we cry the issue from the housetops and demand the common rights of American citizens.

"I have no hesitancy in saying that the fertile source of nine-tenths of all the evils under which this state suffers is the Democratic election law of 1891.

"The law that places the whole machinery of elections in the hands of three Democratic office-holders, often themselves candidates for re-election, is itself the strongest circumstantial evidence that it is the intention to steal the election. Add to this the refusal to allow the Republicans, who cast 40 per cent of the vote in this state, the right to name their own election judges and clerks, and the evidence is almost complete to convince the most conservative man of the fact that Republicans in Arkansas are beforehand marked for defeat, and that fairness and honesty and the reputation of the state will all be sacrificed, if necessary, to carry out the corruption.

"The Democrats have frankly given as their excuse for this law that it was created for the purpose of counting out the negro. Yet we all know that the worst features of this law are invoked in the white counties of the state where the Republicans would surely win if given an equal chance with the Democrats at the polls.

Intolerable Situation.

"The situation is intolerable to a free people. In 1776 my forefathers and yours fought and bled because they were taxed and were not allowed representation. To-day, the Republicans, Prohibitionists, Socialists, and Populists are taxed and are disfranchised. They all contribute to the support of the state institutions; they bear their share of the cost of public improvements; they do all that any citizen does to pay the running expenses of city, county and state, but they are not allowed representation. They pay taxes but the law prevents them saying who shall represent them as the leviers of taxes.

"More than that, this law opens a yawning grave to every rising man in Arkansas who claims the right of independent thought. It stifles every laudable political aspiration; it stands with a flaming sword in the path of anyone who would gain preferment outside of the Democratic party; it blasts hope and kills ambition, and over it all it lays its blighting hand upon the ballot box, corrupting and perjuring our Democratic officials and robbing us of the elective franchise, the most sacred and valuable prerogative of free citizenship.

"This is the paramount issue in our state campaign; not the state capitol; not the convict system; not the trusts, but whether Arkansas as a state is to be honest and square with her people and treat them all with equality and even-handed justice, which is conceded to be the right of every American citizen under the Constitution. The Republicans who are working side by side with the Democrats in business, the church, society, and in every laudable enterprise that seeks to upbuild this state, appeal to all good citizens to help sweep this unjust and disgraceful election law out of existence."

ACHIEVEMENTS OF REPUBLICAN PARTY

Shall the Brilliant Party Record Be Endorsed?

Has Made America One of the Great Nations of the Earth.

In his Toledo speech the other day, Secretary Taft made the bulls-eye, when he said that the real issue of this campaign is whether the voters of this country will give their endorsement to the Roosevelt policies and the deeds of the Republican party or turn to the Democratic party, with its untried promises. It is not, whether the people shall rule, as Bryan stated the other day, because the people already rule as much as the Democrats will permit them. The hundreds of thousands of disfranchised negroes in the South, together with the many poor white people, stand up and point the finger at the guilty Democratic party. Its statements about popular rule are hollow pretenses. Its professions hypocritical claptrap.

Hay's Tribute to Republican Party.

The distinguished American statesman, John Hay, in an address at Jackson, Michigan, commemorating the 50th anniversary of the Republican party, declared that the Republican party had a noble origin, that it sprang directly from an aroused and indignant National conscience. Questions of finance, of political economy of orderly administration, pass out of sight for the moment to be taken up and dealt with later on. But in 1851 the question that brought thinking men together, was whether there should be a limit to the aggressions of slavery; and in 1861 that solemn inquiry turned to one still more portentious: Should the nation live or die? The humblest old Republican in America has a right to be proud that in the days of his youth in the presence of these momentous questions he judged right; and if he is sleeping in his honored grave, his children may justly be glad of his decision.

The Republican party has a history which since its birth in 1851 is the history of progress and prosperity. Its leaders have always had the welfare of the country at heart. It has never taken a backward step, but has always been the supporting pillar of the National government. Its cardinal principles have been the maintenance of the Declaration of Independence, internal improvements, a tariff to protect our labor and industries and to pay government expenses, the building up of our navy, preserving purity in elections, for the diffusion of knowledge and happiness among all the people, for an honest medium of exchange. It has stood for honor, dignity, integrity, patriotism, progress, prosperity, happiness, law and order.

Voo-doo Democratic High Priests.

The high priests of the Democratic party have for the last fifty years tried to terrify the people with imaginary political bugaboos. When Lincoln was first a candidate, they got up the awful bugaboo they called "Abolitionism" and deceived multiplied thousands of the people. When Grant was our candidate for the Presidency they manufactured twin bugaboos, called "Centralization," and "Military Despotism," and scared many timid persons into the belief that our liberties were about to be taken away. When Hayes was our candidate they paraded before the public the caricature denominated "A Bloated Bondholder," and tried to make us believe that it was the Republican party in disguise, and that if Hayes were elected the bondholders would take all of our property from us. When Garfield was our candidate, they invented a fearful evil devil called "The Force Bill," and terrified the Southern people by declaring if Garfield were elected an army would be sent to the South to hold elections and none but Republicans and negroes would be allowed to vote. When Harrison was a candidate these same Democratic high priests got together and invented a new lot of hobgoblins which they denominated "Robber Barons," and rushed them all over the country to the terror and dismay of millions of unsuspecting Democrats who actually elected Cleveland President.

When McKinley was our candidate for President, the bugaboo makers brought out a stupendous crawling monster, of antediluvian proportions, and branded it a "Gold Bug," and swore that it was the Republican party and that if McKinley were chosen President this monster would devour the substance of we Americans as the caterpillars and palmerworms devoured the crops of the children of Israel in the days of old. When Roosevelt was nominated these perennial alarmists, said that the republic would be strangled and be merged into "Imperialism," that the "Big Stick" would embroil us in perpetual warfare with foreign nations and that the Liberty advocated by our fathers had vanished from the land.

We have been constantly told by them that the Republican party could not be trusted, that all the usurers, all the money sharks, all the bloated bondholders, all the robber barons, all the gold bugs, all the imperialists and war lords, all the corruptionists, all the enemies of the laboring man and all the foes of the farmer were in the Republican party and that if that party elected Roosevelt as President, awful and manifold would be the calamities that would inevitably fall upon the American people and the salt of liberty would lose its savor, that our very freedom would be like the blazonry of silks and jewels in the gloom of the grave.

False Prophets All.

But out of these nettles of direful and dangerous predictions have sprung the beautiful blossoms of safety and prosperity. Instead of money becoming scarcer, it has become more plentiful. Instead, of agricultural products going down to nothing, they have greatly increased in price; instead of laborers' wages being cut down to pauper rates, they have been greatly raised; instead of railroads having nothing to do, they have not enough cars to carry their passengers and freights; instead of our business men being ground to powder in the bankruptcy courts, they are happy and increasingly prosperous; instead of our manufacturing establishments going out of business, they are doing an increasing business. We have more money in use and circulation than ever before; more money per capita than ever before; more money in savings banks than ever before; the dollar has a larger purchasing power than ever before and the laboring man lives better than ever before.

Republicans Lincoln's Heirs.

If there is one thing more than another in which Republicans are entitled to legitimate pride, it is that Lincoln was our first President, that we believed in him loyally, supported him while he lived, and that we have never lost the right to call ourselves his followers. There is not a principle avowed by the Republican party to-day which is out of harmony with his teaching or inconsistent with his character. But only those who believe in human rights and are willing to make sacrifices to defend them, who believe in the nation and its beneficent power, who believe in the American system of protection, championed by a long line of our greatest and best—running back from Roosevelt to Washington—only those who believe in equal justice to labor and to capital, in honest money and the right to earn it, have any title to name themselves by the name of Lincoln or to claim a moral kinship with that august and venerated spirit.

Stood the Supreme Test.

Is the Republican party entitled to public confidence? Its record speaks in no uncertain tones in answer to this question. After slavery had been abolished by it, the war ended and peace restored with no damage to the structure of the government, but on the contrary with added strength and with increased guaranties of its perpetuity, it remained to be shown whether the power and success of the Republican party were to be permanent, or whether, born of a crisis, it was fitted to cope with the problems of daily national life. It had destroyed slavery, but in the absence of this great adversary, could the party hold together against the thousands of lesser evils that beset the public—the evils of ignorance, corruption, avarice and lawlessness, the prejudices of race and of class, the voices of demagogues, the cunning of dishonest craft, the brutal tyranny of the boss, the venality of the mean? It is not too much to say that the last fifty years have given an answer full of glory and honor to that question.

The Republican party in the mass and in detail has shown its capacity to govern. By the homestead law, with equal generosity and wisdom, it distributed the immense national domain among the citizens who were willing to cultivate it and who have converted wide stretches of wilderness into smiling homes. It built the Pacific railroad, which has bound the union together from east to west and made the States beyond the mountains among our most loyal and prosperous commonwealth. It redeemed our paper currency and made all our forms of money exactly of equal value, and our credit the best in the world. By persistent honesty in our finances—in the face of obstacles which might have daunted the hardest statesmen—it has reduced our interest charges so that in any mart on earth we can borrow money cheaper than any other people. We have by the patient labor of years reformed and regulated our civil service, so that patronage has almost ceased to cast its deadly blight upon the work of our public servants.

Brilliant and Glorious Record.

Its record is but a succession of brilliant and successful achievements which have raised the nation to a world power of the first rank and which have vouchsafed to our people the maximum of benefits with a minimum of cost. Some things it has accomplished may be mentioned here:

The homestead law passed by a Republican Congress and signed by Abraham Lincoln.

The national banking laws, which gave the people a currency stable in all parts of the country.

The system of internal revenue taxation by which approximately one-half of the ordinary expenses of the government have been raised from malt and spirituous liquors, tobacco and cigars.

The constitutional amendments, which abolished slavery, created citizenship of the United States, as distinguished from citizenship of the several states, and established equality of suffrage.

The Civil Rights act, which extended to all persons the equal protection of the laws.

All existing laws for pensions to war veterans.

Rural and city free delivery.

The endowment of public schools, agricultural colleges, etc., by grants of land from the public domain.

The establishment of the Circuit Court of Appeals to relieve the Supreme Court and no longer require litigants to suffer a delay of three or four years in securing a decision on appeal.

The principle of reciprocity, by which we reduce the duties on certain imports from countries that offer corresponding advantages to our exports, and thus extend our foreign market.

The national bankruptcy law of 1867 and 1898, which relieved many thousands of unfortunates and restored them to commercial or industrial activity.

The establishment of the gold standard which placed our monetary system on a stable basis, in harmony with the great nations of the world.

A protective tariff in the interest of American industries and American labor.

The building of the Panama canal.

The national irrigation act, which is transforming the West from a desert to the most productive area of America.

The Pure Food Law, stopping poisoned foods.

The Railroad Rate Law, abolishing rate discriminations.

The Emergency Currency bill and the National Monetary Commission.

The Employer's and Government Liability laws.

The measures for the greater efficiency for the Army and Navy.

The new statute for the safety of railroad engineers and firemen and many other acts concerning the public welfare.

Shall the Republican record be endorsed? Triumphant millions of free, enlightened American citizens will answer YES, at the polls November 4th, and overwhelmingly elect Taft and Sherman.

PROTECTION FOR DEPOSITORS.

Postal Savings Banks Offer a Satisfactory Measure of Protection.

Mr. Bryan's scheme for the protection of depositors is to make solvent and prudently managed banks pay the losses of the insolvent and imprudently managed. It is a plan to make every bank go security for every other bank, and it may well be questioned if a law imposing such an obligation without the consent of the person charged would be sustained by the courts.

Mr. Taft, discussing this subject, said that he favored postal savings banks as a protection for depositors rather than the Brya ns mcfheoecmfwyp cmfwyp the Bryan scheme of enforced liability.

The distinct advantage of the postal savings bank proposition is that it would provide for direct government responsibility. The depositors would be guaranteed against loss by the government, because the banks would be government institutions. There would be no possibility of loss, and no injustice would be inflicted upon other banks like that to which they would be subjected under the Bryan scheme, if they were compelled to pay losses incurred by banks over which they had no control.

Postal savings banks in other countries have given great satisfaction, and there is no question that they would be conducted as safely and in every other way as satisfactorily in the United States. The government being the banker, would properly be charged with responsibility to the depositors and others doing business with it.

On the other hand, the State has no more authority to make a banker responsible for the debts of another banker than it has to impose a like responsibility upon a merchant for the debts of other merchants. Surety is a matter of voluntary contract, and the essential element in any financial obligation is consent on the part of the person to be charged. To force a banker to insure the payment of the debts of another banker is to impose upon him an obligation against his will, which would be manifestly unjust.—Denver Republican.

W. R. HEARST RESIGNS FROM IROQUOIS CLUB

In a Cleverly Sarcastic Letter Tells Why He Withdraws With Gratification.

"THERE IS NO DEMOCRACY."

There Is Only a Bryan Party and Its Followers Don't Know When They Go to Bed at Night What They Will Be Called Upon to Believe When They Wake Up in the Morning.

The Iroquois Association, an essentially Democratic organization, of San Francisco, a few days ago suggested to Mr. William Randolph Hearst that since he had decided to oppose the election of the Democratic candidate, Mr. Bryan, he could not consistently retain his membership in the organization. In reply to this suggestion, Mr. Hearst has sent the following letter to the association:

To the Iroquois Association, San Francisco, Cal.:

Gentlemen—I received your letter with both pleasure and surprise. I was surprised to know that Mr. Bogart was sending four dollars dues to your organization, but pleased to learn of it, as I am exceedingly ready to stop that. I was pleased and surprised, too, to learn that the Iroquois Club was still in existence, for I thought that it had been peacefully buried along with the last remnants of the defunct Democratic party of California.

But since the Iroquois Club still in a way exists, I am glad to resign from it, and the situation suggested in your letter seems sufficient reason for me.

You imply that I am not a Democrat, and I strongly suspect that I am not, according to the Democratic standards of to-day. I worked hard for the Democratic party at one time and contributed many thousands of four-dollar checks, and cheerfully suffered much abuse and much injury for the Democratic party, but I believed in it then, and I don't now.

You imply, furthermore, that you are Democrats, and I cannot help wondering what kind of Democrats you think you are. Are you 1892 Democrats, or 1896 Democrats, or 1900 Democrats, or 1904 Democrats, or 1908 Democrats? Are you Cleveland Democrats, believing in the tariff reform that we didn't get, and the military suppression of labor unions that we did get? Are you Parker Democrats supporting the trusts if they contribute and opposing them if they don't? Are you Bryan Democrats, believing in free silver sometimes and in government ownership sometimes, and in the initiative and the referendum sometimes? And if you are Bryan Democrats and believe in these things, do you also believe in a Bryan platform that contains none of these things?

Dear friends and brothers of the Iroquois Club, you all remember how the Democracy of free silver was taught you and how you got intensely excited over it, and cheered for it and marched for it, and then were informed that free silver was not true Democracy after all, but that public ownership was. Then you remember how you threw your hats in the air over public ownership and worked up an almost hysterical enthusiasm for it, and then were informed that this wasn't true Democracy either, but that the initiative and referendum were. Then you came nobly to the front again and affirmed undying devotion to the everlasting principles of the initiative and referendum; but now you have a platform in which there is no free silver, in which there is no public ownership, in which there is no initiative or referendum, and still you are informed by the old Dr. Gringle of Democracy that only that platform with the owner's trade-mark pasted on the front and the owner's name blown in the bottle is genuine Democracy, and that if you don't subscribe to that you will be read out of the Democratic party.

Friends and ex-brothers of the Iroquois Club, there is no Democratic party. There is only a Bryan party, and the followers of that party don't know when they go to bed at night what they will be called upon to believe when they wake up in the morning.

Once there was a man who had an old carving knife which he said had been handed down to him from his grandfather. A friend said to him: "It looks rather new. Haven't you ever done anything to it?" And the man said: "Oh, I've had the blade changed once or twice, and the handle renewed a couple of times, but otherwise it is just the same knife my grandfather had."

Mr. Bryan tells us that his variable doctrines are the Democracy of our fathers, but I say that both the blade and the handle have been changed so often that there is no recognizing the original principles.

Once, again, there was a farmer who had a balky mule and he couldn't make the mule go. A stranger came along and offered to help, and the farmer told him to go right ahead. The stranger had a bottle of turpentine, and he opened the mule's mouth and pushed back his head and poured about half of the bottle into the mule's stomach. The mule gave one startled gasp and struck out across the prairie, and was lost to sight. The surprised farmer stood for a while immersed in deep thought, and then he said: "Stranger, please give me the rest of that turpentine; I've got to catch my mule."

Friends and ex-brothers of the one-time Iroquois Club, I have always stood just where I stand now, squarely upon the principles of the founder of the Democratic party and the framer of the Declaration of Independence; but the Democratic Donkey has gone galloping over the political prairie until it is lost to the sight of its original adherents.

I am not in the race to catch that donkey, and if you are, you will find that you have to keep plumb full of a different kind of turpentine in every campaign.

And so I received your communication with gratification and gratitude, and so I withdraw from your club with pleasure and without the slightest hard feeling.

Good luck and God bless you, and may you all be able to keep up with your mule. Sincerely,

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

CURTAILMENT OF PRODUCTION

What Would be the Effect of Bryan's Plan for Curbing the Trusts?

Now comes the suggestion that, by law, the operations of a corporation shall be so curtailed that to the whole output it shall not contribute more than 50 per cent. Those who have neither the time nor the inclination to go below the surface of things may acquiesce, but even they may not.

Presume a machine to be invented, and presume its promoters, not only to establish a plant for its manufacture, but to be fortunate to the extent that the use of the contrivance becomes general. At the start they make the whole output. Then comes a rival, beginning by producing 25 per cent. Down swoops the government, compelling contraction by the pioneer.

What is the result? It is to reduce the total production, though the demand for the machine may be greater than the supply. The pioneer plant cuts off 50 per cent in obedience to governmental mandate, and its rival makes good but half of the deficiency. Of course, there are what may be called secondary effects, and they ensue immediately.

Presume the first plant to have cost two millions and to employ 2,000 men. No sooner is the second plant established than 1,000 men are thrown out of work, and property represented by a million is converted into an industrial junk shop. The author of this brilliant idea suggests that the company sell what it becomes illegal to use.

This is equally brilliant. It may take the entire plant to produce one machine, of which there may be many parts. In that event, compliance with law can come only by discharging 1,000 men or by keeping 2,000 at work on half time. Nor does the proposition emanate from an occupant of a home for the feeble-minded.

It comes from the Democratic candidate for the Presidency. It comes from mental machinery which enjoys a monopoly of that sort of thing. Of this machinery the aggregate output is large, but no effort has been made to restrict it. One of the choicest of its products is that monopolies be exterminated. This is a pet thunderbolt—but Mr. Bryan has the crudest notions as to its significance. He seems to think that in some mysterious way it would benefit the "plain people."

A big corporation produces on a big scale. Exterminate it, and it stops. Corporations become big for reasons economists have no trouble in comprehending. They do things by wholesale. And part of what they save remains in the pocket of the consumer, who would otherwise have to pay far more for his purchase.

Mr. Bryan says he would dissolve, destroy, obliterate, extirpate, exterminate. Sometimes, he says, kill. He finds fault with Mr. Taft because he will make no use of these terms or of synonyms for them. Well, the Republican candidate for the Presidency has not lost his mind. He is not formulating a policy of destruction. He knows that evolution from the little to the big was not only inevitable, but beneficent.

In declamation the Nebraskan is effective and impressive; in elaboration, in detail, in what are called specifications, he is out of his element. To ask him to be exact is to suggest that he clip his own wings. The only known equivalent for his Democracy is Destruction.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Joint Interests.

Labor needs capital to secure the best production, while capital needs labor in producing anything. The share of each laborer in the joint product is affected not exactly, but in a general way, by the amount of capital in use as compared with the number of those who labor. The more capital in use the more work there is to do, and the more work there is to do the more laborers are needed. The greater the need for laborers the better their pay per man. Manifestly, it is in the direct interest of the laborer that capital shall increase faster than the number of those who work. Everything which legitimately tends to increase the accumulation of wealth and its use for production will give each laborer a larger share in the joint result of capital and labor.—Hon. Wm. H. Taft, at Cooper Union, New York City.

THE FARMER IS NOT NEGLECTED

Important Results Accomplished During the McKinley-Roosevelt Administration.

A brief review of the work of the McKinley-Roosevelt administration in behalf of the farming interests of the country is all that is necessary to completely controvert the Democratic charge that the government is neglecting the farmer.

During the last eleven years Presidents McKinley and Roosevelt have aimed to bring the Department of Agriculture to the help of our farmers in all sections of the country and have instructed the Secretary of Agriculture to use all endeavors to help the tiller of the soil toward greater efficiency and more economic production; to make the American acre more potent in growing crops. The Congress during the last eleven years has quadrupled the amount of money invested in agricultural research and demonstration, to give the American farmers help in their operations on the farm, to feed our people well and cheaply, and enable them to compete with the outside world. It has provided for over two thousand scientists, specialists in their respective lines, who are in touch with our farmers in all sections of the country, gathering information and preparing it for issue in departmental publications, of which nearly seventeen million pieces were given out in 1907 to go into our country homes, dealing directly with what is uppermost in the minds of our growers of plants and animals at the time of publication.

The education of specialists in applied science to meet the demand for research under the Federal Government and under State institutions has become a prominent feature of departmental work. Graduates of our agricultural and other colleges are drafted into the Department of Agriculture and prepared for scientific research along the lines demanded by the producers of our country under all our varied conditions. Within the last eleven years nearly sixteen hundred young men have had post-graduate instruction in the sciences of agriculture. The Department of Agriculture and the State experiment stations are actively co-operating with regard to unsolved problems that affect the farmer throughout our States and Territories and in the islands of the sea that have lately come into our possession.

New markets for our surplus production are being sought in foreign countries, and scientific inquiry is being made into the preparation of our exports for foreign markets. Uncertainty with regard to the magnitude of our crops at home is being removed by careful statistical inquiry, to the end that more accurate knowledge with regard to production may mitigate the evils of speculation. Inquiry is also being made into the productions of competing countries, in order that the American farmer may know what he has to meet in foreign markets.

New Products for American Farms.

Strenuous efforts are being made to encourage the home production of articles we have been importing from foreign countries. During the last eleven years there has been an increase in the production of sugar from beets which makes the product of 1907, amounting to 500,000 tons, over thirteen times that of 1896 and its value fifteen times. Eleven years ago we produced only one-fourth of the rice consumed in the United States. The fostering work of the Federal Government has enabled the rice growers to produce more than the equivalent of our home consumption and foreign markets are being sought for the surplus. There was an increase in the production of rice from 97,000,000 pounds in 1896 to an average of 716,000,000 pounds during the last four years.

Scientific research by the Bureau of Soils demonstrates the fact that we can produce at home the fine tobaccos for which we have been paying over twenty million dollars a year to foreign countries. Our explorers have searched foreign lands for grains, legumes, fiber plants, teas, etc., for introduction into sections of the United States suitable to their production. The producing area for grains has been extended westward into the dry regions of our country through the introduction of plants that are at home where the rainfall is light. Nearly fifty millions of bushels of wheat are being grown in regions that have heretofore been unproductive.

The Federal Government is studying the diseases of domestic animals with a view to their complete eradication. Our animals and their products go to foreign countries with bills of healthfulness. The American meats are the most wholesome in the world, as the world now knows. An imported disease of domestic animals was promptly stamped out within a year at an expenditure of $300,000, to prevent it from spreading throughout the country among our herds and flocks. Rigid inspection against foreign countries having animal diseases is maintained at our ports of entry, in order to protect the health of our domestic animals.

Within the last eleven years the government has become thoroughly equipped to deal with plant diseases. The loss of half a million dollars annually was stopped by pathological examination of our sea-island cottons. New varieties of fruits, cereals, cottons, etc., are being created by hybridizing to meet the demands of producers of these crops in the North and in the South.

Our forests have been mostly destroyed and our mountains, the natural reservoirs for water, have been rendered incapable of retaining moisture. Efforts are being made to reforest the country, to prevent fires, to regulate grazing in our forests, and to study lumbering and forest products.

The Federal Government is making inquiry into road material and a beginning has been made in the education of young men toward road building. A laboratory has been established in the Department of Agriculture for the study of materials with which to construct roads; and rocks, gravels, clays, tiling, cement, concrete pavements, stone, brick, wood, and asphaltum are being studied.

The Central American boll weevil, now the greatest menace to the cotton crop of the United States, is being actively studied as it increases its range, and means of control have been devised which make the growth of cotton nearly as profitable as ever. The insect enemies of other great staple crops are being investigated throughout the country, and the gypsy and browntail moths, which are threatening the forest areas of New England, are being checked and brought into measurable control by the agency of the Federal Government in co-operation with state authorities. The losses occasioned by insect pests in general amount to millions annually, and much of this loss may gradually be prevented by the kind of work done by the Department of Agriculture.

The atmosphere in its relation to agriculture and commerce is being carefully studied, and trained meteorologists for the first time in our history are being detailed from the Department of Agriculture to give lectures in institutions of learning, in order that we may have scholars in the land along this line of inquiry, to the end that the farmer and the mariner may have all the protection that intelligent forecasting can give them.

The Meat Inspection and Pure Food Laws.

On June 30, 1906, by the approval of President Roosevelt, the Meat Inspection Amendment became a law. Under the provisions of this amendment the Federal Government guarantees to the people of the United States that the meat shipped in interstate commerce is derived from animals which are free from disease at the time of slaughter, and that meat products from these animals are prepared in clean packing houses, under sanitary conditions, and without the addition of any injurious or deleterious drugs, chemicals, or preservatives. The United States now has the most stringent and the best enforced meat inspection law of any country in the world, and it is a great protection to the health and lives of the people. Over 2,500 employes are directly engaged each working day in the year in the enforcement of the law.

On the same day, June 30, 1906, President Roosevelt approved the Pure Food Law. This law covers all foods, with the exception of meats, including beverages, and also drugs which enter interstate or foreign commerce. By its terms, articles of food or drink must not contain any injurious or deleterious drug, chemical, or preservative, and the label upon each package of food, drugs, or drink must state the exact fact, and must not be false or misleading in any particular. While this law does not cover foods, beverages and drugs which are produced and consumed entirely within the limits of one state, yet its enactment has incited the legislatures of the different states to enact laws covering domestic products of a like nature. These laws very generally follow the national act as to form and detail, the only difference being that one affects interstate and foreign commerce, while the other affects the internal commerce of the state. Inspectors are continually traveling throughout the United States to discover whether the terms of the law are being observed, and they have found, upon the part of manufacturers and dealers, a very general compliance with the law. When violations of the law are observed, they are at once prosecuted by the Department of Justice, and the guilty parties are punished.

The Farmer and Balance of Trade.

During the eighteen years, 1890-1907, the average annual excess of domestic exports over imports amounted to $337,000,000, and during the same time the annual average in favor of farm products was $362,000,000, from which it is apparent that there was an average annual adverse balance of trade in products other than those of the farm, amounting to $25,000,000, which the farmers offset and had left $337,000,000 to the credit of themselves and the country.

Taking the business of 1907, the comparison is much more favorable to the farmers than during the eighteen-year period, since the value of domestic exports of farm products over imports was $444,000,000.

During the last eighteen years there was a balance of trade in favor of farm products, without excepting any year, that amounted to $6,512,000,000. Against this was an adverse balance of trade in products other than those of the farm of $456,000,000, and the farmers not only canceled this immense obligation, but had enough left to place $6,056,000,000 to the credit of the nation when the books of international exchange were balanced.

These figures tersely express the immense national reserve sustaining power of the farmers of the country under present quantities of production.

The health of our people is being safeguarded by inquiry into importations of food from foreign countries that contain substances deleterious to health. The United States is no longer the dumping ground for food stuffs that are forbidden sale in the countries where they originate.

An aim of the Department is to make the American independent with regard to everything that can be produced in our latitudes. Corps of scientists have been placed in each of the new island groups that have lately come under our jurisdiction for the purpose of helping them to produce what can not be grown in the continental United States.

The Department of Agriculture is furnishing information regarding the requirements and possibilities of irrigation, both in the arid regions of the United States and as an aid to agriculture in the humid East. This inquiry determines the amount of water needed to give the best results, the time when it should be applied, and the methods of application best suited to different localities, and the different crops. The evils of too much water, resulting in the ruin of large areas which were highly productive a few years ago, are being investigated, with a view to preventing not only the ruining of crops which get too much water, but of those on equally fertile soil which are deprived of the necessary water supply. The economic use of water and the introduction of plants from foreign countries where the rainfall is light are extending crop growing over large areas that have been unproductive.

Other Fields of Activity.

The bureau has undertaken the direction of farms, particularly where baffling problems discourage the farmers. Thirty-two of these farms are under the supervision of the bureau in Louisiana, Texas, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, South Carolina, and Florida. Co-operative work in tea raising in South Carolina has resulted in a crop of 8,000 to 10,000 pounds in a season on the experimental farm, the tea being many times more valuable than the imported grades.

During a single year the department printed 12,500,000 copies of its various publications; 6,500,000 farmers' bulletins alone were issued. During the year the department issued 972 distinct publications, 329 being new. They contained 22,000 pages of reading matter, a library in itself.

There are over 4,500 people directly employed in the department and nearly 250,000 people acting as special correspondents throughout the world without compensation, a notable tribute to the importance of farming in the United States.

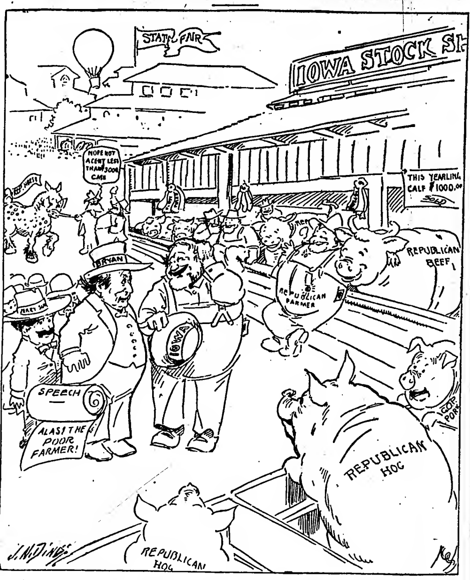
In two years' time the farmers of this country have produced wealth exceeding the output of all the gold mines of the world since the discovery of America by Columbus. In a single month of their busy season the hens of the country lay enough eggs to pay the year's interest on the national debt. In a year they produce one and two-thirds billions of eggs, 245 eggs a year for every American.

From the corn crop of a single year the farmers can pay the interest on the national debt for a year, the entire debt itself, and a large amount of the actual expenses of the government to boot. In 1905 the corn crop reached 2,700,000,000 bushels.

The agricultural products of the United States for two years are over six times as large as the capital stock of all the banks in America, not to mention the capital invested in the farms. The farmer is destined to be a menial no longer but master of his own future and fate.

Evils are to be suppressed by definite and practical measures—not by oratory or denunciation.—Hon. Wm. H. Taft, at Greensboro, North Carolina.

BRYAN VISITS THE STATE FAIR.



Donkeys! Well, there may be a few here some place, but we don't raise many of them in this state.
—From the Des Moines Register and Leader.

LABOR'S REAL ISSUE IS DEAL WITH GOMPERS

His Effort to "Throw" the Trade-Union Vote to Bryan Doing Infinite Harm.

THAT "BUSINESS" CONFERENCE.

The Labor Press and Leaders of Country Unmask President of the Federation as a Democrat and a Free Trader Fighting to Defeat the Best Friends of the Workingman.

It will be exceedingly interesting to wage workers and the public in general to know how strongly the political course of President Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, is being opposed by the labor press and trade union leaders of the country. Since the fact has become known that President Gompers has had a real "business" conference with Mr. Mack, manager of the Bryan campaign, the opposition of organized labor to President Gompers' effort to "throw" the trade union vote over to Bryan is still all the stronger. There no longer remains any doubt that President Gompers has arranged with the Democratic party to try to force the labor vote to Bryan, and that despite the fact that he, Gompers, is at the head of a trade union organization of a non-political nature, he is, as an official of that trade union, using his time, paid for by the union, and the union machinery in furthering the success of a partisan political party. In doing this he is going contrary to all precedent, either in this country or in England. He is a Democrat and a free trader and as such has put himself on record as fighting to defeat the best friends American labor ever had in the history of the Nation.

While many of the labor papers remain non-committal on the question, most of the important ones oppose the policy of President Gompers. Of course the out and out Democratic papers will lean toward Bryan.

The Toledo Union Leader has strongly opposed the Gompers slogan to "reward your friends and punish your enemies." It declares that the policy is ineffective and is likely to do more damage to the unions than good. The Leader has consistently stood for direct action through a Labor party or the Socialist party and is at present delivering hammer blows for the legislative ticket of the Socialist party, which was endorsed by referendum vote of the local unions.

The Akron People rips the anti-injunction pretenses of the Democratic party into tatters, and points out to Gompers the utter absurdity of placing any reliance in a party that declares in favor of restricting injunctions in one plank and follows it up with a declaration that "It is the function of the courts to interpret the laws which the people create."

The Zanesville Labor Journal concludes that labor is confronted by far greater questions than injunctions, and that "the labor vote has never been delivered or deliverable by any man or set of men."

The Brewers' Journal, of Cincinnati, ridicules the growing tameness of Bryan, declaring that he is no more feared, and calls upon the working people to stand by workingmen in the coming election, something Gompers will not do.

The Bakers' Journal, published in Chicago, in behalf of its readers "emphatically protests against having our international organization classed with those 'who work and vote for the success of the Democratic ticket.'"

The Stove Mounters' Journal, of Detroit, dismisses the subject with the conclusion: "These are the times the workingmen find themselves close to the hearts of the Republican and Democratic parties. After election their usual position will be assumed again."

The Pueblo (Colo.) Union Label Bulletin remarks that "Bro. Gompers expresses himself as highly pleased with the Democratic labor program, but from this distance we fail to see anything to get particularly enthusiastic about. We are presented with the same old alternative of choosing the lesser of two evils, with mighty little choice in the matter."

The Piano and Organ Workers' Official Journal, printed in Chicago, edited by Secretary Dold, formerly President of the Chicago Federation of Labor, says in part, speaking of Gompers' action urging union people to support Bryan and the Democratic party:

"As an excuse for his unusual, unconstitutional and heretofore unheard of procedure he offers the labor plank recently adopted by the Democrats at their Denver convention.

"We deem it to be our duty to enter a most emphatic protest against this, a most wanton disregard for well-established trades union law and ethics.

"President Gompers must and does know that both the Republican and Democratic parties have in times past not hesitated to crush the hopes and aspirations of the wage workers with an iron heel whenever and wherever it suited their purpose to do so. * * *

"Ante-election promises have ever been looked upon with scorn by labor leaders—until now.

"We believe in political action of the wage workers; we believe it to be their only salvation.

"We do not believe in the kind of politics that will boost a party or parties to which we are indebted for all of labor's ills, no matter what 'promises' may be made.

"The fifty, hundred or more years of experience had by organized labor should preclude the possibility of turning the workers' economic movement into an adjunct of political party corruptionists.

"We believe in the ballot; we long for the day when labor will become a political unit.

"We long for a party of, for and by the wage worker.

"Let it be said that President Gompers meant well—but he erred."

Regarding Bryan and his speech of acceptance the views of the following prominent trade union leaders will be interested:

J. E. Pritchard, general secretary of the International Pavers and Rammers' Union, said:

"I consider Bryan's letter the weakest document of its kind ever written. It is nonsense to assert that the Republican party is responsible for the business depression. Under the Republican administration the people had seven years of prosperity. The depression was due to natural causes, and politics had nothing to do with it. If Bryan is elected there will be a worse depression.

"The Knights of Labor went to pieces when they went into politics, and a like fate will befall the American Federation of Labor unless it refuses to support the Democratic party. A labor union is an industrial institution and should steer clear of politics."

"Bryan's letter is not radical enough. It is so weak it will destroy much confidence on the part of the working people in the Democratic party. Bryan has no longer a ghost of a show of being elected."

John A. Dyche, of the International Women's Garment Makers' Union, said:

"Bryan with his weak letter may gain the support of many conservatives but will alienate the labor vote."

President John Young, of the Lithographers' International Protective and Beneficial Association of the United States, said:

"Bryan has no show at all of being elected. His letter of acceptance will not cut much ice with the working people. I do not believe in his methods. The Republican and Democratic parties are both lukewarm when it comes to aiding laboring classes."

The truth is there are scores of trade union leaders who are absolutely opposed to Bryan and to the methods put into operation by President Gompers to try to force trade unionists to vote for Bryan, but these leaders just at present prefer, for obvious reasons, to remain more or less silent. They can easily see the infinite harm the policy of Samuel Gompers will do the trade union cause.

Taft and Labor.

When on the bench Judge Taft said:

That employes have a right to form labor unions.

That such unions are a benefit to labor and to the public.

That they have the right to join with other unions.

That the accumulation of a fund to aid in a strike is right.

That employes have a right to strike whenever any of the terms of their employment are unsatisfactory.

Mr. Gompers says Judge Taft is opposed to organized labor. Mr. Gompers has done a lot of talking in his time and has been a very prolific writer, but in all he has said or in all he has written he has never given organized labor a more unqualified indorsement than Judge Taft gave when on the bench.

The Natural Heir.

(By Josh Wink.)

Bryan says he is the heir
  To Roosevelt's policies;
So natural successor is
  To all the power he sees.
But natural heirs are oft cut off
  When they, perforce, go ill,
And he will find though strong his claim,
  Taft will contest the will.

The mantle that our Roosevelt drops
  Doth Bryan think he'll wear,
And in his right to wear the same
  Will anybody dare.
He says he only owner is
  To all that Roosevelt leaves
In policy, but sooth to say,
  He nobody deceives.

The mantle far too big for him
  In truth, he'll never wear it;
The policies too broad for him
  He'll never just inherit.
He may adopt himself as heir,
  But Roosevelt makes the will,
And when the time comes to probate
  'Tis Taft will fill the bill.

MR. TAFT'S BIG RUNNING MATE

James Schoolcraft Sherman, the Original "Sunny Jim."

A Wise, Versatile, Experienced Statesman Who Has Shaped National Legislation.

When Vice Presidential nominee, James Schoolcraft Sherman, returned home to Utica, New York, after having been nominated by the Republican Convention at Chicago, it is said that in the vast throng of his home people who turned out to meet him was an old woman, bent with the burden of eighty years. She approached Mr. Sherman, whom she has known almost since his birth, and declared to him that he had been selected by Providence to his new office of honor, in order to teach the American people the gospel of good cheer and sunshine of kindness for all Americans.

It is not definitely known that she [illegible] the confidence of Providence, and so speaks by the card, but Sherman's career up to date has shown his capabilities in that line. He is the original "Sunny Jim," and wears "the smile that won't come off."

The Original "Sunny Jim."

This is not a superficial attempt to look pleasant. It does not sequester itself in the wrinkles of his mouth or the lines around his eyes. This genial expansive, irradiating smile speaks of good digestion, a sunny temperament and a complacent mind, possessed by a man who is pretty well satisfied with the past, and reasonably sure of the future. A man of cheerful yesterdays and confident to-morrows. He has been laughing good humor for a little more than half a century. Now the world laughs with him. His sunshine and good cheer, as bread cast upon the waters, returned to him poundcake, as Josh Billings would say, and out of this and other assets he has been enabled to rise, and be nominated to the second highest position within the gift of his countrymen.

Sherman, Seymour, Conkling, Born at Utica.

"Sunny Jim" Sherman first appeared on earth at the village of New Hartford, New York, a suburb of Utica, on the night of October 24, 1855, two years before Mr. Taft saw the light in Cincinnati. Utica was already at that time pointing with pride to one of her illustrious sons in the person of Horatio Seymour, and was soon to point with increasing pride to another still more illustrious son in the person of Roscoe Conkling. Mr. Sherman's father was a lawyer of prominence in Central New York and determined that no "pent-up Utica" should restrict the powers of his son, and so he sent him at the proper time to Whitestown Seminary and Hamilton College. He came out a husky youth—he weighed 190 pounds at sixteen years of age—with oratorical talent and a reputation as a good student.

Belongs to Old American Family.

His family runs back to Roger Sherman who was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and back of him for more than one hundred years to 1660, when the first Sherman came over from England to this country, with a strain of stolid Dutch in his veins. John Sherman, the Ohio Senator, and William Tecumseh Sherman, the great Civil War general, were from the same original stock. Edward Everett Hale is also a distant connection. Schoolcraft, the historian of the American Indians, was "Sunny Jim" Sherman's great-grandfather.

Gets Into Politics Early.

One of the first things the Vice Presidential nominee did when he returned from college was to accept the nomination for State Senator on the Republican ticket, and was beaten by only one vote. He was elected mayor of Utica at the age of 29. He was the youngest municipal head the city had ever had. From that date politics has wooed him away from his profession of law. He was elected to Congress, and has served his constituency with but one excepted term ever since. He is now in his tenth congressional term. There is a "big five" in the lower house of Congress, who do things and largely shape the legislation of the country.

An Adept Parliamentarian.

Mr. Sherman was a particular friend of Thomas Brackett Reed, formerly Speaker of the House, who considered him the best parliamentarian on the floor. He often turned over the gavel to "Sunny Jim," who occupied the chair during some of our most important legislation in recent years. He presided frequently during the famous debate on the Dingley Tariff Bill and on the Cuban War Revenue Bill, each of which occupied many weeks. Mr. Reed appointed him chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs in the 55th Congress, a place he has since filled with distinguished success, and also to membership on the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Mr. Sherman's most important legislative work has perhaps been done on the Indian Affairs Committee. He is credited with a better understanding of the various questions connected with the government's obligations to the Indians and its efforts to fulfill them, than that of any other Congressman who has been called upon to deal with this subject.

Work on Other Committees.

His work on other committees has been equally creditable. One of his bills as a member of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce was the False Branding Bill, which has proved effective in protecting the American cheese manufacturers.

He made the first favorable report to the House on the Nicaragua Canal before the Panama project had developed, and has strongly supported the Isthmian Canal enterprise. He was the father of the Philippine Cable Bill and of the bill for the reorganization of the revenue cutter service. He holds third place in the important Committee on Rules, and has been looked to as one of the best counselors in guiding the business of the House.

Distinguished Service in State.

Mr. Sherman's party services outside the halls of Congress have been distinguished and extensive. He has been the vice-chairman of the Congressional Campaign Committee in several campaigns and the chairman in one; and in those positions has earned much credit for executive ability. He is a convincing campaign orator, and in Congressional and Presidential campaigns has spoken to the people of many states. He presided over the New York Republican State Conventions of 1895, 1900 and in the present year.

Friend of All the People.

He is approachable, genial and democratic. His home people, like his brother Congressmen, call him "Jim," which appellation expresses their appreciation of his personal qualities and their sense of his nearness to them as their true and tried Representative. He is a staunch friend of the Grand Army of the Republic, and has a genuine regard for those veterans of the army who jeopardized their lives to preserve the Union, and is always solicitous for their interests at Washington. No old soldier ever found Mr. Sherman too busy to give attention to him.

Successful Business Man.

At home "Sunny Jim" Sherman is one of the leading business men of his community. He is president of the Utica Trust and Deposit Company,—not an organization in restraint of trade, but to encourage thrift and economy—and vice-president of the Utica City National Bank. He is also president of the New Hartford Canning Company and the Utica Ice Company, two industrial corporations. His political foes declare him to be worth $750,000, but his family says that $200,000 would measure fully all of his earthly possessions.

Is Fond of Clean Sports.

Mr. Sherman is a pretty fair billiardist. He tried some years ago to play baseball, and got up a nine at Whitestown Seminary in his youth, but one of the first things it did after he provided it with uniforms, bats and balls was to get together and vote him off the team. But he makes up for lack of skill on the field by enthusiasm in the grandstand. He is a baseball fan, and it is reported that he attended three games in Chicago before they nominated him, and had arranged to attend another when the convention interfered with his plans.

A Big, Versatile American.

So we have in "Sunny Jim" Sherman, Vice-Presidential Republican nominee, an American among Americans, who can trace his American ancestry back 250 years, one of whom signed the Declaration of Independence, and others have taken some of the leading and most honorable positions in American history, both in peace and war. His versatility is representative of the true resourcefulness of the typical American. He is a lawyer, a scholar, a successful business man and financier at home, a statesman, parliamentarian and valued public servant in Congress, a man of domestic habits and a model husband and father.

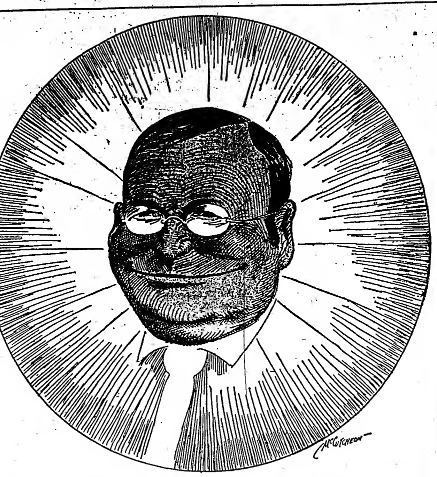
His manliness and human instincts know no race or party. He is a humanitarian and statesman before he is a politician. The people of his home town of Utica turned out en-masse upon his return from the Chicago convention, and irrespective of party, gave him such a reception as comes to few men in life. During the midst of the fanfare the Mayor of Utica remarked. "We have an insane asylum at the top of the hill, and we are thinking of asking the Legislature to enlarge it. The town has gone crazy over Jim's nomination."

Successful in business, efficient and influential in statesmanship, and possessing the confidence of his fellowmen, should the emergency ever arise, James Schoolcraft Sherman could, with confidence, if necessary, take up the responsible duties of chief executive for which as Vice-President he would be next in line, in case of emergency creating a vacancy.

Question of Injunctions.

You ask me what I think of a provision that no restraining order or injunction shall issue except after notice to the defendant and a hearing had. This was the rule under the Federal statutes for many years, but was subsequently abolished. In the class of cases to which you refer I do not see any objection to the re-enactment of that Federal statute. Indeed, I have taken occasion to say in public speeches that the power to issue injunction ex parte has given rise to certain abuses and injustice to the laborers in a peaceable strike.—Hon. Wm. H. Taft, in correspondence with President Llewelyn Lewis, of the Ohio Federation of Labor.

"SUNNY JIM SHINE" AT UTICA



—From the Chicago Tribune.

WHY THE REPUBLICANS SHOULD WIN.

Prize Essay By Frank Hendrick.

I.—The Party of Expansion.

The Republican party was founded upon the principle that this government was established to protect for all times the rights and opportunities of every individual from abridgment. That principle it has successfully maintained. Through the Civil War it consecrated a reunited country to free and equal American citizenship. It has kept the channels of Interstate Commerce open for all and, through the national banking system, the refunding of the national debt, resumption of specie payments, the gold standard and the emergency currency law, has sustained the life current of national integrity.

As trustee of the national wealth, it has investigated mineral regions, surveyed soils, developed waterways, including the Panama Canal, irrigated deserts, conserved watersheds, and husbanded the public lands. Protecting American labor by regulating immigration and by taking at the custom house, to pay American taxes, foreign capital's advantage from low wages, it has preserved to American industries the home market of eighty millions of the world's greatest consumers and so laid the surest basis for American competition in foreign markets. Uniting capital and labor, thus, in a common prosperity and common source of increased reward, it has created opportunities, improved conditions of employment, brought about a higher standard of living, and more widespread distribution of wealth and well-being, and made expansion moral as well as material.

Intrusted with insular possessions, it has brought them peace and progress, and provided for the extension and protection of American trade, for the national defense, and for the honorable discharge of the responsibilities of world greatness. Maintaining peace at home, with foreign nations and among them, it has given American rights and American opportunities new meaning throughout the nation and throughout the world.

II.—The Party of Progress and Prosperity.

Promising progress and prosperity, it has been politically sincere. It has never had a candidate of a section, prejudice, or class, nor a platform of negation, scheme of repudiation, program of scuttle, or doctrine of despair. It has never lent itself to a demand for revolution, to be followed by reaction and retrogression, it has stood firm for evolution by constant, steady and enduring progress. Finding trusts, giant-born, flourishing under supposed conflict of state and national law, the double prohibition of existence serving but to foster their development, it has never, in an attempt to destroy trusts, withdrawn, in state or nation, the protection of law from property, but has, through executive investigation and resort to the courts, resolved the conflict which had silenced law and given trusts existence.

It has never proposed to advance American workingmen and American institutions by banishing American industries and building up those of other lands, and scorned to insult labor with an illusory promise of immunity from law. Yet it passed the pure food law and the employers' liability law, secured equal accommodations on railroads, aided agriculture, created the civil service, established free rural mail delivery, reduced foreign postage, and increased pensions. Continuing naturally marked-out progress, it will keep its pledges of tariff readjustment, currency reform and development of the merchant marine, and make the United States the financial center as it has made it the industrial center of the world.

III.—The Constructive Party—It Organizes the National Will.

In the evolution by which party government has become the extra-constitutional method of securing responsibility to the people, the Republican party has become their traditional representative and the Democratic party the organized aspiration of individuals for power without responsibility. Fairly tried, from 1893 to 1895, the two Democratic houses and the Democratic President were a "wild team" and a helpless driver. Democracy agitates ideal differences, Republicanism organizes the national idea. In 1863 the people were committed to the cause of human liberty; the idea of "Liberty and Union" expanded for the first time into the reality of the American nation.

In 1879 money was committed to a specie basis; specie was at once, until 1893, no longer sought, and government bonds went to a premium at the reduced rate of interest. In 1896 business men were again committed to confidence; before a single statute was enacted prosperity set in and in ten years bank deposits almost trebled—a permanent gain which the recent panic, a "state of mind" now completely dispelled, scarcely touched. In 1906 business was committed to fair methods; without compulsion violations largely ceased.

The Republican party, at each period, sounded the public conscience, felt the national pulse, framed its policies in response, and realized in law the dominant American idea. Its constructive past assures its constructive future. It is to-day as it always has been, "The Party Fit to Govern."

IV.—The Party of Statesmen.

The party of statesmanship, it has been the training school of statesmen. Its policies have been forged in the heat of public discussion, tempered in the deliberation and shaped in the conflict of many trained minds, and drawn and finally wrought for the country's welfare. Dominating its members through principles, it assures unity in government; its staunchest partisans have made the greatest contributions to national progress. The roster of its leaders is the national roll of honor of public service.

Republicanism stands to-day for progressive policies in safe hands. By solving the constructive problems of world power in the last two administrations, William H. Taft taught the world our capacity and us his own. In all constructive legislation for twenty years James S. Sherman has been a leader. In the records of the Republican candidates as well as in the platform are written the story of the nation's progress and the reliance of the future.

A Democratic President or a Democratic house would turn back those pages; thereafter Bryanism would record "Destruction." This the Republican Senate could not prevent. Under Taft and Sherman and a Republican Congress the great progress of the past will be held and the greater progress of the future will be assured.

David B. Hill has pledged his support to Bryan, but he will find it necessary to say something more than "I am a Democrat" this year.—Washington Post.

SECRETARY WILSON CHEERFUL

Head of Agricultural Department on Business and Political Conditions in the West.

James Wilson, secretary of agriculture, who has just returned to Washington from a visit of two months in the West, brings a cheering prosperity bulletin. He declares that the West doesn't know much about the alleged business troubles. Its farmers have magnificent crops growing, and are selling the old crops and are preparing to sell the new ones for high prices. Weather and crop conditions this season have been excellent, and the new crops, the secretary believes, will have a most buoyant effect on financial and commercial conditions all over the country. He confidently looks for a continuation of the improvement in business which has been apparent everywhere for the last few months, and for its forward movement at an accelerated speed.

"Generally speaking," said the secretary, "the information of our department shows that in recent years there has been a considerable increase in the productiveness of the soil. We have investigated this carefully, and there is no doubt that the acre yield of crops is showing a most significant increase. We attribute it to better farming methods, to assimilation of the scientific information about crop rotation, caring for the soil, etc., which the department and the agricultural colleges have placed at the command of the farmers, and to a general effort at intelligent preservation of the elements which enable the soil to do its best work."

Speaking of political conditions, Secretary Wilson said that the drift in the West is all for Taft, and he expressed a strong conviction, based on his inquiries in a number of states, that Mr. Taft will carry all the states that President Roosevelt carried four years ago, so far as the West is concerned. The feeling that Republican rule will bring back general prosperity and assure its continuance is a powerful influence with the voters. Later in the campaign the secretary will go on a speaking tour for the Republican ticket, especially in New England.

A TRIBUTE TO TAFT.

New York's Governor Tells Why He Supports Taft's Candidacy.

(From Gov. Hughes' Youngstown Speech.)

"No one more than I desires to see administration purged of every selfish taint, to have fair and impartial laws faithfully executed, to get rid of every vestige of special privilege at the expense of public interest, to liberate trade from unjust encroachments, to purify our electoral methods and to maintain honest representative government. And it is because of his loyalty to these ideals, because of his broad sympathies, and his rare equipment in character, ability and experience, because tested in the difficult fields of judicial and administrative work, he has proved his quality by eminent service, because of his varied learning, his acquaintance with affairs, his respect for constitutional government and his capacity intelligently and justly to plan and direct necessary reforms that I most earnestly support the candidacy of William Howard Taft."

Whenever the interstate commerce commission deems it important as an aid in fixing rates to determine what it would cost now to rebuild any railroad, it has complete power to do so.—Hon. Wm. H. Taft, at Columbus, Ohio.

FALSE CHARGE OF EXTRAVAGANCE

Scrutinizing with Microscope to Pick Flaws in Republican Record.

Actual Figures Show Increased Expenditures of Government Consistent with Growth of Country.

(From Gov. Hughes' Youngstown Speech.)

Hermetically corked up on the old issues of free silver, imperialism and government ownership of railways, Mr. Bryan is scrutinizing the record of Republican administration during the past twelve years with a microscope to find some peg on which to hang an attack. It would not be altogether surprising if a party which had done so much in this period to advance the glory and economic progress of the country had made a casual error here and there. These twelve years have witnessed the war with Spain, which gave freedom to Cuba and Porto Rico and brought the Philippines under American authority. They have witnessed the emergence of the country from depression and financial uncertainty upon the firm ground of the gold standard, enacted into law by a Republican Congress. They have witnessed the erection of a navy which is carrying our flag with honor around the world. They have witnessed the extension of the strong hand over the railways and the great corporations in behalf of equality of treatment for all citizens. In sum and substance, these twelve years have witnessed for the average man a degree of prosperity and comfort never before equaled under any flag in any country since the world began.

Cortelyou Punctured Charges.

In picking flaws in this record Mr. Bryan has taken upon himself to criticise the appropriations of the last Congress and to make the declaration that "there was a deficit of some $60,000,000 in the last fiscal year." If Mr. Bryan knows what he is talking about, this reference to a deficit is amazingly disingenuous. Secretary Cortelyou punctured this particular Bryan gas-bag effectively soon after the fiscal year closed on June 30. He issued a statement showing that when the proceeds of bonds sold were added to the receipts from taxation and miscellaneous sources, and allowance was made for the reduction of the public debt, there was no deficit, but a surplus. The appearance of a deficit was only arrived at by counting all expenditures for the Panama Canal and other public works and failing to count on the side of the receipts the proceeds of the bonds sold for the construction of the canal. It is the custom in nearly every other civilized government to issue bonds for all public works, but so large have been the receipts of the treasury of the United States that it has been the custom to pay for these permanent investments of capital out of current receipts. It is a bad system of bookkeeping and Secretary Cortelyou has announced that he proposes to correct it. It might have been pardonable for "the man in the street" to be misled by the present form of treasury statement. It is not pardonable on the part of a man who pretends to be a student of public questions. Mr. Bryan must either confess himself a stupid novice in regard to public finance or as deliberately seeking to mislead the people as to the facts.

General Economic Activity.

The tremendous expansion of military and economic activity throughout the world has undoubtedly led to a volume of expenditures which calls for serious consideration. In Germany it became necessary last spring to issue a large loan to cover ordinary expenditures and to consider every possible means of increasing taxation. In France the ministry even pressed through the Chambers the dishonest proposition to tax the coupons of the public debt, thereby taking back from the citizen in taxes what it had promised to pay him in interest when he loaned his capital. In Great Britain changes in the rate of the income tax afforded a ready means of adjusting income to expenditures, but the burden falls heavily first upon the small shopkeeper and is shifted by him largely to the masses whom he supplies with daily necessities. In all these countries substantially all public works of a permanent character, whether great or small, are charged to special accounts and are not permitted to encumber the statement of operating expenses or to add to the weight of taxation on account of their principal.

What Would Bryan Wipe Out?

Secretary Cortelyou has already announced that he is having the system of bookkeeping at the Treasury overhauled and modernized. All administrations in the United States are prevented from applying the pruning knife, resolutely to expenditures, because there is not the complete control of the budget by a single minister which prevails in Europe. Some steps in this direction should undoubtedly be taken, but few voters are likely to be misled as to the relative efficiency and intelligence in taking such steps which would be shown by a Bryan administration on one hand or a Republican administration headed by Mr. Taft on the other.

Insomnia.

Insomnia is the not uncommon fate of the brain worker who after years of continuous mental strain retires from active life. The reason is that mental activity demands a large supply of blood for the brain, and the blood vessels gradually accommodate themselves to this large supply. But when the hard work is over the brain does not always realize that it needs less nourishment; and hence the condition of excessive mental activity which is what insomnia is.—London Mail.

Marlin

THE Marlin Model 1894 is a medium light weight repeating rifle, a well proportioned, finely balanced gun with all the advantages and comforts of the Marlin solid-top, side-ejecting construction. It is quick and easy of operation, accurate up to 300 yards and a very pleasant gun to carry and to shoot.

For settled districts and farming country where the shooting at woodchucks, badgers, foxes, 'coons, hawks, etc., is at ranges from 100 to 200 yards, the .25-20 and .32-20 rifles with the black and low-pressure smokeless loads cannot be equalled for accuracy and safety. The factory ammunition for the Model '94 rifles is cheap, and can be reloaded at very small cost.

The up-to-date sportsman needs the "Marlin Book" every day in the year. It contains 136 pages of live stuff for the man who loves a good gun, and wants to know everything about it. FREE for 3 stamps postage.

Night Sweats & Cough.

E. W. Walton, Condr. S. P. Ry., 717 Van Ness St., San Antonio, Tex., writes: "During the summer and fall of 1902, my annoyance from catarrh reached that stage where it was actual misery and developed alarming symptoms, such as a very deep-seated cough, night sweats, and pains in the head and chest. I experimented with several so-called remedies before I finally decided to take a thorough course of Peruna.

"Two of my friends had gone so far as to inform me that the thing for me to do was to resign my position and seek a higher, more congenial climate. Everyone thought I had consumption and I was not expected to live very long.

"Having procured some Peruna, I decided to give it a thorough test and applied myself assiduously to the task of taking it, as per instructions, in the meantime.

"The effects were soon apparent, all alarming symptoms disappeared and my general health became fully as good as it had ever been in my life.

"I have resorted to the use of Peruna on two or three occasions since that time to cure myself of bad colds."

"Our little girl was two months old when she got a rash on her face and within five days her face and head were all one sore. We used different remedies but it got worse instead of better and we thought she would turn blind and that her ears would fall off. She suffered terribly, and would scratch until the blood came. This went on until she was five months old, then I had her under our family doctor's care, but she continued to grow worse. He said it was eczema. When she was seven months old I started to use the Cuticura Remedies and in two months our baby was a different girl. You could not see a sign of a sore and she was as fair as a new-born baby. She has not had a sign of the eczema since. Mrs. H. F. Budke, LeSueur, Minn., Apr. 15 and May 2, '07."

PLAYERS SUGGEST THAT UMPIRES TRAIN ALSO

Spring Course in the South Might Improve Their Work, Say Some Big Leaguers.

Should the baseball umpires have spring training and go through the same sort of work as a ball player must do to get in shape and condition for the season's campaign? This is the hue and cry that is being heard on all sides, especially in the east. The poor ump has to come in for his annual roasting. Otherwise life would not be worth living for.

In a discussion the other day between several eastern players, the umps were on the pan. According to Mackenzie in the New York Mail such cool-headed players as Cy Young, Willie Keeler, Jim McGuire and Jake Stahl tried to find a reason for the dissatisfaction that has spread among the players over the umpiring.

There have been so many glaring decisions by the umpires that the managers are going to try to have a rule passed making it obligatory for the umpires to go south in the spring, when the teams go there to train. Then the ump could get into condition umpiring the exhibition games and come home ready to start to work in the big league.

Whatever the result of the many kicks against the men who make the decisions, it is up to Ban Johnson to warn his men about their effortless work and to impress on them the importance of getting up on their toes the way they do in the world's fair series, when they know that they are being watched.

To sum it all up, there seems to be a disposition on the part of some of the umpires to make decisions for the purpose of ending the game, a thing which hurts every club and spoils the game.

There is often discussion as to the work of the present-day umpires as compared with that of the men who ran the game ten or fifteen years ago, and the men who were in the game in those days and who still suffer from the work of the present-day arbitrators are inclined to believe that the men of this decade are as good as the old-timers.

There were some very bad umpires then and there are some now, but the number of good umpires is still about the same. Expert opinion numbers the good men at about three in the two leagues, but to listen to the daily kicks one would suppose that there were no good umpires.

ONLY FEW OF OLD TEAM LEFT

Al Orth's release marks the passing of another star who was with the Philadelphia Nationals when the war between the two big leagues broke out.

Nearly all the great bunch of stars who jumped from the Phillies to the American league have now passed out of the big league.

Ed Delehanty was among the first to go. He jumped off a bridge that spans the Niagara river.

Monte Cross is manager of the Kansas City club. Pitcher Bill Duggleby, who jumped the Phillies and then jumped back again, is now with the Rochester Eastern league team.

Bill Bernhard is trying to capture a pennant in the south as manager of a club. Elmer Flick has been ill all season with stomach trouble, and his return to the diamond is a question.

The men who are still in the major league ranks are Lajoie, manager of Cleveland, and as good a player as he was when he was with the Quakers; "Chick" Fraser, with the Chicago Nationals, taking life as easy as usual, and Harry White, with the Chicago Americans. All were star players in 1900, and now only three of them are with big teams. Surely the life of a big league player, even when he is better than the average, is short at best.

COLLEGE MEN NO LONGER RARE IN BIG LEAGUES

Many Boys Who Boast Sheepskins Are Making Good in Major Circuits.

Ten years ago the college ball player was a curiosity in major league circles, but to-day he is a fixture. Up to date big league managers never fail to look over the college stars when scouting for material. Connie Mack only recently signed Berry, the star shortstop of the University of Vermont team, while Cincinnati a few weeks ago picked up Dubec and Siacock, the star twirlers of Notre Dame and Michigan.

Connie Mack has been very fortunate with college players, getting a number of his stars direct, among them being Pitchers Plank and Coombs and Catcher Powers.

It would be possible to form a pretty fast team from the various college players in the American league and what a noise they would make if they gave their various college barks after a victory. Here is a mythical team made up of players who have enjoyed the liberal advantages of a college education:

The catching department would be looked after by Mike Powers of Notre Dame fame, Carrigan of Holy Cross and Spencer of Bucknell. These players are now with Philadelphia, Boston and St. Louis, respectively, and would form a mighty strong trio.

There are plenty of college beavers in Ban B.'s league. White of Chicago was once a star at Georgetown. Plank and Coombs of the Athletics formerly attended Gettysburg and Colby, Falkenberg, with Cleveland, was once the star of the University of Illinois. These are but a few of the many.

The infield would only be fair with Stahl of Boston at first, Chase of New York at second, Nichols of Philadelphia at short and Hertzel of St. Louis at third. Stahl was a former University of Illinois captain, Chase studied at University of California, Nichols at University of Virginia and Hartzel at the Denver School of Mines. Chase has played second base and is very clever at that position.

There would be college outfielders galore to pick from, among them being Gessler of Boston, Birmingham of Cleveland, Hahn of Chicago and Barry of Philadelphia, as well as others.

Hughey Jennings was graduated at Cornell, and, of course, would be the manager.

GOSSIP OF THE DIAMOND

Pittsburg probably will have Barry, Abstein and Frock of the Providence Grays in line in 1909.

To date the New York Highlanders have spent about $30,000 for new material.

Worcester is drawing away in the New England league and it looks like the third consecutive championship.

Arthur Irwin says that the major league team that will win the most games at this season of the year is the one that will have three first-class pitchers and use them regularly in turn.

Jesse Burkett has not decided yet to turn down Hugh Duffy's offer of $2,000 to join the Providence Grays. Maybe he would play a few games for Hughey at $200 a game.

This is surely the bell for Billy Maloney. No outfielder can stay in fast company who hits under .200.

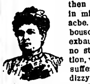
TEN YEARS OF BACKACHE.

Thousands of Women Suffer in the Same Way.



Mrs. Thos. Dunn, 153 Vine St., Columbus, Ohio, says: "For more than ten years I was in misery with backache. The simplest housework completely exhausted me. I had no strength or ambition, was nervous and suffered headache and dizzy spells. After these years of pain I was despairing of ever being cured when Doan's Kidney Pills came to my notice and their use brought quick relief and a permanent cure. I am very grateful."

PLANT TRAMP BY INSTINCT.

California Cactus Blows Around the Desert for Months.

Curious among vegetable growths and one which is seldom seen of men is the rootless cactus of the California desert, says the Technical World. This plant, a round, compact growth, rolls about the level floor of the desert for some eight or nine months of the year, tossed hither and yon by the winds which blow with fierceness over all of California's sand plat during those months.

At the coming of the rains, or rather the cloudbursts, which sweep the desert in its springtime, this cactus takes root wherever it happens to have been dropped by the last wind of which it was the plaything and immediately begins to put out all around it small shoots, which in turn become cacti, exactly like the parent plant.

These young growths increase in size rapidly, sucking the moisture both from the parent plant and from the surrounding earth. The roots do not penetrate the soil deeply, but spread often over a circle whose radius is not less than ten feet. These roots, too, are small, but practically innumerable, and they get every bit of moisture and plant food to be had in the territory they cover.

IN THE OLD MILITIA DAYS.

"Captain, you will appear on the parade ground with your company at ten o'clock for inspection."

"Sorry, colonel, but you'll have to postpone it till to-morrow! I promised my wife that she could use the cannon to-day for a churn!"

A Timely Air.

During one of the political tours of Mr. Cleveland, in which he was accompanied by Secretary Olney, he arrived during a severe storm at a town in which he was to speak. As he entered the carriage with his friends and was driven from the station the rain changed to hail, and immense stones battered and rattled against the vehicle. A brass band, rather demoralized by the storm, stuck bravely to its post and played.

"That is the most realistic music I have ever heard," remarked the president.

"What are they playing?" asked the secretary of state.

"'Hail to the Chief'—with real hail!" rejoined Mr. Cleveland.

"THE PALE GIRL."

Did Not Know Coffee Was the Cause.

In cold weather some people think a cup of hot coffee good to help keep warm. So it is—for a short time but the drug—caffeine—acts on the heart to weaken the circulation and the reaction is to cause more chilliness.

There is a hot wholesome drink which a Dak. girl found after a time, makes the blood warm and the heart strong.

She says:

"Having lived for five years in N. Dak., I have used considerable coffee owing to the cold climate. As a result I had a dull headache regularly, suffered from indigestion, and had no 'life' in me.

"I was known as 'the pale girl,' and people thought I was just weakly. After a time I had heart trouble and became very nervous, never knew what it was to be real well. Took medicine but it never seemed to do any good.

"Since being married my husband and I both have thought coffee was harming us and we would quit, only to begin again, although we felt it was the same as poison to us.

"Then we got some Postum. Well, the effect was really wonderful. My complexion is clear now, headache gone, and I have a great deal of energy I had never known while drinking coffee.

"I haven't been troubled with indigestion since using Postum, am not nervous, and need no medicine. We have a little girl and boy who both love Postum and thrive on it and Grape-Nuts."

"There's a Reason."

Shower of Sulphur.

Charolles, a small town 30 miles from Macon, in France, has recently been visited by a shower of sulphur. The roofs, gardens, fields, vineyards, rivers and ponds were covered with a yellow dust, and for some time the peasants in the fields were troubled by a sulphurous biting odor which made breathing difficult.

Marine Insurance.

Marine insurance is the oldest kind of modern insurance. Its principles were first employed in the fourteenth century by the merchants of Barcelona, in Spain, when that city was the capital of the kingdom of Catalonia and when its hardy mariners were second to none in the world. About the same time, and also at Barcelona, the famous code of maritime laws known as the "consulado del mar" was promulgated, which is the foundation of the present shipping laws of every country.

Killed a Bear.

South St. Paul.—Driven from the Northern woods by the forest fires that are raging on the Mesaba range, a big black bear lost his way and ran into South Park.

The bear was first seen in front of A. D. S. Clark's residence, postmaster at South Park. The animal was running along with his tongue hanging out and seemed completely tired out. He ran down the bluff in front of Clark's house toward the river, where he quenched his thirst.

The crowd of hunters increased and about 8 o'clock the animal was killed by M. Mikkelson of South St. Paul, who came upon the bear on the outskirts of the Park. It took only one well directed shot from Mikkelson's gun to lay the bear out.

Badly Burned.

St. Paul.—Joseph Crevenick, seven years old, living with his parents at 903 Armstrong street, was terribly burned, and if the burns do not prove fatal it will be because of the timely and heroic action of Mrs. A. Sommerhauser. As the boy appeared on the street with his clothing on fire Mrs. Sommerhauser, with no thought but that of trying to save the boy's life, quickly removed her skirt, and winding it around the frantic boy, extinguished the flames.

It is possible, however, that assistance came too late, as the boy was in a critical condition, the clothing had been practically burned from the upper part of his body, and his arms, waist and the back of his head were badly burned.

Must Not Change.

St. Paul.—Insurance companies, after Oct. 1, can no longer force firms to employ a night watchman. The insurance commissioner has ruled that night watchmen riders cannot be attached to fire insurance policies. He has also eliminated the clause requiring the books of a concern to be kept in an iron safe.

Following the advice of the attorney general, the commissioner will also notify the companies doing business in this state, that it is illegal to reduce the amount of insurance in case a vacant dwelling burns. The premium may be increased, or a new policy issued, but the amount of insurance cannot be decreased.

Train Wrecked.

Rochester.—The accommodation passenger and freight train that runs between this city and Zumbrota was wrecked near Pine Island, and with the exception of the engine and one car, the train was completely destroyed by fire. The train was made up of seven cars, two empties, two cars of coal, one car of merchandise, one oil tank and the passenger coach. The train became derailed and the oil tank exploded, sparks from the engine igniting the oil, causing the destruction. There were a number of passengers on the train, but all escaped with being badly shaken. These were placed in the empty box car and taken to Pine Island.

Good Contribution.

Minneapolis.—Minneapolis again demonstrated its willingness to come to the aid of the afflicted and the suffering when 2,300 persons assembled in the Auditorium for the entertainment given for the sufferers in the Iron Range district. A sum of $330.27 was contributed to the relief fund and most of it was received at the conclusion of G. L. Morrill's illustrated lecture in which the sufferings and the miseries of the fire sufferers were vividly portrayed.

State Fair Attendance.

Hamline.—Official figures from the state fair show that the total attendance last week was 326,753, which is greater by 40,125 than the attendance of 1907. Tuesday was the banner day, with admissions numbering 66,922, while Saturday was the smallest, with 34,469. Reports of the sale of tickets show the total receipts from that source to be $162,781, or $32,310 greater than for the 1907 fair. The complete financial statement will not be made for some time.

NEWS NOTES.

St. Paul.—Primary voting in St. Paul and Ramsey county was the smallest ever recorded.

Alberta.—An unknown incendiary shortly after midnight, set fire to and burned four settings of grain belonging to J. M. Buckley and those belonging to P. Kieff of Morris.

Montrose.—Jesse Streeter, aged 35, was struck by a freight engine near Howard Lake, while on his way to work. He was a deaf mute. His death occurred before medical aid arrived.

Duluth.—A settler named Monker and six Indians are believed to have perished in the flames at Grand Marais, according to reports brought back by militiamen, who were aboard the steamer Gopher.

Minneapolis.—Minnesota's halfback and famous drop kicker, George Capron, was elected captain of the 1908 varsity football team. The choice was unanimous at the meeting of the "M" men held at the university armory.

Howard.—The fortieth annual meeting of the Wright County Agricultural society will be held this week. A feature of the fair will be a ball game between the Colored Gophers of St. Paul and a picked team from Wright county.

St. Paul.—William W. Erwin, for many years the ablest criminal lawyer in the northwest, and known throughout the country for his ability as a legal advocate and an orator, died the 13th, at his home in Miami, Fla., where he has been seriously ill for many weeks.

Red Wing.—P. C. Myher of Hartland, Wis., was seriously injured and his wife received a severe shock and bad burns on her hand by a bolt of lightning which struck an umbrella Mrs. Myher was carrying as they were driving home from Ellsworth during a storm.

Brainerd.—Lawrence Barret, a laborer, had a narrow escape from death this morning when a hole which he was digging for sewer pipe caved in. He was soon uncovered and as the rock and dirt left a hole through which air reached him he was not seriously injured.

Crookston.—C. R. Young, of the U. S. navy, who has been sojourning here for two weeks in an endeavor to get recruits, did not succeed in finding a single one and says the young men of this section seem to be too busy and too prosperous to be interested in the naval proposition.

St. Paul.—James J. Hill, still hale and hearty, passed his seventieth birthday the 16th. At three score years and ten he is still able to direct the affairs of the network of transportation facilities which he has fathered since railroads first became known to Minnesota people, something like forty years ago.

Minneapolis.—Ludwig Hanson was arrested by Detectives Lyons and Hayes and locked up at Central station, where he is being held for the state prison warden at Stillwater. Hanson was sentenced to two years for burglary and released on parole, which he broke by leaving the state and going to the Dakota harvest fields.

Minneapolis.—The heaviest inspection of grain was recorded by the Grain Inspection Bureau, the 15th. One thousand eight hundred cars of grain were on track, by far the greatest number for one day in the history of the local bureau. The unusual amount of business is attributed to the high price paid for grain at the present time.

Duluth.—Edward Peterson, state fire marshal, makes the suggestion that the state, county or the mining companies on the range get together and maintain a portable fire department to fight forest and other fires. He would have an automobile fire engine and hose wagon mounted on a gasoline propelled car on a siding of the railway track.

SHIP CRUSHED; THREE DIE

STEAMER COLON BATTERED BY FIERCE HURRICANE.

Panama Craft Plying Between New York and Isthmus Arrives in Port, However.

Colon.—The steamship Colon, half-masted and showing other evidences of distress, came limping into port Friday. She had been badly battered by the hurricane encountered Sunday. Three members of her crew lost their lives while engaged in the hold in repairing a water tank.

The Colon belongs to the Panama Railroad Company. She left New York September 10, and was due to arrive here Thursday. She encountered the hurricane at a point 40 miles north of Watling island. The wind blew 100 miles an hour, and tremendous seas were soon sweeping over the vessel. The staterooms and the dining saloon were flooded, one of her smoke stacks was carried away, three boats were washed overboard, and the wireless telegraph apparatus was dismantled. Orders were given that no passengers be allowed on deck, and the travelers had to spend Sunday and Sunday night in the dining saloon. The water got to the mail bags, and the registered and ordinary mail was badly damaged. Sunday night passed with the ship laboring through the storm and the passengers huddled below in a state of panic. Early Monday it was discovered that salt water was making its way forward into the fresh water tanks. Fearing that the fresh water would give out the second assistant engineer, William Liley, and the ship's carpenter, J. Olson, were sent down into the hold Monday afternoon to change the tank connections.

The two men were below for an hour without giving any signs of returning. Anxious for their safety, R. Barthl, a water tender, and A. Sands, a junior engineer, volunteered to go below and learn what had happened when the disaster occurred.

PEST GRIPS ST. PETERSBURG.

St. Petersburg.—Three hundred and five cases and 115 deaths from the Asiatic cholera were reported for the 24 hours ending at noon Thursday.

The municipal administrations are under fire from all sides for their criminal inefficiency in handling the epidemic and for their failure to make adequate preparation for hospital, ambulance and sanitary services. Although they had ample warning of the coming of the disease, no effective steps were taken to stamp out the scourge; even the elementary precautions of disinfecting and cleaning were neglected. A recurrence of the outbreak in the spring in even greater proportions is considered inevitable.

Six Killed in Explosion.

Sedalia, Mo.—Six persons were killed and 30 injured, four of whom are not expected to live, as the result of an explosion of a car of black powder at Windsor, near here, at 10:15 o'clock Tuesday morning.

The explosion was caused by John Wesley, a negro, who threw a lighted match into a pile of powder which had spilled from a broken keg of the explosive. For his prank Wesley paid the penalty with his life, his body being horribly mutilated.

Rain Checks Forest Fires.

Duluth, Minn.—A heavy rain fell at Grand Marais extending westward from there 15 or 20 miles. While not extinguished, the forest fires were held in check as a result of the storm, and Grand Marais, Chicago Bay, and other north shore settlements that have thus far escaped the flames, are considered safe.

CONGRESSMAN LANING FREE.

Ohioan Acquitted of Charge of Misapplying Funds.

Fremont, O.—The jury in the Laning case returned a verdict of not guilty late Thursday afternoon after considering the case less than an hour all told. Following the return of the verdict there were congratulations on all sides between attorneys, jurors, judge, the defendant and others interested.

Mr. Laning is interested in many business enterprises in Norwalk, his home. He was a director of the Ohio Trust Company, through which his various financial matters were negotiated, and president of the Laning Printing Company, the plant of which was recently burned. This company did much of the state printing.

Together, with J. C. Gibbs, manager of the Ohio Trust Company, the congressman was indicted on the charge of misapplying funds of the latter company and embezzling stock of the Norwalk Savings Bank Company. They also were accused of loaning funds to fictitious real estate companies, owned in part by officers of the bank, it was alleged, and used as a "blind" to cover personal loans.

HARD BLOW AT FORAKER.

Hearst Makes Sensational Statements About Him and Standard Oil.

Columbus, O.—Thomas Hisgen, candidate of the Independence party for president, and William R. Hearst addressed a meeting in Memorial hall Thursday night under the auspices of the local organization of the party. Mr. Hearst read letters which he said had been written by John D. Archbold of the Standard Oil Company, to Senator J. B. Foraker of Ohio, referring to legislation pending in congress and mentioning two inclosures of checks, one for $15,000 and another for $14,500.

Cincinnati.—That he had been an attorney for the Standard Oil Company several years ago, terminating such service before the federal prosecution of that concern, but such employment had nothing to do with matters pending in congress or in which the federal government was interested, is the substance of a brief statement made Friday by Senator Foraker in answer to charges made by William R. Hearst in Columbus Thursday night.

NURSE CARELESS; THREE DEAD.

Serious Case of Poisoning in San Diego County Hospital.

San Diego, Cal.—Three deaths have already resulted from the carelessness of Mary Arthur, a 19-year-old nurse at the county hospital, a fourth death is expected and four other persons are seriously ill. The dead are: J. Young, Charles Kemp and Henry C. Shnette.

All were taken sick Thursday afternoon, and evidence of poison was so great that an investigation was started, ending finally in a confession by Miss Arthur that she had neglected to throw out some water in which there was a quantity of atropine, and that her patients had got hold of it for their medicine. Miss Arthur is in a state of collapse, but is kept under surveillance.

Tabriz May Be Bombarded.

Tabriz, Persia.—A decisive struggle between the sultan and the Nationalists for the control of Tabriz is imminent. Ain Ed Dowleh of the shah's forces has sent an ultimatum to Satar Khan to lay down his arms and surrender the city in 48 hours, threatening otherwise that he would bombard the capital. Satar Khan flatly refused to comply. Foreigners here are in great danger. The Nationalists, thinking that their presence will interfere with the bombardment, refuse to permit them to leave the city.

HURLED TO DEATH

LIEUT. SELFRIDGE KILLED BY FALL OF AEROPLANE.

ORVILLE WRIGHT INJURED

Washington.—After having drawn the attention of the world to his aeroplane flights at Fort Myer and having established new world's records for heavier-than-air flying machines, Orville Wright Thursday met with a tragical mishap while making a two-man flight. The aeroplanist was accompanied by Lieut. Thomas E. Selfridge of the signal corps of the army. Lieut. Selfridge was fatally injured and died at 8:10 o'clock at night. Mr. Wright was seriously injured, but is expected to recover.

While the machine was encircling the drill grounds a propeller blade snapped off and, hitting some other part of the intricate mechanism, caused the machine to overturn in the air and fall to the ground, enveloping the two occupants in the debris.

Wright Not Dangerously Hurt.

After a hurried surgical examination it was announced that Mr. Wright was not dangerously injured. He is suffering from a fracture of his left thigh and several ribs on the left side are broken. Both men received deep cuts about the head. Mr. Wright regained consciousness at the hospital and dictated a cablegram to his brother at Le Mans, France, and requested that the same message be sent to his sister and father at Dayton, O., assuring them that he was all right.

Orville Wright.

Mr. Wright Wednesday replaced the propellers which he had been using with another pair, the blades of which are six inches longer. They were used for the first time in Thursday's disastrous flight, and many who have witnessed Mr. Wright's flights at Fort Myer believe the change of propellers caused the accident. An examination of the broken blade showed that it had been snapped off at a point one-fourth of the distance from the hub. A deep indentation of the broken piece indicated that it had struck some other part of the aeroplane.

Fully 2,000 persons, including many army officers and scientists, were at Fort Myer and witnessed the tragedy.

Selfridge an Enthusiast.

Lieut. Thomas E. Selfridge was one of the most enthusiastic believers in aeronautics among the officers in the military service and through his own efforts succeeded in securing a detail with the aeronautical division of the signal corps. He was born in San Francisco 26 years ago and was appointed to the military academy at West Point from that state. He was appointed a second lieutenant in the artillery corps in 1903 and commissioned a first lieutenant four years later.

Military Funeral for Selfridge.

Lieut. Selfridge's body was removed from the hospital to an undertaker's, where it will remain until the arrival of the young officer's father, who wired from San Francisco that he would like to have his son buried either at Arlington or West Point.

Cause of Disaster Explained.

Speaking for Mr. Wright, Mr. Taylor later said:

"The accident was caused by an extraordinary vibration of one of the wires running from the main planes to the upper steel fitting of the rudder. This vibration was so great that the wire got in range of the propeller and was struck by the blade, cutting a deep gash in the edge of the propeller blade about four inches from the end. This caused the blade to break. The other blade of the propeller flew around and in turn struck the same wire, breaking it. This made Mr. Wright lose control of his rudder entirely, and the loss of both blades of the propeller and the breaking of the wire caused him to lose control of the planes."

The General Demand

of the Well-Informed of the World has always been for a simple, pleasant and efficient liquid laxative remedy of known value; a laxative which physicians could sanction for family use because its component parts are known to them to be wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, acceptable to the system and gentle, yet prompt, in action.

In supplying that demand with its excellent combination of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the California Fig Syrup Co. proceeds along ethical lines and relies on the merits of the laxative for its remarkable success.

That is one of many reasons why Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is given the preference by the Well-Informed. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

LEST HE FORGET.

No Roseate Postcard Without Its Thorn of Suggestion.

Harold's mother—we'll call him Harold—went abroad a month ago, leaving Harold under the somewhat unsubstantial control of his elder sisters.

In spite of the itemized directions with which even unto the moment of final leave-taking she had not ceased to bombard him, Harold's mother was far from sure that her efforts would have any lasting effect.

Her voyage was more or less disturbed by these doubts, but before she landed on the other side she had determined on a course of action. Like all small boys, Harold is most covetous of picture postcards and had looked forward to a harvest from his mother's trip. He got it.

Every day she sent at least one card. And whatever else it bore in the way of inscription, there was not one which failed of this introduction:

Populous China.

The population of the Chinese empire is largely a matter of estimate. There has never been such census of the empire as that which is taken every decade in this country. But the estimate of the Almanach de Gotha for 1900 may be taken as fairly reliable. According to that estimate, the population of the empire is, in round numbers, about 400,000,000. It is probably safe to say that if the human beings on earth were stood up in line every fourth one would be a Chinaman.

AFRAID TO EAT.

Girl Starving on Ill-Selected Food.

"Several years ago I was actually starving," writes a Me. girl, "yet dared not eat for fear of the consequences.

"I had suffered from indigestion from overwork, irregular meals and improper food, until at last my stomach became so weak I could eat scarcely any food without great distress.

"Many kinds of food were tried, all with the same discouraging effects. I steadily lost health and strength until I was but a wreck of my former self.

"Having heard of Grape-Nuts and its great merits, I purchased a package, but with little hope that it would help me—I was so discouraged.

"I found it not only appetizing but that I could eat it as I liked and that it satisfied the craving for food without causing distress, and if I may use the expression, 'It filled the bill.'

"For months Grape-Nuts was my principal article of diet. I felt from the very first that I had found the right way to health and happiness, and my anticipations were fully realized.

"With its continued use I regained my usual health and strength. To-day I am well and can eat anything I like, yet Grape-Nuts food forms a part of my bill of fare." "There's a Reason."

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. [illegible]

Subscription price $1.00 per year in advance. If not paid in advance $1.50

The independent voter will not draw the party line in voting for county officials of Red Lake county this year.

Next Tuesday the proposition to bond the county for the Agricultural school at St. Hilaire is to be voted on. Do not forget the date.

How They Won Out.

The Thief River Falls News, is authority for the fact, that A. R. Jones of St. Hilaire will be a candidate for the republican nomination for sheriff. Mr. Jones may be all right for the position, but we are of the opinion, that so far as The News is concerned it would be a case of "Jones paying the freight," "to railroad" some other candidate into the office.—The Sunbeam, of March 27th, 1908.

We republish the above to let people know that we were aware that Mr Jones was coaxed into the race in the interest of Mr. Nelson, by a certain gang of politicians, that did it to keep another man out that they knew could and would defeat him. Of course they all supported Jones, until it got too late for anyone else to file, then they all turned in and supported Nelson. It does not make any particular difference to us who is sheriff of this county as we can pay our share of special deputy sheriffs taxes but it seems to be a mean trick to play on Mr. Jones, who seems to be a man deserving better treatment, but he was very anxious to run and we hope he got fun and experience enough out of it to repay him for the time and money spent.

However we with other country republicans do not consider that we have had a square deal, as we went up against a "put up" hand, and our opinion is the same after the primries as it was before, and that is that, Mr. Nelson is not a fit man for the position of sheriff of Red Lake County. He is backed by the saloon element, and we suppose he will be elected, but he should not be. It has been said of us "You are a poor man to preach temperance." All right, that is true. But if we went down to the city of Thief River Falls and called at the [illegible] our friends [illegible] found the whole push on a spree we certainly would not step in that place to do business. If you were out for a good time and two trains were standing ready to take you home, and the engineer on the train was drunk and the one on the other train was sober, which train would you take? We intend to treat all parties fairly in this campaign, but we shall publish cold facts and are willing to leave the matter in the hands of the voters.

Political Announcements.

I hereby announce my candidacy for re-election to the office of Register of Deeds. I wish all my friends and neighbors on the "Eleven Towns would inquire in to the manner in which the work has been done in the office during my time of service. If you find my record is worthy of your support I should be much pleased to receive your vote and support for a re election for a second term.

Very Truly Yours,
E. L. Quist.

For Probate Judge,

I am a candidate for re election to the office of Probate Judge, and again ask the voters of Red Lake County for their votes and support. I cannot see every voter personally during the campaign, but wish to thank you for your support in the past, and assure you that if re elected will give to the office all of my time and careful consideration the same as I have always done and see that all business receives prompt and careful attention. I stand firmly on my past record as a public official and ask for the vote and support of every one who believes in honest faithful and efficient [illegible] his constituents. [illegible] Tarrant.

THE ISSUE AND PARTY RECORD.

Will the People Trust Experimentalists and Theorists?

(From Sherman's Speech of Acceptance.)

The overshadowing issue of the campaign really is: Shall the administration of President Roosevelt be approved, shall a party of demonstrated capacity in administrative affairs be continued in power, shall the reins of government be placed in experienced hands, or do the people prefer to trust their destinies to an aggregation of experimental malcontents and theorists, whose only claim to a history is a party name they pilfered?

With a record of four decades of wise legislation; two score years of faithful administration; offering its fulfilled pledges as a guaranty of its promises for the future, the Republican party appeals to the people and, with full confidence in their wisdom and patriotism, awaits the rendition of the November verdict.

[illegible] THAT BRYAN "COULD DO NO HARM."

Congressman Burke Says Office of President Is Infinitely More Powerful Than Congress.

Congressman James Francis Burke, of Pittsburg, in an address on "The Powers of the President," says:

"The American people can make no greater mistake than to elect Mr. Bryan on the assumption that he can do no harm in the face of an adverse Senate. As between the executive and legislative departments of the government, the former has infinitely greater power to rule and ruin than the latter.

"Mr. Taft and Mr. Bryan are wholly different types of men. Each possesses a strong individual character, which would certainly assert itself in the White House. What either of these men would do during a four years' term in the White House is causing as much anxiety among thoughtful Americans as the mere matter of election alone.

"As a disburser of moneys the President is without a rival in the world. Through the agencies under his control he will this year disburse a billion dollars, showing the great things we are doing in adding to the unparalleled list of the world's achievements.

"In view of the fact that during the fifteen years of Bryan leadership the States controlled by his party have decreased from 23 to 12, the number of Senators from 48 to 31, the number of Representatives in Congress from 220 to 164 and in that time the Democratic party was in control of the ground, whereas it is now, as a consequence of his teachings, a hopelessly heterogeneous mass of Populistic elements, the American people can see little prospects of a constructive policy if Mr. Bryan should succeed."

LABOR WORLD FOR TAFT.

Characterizes Him as True Friend of the Workingman.

(From the Concord (N. H.) Monitor.)

The Labor World comes out strongly in its advocacy of Mr. Taft. It characterizes him a true friend of labor and declares that the unfair attacks of Mr. Gompers will have little or no effect in alienating from him the labor world. It says: "That Secretary Taft is a true friend of labor is certain, and all the untrue, dangerous, vicious attacks that President Gompers or any one else may make on him cannot prevent him from continuing to be the friend of the wage worker. Organized labor cannot afford to have itself split up into factions on this political issue. That President Gompers is wrong in forcing this most ominous fight is certain, and intelligent wage workers will certainly come to this conclusion."

Campaign Funds.

"We welcome Mr. Taft to this advanced ground," said Mr. Bryan in one of his numerous interviews since the Denver convention. The ground referred to is Mr. Taft's statement that no campaign contributions would be received from corporations. Mr. Bryan intended to convey the impression that Mr. Taft had come to that determination after the Denver convention. In that the Democratic "peerless one" is not honest. Mr. Taft is a law abiding citizen. Such contributions are unlawful, made so by a law passed by a Republican congress at the instance of a Republican administration of which Judge Taft was a part six months before the Denver convention. Be honest, Mr. Bryan, if you can!

Bryan's Precinct Republican.

At the recent primary election in Nebraska's Lancaster Precinct No. 4, in which is located Fairview, the voting precinct of W. J. Bryan, cast thirty-five Republican votes and twenty-six Democratic. The same precinct last fall cast forty-three Republican votes and thirty-five Democratic, a Democratic loss of slightly more than 1 per cent. When Mr. Bryan lived in town he registered in Precinct A of the Fifth Ward, a polling place which usually could be depended upon to vote about the proportion of three Republicans to one Democrat. At the time he removed to Fairview he remarked jocularly that he was going to a community where the political division was more even, and he hoped in time so to reform Lancaster [illegible]

A Good Opening.

Ian Maclaren was talking to a group of literary beginners in New York. "Begin your stories well," he said emphatically. "There's nothing like a good beginning. Indeed, it's half the battle." Then, with a smile, this excellent beginner of stories added: "Always bear in mind the case of the young man who, desiring to marry, secured a favorable hearing from his sweetheart's irascible father by opening the interview with the words, 'I know a way, sir, whereby you can save money.'"—Good Health.

The Orloff Diamond.

In the Russian scepter is the famous Orloff diamond, which once adorned the head of a Brahman idol. Stolen by a French soldier, it was sold to an Italian merchant for $10,000, resold for $50,000 and purchased by Catherine II. for $450,000. Wilkie Collins turned its history to good account in his novel, "The Moonstone."

TAFT COMES FROM GOOD STOCK.

Family Ranked Among the Plain People for Many Years.

The Tafts—those who at present are the Tafts—hail ancestrally from Uxbridge, Mass. They say that Tafts are so thick in Uxbridge that even a woman can't throw a stone without hitting one.

Some years ago—in 1874, to be exact—there was a Taft reunion in Uxbridge, to which descendants of the original Robert Taft came flocking from all parts of the country. One of the conspicuous features of the affair was a historical address by Alphonso Taft, father of the present Republican candidate. He traced the history of various branches of the family, and when he came to the one to which he and his children belonged he said:

"Our family have not embarked much upon national politics, except that they have shared in the battles of the country when national independence was to be won, and also when the Union was at stake. But brilliant political careers have not been characteristic of the Tafts in the past. It is not safe to say what may be in store for them. There is a tide in the affairs of men and also of families."

This is taken from the account of the reunion published at the time. Alphonso Taft would perhaps have been somewhat dazzled if he could have foreseen how quickly and brilliantly the family would proceed to "embark upon national politics." He himself started the turn of the tide which he predicted. It seems to be reaching its flood in the career of the son who that year was entering Yale.

As Alphonso Taft described his immediate ancestors one sees where his son got certain characteristics. Peter Taft (1715) was "a large, good-looking man of magnanimous disposition." He had four sons.

Aaron, the candidate's ancestor, was also so magnanimous that he lost money by indorsing a friend's notes; he was a man "of great intelligence and integrity." And then, going somewhat further back, there was Captain William Taft, who took Blarney Castle in the sixteenth century "by blarney quite as much as by military prowess." Good stock was Captain William from which to make a twentieth century Secretary of War William.

A Grand Record.

"The Republican party is not only rich in men, but rich in practical and beneficial principles—it is rich too in its record, in promises performed and pledges fulfilled, and so we are for party and party principles first and will acquiesce in the choice of the majority, rallying around the standard bearer who will carry us again to victory.—Hon. James S. Sherman.

Mr. Bryan might make a hit in the Rocky Mountain States by proposing a federal guaranty of mining stock deposits.—Omaha Bee.

Union Labor Vote.

Hon. William H. Buchanan is one of the leading union men of western New York and in 1907 was the Democratic candidate for assemblyman in Chautauqua county. This is what he has to say of the effort of Mr. Gompers to turn the labor vote over to Mr. Bryan:

"I am a union labor man, and I want to say further that no man can carry the labor vote into the Democratic camp. I know how union labor men feel in this city, and three-fourths of them will stand by the Republican party because only in that way have they the assurance of freedom from the business disturbance that Mr. Bryan promises for at least four years if he shall be elected. We workingmen can't earn wages if statesmen are put in office to disturb business and make trouble."

Mr. Bryan criticises Mr. Taft for adding to the Republican platform. In the meantime the number of "paramount issues" which Mr. Bryan subtracted from the Democratic platform would fill several large volumes.—Omaha Bee.

Honors are easy again. Every time Mr. Taft buys a new horse Mr. Bryan mounts a new hobby.—Omaha Bee.

THE VERMONT ELECTION.

Result of Victory Indicates Undiminished Majorities for Republicans in November.

Raymond, the Washington correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, who is regarded as one of the most reliable political writers in the country, regards the result of the Vermont election as presaging absolute victory for Mr. Taft. In a recent special dispatch to the Tribune Raymond said:

"Practically speaking, the result of Tuesday's election is more favorable to the Republicans than they had any right to expect, because there has been no determined campaign for the purpose of making a good showing in Vermont and few of the big guns of the party have been put on the stump there this year.

"There is, of course, a slight falling off in the vote of both Republicans and Democrats, as compared with four years ago, but this was entirely to be expected, because at that time Roosevelt was the nominee of his party for president, and the result in Vermont in that year was merely a forerunner of the tremendous landslide which took place all over the country.

"As it is, the plurality of over 29,000 at yesterday's election is taken to be an indication that, while the campaign this year is not to be a sensational one, the election of Mr. Taft is foreshadowed by a safe majority.

"If Vermont can be taken as an index of the condition of public opinion throughout the country, it means that in the November election, whatever strength the Independence League develops in the other States will come almost exclusively from Bryan and not from Taft.

"The Vermont Democrats, while few in number, are extremely rockribbed in their sentiments. They make a point of going to the polls year after year and carry on a hopeless fight merely because they want to set a good example to the Democrats in other States. In 1896 they repudiated Bryan and the free silver heresy, and they did it largely by staying at home on election day. The result was a plurality of a little over 40,000 for McKinley, which has been a record in Vermont elections. In the State elections of 1900 and 1904 the Democratic vote was practically stationary."

TAFT'S RELIGION.

A Consistent Christian with No Spot Upon His Record of Private Conduct and Public Service.

To dispose of questions which should not be asked as speedily as possible let us say that Mr. Taft is a member of the Unitarian church. That was the church of his parents, and he has never separated himself from it. His wife, however, is an Episcopalian, and he worships more often beside her in her church.

These are the facts, which are utterly and absolutely unimportant. The matter of a man's religion has no rightful place in consideration of his fitness for the presidency. The constitution of the nation, ordained and established "to secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity," expressly places the very suggestion of such thought outside the pale of patriotism.

No words can be clearer than these from our country's fundamental law, "No religious test ever shall be required as a qualification to any office of public trust under the United States."

The numerous queries about Mr. Taft's religious belief shows simply the extent to which his enemies have gone to rouse some prejudice against him. Since there was no spot upon his whole clean record of private conduct and public service, to which they could point to Taft's detriment they displayed their willingness to descend to any depth of petty, cowardly, contemptible attack that might do him [illegible]

Everything has two handles—one by which it may be borne, another by which it cannot. For Sheriff

As to our position in the second round in the campign, for sheriff of Red Lake County, we wish to give Mr. Nelson credit for employing good deputies to work for him, and with all the "push" that he has got behind him drunk, and otherwise, sober, or disfrachised, we wish to say to Mr. Nelson, prepare your "horses" for the second heat. We present the name of J. W. Mc Ginty, of Thief River Falls for the next sheriff of Red Lake county. We do this with confidence, that if you elect him he will be the sheriff, and will not call on the tax payers of Red Lake County to employ sixteen deputy sheriffs to serve a writ of replevin.

Last Chance.

This is the last chance we have to make an appeal to the citizens of Red Lake County to go to the poles on the 29th of September and register their votes in favor of the proposed School of Agriculture and Domestic Economy. There has perhaps never been anything undertaken in Red Lake County that is more consistent with progress and the best interest of the people than this school. It is true that it has met with some opposition, but this is always the case with all good things. Some argue that the increase in taxation will be so great as to make it unbearable. This is a falsehood. The taxation for the erection of this school would not amount to more than $2 80 per quarter section of land. This increase would be for one year only. For the running expenses of the school a special tax of about $0 66 per quarter section of land would have to be levied. Can and progressive man in the county say that this small increase in taxation is going to do him any harm? we are postive not.

Lord Penzance's Acquaintance.

When the late Lord Penzance was plain Mr. Wilde, he once took an early morning stroll round Covent Garden market. There he entered into conversation with an old man of genial aspect who had just made a purchase of a geranium. Mr. Wilde soon found that the stranger was an enthusiastic amateur gardener, and the pair had an interesting chat on horticultural topics as they walked toward Oxford street. Suddenly the fare in a passing hansom cab signaled to the driver to pull up, and within the vehicle Wilde saw his friend, Sergeant Ballantine. Bidding the old man adieu, Wilde entered the cab.

In surprised accents Ballantine exclaimed, "How on earth did you come to know that man?"

"Picked him up just now in Covent Garden market," said his companion.

Annoying the Passengers.

"There used to be in one of the southern states," said a military man, "a railroad that was notorious for its slowness. This line was so slow that the people took to lampooning it in the press. Thus one Memorial day a planter wrote to the Rapier, the leading paper of his district:

"The Editor of the Rapier:

"Dear Sir—Is there no way to put a stop to begging along the line of the railroad? For instance, yesterday an aged veteran with a wooden leg kept pace with the afternoon express all the way from Palot Rock to Nola Chucky and annoyed the passengers exceedingly, going from one open window to another with his importunate solicitations.

Family Secrets.

A father complains that his little six-year-old girl is too talkative. He says: The worst of it is when we have visitors she is continually making mistakes of the worst sort, mistakes that tend to rattle the dry bones of the family skeleton in the cupboard. Recently she allowed her tongue to run away with her, as usual, the result of which was that she very much embarrassed both her father and mother, although the guests seemed delighted.

I had a very serious talk with her and impressed upon her, or tried to, that she must not tell any family secret. The next time we had company she was permitted to come to the table only by promising that she wouldn't utter a word.

She behaved beautifully and had nothing to say until the dessert was about to be taken away. Then her lips began to quiver, and finally she burst into tears.

"Why, what is the matter, darling?" her mother asked.

"I—I want some more ice cream, if that isn't a family secret," she wailed between sobs.—London Telegraph.

THE Marlin Model 1894 is a medium light weight repeating rifle, a well proportioned, finely balanced gun with all the advantages and comforts of the Marlin solid-top, side-ejecting construction. It is quick and easy of operation, accurate up to 300 yards and a very pleasant gun to carry and to shoot.

For settled districts and farming country where the shooting at woodchucks, badgers, foxes, 'coons, hawks, etc., is at ranges from 100 to 200 yards, the .25-20 and .32-20 rifles with the black and low-pressure smokeless loads cannot be excelled for accuracy and safety. Sylvanus O. Verrill, Milford, Me., says: "Five years ago a had injury paralyzed me and affected my kidneys. My back hurt me terribly, and the urine was badly discolored. Doctors said my right kidney was practically dead. They said I could never walk again. I read of Doan's Kidney Pills and began using them. One box made me stronger and freer from pain. I kept on using them and in three months was able to get out on crutches, and the kidneys were acting better. I improved rapidly, discarded the crutches and to the wonder of my friends was soon completely cured."

HELPFUL ADVICE

You won't tell your family doctor the whole story about your private illness — you are too modest. You need not be afraid to tell Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., the things you could not explain to the doctor. Your letter will be held in the strictest confidence. From her vast correspondence with sick women during the past thirty years she may have gained the very knowledge that will help your case. Such letters as the following, from grateful women, establish beyond a doubt the power of to conquer all female diseases.

Mrs. Norman R. Barndt, of Allentown, Pa., writes:

"Ever since I was sixteen years of age I had suffered from an organic derangement and female weakness; in consequence I had dreadful headaches and was extremely nervous. My physician said I must go through an operation to get well. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I took it and wrote you for advice, following your directions carefully, and thanks to you I am to-day a well woman, and I am telling all my friends of my experience."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration.

STARS DRAFTED FROM THE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION

Each of the Eight Clubs to Lose Man—All But Two in Big Leagues Before.

The list of American association players drafted by the two major leagues contains many surprises. That all those drafted possess unusual ability is admitted, but it also is the general opinion that many of the best players were overlooked.

The work of Hayden, the crack Indianapolis fielder, attracted the attention of a larger number of clubs than did the efforts of any other minor leaguer. No less than five teams put in drafts for the doughty Jack. The clubs who wanted him, but were disappointed, are Pittsburg, Boston, St. Louis and Cincinnati. Chicago landed him. His fielding has been the equal of that of any other American association gardener and he has been by far the most valuable batter in the circuit.

Seven other American association stars were drafted, each of the eight clubs losing a man. Stanley, the Louisville outfielder who goes to the Cubs, is a fast player in all departments, who is bound to make the other candidates for jobs work hard to beat him. Bennie Myers, the St. Paul gardener, drafted by the New York Nationals, never would have had a chance to show what he could do this season but for the illness of "Skeeter" Dunleavy. Myers is of the hurricane style of players, always hustling. James, the Columbus catcher, allotted to the Boston Americans, should develop into a star later, but now he hardly appears ripe for a major league team. Possibly if carried along a season or two as second catcher he will later do great things. Barbeau should be able to deliver for the Philadelphia Americans, judging by his American association work, although he was a dismal failure when a member of the Cleveland American league team three years ago. Catcher Bucelow's work at Minneapolis would not indicate that he is good big league material, and the Washington club's draft looks like a case of covering him up. Essick, the Kansas City pitcher, picked off by the Boston Nationals, has shown good form and with a winning team probably would have ranked with the leading American association pitchers. He has an even chance to make good.

Big Cliff Curtis, the former Indian, will get his second trial in the fastest company in the land as a member of the Philadelphia Athletics. He once had a chance at Cleveland, but failed to come up to expectations. He is an in and outer, some of his performances being unusually brilliant, while much of his work has been mediocre.

Of the eight players drafted, all but two have already seen service in one or the other of the big leagues. Hayden was with the Boston Americans, Barbeau at Cleveland, Buelow at Cleveland, Essick at Cincinnati, Curtis at Cleveland and Stanley at Washington. James and Meyers will make their first appearance as real major league players, although the former was the property of the New York Giants last spring.

Big Sum Paid for Players.

According to a statement of Secretary John E. Bruce of the national baseball commission there has passed through his hands this fall for players drafted $47,550; for players purchased outright, $68,500, making a total of $116,050 sent through the national commission for minor league players during the past two months. This amount does not include a number of transactions that were made directly between clubs, the money not being sent through the commission clearing house.

"At a fair estimate," said Secretary Bruce, "I should say that to date there has been spent for players by the 16 big league clubs $150,000 in round numbers. There will be more sales between now and the end of the drafting season, October 15, that probably will swell the sum to $175,000."

Giants Best Base Stealers.

New York has the best record of stolen bases in the two major leagues. The Giants have purloined 138, while the Highlanders have figured 172 thefts.

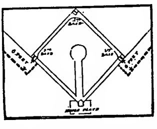
PITTSBURGER HAS PLAN TO CHANGE FOUL STRIKE RULE

Would Not Penalize Batters for Balls Hit Near Foul Lines Back of First and Third Bases.

Claiming that the foul strike rule as interpreted to-day is interfering with good batters of both leagues, George L. Moreland, the baseball statistician of Pittsburg, will appear before the committee on rules of the major leagues the coming winter and submit an amendment to the rule which, if adopted, he thinks will go far toward improving batting.

His idea is to have a line drawn parallel with the foul lines just six feet outside and a drive which lands between these two lines shall not be scored as a strike against the batsman. The second line shall be drawn only from the first and third bases out.

Moreland said in explaining his diagram:



"The foul strike rule was made for the purpose of preventing scientific batsmen from making the game look foolish by fouling off all the good balls. It was never meant to handicap a real hard batter who does his best to hammer the ball out hard, and who often hits what would have been good for three bases had it been a few inches farther in, but the best he gets out of this honesty is a strike called on him.

"My idea now is to begin at third base and draw a line parallel with the foul line, only six feet outside, clear to the fence. Do the same on the first base side of the field, and call every ball which lands inside those two lines neither foul nor strike, but a dead ball.

"This will give such batters as Lajoie, Donlin, Cobb, Leach, Crawford, Wagner, Lumley and Lobert a better chance.

"My idea is that the foul strike rule was made for those who intentionally fouled off balls. There can be no intent to foul if a ball is driven beyond either first or third base before hitting the ground, hence my idea would not interfere with the real intent of the foul strike rule, and would encourage batting."

CLUBS ARE NOT PUNISHED

National Commission Says There Was No Intent to Deceive.

No penalty was imposed on the Cleveland, Akron, Nashville, Columbus, Toledo and Portland clubs for irregularities in transferring players, the national baseball commission in a decision promulgated the other day excusing the offenses because there was no intent to deceive the commission. The decision states:

"Several weeks ago the commission promulgated a notice setting aside certain agreements that had been filed by the Cleveland American league club pertaining to players who had been sold by that club to Akron, Nashville, Columbus, Toledo and Portland, because the transactions were considered irregular and not in accordance with the rules of the commission.

"A further examination of this case clearly shows that there was no intent on the part of either of the clubs involved to deceive the commission or to enter into any collusion to cover up the players. It is evident that the clubs interested believed these agreements would be approved for the reason that a year ago agreements of similar character were permitted to stand because the irregularities therein had not been brought to the attention of the commission.

"For this reason no penalty will be inflicted against any one of the clubs involved in these transactions."

WHEN YOU GET RICH.

Only Then Are You Appreciated for Your True Worth.

"It is pleasant to be rich," he said. "Nobody can deny that. Many of the pleasures of wealth, though, are false and mistaken ones.

"When I was making my living by the composition of blood and thunder tales for boys—and I could turn out my 8,000 words a day—I knew a pale, bent, ink-stained old chap who wrote love stories.

"His stories did not pay; he was very poor; but an aunt died, and suddenly the old fellow found himself a millionaire.

"He saw me one afternoon on Broadway. He stopped his red car and we chatted about old times.

"'And is it pleasant to be rich?' I asked.

"'Yes, it is,' he answered, as he lighted a Vuelto Abajos and handed me another. 'And do you know what is the pleasantest thing about it? You have an opportunity to make real friends; friends who can understand you. You get at last to know people capable of esteeming you for your own qualities alone. You find, sir, that you are at last appreciated.'"

Could Lay Slate-Pencil in One—Hands in Dreadful State—Permanent Cure in Cuticura.

"I had eczema on my hands for about seven years and during that time I had used several so-called remedies, together with physicians' and druggists' prescriptions. The disease was so bad on my hands that I could lay a slate-pencil in one of the cracks and a rule placed across the hand would not touch the pencil. I kept using remedy after remedy, and while some gave partial relief, none relieved as much as did the first box of Cuticura Ointment. I made a purchase of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and my hands were perfectly cured after two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and one cake of Cuticura Soap were used. W. H. VOL. VIII. SUNBEAM, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1908. NO. 27.

GOV. HASKELL RESIGNS AS BRYAN'S TREASURER

Outcome of Charges That He Was Connected with Standard Oil--Foraker, Replying to Like Accusations, Attacks Taft, Roosevelt and Hearst.

Chicago.—Charles N. Haskell, governor of Oklahoma, has resigned the treasurership of the Democratic national committee.

He announced his retirement from active participation in the Bryan campaign and his withdrawal from charge of its money chests at 12 o'clock Friday night, after he had been three hours in Chicago.

The resignation was forced, Haskell's colleagues on the committee as well as Candidate Bryan himself giving the orders after seeing the Oklahoma governor's plight in the avalanche of oil, anti-labor, "promotion," and other charges.

When he had handed out his resignation letter the governor, with flashing eyes, declared:

"All those who have attacked me shall pay for it, from President Roosevelt down. He has by his acts placed himself in the position of a private citizen."

Haskell's Letter of Resignation.

Gov. Haskell's letter of resignation follows:

Hon. Norman E. Mack, Chairman Democratic National Committee, New York City—My Dear Sir: In pursuance of information as to your date for return here, when I went home before, I assumed I would find you here upon my return today. I now learn that you will be detained in the east until Tuesday, and as I must be home on Monday I leave tomorrow.

Since the president and his cabinet have joined forces with Mr. Hearst and three Wall street brokers to make a personal fight against me, notwithstanding the president in his answer to Mr. Bryan abandoned his charge about Ohio Standard Oil cases, yet by all the means at the command of the government and the millions of Hearst and his Wall street allies, they persist in vicious, unwarranted, and untruthful attack on me. Personally, I welcome their attack, and shall meet it with all the vigor at my command. I shall treat them all as private citizens and subject to the penalties of the law which they merit.

In this I know I shall have the aid of my neighbors at home for all proper purposes, but my time must be free from other demands here. Again, my heart is full of hope for the election of Bryan and Kern. Honest government and rule by the people is at stake.

Important beyond any battle at the polls in the last generation is the pending contest.

I would not for one moment consider remaining in any way connected with the committee, therefore hereby tender my resignation as treasurer of the Democratic national committee, that not the slightest contest of my own could in any way be used by the president to cloud the sky and shield our opponents from discussing the real issues and laying bare the Republican duplicity to the people.

Sincerely yours,
CHARLES N. HASKELL.

"President a Four-Flusher."—Haskell.

Kansas City, Mo.—"President Roosevelt is the biggest four-flusher in the political business today. You ought to hear what they think of the rascal down in Oklahoma."

These were the closing words of an interview given out here by Gov. Haskell of Oklahoma, as he stepped aboard a train on his way to Chicago. The governor's talk was called out by the charges made against him by President Roosevelt and William R. Hearst.

Statement by Monnett.

Columbus, O.—"If I charged Gov. Charles N. Haskell wrongfully, it was because Charles B. Squire gave me his name," said Frank S. Monnett, former attorney general of Ohio. Mr. Monnett declared, however, that he could not exonerate Gov. Haskell from the charges that had been made that he was a party to the $500,000 bribe fund of the Standard Oil Company, nor could he condemn him.

"All that I have against Gov. Haskell," he said, "is hearsay evidence, and I have suggested that if the case were presented to a grand jury it would be shown whether Gov. Haskell has been wrongfully accused."

The letter concludes with the statement that the Democratic party is making "an honest and honorable" fight in defense of its principles and policies, and expects and will demand honorable treatment from those who are in charge of the Republican campaign."

Bryan Reproves President.

Detroit, Mich.—The remarkable spectacle of a presidential candidate rebuking the chief executive of the nation for making statements deemed to be unjustified, was witnessed here when William J. Bryan in a letter to President Roosevelt defended Gov. Haskell of Oklahoma, treasurer of the Democratic national committee, against the charge that he had unlawful connections with the Standard Oil Company. Mr. Bryan serves notice on the president that as the candidate of the Democratic party "I shall not permit any responsible member of the Republican organization to misrepresent the Democratic party in the present campaign."

Washington.—President Roosevelt, following upon a prolonged conference with members of the cabinet at the White House, prepared and gave out his reply to William J. Bryan, the Democratic candidate, relative to W. R. Hearst's charges that Gov. Haskell, treasurer of the Democratic campaign committee, had represented Standard Oil interests both in Ohio and Oklahoma.

Mr. Bryan had demanded proof of the charges, promising that in the event of their substantiation Gov. Haskell would be eliminated from the campaign.

Dismissing the Ohio case, which involved an allegation of attempted bribery, with the explanation that he had made no direct charge against Gov. Haskell as regards that particular instance, President Roosevelt takes up the matter of the Prairie State Oil & Gas Company, and argues that Gov. Haskell's action in stopping legal proceedings begun by the attorney general of Oklahoma demonstrates conclusively that he was controlled by the great corporation to which the Oklahoma company was subsidiary.

Declares Haskell Unworthy.

After contrasting Mr. Bryan's defense of Gov. Haskell with Judge Taft's repudiation of Foraker in connection with the Hearst charges against the Ohio senator, the president proceeds to declare that Gov. Haskell's "utter unfitness for association with any man anxious to appeal to the American people on a moral issue, has been abundantly shown by other acts of his as governor of Oklahoma."

The president condemns Gov. Haskell's conduct in connection with various matters as disgraceful and scandalous, and calls special attention to what he describes as "prostituting to base purposes the state university."

Haskell Makes Reply.

Guthrie, Okla.—Gov. C. N. Haskell issued a statement in reply to President Roosevelt's letter to William J. Bryan, dealing with four specific charges against Mr. Haskell, namely, that he is subservient to Standard Oil, that he vetoed a child labor bill; that he dealt extensively in Creek Indian lands, and that he had allowed politics to dominate him in the removal of members of the faculty of the state university and the appointment of others to succeed him.

Gov. Haskell took up the four charges as dwelt upon by President Roosevelt in turn, dealing with each in a characteristic manner.

Foraker's Hot Reply.

Cincinnati.—Senator Foraker prepared a statement which was made public Friday, replying to the recent charges made by William R. Hearst and President Roosevelt. In addition he bitterly assails Hearst, Taft and the president, charging Taft with consorting with Standard Oil magnates himself and declaring that President Roosevelt's actions indicate a guilty conscience. In the opening paragraph Mr. Foraker declared that the president showed bias in accepting as true all the charges. He denied that he acted improperly in accepting employment from the Standard Oil Company, said that there was no secret about it and produced letters to prove that after the government began its attack upon the Standard Oil, he declined to accept a retainer from them. He charged that Mr. Hearst had other letters in addition to those which he gave out, and that these other letters, if made public at the same time, would have shown how harmless was his connection with the Standard people.

Hearst Hits Foraker.

Columbus, O.—Senator J. B. Foraker of Ohio was openly charged here by W. R. Hearst with being an agent of the Standard Oil Company. Mr. Hearst said that after the oil octopus had been driven from the Republican party by President Roosevelt the Democratic party had welcomed the Standard with open arms and adopted it.

Mr. Hearst read a series of letters from John D. Archbold, the Standard Oil man, to Senator Foraker. In these communications Archbold gave instructions to the senator in regard to what should be done in pending legislative matters, particularly as to bills effecting corporations, and in two of the letters referred to inclosures of certificates of deposit, one for $15,000 and another for $14,500.

Mr. Hearst also read affidavits from Monnett, connecting the name of Gov. Haskell of Oklahoma with the alleged effort to bribe him by Standard Oil men to drop his proceedings against the company.

Further Charges by Hearst.

St. Louis.—William Randolph Hearst went after Senator J. B. Foraker here stronger than in his Columbus speech.

Mr. Hearst first read a letter in which it was said that a certificate of deposit for $50,000 was inclosed. The letter purported to have been sent to Mr. Foraker and to have been signed by John D. Archbold.

Following this, Mr. Hearst read another letter said to have been signed by Mr. Archbold, in which the Standard Oil man suggested to Mr. Foraker action regarding a bill introduced in the United States senate by the late Senator Jones of Arkansas.

26 Broadway, New York, Jan. 27, 1902.—Dear Senator: Responding to your favor of the 25th, it gives me pleasure to hand you herewith certificate of deposit for $50,000 in accordance with our understanding. Your letter states the conditions correctly and I trust the transaction will be successfully consummated.

J. D. ARCHBOLD.

J. B. Foraker, Washington, D. C.

Letter Regarding Legislation.

The second letter as read by Mr. Hearst was as follows:

26 Broadway, New York, Feb. 25, 1902.—My Dear Senator: I venture to write you a word re the bill introduced by Senator Jones of Arkansas, known as S649, intended to amend the act "to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies, etc.," introduced by him December 4.

It really seems as if this bill is unnecessarily severe and even vicious. Is it not much better to test the application of the Sherman act before resorting to a measure of this kind? I hope you will feel so about it and I will be greatly pleased to have a word from you on the subject. The bill is, I believe, still in committee.

J. D. ARCHBOLD.

J. B. Foraker, Washington, D. C.

At Columbus Mr. Hearst read letters showing that Mr. Foraker received checks from John D. Archbold for about $30,000. Mr. Foraker said he got the money, that he had worked for the Standard Oil Company, but that his labors were not in the nature of influencing legislation.

Comes Back Again at Haskell.

Not only did Mr. Hearst reply to Senator Foraker, but he devoted a portion of his speech to Gov. C. N. Haskell of Oklahoma, treasurer of the Democratic national committee, whom he again charged with having served the Standard Oil Company.

To the defense of Mr. Haskell that another man of the same surname was involved, Mr. Hearst replied with affidavits alleged to have been made by former Attorney General Monnett of Ohio and Assistant Attorney General Bennett of that state, in which the name C. N. Haskell distinctly appears.

Foraker Not Attorney of Record.

Columbus, O.—United States Senator J. B. Foraker was not an attorney of record in any of the Standard Oil cases tried in the Ohio courts, according to the Associated Press, which conducted an investigation.

The first cases were filed in the attorney general's office in 1882 and were carried along through various courts for more than 20 years. According to the records in the attorney general's office, the attorneys of record in 1899 and 1900, the dates of the cases against the Standard and its subsidiary companies, the attorneys who took part in the legal battles were M. R. Keith, S. C. T. Dodd and Joseph H. Choate of New York and Virgil P. Kline of Cleveland, O. In a number of the earlier cases only Keith and Kline were the attorneys of record, but later on, when the fight became the thickest Choate and Dodd entered the case and their services were given to the company until after the case was carried to the highest courts.

Gen. DuPont Resigns.

New York.—Following many rumors on the subject which were afloat here and in Washington, Chairman Hitchcock of the Republican national committee Friday night announced that Gen. T. Coleman DuPont of Delaware, head of the bureau of campaign speakers of the national committee, had resigned as head of that bureau and also as a member of the executive committee of the national committee and that his resignation had been accepted.

Mr. DuPont's letter of resignation is as follows:

Hon. Frank H. Hitchcock, Chairman Republican National Committee, New York City.—My Dear Mr. Hitchcock: Recently I have noticed various criticisms of my being the director of the speakers' bureau and a member of the executive committee, on account of my relation to the E. I. DuPont de Nemours Powder Company, which is being sued by the government. The merits of that suit will be determined in the due course of judicial procedure. I have always been a loyal supporter of the Republican party, both in state and nation, and I am not willing to be in any wise the means of bringing criticism upon the party organization, however unfounded I may deem such criticism to be. I therefore respectfully tender my resignation as a member of the executive committee and as director of the speakers bureau, fully appreciating the great courtesy which I have uniformly received at the hands of yourself and my other associates. Yours very truly,

T. C. DUPONT.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

Warning.

St. Paul.—State Fire Marshal Edward Peterson issues a bulletin to the people of Minnesota warning that all neglect of burning brush or grass or any other fire started by persons within the state will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. The bulletin applies generally to the entire state, but particularly to those cities and settlements surrounded by forests. The bulletin reads:

A large number of fires are reported at this time of the year as being caused by carelessness in burning grass and brush.

Besides the great danger to the forest regions from this source every city and village is seriously threatened by such fires within its limits.

This class of fires are as a rule set by children who recklessly play with this element of destruction. Children should be taught early the danger in playing with fire. If warnings are not heeded they should be dealt with to the full extent of the law. Every violation of the law in this respect should be followed with arrest and punishment. And police officers, constables, wardens and fire chiefs should show no leniency with this class of offenders.

Requests for investigations of fires sent to this department will have prompt attention.

Fought Insane Man.

Minneapolis.—Dr. I. W. Rigs of Aurora, S. D., caused a panic in the Ryan hotel by running through the corridors with a razor in one hand and a water pitcher in the other, while blood oozed from a wound on the right side of his neck. Employes of the hotel were called by the frightened guests, but the frenzied physician held the colored porters at bay by threatening them with the razor.

The police were notified and Officers Cesscrley, McGuire and Morse were dispatched to the hotel by Sergeant Mattacks. The presence of the armed policemen seemed to enrage the man, and whenever they made an attempt to seize him he would place the razor to his neck and then make a lunge at the officers.

Finally, after the policemen had watched the man closely, he glaring wildly at them, Officer Casserly hit on an idea that won victory for the policemen.

Casserley seized a chair, and when Rigs lowered the razor from his head Casserley thrust the chair into the doctor's face and backed him into a corner. As quick as a flash the other officers jumped on the insane man.

Normal Schools.

St. Cloud.—County normal schools for those counties large enough to support them is the solution offered to the present crowded condition of the state normal schools by J. W. Olsen, state superintendent. The St. Cloud normal school is overcrowded and the others are nearly filled to their capacity. But not all of the teachers of the state are normal graduates and many cannot attend because of the distance from the school.

Supt. Olsen's suggestion is to take a portion of the school to the vicinity of the pupils by having a school in the county, where a limited course may be offered, sufficient to raise the standard of instruction. He suggests that this course be given in the same school as may be established for the county agricultural schools authorized by the last legislature.

Convicted.

Gen. C. C. Andrews, state forestry commissioner, received word from C. J. Dodge, county attorney of Carlton county, of the conviction of Jack Tischart at Carlton on a charge of negligence in setting a forest fire that endangered the village of Wrenshall. Tischart was sentenced to pay a fine of $50. In default of payment he was committed to the county jail.

Tischart was employed by the contractor building the new line of the Soo road which is headed for Duluth. He was at work clearing up the right-of-way and started the fire to burn up some of the slashings and debris which had accumulated on the right-of-way. The fire got beyond his control and started a conflagration which, for a while, threatened to wipe out Wrenshall.

St. Paul.—Pleasure seekers who have danced gaily on the barge Twin Cities, tow of the steamer Purchase, on Mississippi river excursions, have had little suspicion that danger was close to them as they made merry. The license of the barge was revoked yesterday by the state inspectors, and unless the craft is completely overhauled it will never be used on the river again.

Duluth.—"When next I see Speaker Cannon," said Congressman Bede today, "I shall have to demand that he reimburse the filing fee that I paid to run for renomination to congress in this district. I paid the filing fee and he ran. That was not fair and I shall have to tell him so. Besides, he had no right to try and run for congress outside of his own state. It is unconstitutional."

HORRIBLE COLLISION OCCURS ON NORTHERN PACIFIC.

SMOKING CAR TELESCOPED

Between Thirty and Forty Passengers Killed and Injured—Bodies of the Victims Shockingly Mangled.

Butte, Mont. — Nineteen persons were killed, 11 seriously injured, several fatally, and about 30 more or less hurt in a collision between passenger train No. 16, known as the east-bound Burlington flyer, and a west-bound freight train at 8:10 o'clock Friday morning at a siding known as Young's Point, about 30 miles west of Billings, on the Northern Pacific railroad.

The passenger, running about 50 miles an hour, crashed into the freight just entering on the siding during a blinding snowstorm, the engineer of the passenger failing to see the signal flag of the brakeman of the freight train in time to avert the collision.

Smoker Is Telescoped.

The express car telescoped with the smoker and a majority of the fatalities and injuries were in this car. The express car was raised over the platform of the smoker, the superstructure sweeping the seats and not a passenger in this car escaped death or injury. The other passengers escaped with cuts and bruises.

On the train was the Spokane delegation to the National Irrigation congress at Albuquerque. None of these was injured.

Fireman Ora Babcock jumped and was killed, striking on his head. Milo Halloway, a brakeman of the Billings train, was killed. The scenes around the smoker were horrible, heads, bodies, legs and arms being interwoven with broken seats and equipment. In one place seven bodies were so tightly wedged together that they were only separated with difficulty. It was almost impossible to succor the injured without trampling on the dead.

ABE RAYMER IS ACQUITTED.

Verdict of Not Guilty in First Springfield Riot Case.

Springfield, Ill.—The case of Abe Raymer was given to the jury at 5:40 p. m. Wednesday and court took a recess. At nine o'clock the jury returned a verdict of not guilty. Raymer was as white as a sheet when the jury filed into court. As soon as the verdict was announced, he grasped the hand of each juror and made a speech thanking them.

As this is the first of the riot cases, involving a total of 117 indictments returned by the grand jury, it is considered quite significant. It was proved that Raymer was a member of the mob and the court held that any member of the mob was guilty in the eyes of the law, but the jury acted on the lack of evidence to prove that Raymer actually had a hand in the lynching.

That record of Jakes in the legislature seems to be to solid for Governor Johnson to tare down.

Polk County republicans are lined up for the ticket pretty solid but they have only a slight county division scrap on tap, while we up this way are into the real thing of county seat removal.

"Esau sold his heritage for a mess of pottage," says the Red Lake Falls Gazette and they might have added that Governor Johnson sold his to try to continue to feed his sucking calves at the public crib.

Thief River Falls turned down the St Hilaire proposition for the Agricultural School pretty hard but you know the Falls only have two ideas and they are County seat removal and county officers, but they had better have a care that the mouse does not crawl in to the elephant's ear.

Our socialis friends seems to be attacting the republicans strongest candidate for reelection in the person of O. T. Tanberg county treasurer. There was no filing for this office by the democratic party as there was no one that wanted to run to try to oust Mr. Tunberg out of a second term.

The primary election law appears to be all right, but the politicians seems to have better control of the nomination than they did under the old convention system. Their latest scheme is to first choose their candidate then pick out his opponent, and of course they know who to gamble on for the winner.

Governor Johnson certainly did not gain no votes for himself in his keynote speech by slyly knifeing W. J. Bryan. The trouble with Mr Johnson is he wants the republican votes he got two years ago and is trying to please the party to get them, but he will lose more democratic votes than he will gain republican by trying to knife their national leader. The democratic voters are liable to be as independent as the republicans this year and might not take kindly to the move of Mr Johnson to try to unhorse Bryan to ride into office himself

The Fosston Thirteen Towns is of the opinion that the city of Crookston is so disgusted with the opposition to their plans by the solid vote of the Thirteen Towns that they, Crookston will vote for county division in November. Vain hope. Don't you ever think it Mr Foss. Crookstons intentions are good but they will forget on election day and put their X in the wrong place, for while they are pretty solid voters in the east end they are also good tax payers, and a pretty good lot of fellows, and the Crookston people, after considering the matter will vote pretty solid for them to continue to do business at the old stand.

Political Announcements.

I wish to announce to the voters of Red Lake county that I am a candidate for re-election to the office of county treasurer. If elected I shall give the office the same careful attention that I have in the past. Your vote and support is respectfully solicited.—O. T. Tandberg.

I hereby announce my candidacy for re-election to the office of Register of Deeds. I wish all my friends and neighbars on the "Eleven Towns would inquire in to the manner in which the work has been done in the office during my time of service If you find my record is worthy of your support I should be much pleased to receive your vote and support for a re election for a second term.

Very Truly Yours.

E. L. Quist.

For Probate Judge,

I am a candidate for re-election to the office of Probate Judge, and again ask the voters of Red Lake County for their votes and support. I cannot see every voter personally during the campaign, but wish to thank you for your support in the past and assure you that if re elected will give to the office all of my time and careful consideration the same as I have always done and see that all business receives prompt and careful attention. I stand firmly on my past record as a public official and ask for the vote and support of every man who believes in honest [illegible] and efficient service [illegible] ment. N. [illegible]

BRYAN'S POLICIES DESTRUCTIVE.

Mr. Taft Compares Republican and Democratic Platforms.

(From Mr. Taft's Speech of Acceptance.)

The chief difference between the Republican and the Democratic platforms is the difference which has heretofore been seen between the policies of Mr Roosevelt and those which have been advocated by the Democratic candidate, Mr. Bryan. Mr. Roosevelt's policies have been progressive and regulative; Mr. Bryan's destructive. Mr. Roosevelt has favored regulation of the business in which evils have grown up so as to stamp out the evils and permit the business to continue. The tendency of Mr. Bryan's proposals has generally been destructive of the business with respect to which he is demanding reform. Mr. Roosevelt would compel the trusts to conduct their business in a lawful manner and secure the benefits of their operation and the maintenance of the prosperity of the country of which they are an important part, while Mr. Bryan would extirpate and destroy the entire business in order to stamp out the evils which they have practiced.

Just [illegible]

"I am delighted," said the old friend who had called, "to find that you agree with your husband in everything, Mrs. Henpeck."

"Indeed!" answered that estimable lady. "If you will take the pains to investigate our domestic relations, sir, you will find that it is Mr. Henpeck who agrees with me in everything."

His Size.

"Sam, what would you do if you had a million dollars?"

"Fo' de Lawd's sake! I'm sho' I dunno wot I'd do ef I had a million dollahs, but I know wot I'd do ef I had $2. I've bin waitin' two yeahs to git married."—Judge.

The Small Mouthed Bass.

The small mouthed bass fully deserves his reputation for being vigorous and gamy from infancy. He is extremely pugnacious by nature and has fighting tactics peculiarly his own which for strength, activity and craft are unequaled. I once took a bass four inches long on a spoon hook, the bowl of which was more than two inches long. This bass does not hesitate to tackle that terror of all other fish—the fierce and voracious pickerel. With his first dorsal fin rigidly set up, he lays off some ten or twenty feet and then makes a rapid dash right into and under the "long face," forcing him to clear out at once or ripping him so badly that he is hors de combat. The fact has been established that bass introduced into a pond containing pickerel will ultimately destroy the latter The same fate awaits other fish, including trout.—Outing.

A Striking Misapprehension.

Officer—Excuse me, madam; there goes eight bells. It's my watch on deck. Mrs. Lansman—Well, I don't blame you for keeping your watch on deck if it strikes as loudly as that.—Harper's Weekly.

BOUTELL ON BRYAN.

Is His "Shall the People Rule?" Simply "a Local Issue?"

Congressman Henry Sherman Boutell of Chicago, commenting on Mr. Bryan's speech in Iowa, says:

Mr. Bryan's question, "Shall the people rule?" implies that somewhere in this country the people do not rule. The only States where the people do not rule are the States that are expected to give overwhelming majorities for the Democratic ticket. Perhaps Mr. Bryan thinks that his question is purely "a local issue." If he is sincere, I challenge him to make a speech in Vicksburg, Miss., on "Government by the People." Let him repeat one of his famous anti-imperialist speeches, simply changing three words, substituting "Mississippi" for "Philippines" and "black brothers" for "brown brothers." Let him suggest that we have as chairman of his meeting John Sharp Williams, leader of the Democrats in Congress, and as vice-chairmen the other members of the Congressional delegation from Mississippi.

And after he has made his speech in Vicksburg, if he shall have escaped the rule of the people in that community, I dare Mr. Bryan to repeat his oration on popular government in Charleston, S. C., with Senator Tillman as chairman of his meeting. Mr. Bryan's sentiments have a purely geographical sincerity. His epigrams and startling conundrums are especially designed to meet local demands. Of this nature are all his views on tariff and taxation.

Mr. Bryan's proposition that every time a trust is formed a tariff schedule should be repealed, and every time a trust is dissolved a new duty should be added, is too funny even for comic opera.

If on March 4 next Mr. Bryan should become President, with a Democratic Congress in both houses, and should actually place upon the statute books the financial and economic vagaries delivered by him in his speech of last Friday, it would plunge the nation into bankruptcy and bring on industrial chaos. If he should begin by repealing the duty on sugar to punish the sugar trust, he would upset the national finances by losing $60,000,000 a year in revenues, and would stir up a revolution in Louisiana, Utah, Colorado and Michigan. Then, if he should repeal the duty on cotton goods, because some hustling manufacturers of New England or the Carolinas were dumping goods in China in rivalry with England and Germany, he would divert other millions from the treasury and invite still further industrial ruin.

But, of course, Mr. Bryan would do none of these things, any more than he will invade the solid South and summon the cohorts of Democracy to the defence of the Constitution with the battle cry "Shall the People Rule?" Mr. Bryan simply does not mean what he says. What he utters with Chadbandian unction in the North he repudiates with Pecksniffian duplicity in the South.

Can't Disaffect the Farmers.

The failure of Bryan's desperate attempts to curry favor with the farmers is illustrated by the manner in which he was received at Crookston, Minn. According to Congressman Halvor Steenerson the event went off as follows:

"Bryan's speech at Crookston was a great disappointment. He actually lost ground there for Democracy. Thousands of people were there to hear him, and waited till ten o'clock in the evening before he appeared. The address was a narrow appeal to farmers, a harangue, trying to prejudice them against Republicanism. It didn't take at all. Only once was there the slightest symptom of applause. He spoke to a silent, disappointed audience."

Campaign of Education.

In the great battle of 1896 the Republican party again stood for the maintenance of the integrity of the nation. The fight was against odds produced by a great industrial depression, and against the most sophistical arguments. The Republican party maintained a campaign of education among the wage-earners and the farmers, which ultimately led to the complete defeat of this second financial heresy which has threatened the integrity of our business structure.—Hon. Wm. H. Taft, at Kansas City, Mo.

Business Men Honest.

The business men of our community as a whole are honest and their methods are sound. The President has never said otherwise. Indeed, it is chiefly in the interest of the great body of honest business men that he has made his fight for lawful business methods.—Hon. Wm. H. Taft, to Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, Boston, Mass.

Gratitude to McKinley.

The highest claim of William McKinley for the gratitude of his countrymen is that, in spite of the abuse and contumely that was heaped upon his head for this policy, he placed our country in the forefront of nations as a civilizer and uplifter of unfortunate peoples.—Hon. POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS

Machinery of Congress Already Started for Postal Savings Bank Law.

A Safe and Sane Plan for the Convenience of the People and the Encouragement of Thrift.

"We favor the establishment of a postal savings bank system for the convenience of the people and the encouragement of thrift."

This is the declaration of the Republican national platform, and postal savings banks will without doubt be authorized by law and established as a part of our financial system by the action of Congress at its coming session, which will be convened in December. Indeed, much has already been accomplished towards the enactment of this law. At the last session of Congress a bill was carefully prepared which met with the approval of the Postmaster General, and was reported upon favorably by the Senate Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads. This bill is now on the Senate calendar and can be acted upon as soon as Congress is convened.

The scope of the proposed law is set forth in the committee report, which is in part as follows:

Committee Report.

The purpose of this bill is to place at the disposal of people of small means the machinery of the Postoffice Department to aid and encourage them to save their earnings. The subject of postal savings banks or depositories is not new in this country and it may be truly said to be quite familiar to the people of Europe and the British colonies. The propriety of establishing postal savings banks became the subject of discussion in England as early as 1807. Every objection to such use of the postoffice facilities urged in this country was vigorously pressed in the long-continued discussion of the subject in England.

For over fifty years private savings institutions waged bitter opposition to the growing sentiment in favor of postal savings banks, but notwithstanding much opposition in 1861 an act of Parliament was passed entitled "An act to grant additional facilities for depositing small savings with the security of the government for the due repayment thereof." That the alarm of private institutions was ill founded is amply proven by the recorded fact that the private savings banks increased their capital by more than ten millions of dollars in the first fifteen years following the establishment of postal savings institutions.

That the postal savings institutions proved successful is satisfactorily attested by the fact that no backward step has ever been taken in England on this subject and by the further fact that in rapid succession the lead of England was taken by other countries.

The primary purpose of these institutions is to encourage thrift and a saving disposition among the people of small means by placing at their disposal in every part of the country ready facilities for the depositing of small sums, with absolute assurance of repayment on demand with a low rate of interest on a limited aggregate amount.

Postal Savings Banks Needed.

In certain parts of our country savings institutions are sufficiently numerous to accommodate the people, but such areas are quite limited, being confined to New England and New York. It is alleged that by reason of the number and location of savings banks there is one savings account to every two of the population of New England, whereas in all the country outside New England and New York the average is only one savings account to every 101 of the population. Taking such figures to be approximately correct and recognizing the fact that the people of all sections of this country are pretty much the same in habits, inclinations and purposes, it must be obvious to the most casual observer that the people of the South, the Middle West, and the West do not save their earnings as do those of New England from the mere want of secure places in which deposits may be made.

To those who feel inclined to believe that the establishment of postal savings depositories will involve an element of paternalism it seems quite sufficient to suggest that the machinery of the Postoffice Department is now in existence and will continue to exist without diminution of expense whether such depositories are created or not, and that the establishment of these depositories for the benefit of the people will not involve one farthing of loss to the Post-Office Department, but will probably, on the contrary, prove more than self-sustaining. Very slight computation will clearly demonstrate that the postal savings depositors can not burden the Post-Office Department with any additional deficiency.

Favors Publicity Law.

If I am elected President, I shall urge upon Congress, with every hope of success, that a law be passed requiring a filing in a Federal office of a statement of the contributions received by committees and candidates in elections for members of Congress and in such other elections as are constitutionally within the control of Congress.—Hon. Wm. H. Taft's speech accepting presidential nomination.

ENEMY OF TARIFF.

Labor World Sees Danger in Bryan Plan of Tariff for Revenue Only.

(From the Labor World.)

Workingmen and producers generally should not delude themselves with the belief that, if Mr. Bryan shall be elected President, his plans for revision of the tariff will present no menace to the country. Mr. Bryan is the professed enemy of the tariff system. He would impose duties, if at all, for revenue purposes only. On articles competing with what he chooses to call trust-made goods he would have no duty at all. Any apparent deficit in import duties arising from revised schedules he estimates would be more than made up by increased imports. Of course, his hope is to strike at the great protection States, which happen to be Republican in politics, like Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, West Virginia, etc. It does not seem to matter to him that every dollar's worth of foreign goods in the competitive class coming into the United States on a revenue or free trade basis necessarily by so much reduces the demand for home goods, thus displacing just that much American labor. What he wants to do is to rebuke and avenge himself upon protected manufacturers who do not agree with him in politics and who will have none of him at the polls, says an exchange.

But while Mr. Bryan is gunning for protected industries and Republican States, once his proposed tariff law should be in force it would fall alike upon all sections of the country, the only differences between one State and another being in the degree of hardship imposed.

We hear of workingmen saying that this time they intend to vote for Mr. Bryan, because for the past ten months we have had hard times. But what good will that do? How is a tariff for revenue, ignoring the protection idea altogether, going to open the shops and mills? How will the election of Senators by direct vote start the wheels of industry? Or the publication of campaign contributions? Or the further harassment of the railroads? Or the reorganization of the House, so that the Speaker may be powerless? Why open this country now to the markets of the world when we have not sufficient demand to consume what we ourselves manufacture? Under Republican rule we have just had ten years of unparalleled prosperity. Under Democratic administrations we have never had prosperity for any period, long or short.

TAFT AS LAWYER AND JUDGE

Pioneered the Way for the "Roosevelt Policy" Concerning Trusts.

Successful as Lawyer in Important Cases and Authority as Jurist.

Mr. Taft was hardly out of his boyhood when he was called to public office, and in most of the years since then he has devoted himself to the public service. First he was Assistant Prosecuting Attorney of Hamilton County, under Miller Outcalt, now one of the leading lawyers of Ohio. In 1881 he became Collector of Internal Revenue for the First Ohio District, and demonstrated the same ability in business that he had shown in the law. A year later he resigned that office and went back to the practice of law, with his father's old partner, H. P. Lloyd. In 1884 he became the junior counsel of a Bar Committee to conduct testament proceedings against Campbell, whose methods of practicing law had brought on the burning of the Hamilton County Courthouse in Cincinnati. Though technically unsuccessful, Mr. Taft made a good reputation from his conduct of this matter, and Campbell was drawn from Cincinnati. In 1885 he became Assistant County Solicitor. Two years later Governor Foraker appointed him Judge of the Superior Court, to succeed Judson Harmon, who had resigned to enter President Cleveland's cabinet.

His Judicial Career Begun.

His appointment as Judge of the Superior Court was the beginning of the judicial career which was Taft's ambition, and for which he was so eminently fitted. He made such a record as a judge that at the close of his appointed term he was triumphantly elected for another term. But already he had attracted attention outside his State, and he had served but two years of the five years for which he had been elected when President Harrison asked him to take the difficult position of Solicitor General of the United States. This was an office of the utmost importance, involving not only wide learning and tremendous application, but the power of clear and forceful presentation of argument. Two of the cases which he conducted as Solicitor General involved questions of vital importance to the entire country. The first grew out of the seal fisheries controversy with Great Britain. Mr. Taft won against such eminent counsel as Joseph H. Choate, who is widely recognized as a leader of the American bar. The other was a tariff case in which the law was attacked on the ground that Speaker Reed had counted a quorum when the bill passed the House. That, too, he won. It was during his term as Solicitor General that Mr. Taft met Theodore Roosevelt, then Civil Service Commissioner, and began the friendship which has continued and grown ever since and which has had such far-reaching influence upon the lives of both men.

On the Federal Bench.

Mr. Taft's record as solicitor general so clearly proved his fitness for the bench that after three years in Washington he was sent back to Ohio as judge of the Sixth Federal Circuit, a post generally recognized as a preliminary step to the Supreme Court, which was then the goal of his ambition.

It was during his seven years on the federal bench that Mr. Taft's qualities as a judge became known throughout the country. He was called upon then to decide some of the most important cases that have ever been tried in the federal courts, in the conduct of which he established an enviable reputation for learning, courage and fairness—three essential attributes of a great jurist. His power of application and his ability to turn off enormous masses of work received ample demonstration during this time. It was in this period of his service that he rendered the labor decisions which have made him famous as an upright and fearless judge. In his treatment of both labor and capital he showed that here was a judge who knew no distinction of parties when they appeared as litigants before him. He voiced the law as he knew it and the right as he saw it, no matter where the blow fell or whom it struck. If sometimes the decisions went against what organized labor at that time believed to be its cause, it must not be forgotten that no clearer or broader statement of the true rights of labor has ever been made than in some of his judicial utterances. Lawyers conducting litigation in other courts on behalf of labor unions have often cited these decisions of Judge Taft in support of their contentions. Neither should it be forgotten that one of the most important and far reaching of all his judgments was that against the Addystone Pipe Company, in which for the first time the Sherman anti-trust law was made a living vital force for the curbing and punishment of monopoly. When this case reached the Supreme Court, Mr. Taft received the distinguished and unusual honor of having his decision quoted in full and handed down as part of the opinions of the high court which sustained him at every point.

Pioneering the Roosevelt Policy.

This Addystone Pipe decision marked the beginning of the struggle for federal control of interstate corporations which in the later years has come to be known as the "Roosevelt policy." Mr. Taft in an address to the American Bar Association at Detroit, in the summer of 1895, had enunciated the principle on which President Roosevelt has made his great fight for the suppression of monopoly and the abolition of special privilege. Thus Mr. Taft pioneered the way for the "Roosevelt policy."

Hello, Bill! Is that you? What About November 4? They tell me I will carry Maryland by at least 20,000 —From the Baltimore American Star.

A REAL HELPMEET.

Mrs. Taft Thinks Nothing Is Too Good for Man Whose Name She Bears.

To Mrs. Taft this presidential situation is almost the only thing in life that does matter, and she makes no attempt to act as if it didn't.

In a visit to Hot Springs, Va., which was made for the purpose of finding out something about the daily life and thought of Mrs. Taft during her summer there, thus much was easily discoverable. She desires the presidency for her husband, and she furthermore is trying to help him get it. Her place, rather than in any of the above indicated circles, is among the rooters, on the band wagon high up, or in the van of the campaign advance agents.

She thinks that only the best life has to offer is great and good enough for her husband, and if the concentrated power of the nation, aided by her own personal efforts, can get it for him, it is to be his. And this attitude represents the Mrs. Taft of to-day. Perhaps she has other distinguishing marks and characteristics, but they have now faded into the unimportant. She is never so weary as to be indifferent, never so depressed by the afflictions of the flesh as to be inactive in her campaign duties, self-imposed, and never so beset by things in all of their perverseness as to be impatient with the situation.

Indeed, she is the one who started this presidential agitation in the Taft family, and she means, whoever else "lays down on his job," to see it properly through. All during the long hours of her summer at the springs her mind forever is alert with the problems of the campaign and their possible solutions. And if she arrives at some of them it will not be the first time that her suggestions have guided our ship of state.

Mutually Beneficial.

What has been the result to the United States of this so-called colonial policy? Well, it has added to her trade something over one hundred millions of dollars. I do not think that is important except as a beginning. If the government continues its friendly policy toward Porto Rico and the Philippines and opens her markets as well to the Philippines as to Porto Rico, this trade will treble and quadruple in a marvelously short time, so that merely from the standpoint of material progress the mutual benefits for the people we are helping and ourselves will be no mean justification for the policy.—Hon. Wm. H. Taft, at Cleveland, Ohio.

BRISTOW ON TAFT.

Leader in Kansas Campaign Details Judge Taft's Great Achievements.

(From Joseph L. Bristow's Speech at Independence, Kan.)

"The greatest issue in this campaign, however, is the personality of the two men and the effect that would follow the election of either. Mr. Taft, as has been so aptly said by Mr. Hughes of New York, is the best equipped man that has ever been nominated for the presidency, and this declaration has been enlarged upon by the great Democratic leader in New York, Bourke Cockran, who says that he is the best equipped man ever offered for the presidency of any republic. Mr. Taft was a great judge. He has profound legal learning; his opinions while on the bench were pointed to as models of judicial literature and sound reasoning. When McKinley sought a man to take the government of the Philippines, an archipelago of 1,400 islands inhabited by races speaking 100 different languages and dialects, a people representing almost every stage of civilization from the savage to the enlightened, he selected Mr. Taft as the best equipped of any man he could find, and, resigning the high judicial position he held, Mr. Taft went to the Philippines and his administration of the affairs of that dependency is pointed to by the political writers and economists as the model of colonial government of all time. Nothing like it has ever been presented in the history of the race.

Taft in the Philippines.

"When called by President Roosevelt from the Philippines to take charge of larger and wider responsibilities, the people of these islands were so devoted to him, because of the kindness of his character and the justice of his government, that they erected to him a magnificent statue to stand in Manila, the capital of the archipelago, to commemorate their gratitude in the centuries that are to come. When he came back to this country to assume the responsibility of Secretary of War, the construction of the Panama canal was placed in his charge. This is the greatest engineering achievement that the world has ever undertaken, and after more than three years of the administration of this great work the results have been almost miraculous. Three million cubic yards of dirt and granite are being excavated monthly and transported to the dumping places, from five to ten miles from the place of excavation. In this tropical climate, where disease has been the deadly enemy of every enterprise undertaken heretofore, where the construction of the railroad fifty-one miles long across the isthmus has cost a human life for every tie that was laid, we find to-day the health of the men employed there as perfect as if they were employed in Montgomery county, Kansas. Yellow fever, three years ago when I visited the isthmus, was threatening the men who were on the isthmus. This direful disease has been conquered and not a case has appeared for two and one-half years. The entire force engaged in this stupendous enterprise is so perfectly organized and works with such mechanical precision that there is not a jar and not a suspicion of scandal. It is the most marvelous exhibition of administrative skill and judgment that has ever been given to the world."

You will notice that very few of those farmers are wearing old clothes.—Sioux City Journal.

ORDER OUT OF CHAOS.

Secretary Taft Established Real Self-Government for Cuba.

Aside from the Philippines and the canal the greatest call that has been made upon Mr. Taft since he became Secretary of War came from Cuba. This was a case largely similar to the Philippine problem. When our intervention had freed Cuba from the Spanish yoke we deemed it sufficient insurance of successful government for the Cubans to require them to adopt a constitution before we turned the island over to them. We ignored the fact that Cuba had no experience of constitutions or understanding of their functions. So when Cuba had conformed to our requirement we sailed away from Havana and left her to work out her own salvation unaided and untaught.

The result of that folly was inevitable and not long delayed. The Cubans having adopted a constitution they had not the slightest idea of what to do with it. They proceeded to govern under the only system of which they had any knowledge. The proclamation of the President took the place of the old royal decree. He created by his fiat the departments of government which should have been established by law of Congress under authority of the constitution.

The experiment was aimed toward chaos and its expectation was quickly realized. In September, 1906, the United States had to intervene again, and the task fell on Mr. Taft. With his experience of the Filipino as a guide and the magnetism of his personality as a lever, Mr. Taft placated the warring factions and secured peaceable intervention. Then he devised and set up a provisional government which all the Cubans accepted.

It was the intention then to maintain the government only long enough to give the Cubans a fair election at which they might select their own government by full and free expression of their own will. But almost immediately the provisional government discovered the fundamental mistake made by the earlier American administration. It found that the Cubans had been attempting to administer a government which never had been organized and existed only by virtue of the President's will. Patiently the provisional government set to work, under the direction of Mr. Taft, to provide the organization under the fundamental law which the Cubans had never known was the essential of successful self-government. The work is now nearing completion, and when next the Americans quit Havana it will be after turning over to the Cubans a government machine properly established and fully equipped, whose operation they have been taught to understand and control. Thus, to two peoples has Mr. Taft been called upon to give instruction in practical self-government.

Good Effect on Business.

Mr. Bryan is continually asking why some of the managers of unlawful trusts have not been convicted and sent to the penitentiary? I sympathize with him in his wish that this may be done, because I think that the imprisonment of one or two would have a most healthy effect throughout the country; but even without such imprisonment, I believe that the prosecutions which are now on foot and the injunctions which have already been issued have had a marked effect on business methods.—Hon. Wm. H. Taft, at Columbus, Ohio.

WORLD CRUISE OF OUR BATTLE-SHIPS

A Significant History-Making Movement by the United States.

Pacific Ocean Saved to America by Robust Policy of Republican Party.

The present world cruise of American warships is one of the most interesting, important and far reaching performances of any administration since the Civil War. History rides upon the prow of the flagships of this fleet. Eighty-five millions of people have for months been attempting to interpret the movement and solve the problem our government is attempting to properly adjust by this circumnavigation of the globe. When President Roosevelt first announced that the fleet of battleships was to make the long journey from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean, the Democrats turned prophets of evil and predicted many disastrous things would follow as a consequence of this unprecedented move.

Armada and World Cruise.

The armada took its departure from Hampton Roads, Dec. 16, 1907, and after a wholly successful voyage around the Horn, of about twelve thousand miles, it dropped anchor in San Francisco Harbor May 6, 1908. The ships that form the four divisions of the fleet in this record-making cruise are: The Connecticut, Louisiana, Maine, Missouri, Georgia, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Virginia, Alabama, Illinois, Kearsarge, Kentucky, Ohio, Minnesota, Kansas and Vermont. To which were added the Nebraska and the Wisconsin, already in Puget Sound, thus making a fleet of eighteen first-class modern battleships in perfect condition.

There were already in the Pacific and Oriental waters the fine armored cruisers West Virginia, Colorado, Maryland and Pennsylvania. Their two sister ships, the California and South Dakota, were also on the Pacific, and the powerful Washington and Tennessee went from the Atlantic to join the armada, thus making eight armored cruisers to be added to the eighteen battleships. In addition there were in the Pacific several protected cruisers, gunboats and other lesser craft. All told there were ten hundred and fifty officers and nineteen thousand five hundred men.

In due time the main fleet of warships resumed its western course and will touch at the leading ports of China and Australia, passing on east by way of the west, and coming finally to Malta and Gibraltar, where it will coal and ultimately return to its starting point at Hampton Roads, some time early next February.

In this expedition the Republican party has a policy which projects itself far into the future, but it is an entire misunderstanding of the whole scheme to suppose that it is aimed narrowly or definitely at any single power. It is one of those robust constructive policies of the party gauged on world lines. It is more of a notification than a threat, to all existing governments.

Welding North and South America.

The eyes of the world have followed our fleet with absorbing interest. One of the great advantages gained by this cruise is the cordial welcome and close acquaintance which it has evoked from the governments and peoples of the chief republics of Latin America. To the Brazilians, the Argentines, the Chilians and the Peruvians, the mighty republic of the north had been merely a name or a dim figure, powerful and honored perhaps, but not actually known. For years there had been little or no visible evidence of the wealth, or authority of the United States, in the chief South American ports. But they were all visited by swift and stately liners, flying the flags of the maritime powers of Europe.

At every South American port the fleet, our navy, our government, our institutions, our people, our aims, our industries, our trade—every conceivable thing that is ours, have been discussed as they never were before, and that without suspicion of our political and diplomatic intentions. One business house in New York states that its South American correspondence has increased fourfold since the fleet visited Rio Janeiro. In this case it seems that trade may follow the battleships.

President Roosevelt Explains Movement.

In a statement in a speech he made in St. Louis, President Roosevelt took the public into his confidence to a degree when he said: "California, Oregon and Washington have a coast line which is our coast line just as emphatically as the coast line of New York and Maine, of Louisiana and Texas. Our fleet is going to its own home waters in the Pacific and after a stay there it will return to its own home waters in the Atlantic. The best place for the naval officer to learn his duties is at sea, by performing them, and only by actually putting through a voyage of this nature, a voyage longer than any one before undertaken by as large a fleet of any nation, can we find out just exactly what is necessary for us to know as to our naval needs and practice our officers and enlisted men in the highest duties of their profession."

The Pacific Ocean is recognized by all far seeing statesmen as the theater of the world's coming great struggles for military and commercial mastery. When China awakens, to the degree that Japan is now awake, events passing the power of the imagination to conceive will take place.

As to the palliative and beneficent effect this cruise may have on China and Japan, there can be but one opinion. While Uncle Sam was little concerned about the rumors to the effect that Japan was about to descend upon the Philippines, or possibly to make a demonstration off our Pacific coast, yet he did desire, and perhaps is in a position to insist, that the Open Door policy be maintained in China. Japan has apparently never been quite reconciled to this policy, and is said to have worked to establish in China the policy of "spheres of influence." To this America, with European nations, strenuously objected—and does still object. This Open Door policy stands as a world monument in diplomacy to the constructive genius of the Republican party. William Howard Taft is in full sympathy with this constructive policy.

Mr. Taft on his last trip to the Orient was given such an enthusiastic reception at Shanghai, China, as was never before accorded to any visiting statesman by officials of the Celestial Kingdom. On that occasion Mr. Taft made a speech which, in spite of its genial tone and cautious phrasing, was at once recognized as of the highest international importance. Said he:

"WE WOULD HAVE THE RIGHT TO PROTEST AT BEING EXCLUDED FROM THE TRADE OF CHINA BY REASON OF OUR INSISTENCE UPON THE POLICY OF THE OPEN DOOR. The acquiescence in this policy of all the nations interested has been so unhesitating and emphatic that it is hardly worth while to speculate as to how far the United States would go in the protection of its Chinese trade. * * * This feeling is likely to find expression in the action of the American government. The United States and the other powers favor the Open Door, and if they are wise they will encourage the empire to take long steps in administrative and governmental reform."

So we have not far to seek for another very powerful reason for this world cruise of our fleet. Mr. Taft simply announced in diplomatic language that this cruise is intended to say that the Open Door policy will be maintained at any price. He is in thorough sympathy with the alert constructive policy of the Republican party. He is one of its chief exponents.

Perfection of Discipline.

This world cruise of the mighty armada of sixteen ships of the line has been, and is being, conducted with a precision worthy of the fine traditions of American seamanship—which speaks the highest praise. Every man, from officer to common sailor, has felt that the eyes of the nation at home were following him, and that however modest his situation, he must bear himself worthily as an American sailor, in the stoutest squadron that ever flew the Stars and Stripes.

Epoch Making Movement.

There is no question but that this cruise will be noted by all commentators of the future as one of the most remarkable happenings of any age. Even though the American people have not fully understood the significance, when all the facts are known, it will be found to have been one of the distinctive acts of statesmanship of the present Republican administration. Mr. Taft is the man to continue this history-making policy of the Republican party.

NO PLACE LIKE AMERICA.

Swedes Who Left at Fatherland's Call Coming Back to Adopted Land.

Since last October, when the period of industrial depression began in the United States, more foreigners have returned to Europe each month than have come to the United States, with the exception of the month of August, but peculiar significance attaches to the passenger list of the Lusitania, which arrived in New York last week. The big steamer had on board 700 Swedish immigrants, 630 of whom had returned to Sweden last fall.

The returning sons of Sweden left the United States last fall when times were bad in this country. They had listened to the representations of the Swedish government officials, picturing improved conditions across the ocean and telling of the desire of the Swedish people to have their native sons come home and help in the upbuilding of the nation. This appeal to patriotism, coupled with the desire to see home once more, was a potent factor in causing the exodus of Swedes. Now they are returning to America with stories of disappointment.

When the Swedish-American citizens returned to Sweden they found wages higher than they had been in that country for years, but they also found that the cost of living had grown, leaving the margin of possible saving no larger than in the old days. Above all, they discovered that, owing to century-old prejudices and customs the working man could not live in Sweden in the "American way," the equal of his fellow citizens and the enjoyer of freedom in thought and action. So the Swedish-Americans are coming back ready to make America their homes for the rest of their lives.

What Taft Will Do.

"If elected I propose to devote all the ability that is in me to the constructive work of suggesting to Congress the means by which the Roosevelt policies shall be clinched."

HIGHEST TYPE OF CHRISTIAN GENTLEMAN

Churchmen Who Know Judge Taft Render Him This Sincere Tribute.

The Attitude of the Republican Candidate Towards Religion and a Life Which Shows Adherence to the Best Ethics and Morals.

This is the way in which I heard the pastor of a Methodist church in southern Illinois end an argument with a layman on the train coming to Cincinnati from St. Louis, writes a staff correspondent of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. The layman, paying due respect to the cloth of his opponent, was trying to convince him that he should not support Mr. Taft for the presidency, and instead should vote for his Democratic opponent. The churchman defended the principles of the Republican party, and, as indicated, defended the man for whom he said he expected to vote, from his personal standpoint of a churchman, "because he is the highest type of a Christian gentleman."

Bishop J. C. Hartzell of the Methodist Episcopal Church, discussing the religious beliefs of Bryan and Taft, after calling on the latter, said:

"Which of these men I shall vote for will not be decided by their religious beliefs, but what they are as men, and by the principles and policies they stand for in the administration of the government. I believe that in acting upon this view, as an American citizen, I am in harmony with the spirit and purpose of the founders of our republic, who put into the constitution that there should be 'no religious test as to qualifications to any office or public trust under the United States.' My conviction is that the future safety of the nation depends very largely upon our people heeding that constitutional prohibition. Our nation owes much in moral character, statesmanship, literature, art and religion to those who have not been in strict harmony with some of the dogmas of the church. The days of the inquisition are past."

Remembering that Mrs. Taft is a Presbyterian, but that Miss Helen Taft was confirmed in the Episcopal Church in Washington last winter at the same time that Miss Ethel Roosevelt, daughter of the President, was confirmed, I wondered as to Mr. Taft's church association. When I made the inquiry here I was answered through the columns of the Northwestern Christian Advocate, the great Methodist publication, just as it had given answer to hundreds of inquiries from its Methodist subscribers. It said:

Man of Broad Sympathies.

"Mrs. Taft and children are Episcopalians, and the Secretary frequently accompanies them to St. John's Church, where, also, he has a pew. While Mr Roosevelt goes to the German Reformed Church, his wife and family, who are Episcopalians, attend historic St. John's Church, where they sit only one or two pews removed from Mrs. Taft and her children. Secretary Taft spends his vacation at Murray Bay, Canada, where there is a Union Church, attended by the summer colonists of all denominations. The Secretary of War is one of the trustees of this summer colony church, where people of many faiths gather for worship."

This Methodist testimony indicated to me the broad and liberal view of Mr. Taft in religious matters. In looking through the file of this same publication—the Western Christian Advocate—I found a discussion of both nominees, in the course of which it was asserted:

"The sympathies of both Mr. Taft and Mr. Bryan are very broad, and they worship easily and naturally with any Christian denomination. Whichever man is elected, the country will have, therefore, a President of clean life, lofty principles and Christian convictions."

Opinion of Negro Clergyman.

On the same afternoon, when Bishop Hartzell called, Rev. James G. Robinson, pastor of the Baker Street African Methodist Church of Dayton, Ohio, called at the headquarters in company with W. H. Jones, one of the leading colored lawyers of the same city. Mr. Jones was proud of the fact that he is president of the Colored Taft Club, the first one to be incorporated in the United States, and Rev. Mr. Robinson admitted that he is president of the Board of Directors of the same club. As he left Mr. Taft's office I asked him for his view of the candidate, both from his standpoint as a churchman and as a leader of his race.

"I believe," he said, "Judge Taft will be elected by a safe and comfortable majority, not simply because he is a Republican, nor am I speaking because I am a Republican. But Judge Taft represents all of the ideals of the true Christian statesman."

As to the attitude of his own race, Rev. Mr. Robinson said: "We can not afford to line up with the Democratic party, which has been antagonistic to our interests always, and against the party headed by such wise and Christian statesmen as is Judge Taft. He is a man whom we know in Ohio is desirous that all men, without regard to color, be treated fairly before the courts."

Bishop Fallows' Tribute.

In introducing Mr. Taft at Toledo, Ohio, Bishop Samuel Fallows indorsed him unreservedly, and in the course of his remarks said:

"I can aver, without fear of successful contradiction, that no man ever came before the American people for the highest honor in their gift so thoroughly prepared to meet its weighty responsibilities as Mr. Taft. He is ripe in the knowledge of jurisprudence and clear and firm in judicial decisions. He has won, as an executive officer in our Oriental possessions, the plaudits of his countrymen and of admiring nations. He has satisfactorily settled in those islands of the sea some of the most delicate and difficult subjects, involving deep-seated racial and religious questions, ever brought up for adjudication. * * * He is deeply religious without a trace of bigotry, fearing God and working righteousness, as did the two Adamses and Abraham Lincoln."

Taft's Idea of Character.

In my effort to discover the qualities which led one to describe Mr. Taft as "the highest type of Christian gentleman" I learn that the candidate himself, within a month, has defined just what importance he attached to Christian character in the building of a successful career. The question had been put to him to develop his personal views, and writing in response the Republican candidate said:

"Your question suggests two others which must be answered in answering this: First, what is a Christian character, and, second, what is a successful career? First, I consider a Christian character that of one who holds as his ideal a compliance with the two commandments given by Jesus Christ, and who earnestly strives to live up to that ideal. Second, I should define a successful career to be that career which brings more real happiness to those who happen to be within the operation of the influence of the person whose character is in question.

"Coming now to answer your inquiry, I should say that a Christian character in the building of a successful career is its most important part. The longer one lives the more convinced he must become that every other incident and element of a career loses importance in comparison, and that when a man's life work is done this is what stands out, and whether the career is one of profession, business or politics, the same thing is true."

What an Old Friend Says.

Mr. Aaron A. Ferris, a prominent Cincinnati lawyer, who has known Judge Taft for thirty years, said:

"I have never had occasion to ask Judge Taft what his creed was in matters religious. I know that, when in Cincinnati, he has been quite regular in attendance at Christ Episcopal church, of which members of his family are communicants, and of which I am a vestryman. I know very well that no one in trouble or distress ever appealed to him without receiving a patient hearing and prompt and material aid, when in his power to give it. If a man's character is to be gauged by what he does, and not by mere profession; if leading a clean and upright life is to be a guide, and doing righteous deeds is to be counted, then I am confident that his neighbors and fellow-citizens who have lived with him and know him well, without regard to creed, color or party association, would say that Taft has lived and acted in every station as a Christian gentleman."

Sound National Policy.

Instead of making a panic, the national policy of ending the lawlessness of corporations in interstate commerce, and of taking away their power of issuing, without supervision, stocks and bonds, will produce a change in their management and remove one fruitful cause for loss of public confidence.—Hon. Wm. H. Taft, to Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, Boston, Mass.

BRYAN'S INCONSISTENCIES.

Democratic Candidate's Shifting Ideas About How the People Shall Rule.

(From the Boston speech of Senator Borah.)

"Shall the people rule?" Mr. Bryan has stated time and again that the most effective way by which the people could rule would be under the principle of initiative and referendum—but he has abandoned it. He has said that either the people or the railroads must rule, and that the only way the people could rule was by owning the railroads—but he has abandoned this proposition.

"He has said that the people must have the power to make the courts more amenable to popular demand, and that, in order that the people might rule, they must elect their judges—but he has abandoned the proposition. The tribune of the people has left the forum, gone from the presence of those whom he had taught certain doctrines, and taught that these doctrines were essential to their liberties and to their welfare. He has submitted to be bound not to recur to his old teachings.

"Is it all a question of expediency or is it a confession, astounding confession, of an inability to grasp the great questions and to deal with the great problems which in deed and in truth do involve the prosperity and the liberty of a free people? Are stability of mind, safe and sound statesmanship essential qualities for a President? And am I unfair and unjust to Mr. Bryan when I say that his positions so quickly taken, so earnestly urged, so openly abandoned, so confessedly wrong, are discouraging to every one as to his usefulness in the future?"

DRUMMERS TO AID TAFT.

Commercial Travelers' Sound Money League Gets Into the Campaign.

After four years of inactivity in the work for which it was organized, the Commercial Travelers' Sound Money League is about to begin a campaign "for the election of Taft and Sherman and the continuance of prosperity."

The vice presidential nominee, James S. Sherman, has written to the committee that it will afford him great pleasure to accept their invitation to speak at the first meeting of the league in the 1908 campaign.

Col. John L. Shepherd, chairman of the executive committee of the Jewelers' Association, is president of the league. Other prominent members are: Gen. Joseph W. Congdon, president of the Central Dry Goods Association; George F. Victor, one of the largest importers and exporters in America; William E. Webb of the firm of James H. Dunham & Co., Walter Scott of the firm of Butler Brothers & Co., and I. A. Hall. Jonas Langfeld is vice president of the league.

The league was the first society of its kind to inaugurate the system of noonday meetings, which it did in New York City in 1896. It claims upward of 200,000 members, about 75,000 of whom come from New York houses.

Labor, the bone of contention in the present campaign, is not to be shackled either by the leaders of the political parties, nor by the command of the President of the United States and delivered into any particular party. Neither is it to be stood up and counted by President Samuel Gompers, or the American Federation of Labor. It is to be left free to act and exercise its rights of citizenship as men and not as chattels.—Building Trades, Chicago (Union Labor organ).

Nobody Stood Up.

"Mr. Bryan has dictated four platforms, and if there is any man here who says he wishes either of these platforms had been successful, let him rise and I will give him $10 for his photograph."—From Leslie M. Shaw's speech at Louisville.

DISCARDED ISSUES—FREE SILVER.

If Bryan Was Mistaken on Silver Are His Conclusions Any Safer Now?

Of all the medicines Mr. Bryan has offered the country, the free and unlimited coinage of silver was the most widely and effectively advertised. The people were told that there could be no return of prosperity without it. In spite of its doctrine of repudiation, it was offered as the only means of relief against perpetual hard times. In the contest of 1896 Mr. Bryan staked his political fortunes on this issue, and lost; in 1900 he insisted on a reaffirmation of the issue, and lost again. This year free silver has been omitted from the Democratic platform, because in the meantime the country has had its period of greatest prosperity. Time and events have refuted all Mr. Bryan's arguments in favor of free coinage, and free silverism is dead and buried, and long grass waves over its resting place.

Mr. Bryan has said that a man worthy to lead a great cause should be willing to die for it. In 1900 Mr. Bryan said that if anyone said he had changed his mind about free silver he was a falsifier. Yet Mr. Bryan made the platform of this year, and that platform has omitted mention of free silver; and Mr. Bryan says that a candidate is bound by what the platform omits as well as by what it contains. Therefore, Mr. Bryan has either discarded free silver as a belief, or he has omitted it this year as a matter of political expediency, still believing in the doctrine. If he still believes in free silver, it is obvious that he no longer thinks it necessary to die for it. If he does not believe in it, then he has been convinced that he made stupendous mistakes in 1896 and 1900, when he forced the issue on his party.

A leader may be stronger than his party; he may offer a better standard of government than the party platform on which he is running; but no leader can disentangle himself from the wreckage of issues which he has temporarily glorified as vote-getting expedients.—Kansas City Star.

Bryan's Tour.

Bill Bryan's step is on thy shore,
Maryland, my Maryland!
He's knocking loudly at thy door,
Maryland, my Maryland!
He's tried to capture Baltimore
With arguments none gained of yore,
Whose repetitions only bore
Maryland, my Maryland!

Thou art no easy captured State,
Maryland, my Maryland!
To gain thee, one must have some weight,
Maryland, my Maryland!
No demagogic tales to date,
Will in her ardor keen create,
And lead her off from prosperous fate,
Maryland, my Maryland!

One cannot win her with mere craft,
Maryland, my Maryland!
At such endeavor she has laughed,
Maryland, my Maryland!
Though she has had of pleas a raft
To vote for Bryan, she's not daft,
Her sober thought is all for Taft,
Maryland, my Maryland!

Let Bryan then do what he can,
Maryland, my Maryland!
Do what he may all else to ban,
Maryland, my Maryland!
In States where Taft far leading, ran,
Where voters weighed it, man to man,
Thou wilt be found to lead the van,
Maryland, my Maryland!

OUR RURAL FREE MAIL DELIVERY

How the Democratic Party Sought to Throttle It in Its Infancy.

Originated by Republicans, the Democrats Saw in It a Bugaboo of Extravagance and Tried to Kill It.

The organization of Rural Free Delivery in the United States was beset with many difficulties. In its infancy it was pounced upon by the Democratic party, a party that has an unbroken history of never missing an opportunity to try to throttle the life of every infant industry that may be so unfortunate as to meet it upon the great highway of progress. Postmaster General Wanamaker, under a Republican administration in 1892, first recommended the establishment of a rural free delivery service. During the three or four years of Democratic administration following, small appropriations were made, but not expended, and the system was never given a fair trial until President McKinley came into office.

Opposed by Democratic Officials.

The Postoffice Department headed by a Democratic Postmaster General, during Cleveland's last term, opposed rural delivery, and refused and neglected to make any experiment, or to institute any free delivery routes. As an excuse for this failure and neglect to obey the mandates of the law, the Assistant Postmaster General under Cleveland, in his report transmitted to Congress in December, 1893, expressed strong views against rural free delivery and the postmaster general of this same Democratic administration, approved these views, and in his report to this same Congress, spoke of rural free delivery in a slighting and somewhat contemptuous manner. In conclusion he stated:

"I therefore adopt the opinion of the first Assistant Postmaster General that the department would not be warranted in burdening the people with such expense when it can more properly, adequately and economically meet the requirements of postal extension by widening its scope along reasonable and conservative lines and by establishing additional post offices wherever the communities are justified in asking for them." He thus ignored the reasonable and just demands of 40,000,000 of our people, the very bone and sinew of our republic, and cast their interests aside by a wave of the hand.

Too Many Obstacles in the Way.

Not only was the Democratic administration thoroughly against rural free delivery, but the Democratic opposition included the other Democratic branches of our national government. The House of Representatives was also Democratic at that time and on February 27, 1894, the committee on postoffices and post roads, in reporting to the House the annual postoffice appropriation bill, used the following language in reference to rural free delivery:

"It has been found impossible by reason of the pressure of more important questions, for the officers having that subject in charge, to give the subject the study and consideration that it demands, much less to establish such rural free delivery."

No Constructive Statesmanship.

Thus again, the party which has gone into partnership with calamity, saw "a lion in the way," at the very inception of constructive statesmanship, and did not exhibit the energy and initiative to take up the work for which experimental appropriations had already been made. In the report of Cleveland's Postmaster General, Wm. L. Wilson, referring to the appropriation which had been made and which had not been used, we find the following:

"Should Congress see fit to make it available for the current year, I will make the experiment ordered, by the best tests I can devise; but the difficulties in the way of such experiments and the reasons for viewing the whole plan as impracticable, are fully set forth in the report of the House Committee on the Postoffice Appropriation bill of the second session of the Fifty Third Congress."

Democracy Was Against Rural Delivery.

It will thus be seen that Cleveland's Postmaster General, after two years of study and reflection upon the subject, after having absolutely refused to use the money which Congress placed at his disposal for this purpose, gave it as his opinion that the whole plan was impracticable again, and should be abandoned. In the message of President Cleveland sent to Congress Dec. 4, 1893, referring to the matter of rural free delivery, he himself said:

"I am decidedly of the opinion that the provisions of the present law permit as general an introduction of this feature of mail service as is now NECESSARY OR DESIRABLE, and that it ought NOT to be extended to smaller communities than are now designated." Again in a single sentence, from the annual message of Cleveland the following year he dismisses the matter in these words: "The estimated cost of rural free delivery generally is so very large, that it OUGHT NOT TO BE CONSIDERED, in the present condition of affairs."

Thus, the only Democratic President for more than forty years rid himself of the measure which has come to be one of importance with American people, second only to independence itself. Cleveland said that rural free delivery was an impracticable scheme by reason of the vast expense that would be involved. Thus a Democratic Postmaster General, a Democratic chairman of the Committee on the Postoffice and Post Roads, and a Democratic President all united in agreeing that the establishment of rural free delivery was an impracticable proposition and absolutely beyond them, in its capacity for future usefulness to the majority of the American people.

Blessings of Rural Delivery.

The existence and growth of rural free delivery are the best evidences in recent years, that this is a government of the people and for the people. Some near-statesman of the Democratic party has called the service a luxury. It is more than a luxury. It is now a necessity. So eagerly has it been sought after in all portions of this country and so thoroughly appreciated wherever it has been bestowed, that it has come to be regarded as a necessity by the millions who enjoy it.

Forty years ago every one went or sent to the postoffice for his mail, and the farmer in the busy season when his horses and teams were working in the field, could only receive mail for himself and family possibly once a week—on Saturday afternoon. Now it is not only delivered several times each day at the homes and places of business of the residents of more than a thousand cities, but those millions of sturdy farmers, ranchmen and agriculturists who form the backbone of the republic receive their mails almost daily.

Increases Value of Land.

Increased facilities always bring increased use and enjoyment. More letters are written and received; more papers and magazines subscribed for. Testimony from all over the country shows that by reason of rural free delivery the actual value of our farm lands has been increased. Many farmers state that they would not dispense with the service for $100 per annum. It has been estimated that the value of farm lands has risen by this means as much as five dollars per acre in several States. A moderate estimate of the increased value of lands throughout the country on account of the adoption of rural free delivery would be from $1 to $3 per acre.

BRYAN IN 1924.

A Minneapolis Humorist's Idea of Future Political Events.

When Mr. Bryan was notified in 1916 he made his paramount issue the regulation of department stores; in 1920 he demanded the defeat of the Republicans because of the miserable way in which they had enforced the smoke ordinance. But in 1924, when a great concourse had gathered in front of Fairview, Mr. Bryan tottered out upon the porch and said: "Fellow citizens, the paramount issue this year is 'me.' I am getting to be an old man. I should be putting aside millions for my family faster than I am. I cannot afford to take the time from my lecture engagements to run for President. The phonographic business, which I unfortunately started in 1908, has proved a mistake. The people have been so familiarized with my voice they won't cross the street to hear me at a dollar a throw. I have had to cut rates for the first time in my lecturing career. It is up to you, neighbors and fellow citizens, to elect me this time, I hereby renew my pledges of 1900, 1908, 1912, 1916 and 1920 not to be a candidate for a second term." With a mighty cheer for the Peerless One the meeting broke up.

CAREFUL ABOUT PROMISES.

Taft Weighs His Words While Bryan Is Careless.

One of the most important things to be emphasized at this stage of the campaign has been admirably phrased in Mr. Roosevelt's letter to Conrad Kohrs. Mr. Taft is careful to promise only what he is confident upon reasonable grounds that he can accomplish.

Perhaps this is the chief reason why Mr. Taft is dubbed a poor politician and is a poor politician from every standpoint save that of courageous, self-forgetting public service.

But it is well for Mr. Roosevelt to emphasize this truth, since some men are likely thoughtlessly to interpret Mr. Taft's scrupulous care in statement and his honorable care for the relation of promise and possible performance as want of zeal for reform.

It is especially necessary in this campaign against a man whose emotions, however creditable they may be in themselves, and whose innate tendency to rhetorical emphasis are constantly driving him into broad and easy and over-liberal promises.

Mr. Bryan is above all things a campaigner, and his public utterances never have been characterized by statesmanly caution. He has been a great promiser.

Pity that Bryan's speeches, in support of his fads, fallacies and fooleries, which were delivered when he was a candidate in 1896, and again in 1900, couldn't have been "canned," for repetition now. What tunes they would grind out!—Portland Oregonian.

Mr. Bryan will have to make out a better case for his claim under the will of the people than he did for his claim under the will of Philo S. Bennett.—New York Tribune.

BRYAN DESERTED BY FORMER SUPPORTERS

All Find Judge Taft Admirably Fitted for the Presidency and Have Been Unable to Follow Bryan's Political Shell Game.

During the twelve years since Mr. Bryan first attempted to win the highest office in the nation he has given voice to opinions which have alienated many newspapers and men who once found something in the man and his changeable doctrines to uphold.

The Baltimore Sun, for instance, which for years has been the mainstay of the Democratic party in Maryland, turned squarely against Bryan and positively for Taft early in the campaign.

"It is our deliberate judgment," said the Sun,

"That for the next four years the material interests of the people of this country would be safer with Mr. Taft at the head of the national government than with Mr. Bryan."

The backsliding of William Randolph Hearst and the Hearst string of newspapers is well known. It is not disputed that the Hearst support formerly was one of the strongest factors of Bryan's strength. Mr. Hearst's present opinion of Mr. Bryan is scathing. Here is part of it:

"He is the peerless prestidigitator of modern politics, whose hand is quicker than the eye, who causes his principles to disappear and changes his politics in full view of the audience. A showman at a county fair, conducting a shell game with his political opinions.

"Where is the little ball of free silver? Under the first shell? Not at all. It was there once, but it is not now, and the confiding voter loses. Where is the little ball of public ownership? Under the second shell? Wrong again, and the confiding voter loses again. Where is the little referendum ball? Under the third shell? Wrong again, and once more the confiding voter loses.

"My friends, Mr. Bryan has no set convictions. He has changed his opinions at every election, and if he has been wrong so often we are justified in assuming that he is wrong again. Mr. Bryan's definition of a fundamental principle is a proposition that will help to elect Mr. Bryan. If it fails to elect him it ceases to be an eternal verity and becomes an exploded theory.

"Mr. Bryan's substitute for permanent principle is perpetual speech. He talks well, but he thinks badly and he acts worst of all."

Revolt Is Widespread.

M. F. Tarpey, of Fresno, Cal., for years one of the most prominent Democratic National Committeemen, one of the most popular and best known Democrats in California and once candidate for Governor, has announced through the press his support of Taft, saying: "I feel it is for the best interests of the nation and our State to elect as President the man who represents not only President Roosevelt's policies, but his ideals, and who will be able to get the best civic results out of the awakened public conscience."

How widespread is the spirit of revolt among the former followers of Bryan may be judged from the defection of the Santa Cruz Surf, a California newspaper of considerable influence which has supported the Democratic party for thirty years through thick and thin under the editorship of Arthur A. Taylor. In a four-column editorial in the issue of August 26 the Surf sets forth its reasons for discarding Mr. Bryan and advocating Mr. Taft. Mr. Taylor's conclusion is that Bryan lacks "the most essential requisite for the Presidency—wisdom."

Ex-Senator George L. Wellington of Maryland is open and enthusiastic in his support of Taft, in great contrast with his attitude of eight years ago, when he appeared on the rostrum with Bryan at the greatest political meeting ever held in Cumberland, Md., and when he stumped the Northwest for the Nebraskan. His attitude has entirely changed, and he states that he considers Taft an ideal candidate as representative of Republican policies.

Nebraska Populist and Rhode Island Democrat.

John C. Sprecher, a prominent Nebraska Populist and editor of the Schuyler Free Lance, has repudiated Bryan and warmly urges the election of Taft and Sherman. The change in Mr. Sprecher's political views was announced in a recent issue of his newspaper. The editor was twice sent to the Nebraska Legislature by the Populists and has upheld that party and its views for many years. In his editorial committing himself to the Republican national candidate, Mr. Sprecher says: "Above all else this year, the Free Lance editor is opposed to the election of W. J. Bryan for the Presidency, because he is simply disgusted with the standing candidate, who is apparently for or against any proposition that will net him votes."

Perhaps the most notable Democratic defection in Rhode Island is that of Dr. James E. Sullivan, of Narragansett, a Democratic Presidential Elector for Parker four years ago, who has come out for Taft. The Evening Bulletin of Providence, July 11, contained an article on Dr. Sullivan's attitude, in which he said that besides being opposed to Bryan he is not in favor of the principle of revision of the tariff laid down in the Democratic platform. Dr. Sullivan says that in future he will act with the Republicans in national matters.

A political sensation has been caused in Iowa County, Iowa, by the announcement of J. M. Dower, a well-known Democrat and former County Attorney, that he cannot support Bryan, although he did so in 1900. He put himself strongly on record in favor of Taft in a long letter published in the Williamsburg Journal Tribune. "Mr. Taft is an executive," said Mr. Dower. "Mr. Bryan an agitator. Mr. Taft appeals to sober judgment; Mr. Bryan to sentiment."

Among the prominent Missouri Democrats who are opposing Bryan is Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust Company of St. Louis. Mr. Wade finds Bryan's bank deposit guarantee scheme a "political heresy," wrong in theory and not practicable—"the new side door to paternalism in government; the latest approach to socialism."

Lifelong Ohio Democrat Changes Politics.

John Schlarb, a well-known attorney of Youngstown, Ohio, and a Democrat all his life, will cast his vote for William H. Taft for President. In announcing his decision Mr. Schlarb said:

"I believe it is for the best interests of our country that Mr. Taft succeed President Roosevelt. In my estimation of Mr. Roosevelt, I consider that his administration has not been free from mistakes, but I sincerely believe that a careful study of his administration by an unprejudiced mind will show that he has been an immense power for the lasting good of our country, and that the mistakes which he has made sink into insignificance when they are compared with the good which he has done."

Mr. Frederick N. Judson, a prominent attorney of St. Louis and author of the pamphlet entitled "Taft and Labor," formerly was a Democrat, but now is a red-hot Taft man. He states that Mr. Taft is very strong in St. Louis and Missouri.

Prof. McClintock of the University of Chicago paid a visit to the Philippines last year. Before he went he was an anti-imperialist. He has returned converted to Mr. Taft's theories as to how the Filipinos should be dealt with. A study of the situation brought the professor to the conclusion that "talk about immediate independence of the Philippines is criminal and ought to be postponed for a generation at least."

Proof of Prosperity.

A striking proof of the recovery of the business interests of the country from the effects of the financial panic of 1907 is the simple statement recently sent out as a news item from New York City concerning The Trust Company of America. The item states that the trust company upon which a sensational run was precipitated during the financial panic of 1907, has managed its business so successfully as to be able to pay off the loan of $25,000,000 which it then effected, in its entirety. The company in point of assets and liabilities was the second largest in the country, and the run which it successfully sustained exceeded any ever known in the history of America.

CHRISTIAN MISSIONS AND CIVILIZATION

Boxer War Not Caused by Interference of Missionaries.

Mr. Taft Speaks on Subject of Missions from Personal Experience.

William H. Taft believes in the extension of Christian missions, and that the work of Christian missionaries is advancing civilization.

In an address delivered by him at Carnegie Hall, New York City, April, 1908, among other things Mr. Taft said:

"Until I went to the Orient, until there were thrown on me the responsibilities with reference to the extension of civilization in those far distant lands, I did not realize the immense importance of foreign missions. The truth is we have got to wake up in this country. We are not all there is in the world. There are lots beside us, and there are lots of people besides us that are entitled to our effort and our money and our sacrifice to help them on in the world. No man can study the movement of modern civilization from an utterly impartial standpoint and not realize that Christianity and the spirit of Christianity is the only basis for the hope of modern civilization and the growth of popular self-government. The spirit of Christianity is pure democracy. It is the equality of man before God, the equality of man before the law, which is, as I understand it, the most God-like manifestation that man has been able to make.

Religion and Political Government.

"I am talking practical facts about the effect of religion on the political government, and I know what I am talking about. Connected with every successful foreign mission is a school, ordinarily an industrial school. Also they teach the native that cleanliness is next to Godliness and that one business of his is to keep himself healthy, and so in connection with every good foreign mission they have hospitals and doctors. And, therefore, the mission makes a nucleus of modern civilization, with schools, teachers and physicians and the church. In that way, having educated the native, having taught him how to live, then they are able to be sure that they have made him a consistent Christian.

"Two or three things make one impatient when he understands the facts. One is this criticism of the missionaries as constantly involving the governments in trouble, as constantly bringing about war. The truth is that Western civilization in trade is pressing into the Orient and the agents that are sent forward, I am sorry to say, are not the best representatives of Western civilization. It is not human nature that they should resist the temptations that not infrequently present themselves to get ahead of the Oriental brother in business transactions. They generally are quite out of sympathy with a spirit of brotherhood toward the Oriental natives. Even in the Philippines that spirit is shown, for while I was there I can remember hearing on the streets, sung by a gentleman that did not agree with my view of our duty toward the Filipinos:

"He may be a brother of William H.
Taft,
But he ain't no brother of mine."

Civilization Paralleling Trade.

"Hence it is that in the progress of civilization we must move along as trade moves; and as the foreign missions move on it is through the foreign missions that we must expect to have the true picture of Christian brotherhood presented to those natives, the true spirit of Christian sympathy. That is what makes, in the progress of civilization, the immense importance of Christian missions. You go into China to-day and try to find out what the conditions are in the interior—consult in Peking the gentlemen who are supposed to know, and where do they go? They go at once to the missionaries, to the men who have spent their lives far advanced into the nation, far beyond the point of safety if any uprising takes place, and who have learned by association with the natives, by living with them, by bringing them into their houses, by helping them on to their feet, who have learned the secret of what Chinese life is.

"Now you can read books—I have read them—in which the missions are described as most comfortable buildings; and it is said that missionaries are living more luxuriously than they would at home, and therefore they do not call for our support or sympathy. It is true that there are a good many mission buildings that are handsome buildings; I have seen them. It is true that they are comfortable; but they ought to be comfortable. One of the things that you have got to do with the Oriental is to fill his eye with something that he can see, and if you erect a great missionary building, he deems your coming into that community of some importance. But it is not a life of ease; it is not a life of comfort and luxury. These men are doing grand, good work. I do not mean to say that there are not exceptions among them; that sometimes they do not meddle in something which it would be better for them from a politic move to keep out of; but I mean as a whole, these missionaries in China and in other countries worthily represent the best Christian spirit of this country."

FREIGHT CARS NEEDED.

Improving Business Causes Demand for More Freight Cars.

In the early spring—April 1—it was stated that 413,605 freight cars were standing idly on side tracks. On June 24 it was officially reported that this number had been reduced to 313,208. And now we see that, not only nearly every car capable of haulage is in commission, but that 5,000 new ones have been ordered from the various shops of the East and West.

This is an encouraging sign. It demonstrates that the little panic we found in the commercial districts a few months ago has entirely disappeared. Confidence is restored. Real estate transactions are many. The big mercantile centers like New York, Chicago, St. Louis, San Francisco, New Orleans, Atlanta, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Denver, Kansas City, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Indianapolis are taxed for help in boxing, shipping and billing the early fall demands for goods.

Crops have been universally bounteous. The harvesting season is drawing to a close. The nation's health is splendid. We have escaped calamities. Our banks are stronger than ever, our merchants happier than for a long while, our people more contented.—Chicago Examiner.

Progress of Colored Race.

When we regard the history of the forty years through which the colored man of this country has been obliged to struggle, the progress which he has made, material and educational, is wonderful.—Hon. Wm. H. Taft, at Kansas City, Mo.

BEET SUGAR INDUSTRY

Prospers Under Protective Tariff Legislation.

Democratic Tariff for Revenue Plan Would Destroy United States' Sugar Industry.

What do the beet sugar growers of the United States think of the Democratic promise to destroy their industry if that party should be successful? That its pledges would, if carried out, destroy the beet sugar industry nobody can for a moment doubt. The tariff plank of the Democratic platform of 1908 says: "Articles entering into competition with trust controlled products should be placed upon the free list," and the sugar refiners of the United States are among the first group of business men named by Democratic authorities when they enumerate the great trusts of the land. Therefore, according to their platform—and Mr. Bryan says in his speech of acceptance that a platform is binding upon a candidate and that its pledges must be carried out—sugar would be one of the first articles put upon the free list.

That the effect of admitting sugar from all parts of the world free of duty would be the destruction of the beet sugar industry in the United States cannot be doubted. The average cost per pound of sugar in the country from which we import that article has steadily fallen from between 5 and 6 cents per pound in the seventies to less than 2 cents per pound in 1902, 1903 and 1904; and in view also of the steady reduction in freight rates on the ocean, it goes without saying that the admission of foreign sugar free of duty would put the beet sugar producer of the United States out of business.

Democracy Disregards Labor.

Cheapness has been, and is the sole cry of the Democratic party in its tariff theory. It thinks nothing, apparently, of the earning power of labor in the United States, whether agricultural labor or otherwise. The McKinley tariff act authorized the payment of a bounty on sugar produced in the United States and admitted machinery for manufacturing beet sugar free of duty. Prior to 1890, the year of the enactment of that law, the beet sugar production of the country had never reached 2,000 tons. In the very next year, 1891-1892, it amounted to over 5,000 tons; in 1892-1893, to 12,000, and in 1894-1895 to 20,000 tons.

When the Democratic party came into control in the White House and Congress it promptly repealed the law which gave a bounty on home-grown sugar. Fortunately, that industry had attained sufficient strength to be able to maintain itself during the less than three years in which the Democratic tariff was in force, and when the Republican party again came into power and established a protective tariff the beet sugar industry again showed rapid gains, the production of beet sugar jumping from over 38,000 tons in 1896-1897, the year of the enactment of the Dingley law, to 73,000 tons in 1899-1900, 195,000 tons in 1902-1903, 279,000 tons in 1905-1906, and 432,000 tons in 1906-1907.

Thus under the stimulus given by the McKinley act in a bounty on beet sugar and the free importation of machinery for its production, followed by the protection granted under the Dingley act, the beet sugar product of the country has grown from 2,000 tons per annum to 432,000 tons, and its value from a few thousand dollars to between forty and fifty million dollars a year. The area in which it is now successfully produced stretches from New York to California and the section west of the Mississippi to-day actually produces more sugar than it consumes, and entirely from beets.

The United States is the world's greatest consumer of sugar. It consumes between six and seven billion pounds of sugar per year, an average of over 75 pounds per capita; so that it may be truthfully said that the average individual in the United States consumes more than one-half his own weight of sugar every year. This enormous quantity of sugar costs at retail (putting the average price at only 5 cents per pound) $335,000,000 a year, and with the rapid growth in population and consumption of sugar, it may be safely said that the value of sugar consumed in the United States will, during the next decade, average more than a million dollars a day, and even more than that as the years proceed and the population grows.

Bright Future for Industry.

Can our farmers produce all the sugar for which our consumers are now paying and will doubtless continue to pay in the future an average of a million dollars a day? Yes.

What class of sugar producers will supply this enormous demand? Clearly and unquestionably, the sugar beet growers.

Why? The answer is found in the following figures: The cane sugar production of the United States has during the last decade fallen from 316,000 tons in 1897-8 to 236,000 tons in 1906-7; while beet sugar production, with the same degree of protection given to cane sugar, has grown from 38,000 tons in 1897-8 to 432,000 tons in 1906-1907.

Does anybody need further evidence that it is the sugar beet grower who is going to supply the sugar for which the people of the United States are paying a million dollars a day?

Does the sugar beet grower want to see this industry destroyed by electing to power the party which in its 1908 platform distinctly pledges itself to put sugar on the free list, and whose candidate distinctly pledges himself to be bound by the wording of the platform on which he stands?

The Democratic party proposes to destroy the trust by destroying the industry in which it is engaged. The Republican party proposes to control the trust by proper legislation and the enforcement of law, and at the same time to properly protect and foster the industry, which will enable our farmers to supply the million dollars' worth of sugar a day which our people consume.

TRUTH IN JEST.

Mr. Bryan Satirized by Collier's Japanese Schoolboy.

(From the Omaha Bee.)

Disguised as a Japanese schoolboy, Collier's Weekly star humorist has been contributing to the gayety of the campaign by timely discussion of current political events. His latest effervescence, under the caption "My Conception of the Presidency," dilates on the official notification ceremonies of the several presidential nominees with a parody put into the mouth of Colonel Bryan which deserves to be embalmed. It is as follows:

Hon. Bryan say:

"A President should be like Hon. Theodore Roosevelt only more so. Malefactors, etc., needs not cringe off from me for fearful that I will burn up America when I am elected. Because I can't. A President are only a bluff. He don't amount to a rolling pin. Hon. American Govt. are a system of checks & balances, so a President are deliciously powerless when he wish to reform it. I promise to be helpless as possible. Could I reform Hon. Currancy from jaggy path of debauchery by feeding him Gold Cure or something? Ah no! What could I do with them naughty Currency when Senator Alrich are tempting him sway with rakish eye-wink? To increase weakness of my position I am willing to consult Hon. Vice-President on all matters of no importance and talk kindly to him on National subjects where common sense are not expected. I believe in deep breathing & outdoor exercise, but I are cross about that woolley tariff of sheep and should be insulted if offered a second term. Otherways I are willing to act like a Majority on all occasions and what I think about Brownsville Affair are a matter of private conscience which I refuse to discuss by advice of Hon. Campaign Manager."

Mr. Collier's Japanese schoolboy has caught the spirit of the occasion. In his facetious way he has portrayed the "chameleon-like" qualities of the Democratic candidate better than a laughing mirror. This gem is worth pasting in the scrap book.

HOW TO GET TARIFF REDUCTION.

(From the Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin.)

What a lot of fog there is surrounding the subject of a tariff reduction as an issue in the pending Presidential campaign!

A very wide and general feeling favors revision of the schedules which have grown obsolete since the enactment of the Dingley law. No rate can be made that will be the best forever, as trade conditions change. The Dingley schedules have remained unaltered longer than those of any other tariff since the foundation of the government. No wonder that the opinion exists among Protectionists as well as old-time Free Traders that the law should be readjusted to the times. The practical question arises and confronts the voter, What is the short road to this desired result? In other words, what is the practical course for the citizen who regards revision of the tariff as the important issue of the hour—shall he vote for Bryan, or shall he vote for Taft?

The answer is that the electors who want tariff revision must vote for Taft and Republican members of Congress, for tariff revision at an early day is possible only through the agency of the Republican party.

The Senate will be Republican no matter which way the people vote next November. It is against all human probability that a Democratic tariff measure could get through a Republican Senate. It is unlikely that Republicans could frame a tariff measure to which Bryan as President would affix his signature.

To elect Bryan to the Presidency would be to block the legislative machinery of the nation so far as the tariff is concerned.

To elect Taft and a Republican majority in the House of Representatives insures immediate revision of the tariff. In fact, there will be effective work on the subject before the members of the House elected next November are eligible to take their seats.

Impracticable Methods.

The representative government that has served us well for 130 years has not been for Mr. Bryan sufficiently expressive of the will of the people. We must call upon fourteen million electors to legislate directly. Could any more burdensome or inefficient method be devised than this? I believe that the referendum under certain conditions and limitations in the subdivisions of a State on certain issues may be healthful and useful, but as applied to our national government it is entirely impracticable.—Hon. Wm. H. Taft, at Columbus, Ohio.

UNION LABOR REJECTS GOMPERS BRYAN PLEA

Protests Against Attempted Wholesale Delivery of Votes from All Over Country.

Labor Leaders and Press Show that the Democratic Party Has Not Been the Friend of Labor and There Is Nothing to Assure a Conversion.

Men prominent in the trade union movement and scores who are experienced and trusted officials of labor organizations all over the country have and are declaring themselves emphatically against the candidacy of Bryan for President of the country. Many unions and central unions are refusing outright to indorse the course dictated for them by Samuel Gompers.

This opposition has been stated in the most vigorous and convincing terms and this fact shows conclusively that President Gompers did an inexpedient, a foolish and impulsive act when he launched out on a Democratic campaigning tour in the name of the American Federation of Labor.

Few men have been longer before the public as a prominent official of the trade union movement than William Little, one of the leading national organizers of the United Mine Workers of America. He is an able man and not only is he well informed relative to trade union history and principles, but he is a man of an extensive general knowledge. He is most emphatically opposed to Bryan and to the efforts of leading officials of the American Federation of Labor in trying to take trade unions into partisan politics. During an interesting interview he said:

Democratic Rule in the South.

"I wish to state that from a trade union standpoint I have nothing to say against President Gompers, but I am most strenuously opposed to his efforts to have a man like Bryan and the Democratic party elected to govern our country. To me the departure of Mr. Gompers in this respect is one of the most remarkable in the history of the trade union movement, for I personally know that wherever we find Democratic rule we find our wage workers in the most deplorable moral, social and material conditions.

"The Democrats govern the South and this is the party that President Gompers wants to have in power in the north and the west also. God forbid he succeeds. Oh, if the wage workers of this great country only knew what I and many others who have worked for trade unionism in the Southern States know not a single vote would be cast for Bryan or the Democrats by working men next fall. Why have President Gompers, Bryan and others of their present campaign been so long silent about this Democrat rule in the south? Why are they silent now about it? Is it not reasonable to think that conditions all over the country will degenerate to the level of those in the south if the nation is to be ruled by Democrats? I believe it is.

"I defy successful contradiction when I say that Democratic rule in the south is hellish rule. Thousands of persons have been disfranchised; human beings have been hunted by bloodhounds and beaten with clubs with the full knowledge of the Democratic rulers there. The peonage system, the hellish curse of the wage worker, holds sway there and is protected by Democratic rule; child labor with all of its damning and fearful consequences is an institution there and is upheld most determinedly by Democratic rule there. I could go on and on reciting the revolting conditions [illegible] but I think I have said enough to convince any reasonable man that we must as wage workers keep clear of Democratic rule. Let any one who doubts my word write to my friend Duncan McDonald and he will more than verify every word I have said."

Unions Reject the Bryan Plea.

Upon receipt of a letter from Samuel Gompers asking for support in his campaign for the Democratic party, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, Local No. 32, of Brooklyn, ordered Secretary A. J. Joos to answer, stating that it was not willing to follow any ill advice, even if it has come from the executive council of the A. F. of L.

"Cigarmakers' Union, Local 39, of this city put themselves on record as being opposed to President Gompers' endorsement of the Democratic party."

Cigarmakers' unions of New York and Chicago have taken a similar political stand to that of the above union. President Gompers is himself a member of the Cigarmakers' Union.

The Journeyman Bakers' and Confectioners International Union through its official organ has issued a statement to be sent to the various national unions throughout the country, in which it disagrees with the decision reached at a conference of the editors of the official organs of all national unions held recently to agree on a political policy in coming out for Bryan.

The Maryland State Federation of Labor, at its fourth annual meeting at Hagerstown, which adjourned September 9, decided not to indorse Bryan.

The Terre Haute Lodge of Iron and Steel Workers, the strongest trade organization in the Central Union of Terre Haute, Ind., unanimously refused to indorse the views of Samuel W. Gompers on the presidential candidacy, deciding to let its members vote as they please. The Central Union so far has refused to take up the matter.

Protest from Leaders and Press.

Frank A. Kidd, president of Columbia Typographical Union No. 101, of Washington, D. C., takes exception to the effort by Samuel Gompers to bring the labor vote into line for William J. Bryan.

"Now that Gompers has announced his programme," says he, "I do not know that anything need be said. However, members of unions, like other citizens, will exercise their individual preference at the polls, and are more than likely to be guided by their party predilections than by the political potpourri prepared by officers of the Federation of Labor. Unionism is not a political question, nor can unions as a body be swept into any political camp."

Commenting on Mr. Bryan's Labor Day visit to Chicago, the Building Trades, the official organ of the Associated Building Trades of Chicago and Cook county, although a Bryan supporter, says Bryan was buncoed when he visited Chicago. Editorially the paper declares that the whole affair looked like an attempt to punish organizations that the Federation could not control, rather than a celebration of the annual holiday of labor, concluding with the statement: "It was not a vote-making day; it was a vote-losing program."

The Labor World of Pittsburg in a recent editorial said: "It is extremely unfortunate for the trade union movement that President Gompers has reduced himself to the level of a mere common, political haranguer and agitator. He has descended to the level of the methods of the thorough-going professional political spouter. The latter invariably lives by besmearing the characters of others and imputing all kinds of dishonest motives to his opponents. This is what President Gompers has done and is doing now that he finds himself entangled in a net the intricacies of which he had no idea when he set out on his Democratic campaigning."

Taft Real Friend of Labor.

The reasons of the International Brotherhood of Steam Shovel and Dredgemen for electing William H. Taft an honorary member were given in a letter from T. J. Dolan, General Secretary-Treasurer of the union, to President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor. The letter says:

"During the last session of Congress Mr. Taft and six Congressmen—three Republicans and three Democrats—helped us to make a fight to keep wages up at Panama, and all these men were elected as honorary members of our brotherhood at the time. There is no politics in this matter as far as our organization is concerned. Of course, we appreciate very much the efforts of these men in helping us to keep up the wages of our members, and it is only quite natural that we should wish them to receive political success."

Changing Industrial Conditions.

In the ten years which has elapsed since the enactment of the Dingley Tariff, the conditions have so changed as to make a number of the schedules under that tariff too high and some too low. This renders it necessary to reexamine the schedules in order that the tariff shall be placed on a purely protective basis. By that I mean it should properly protect, against foreign competition, and afford a reasonable profit to all manufacturers, farmers, and business men, but should not be so high as to furnish a temptation to the formation of monopolies to appropriate the undue profit of excessive rates.—Hon. Wm. H. Taft, at Kansas City, Mo.

SHERMAN FOR PROTECTION

Experience Has Demonstrated that a Protective Tariff Means Prosperity.

(From Sherman's Speech of Acceptance.)

First, then, let me say that I am a protectionist. I am sufficiently practical to value the utility of a fact higher than the beauty of a theory, and I am a protectionist because experience has demonstrated that the application of that principle has lifted us as a nation to a plane of prosperity above that occupied by any other people.

I especially commend that plank of our platform which promises an early revision of tariff schedules. That pledge will be fulfilled in an adjustment based in every particular upon the broad principles of protection for all American interests; alike for labor, for capital, for producers and consumers. The Dingley bill, when enacted, was well adapted to the then existing conditions. The developments of industrial prosperity in a decade, which in volume and degree have surpassed our most roseate expectations, have so altered conditions that in certain details of schedules they no longer in every particular mete out justice to all. In this readjustment the principle of protection must and will govern; such duties must and will be imposed as will equalize the cost of production at home and abroad and insure a reasonable profit to all American interests. The Republican idea of such a profit embraces not alone the manufacturer, nor alone the capital invested, but all engaged in American production, the employer and employed, the artisan, the farmer, the miner and those engaged in transportation and trade; broadly speaking, those engaged in every pursuit and calling which our tariff directly or indirectly affects. During a statutory application of this principle, prosperity has abided with us. When a revenue tariff has been the law, adversity and want have been our portion. Our Democratic brethren, whose memories are as short as their promises are frail, and who have always exhibited a lack of capacity to profit by experience, unmindful of the distress and destruction that arrived and departed with the last Democratic administration, declare in their platform that they favor such immediate revision of * * * schedules as may be necessary to restore the tariff to a revenue basis." A "revenue basis," a "tariff for revenue only," "ultimate free trade"—all have an identical meaning; that meaning being an assault upon the American industries, an attack upon the American wage scale, a lessening demand for the products of American soil and American toil; less work, less pay, less of the necessaries of and comforts of life. In the light of history, what issue of the campaign so vitally affects American citizens? Experience, that effective teacher—effective save with the one-man power now parading under the title of the Democratic party—has taught the nation a valuable lesson and the result of the coming November election will once more prove the American people to be apt scholars. What the laborer of the land, skilled and unskilled, desires is the opportunity at all times to exchange his brain and brawn for good pay in good money. A protective tariff and the gold standard, both now the existing achievements of the Republican party, in spite of Democratic opposition, give the laborer that opportunity.

National Honor Established.

When in 1900 the Gold Standard was established by the Republican party, in spite of Democratic opposition, it completed and perfected its record as regards our national honor and party honor in meeting in full every financial obligation.—Hon. James S. Sherman.

SEVEN GOOD REASONS.

A Partial List of the Items Composing Logical Opposition to Bryan.

(From the Omaha Bee.)

Mr. Bryan's Commoner has boiled down into nine paragraphs the reasons why the Democratic candidate should be preferred by the voters. Here are seven paragraphs showing why each of Mr. Bryan's reasons are invalid:

First. Mr. Bryan is estopped from accusing the Republican party of failing to provide for electing United States Senators by popular vote. Nebraska has a provision for securing from the people an expression of choice on United States Senator, but when Mr. Bryan was a candidate for Senator in 1904 he refused to submit his candidacy to popular vote.

Second. Mr. Bryan is estopped from accusing the Republican Congress of failing to pass a law for campaign publicity. Every Democratic member of the House voted against the publicity law that was passed by Republicans simply because it included a provision for an inquiry into Democratic disfranchisement of the negro in the South.

Third. Mr. Bryan is estopped from accusing the Republican Congress for failing to pass a postal savings bank bill. He has professed to favor postal savings banks for years, but now says he will favor it only in case his guaranty deposit scheme proves a failure.

Fourth. Mr. Bryan is estopped from charging the Republican Congress with passing a currency bill "encouraging speculative banking" when his own deposit guaranty scheme would throw the door wide open to wild-cat banking.

Fifth. Mr. Bryan's charge of despotic rule by the Speaker of the House of Representatives is best answered by the unprecedented record of reform legislation enacted during the Roosevelt administration.

Sixth. Mr. Bryan should be estopped talking about the cost of living increasing faster than wages because under the last Democratic administration the trouble was to get any wages at all. Incidentally the truth of the Bryan assertion may be challenged.

Seventh. Mr. Bryan's reference to the Republican position on the tariff is pure buncombe. The Republicans favor revision whenever changed conditions require, while Mr. Bryan wants to go through a continuous performance of piece-meal reduction that would paralyze all our industries.

TAFT'S INJUNCTIONS.

President Describes Them as Charters of Liberty for All.

I ask that every responsible and fair-minded labor leader, every responsible and fair-minded member of a labor organization, read these (Taft's) injunctions for himself. If he will do so, instead of condemning them he will heartily approve of them and will recognize this further astonishing fact that the principles laid down by Judge Taft in these very injunctions, which laboring people are asked to condemn, are themselves the very principles which are now embodied in the laws or practices of every responsible labor organization. The principles which he therein so wisely and fearlessly laid down serve as a charter of liberty for all of us, for wage workers, for employers, for the general public; for they rest on the principles of fair dealing for all, of even-handed justice for all. They mark the judge who rendered them as standing for the rights of the whole people; as far as daylight is from darkness, so far is such a judge from the time-server, the truckler to the mob, or the cringing tool of great, corrupt and corrupting corporations.—President Roosevelt.

MONEY IN THE BANK.

How Depositors Are Secured Against Loss of Funds.

A Careful Student of Finance Writes About Banking Methods and Principles.

(From the Chicago News.)

It is held by advocates of the guaranty of bank deposits that banking is a quasi-public business and therefore that the State should have charge over the banks in the interests of the people. Grant this; but that is no reason for forcing one bank to guarantee the depositors in another bank.

How is it with railways? The State controls the railways, and even claims the right to fix the rates charged. So with banks; the State exacts reports, governs investments, and even establishes usury laws, which fix the maximum rates of interest. But it would never occur to a reasonable man to oblige one railway to pay damages to a traveler who met an injury due to carelessness on another railway under wholly different management. But that is exactly what the guaranty of bank deposits means. It means that one well-managed, careful, small country bank shall be called on to help pay the losses of depositors in a large speculative Wall street bank, and yet the former has no control whatever over the latter.

The recent panic scared some depositors, and they wish absolute safety in the future. That is what is wanted, even though they do not altogether know whether guaranty of deposits is the right thing or not. Very well; if a depositor wishes absolute security he can find it by depositing in a safety vault.

"Oh," says the depositor, "I want some little interest on my deposit, and the right to draw checks, and yet get absolute security, too." In short, he wishes the privileges granted by a commercial bank.

That is, the bank gives in return for the deposits: (1) A checking account, by which he can make payments without risk of carrying money about; (2) usually interest on average deposits; (3) the collection of checks and drafts on distant cities; (4) bookkeeping of the account without expense, and (5) the chance to borrow from the bank where the deposits are made. In other words, the public has chosen against absolute safety in a deposit vault in order to get the conveniences given by a commercial bank. If so, the public can never have absolute safety, and no law can give it.

By the very fact of being a commercial bank, an institution must loan its deposits to men in industry and trade, and take the risks implied in that process. The deposits are as safe as the loans to the business public—no more, no less.

If the timid depositor wishes to get at the center of the whole question of the safety of his deposits in a commercial bank, let him concentrate all his criticism, argument and time on the means of inspecting bank loans and of preventing doubtful or speculative operations by banks.

Yet, when small depositors see the national and State governments exact bonds as security for deposits they wonder why they should not have equal protection.

There are two reasons why public and private deposits should have different treatment: First, public deposits are more valuable to a bank, because they are called upon usually at regular and foreseen dates and thus a larger percentage can be loaned during the intervals than is the case with private deposits subject to daily checking. In addition, it should be remembered that public moneys are deposited by officials who are under bond to account for every cent turned over to them. There is thus a special reason for requiring bonds as security for public deposits.

If every private and public depositor exacted bonds as protection all the deposits would have to be invested in bonds, there could be no commercial banks, industry could get no use of idle funds and the reason for a bank would disappear.

"Very well," it may be rejoined, "if security in bonds is impracticable—as urged by some persons—then give us a guaranty fund of a certain small percentage of deposits, say 1 per cent, such as is required in Oklahoma. That will be enough."

To that it is to be said unequivocally and emphatically that the national banks now provide a large guaranty fund for depositors, which must be wholly used up before a depositor can lose a cent. Indeed, the whole proposal of a guaranty of deposits shows astounding ignorance of our banking system and banking operations.

The advocates of a guaranty themselves advertise the fact that in about forty-three years of the national banking system there have been losses on an average to depositors of only about one twenty-sixth of 1 per cent. Why is the loss so small? Exactly because the banks, under law, provide a guaranty fund for the ultimate redemption of deposits in (1) the total amount of the bank's capital; (2) the surplus; (3) the undivided profits, and (4) the shareholders' liability, technically equal to the capital, but practically about 30 per cent of it. In brief, the bank must first lose an amount equal to all these items before a depositor can lose a cent.

For all the 6,778 national banks, according to the accounts of May 14, 1908, this guaranty fund amounted to $1,034,470,5[illegible]

As things now stand, the self-interest of the bank is enlisted to do its business honestly, and thus insure the depositor at a great risk to the bank if it goes wrong. What more can be done for the depositor? To this the depositor may say: "We don't wish to wait until the bank pays off its depositors." But, if it wishes the privileges of a commercial bank, it must share the delays of liquidation.

If depositors wish the privileges of a commercial bank, and yet do not wish to wait until assets of a failed bank are liquidated, then they can resort to legitimate insurance, and obtain immediate redemption of deposits.

Anything can be insured if the premium is large enough to cover the risk. Since the guaranty of deposits, obtained by making all the banks contribute proportionally, is manifestly unfair—because it holds a bank responsible for losses over which it had no control—then let the depositor go to a company that insures such a risk. That is a voluntary act, and perfectly fair.

The insurance company will charge a premium based on the character of the bank's management. If a man ignorantly deposits in a speculative bank, up goes the premium; and thus the public will be driven by business rules to deposit in banks which insurance companies will accept at a lower premium. In such a way badly managed banks would be driven from business.

It may be said, however, that the bank borrows from a depositor when it receives deposits; and, as the bank exacts collateral and security from borrowers, so the bank should give the same security to the depositor as the borrower gives the bank.

If the combined banks, under a guaranty law, are expected to guarantee all depositors, then the parallel scheme would propose that all borrowers should guarantee the banks. That sort of guaranty by borrowers would never be accepted for a moment by business men, because good business men would be held liable for the notes given to banks by poor business men, and that is manifestly unjust. It would be equally unjust that sound banks should guarantee bad banks.

But the real answer to the demand that the individual bank—not all banks, good and bad together—should give its own depositor security by a guaranty fund is that the bank does now furnish a large fund in its capital, surplus, etc., and that provides a working arrangement between an individual bank and the depositor to whom it is directly responsible, without bringing in a chimerical general scheme, which is also manifestly unjust.

To put the funds of the country into the hands of less careful men than now certainly would increase wild banking, promotions of speculative enterprises and intensify all financial crises. It is just the opposite of what should be emphasized in our banking in order to get greater safety.

In truth, the safety of the depositors under any and all legislation primarily depends upon what the bank does with the deposits. In Oklahoma under the new law there will be good and bad banking, just as there will be without a guaranty system. It would be well not to set the seal of approval on the Oklahoma law until the Oklahoma banks have successfully met a commercial crisis.

If the banks, which rely on the insurance of deposits to secure business, unduly expand, then no guaranty fund of 1 per cent of deposits will be more than a leaf before a cyclone when the real crisis comes. There is certain to be some bad banking in Oklahoma. If not, why was the act passed? Solely to make the good pay for the bad.

Those who are unwilling or unable to hold their own in the competitive struggle wish to be helped out by the State; so that the wise and careful shall pay for the foolish and rash.

BRYAN AND WEST VIRGINIA.

Mr. Bryan's campaign managers have made an error in placing West Virginia in the list of States which they insist Mr. Bryan has a fair chance of carrying at the coming election.

Action of Democrats.

The West Virginia Democrats have declared in State convention that "the Democratic party is in favor of so amending the constitution as to preserve the ballot and the electorate of the State from the evils resulting from conferring such power and privilege" upon negroes. Mr. Bryan has nothing to say about that.

A few misguided negro leaders over the country have led Mr. Bryan to believe that a large number of their race will vote for him this time and on that account he is dodging the discussion of the race question.

It is unfortunate for the negroes of the country that Mr. Bryan cannot discuss the plans of the West Virginia Democrats in this campaign. He has declared that he cannot discuss the negro question, because it was not mentioned in the Democratic platform. That, of course, will prevent him from enlightening the negro voters of the country as to whether he has changed his views toward them since last April, when he made a speech in New York in which he approved the action of the Southern States that have disfranchised negro voters in order to keep the South solidly Democratic.

Voted Down The School.

The farmers up this way did not take kindly to the proposition to vote a tax for the Agricultural school at St. Hilaire, and voted pretty solid against it.

There did not seem to be any prejudice against either St. Hilaire, or the school, but the farmers viewed it in the same light that they would a fine suit of clothes, that they would like to possess but could not afford to buy, and voted no. There is no doubt of the bennefit that the school would be to the young farmer boys of Red Lake county and we believe when the people understand the matter better, that the school will be built.

Persian Justice.

Professor Williams Jackson tells in his "Persia Post and Present" some stories illustrating character in the land of Omar Khayyam. One is of a man who, suffering from inflamed eyes, went to a horse doctor for treatment. The veterinary gave him some of the salve that he used on animals, and the man lost his eyesight. He then brought suit in court to recover damages. The judge, after weighing the evidence in the case, handed down his decision as follows: "There are no damages to be recovered. The man would never have gone to a veterinary if he had not been an ass."

I feel that the country is indeed to be congratulated upon the nomination of Mr. Taft. I have known him intimately for many years and I have a peculiar feeling for him, because throughout that time he worked for the same object, with the same purposes and ideals.

I do not believe there could be found in all the country a man so well fitted to be President.

He is not only absolutely fearless, absolutely disinterested and upright, but he has the widest acquaintance with the nation's needs, without and within, and the broadest sympathies with all our citizens.

He would be as emphatically a President of the plain people as Lincoln, yet not Lincoln himself would be freer from the least taint of demagogy, the least tendency to arouse or appeal to class hatred of any kind.

He has a peculiar and intimate knowledge of and sympathy with the needs of all our people—of the farmer, of the wage earner, of the business man, of the property owner.

No matter what a man's occupation or social position, no matter what his creed, his color, or the section of the country from which he comes, if he is an honest, hard working man who tries to do his duty toward his neighbor and toward the country, he can rest assured that he will have in Mr. Taft the most upright of representatives and the most fearless of champions.

Mr. Taft stande against privileges and he stands pre-eminently for the broad principles of American citizenship which lie at the foundation of our national well being.

England's First Organ.

Elfeg, bishop of Winchester during the reign of Alfred the Great, is reputed to have procured an organ for his cathedral. It was the largest instrument then known, having 400 pipes divided among ten keys, supplied by wind from twenty-six pairs of bellows and requiring the services of no fewer than seventy blowers. Judging from this, the Winchester organ either came from Germany or was built upon a German model, for in that country, until much later, the wind was provided by a species of treadmill arrangement whereon the blowers gripped a bar, each working two pairs of bellows, like those of our smiths, with their feet.—London Queen.

Splitting Paper.

Very often it is worth knowing how to split a sheet of paper. Suppose you had an article which was printed on both sides and you desired to paste it in your scrapbook. You would paste it between two sheets of stout paper and, when nearly dry, draw these apart. You will have half of the printed sheet on each, and by the use of moisture you can readily detach them.

The Verdict.

Records of the ancient city of Gorgeana, founded in 1640, better known at the present time as York Harbor, Me., contain many quaint and unusual stories of the early life of the town.

At the entrance to York harbor a bold promontory known as Stage neck extends some distance into the sea, from which formerly in stormy weather a temporary light in the form of a lantern hoisted upon an upright pole was displayed as a warning to mariners.

One dark winter night a sloop was wrecked on these rocks. A survivor on being questioned about the catastrophe said:

"The vessel struck, turned over on her side, and the skipper and another barrel of whisky rolled overboard."

The local coroner was summoned, and this somewhat startling verdict was returned:

"We find that the deceased fell from the masthead and was killed. He rolled overboard and was drowned. He floated ashore and froze to death, and the rats eat him up alive!"—Harper's Weekly

Family Secrets.

A father complains that his little six-year-old girl is too talkative. He says: The worst of it is when we have visitors she is continually making mistakes of the worst sort, mistakes that tend to rattle the dry bones of the family skeleton in the cupboard. Recently she allowed her tongue to run away with her, as usual, the result of which was that she very much embarrassed both her father and mother, although the guests seemed delighted.

I had a very serious talk with her and impressed upon her, or tried to, that she must not tell any family secret. The next time we had company she was permitted to come to the table only by promising that she wouldn't utter a word.

She behaved beautifully and had nothing to say until the dessert was about to be taken away. Then her lips began to quiver, and finally she burst into tears.

"Why, what's the matter, darling?" her mother asked.

"I—I want some more ice cream, if that isn't a family secret," she wailed between sobs.—London Telegraph.

ROUND THE CAPITAL

Information and Gossip Picked Up Here and There in Washington.

Clerks Declare That Uncle Sam Is Stingy

WASHINGTON.—Is Uncle Sam penurious in the allotment of salaries?

This question is constantly being asked by clerks and others in the employ of the government. It is recalled that at the last congress the salaries of the cabinet officers were increased from $8,000 to $12,000 per annum. The government clerks contend that their salaries are too small, and that, as the cost of living has advanced, they should be accorded the same consideration given cabinet officials and congressmen.

The clerks are not the only ones who are grumbling at the apparent disinclination on the part of the government to increase salaries. Their superiors also are said to be in favor of increases. Many government officials who refrain from giving publicity to their utterances for obvious reasons, contend that the salary paid the president is a disgrace to a country of this size and importance. They aver that foreign nations, of less size, pay their monarchs and rulers a much larger sum than is given Mr. Roosevelt.

President Roosevelt's salary per annum is $50,000. It is conceded that this amount alone is expended each year in necessary entertainments. Vice-President Fairbanks receives only $12,000, the same amount paid Speaker Cannon of the house of representatives and the members of the cabinet. This amount, it is said by those in a position to know is spent by the recipients in about two or three months in entertainments, theater parties and sundry functions necessary to maintain their position in social circles.

Senators and representatives receive $7,500 a year. Before congress voted them an increase they received only $5,000 per annum. The ambassadors to Austria-Hungary, Brazil, France, Germany, Great Britain, Italy, Japan, Mexico, Russia and Turkey receive $17,500 per annum, while those occupying diplomatic positions in the smaller and less important countries receive a salary in proportion to the significance of the post to which they are assigned.

Salary of Consuls General and Others

THE consuls general at London and Paris each receive $12,000 per annum. In former years the consul general at London made as much as $20,000 and $30,000 a year from fees. This practice was abolished, however, and a stated salary designated by the government. The salaries of the consuls general at some of the leading posts are as follows: Canton, China, $5,500; Shanghai, $8,000; Berlin, $8,000; Havana, Cuba, $8,000; Athens, $3,000; Rome, $4,500; Yokohama, Japan, $6,000; Mexico City, Mexico, $6,000; St. Petersburg, $5,500; Cairo, Egypt, $6,000.

The chief justice of the United States supreme court receives $13,000 a year, while the associated justices receive $12,500. The United States judges of the circuit and district courts at the following cities receive salaries varying according to the importance and amount of work to be transacted. At New York the judges receive $7,000 per annum; Boston, $6,000; Portland, Me., $6,000; Pittsburg, $6,000.

The United States district attorney at New York receives $10,000 a year, while the district attorney at Boston receives $5,000. The salaries of other federal district attorneys are as follows: At Newark, N. J., $3,000; in Vermont, $3,000; in Pennsylvania, $4,500; in Maryland, $4,000; in North Carolina, $4,000; in Florida, $3,500.

The United States marshals receive from $2,000 to $5,000 per annum. The marshals in New York receive $5,000; Pennsylvania, $4,000; Maryland, $3,500. The salaries of other important positions are: Public printer, $3,500; secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, $4,000; civil service commissioner, $4,000 each; interstate commerce commissioners, $10,000 each; isthmian canal commissioners, $14,000 each; district commissioners, $5,000 each; director of the international bureau of American republics, $5,000; William Loeb, Jr., receives $6,000 for his services as secretary to the president, while the assistant cabinet officers receive only $4,000 and $4,500 per annum. The sergeant-at-arms of the senate gets $5,000.

The first assistant postmaster general receives $5,000 per annum, the second, third and fourth assistants, $4,500 each. The chief inspector of the post office department receives $4,000; the superintendent of division, $4,000; the general superintendent, $4,000.

Grim Reaper Decreasing Pension Roll

NOT since 1893 has the total United States pensioners been so low as it is at present. This fact is made known in a report by the commissioner of pensions, recently issued, and the report shows that a steady decline has set in, death cutting heavily into the ranks in the last year. The 1908 total is 951,687, and it was said that in all probability this will shrink to 900,000 within another year.

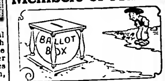
Four years ago the high water mark in pensions was reached. For a few days in August, 1904, there were more than 1,000,000 persons on the rolls. These figures, however, do not appear in the official reports, as the official record of 1904 gives an average of only 994,702. There were 998,441 pensioners on the average in 1905, and then started the downward movement, which it is expected will become more rapid from year to year. In 1906 there were 985,971 pensioners, and last year 967,371 were on the lists.

From 1866 to 1904 the army of pensioners increased eightfold. In the former year there were only 126,722 pensioners. In 1870 there were 198,686, in 1880 there were 250,802, in 1890 there were 537,944, and in 1900 there were 993,529. The average was practically at a standstill from 1900 until two years ago, when there was a loss of 13,000.

Since 1866 Uncle Sam has paid out in pensions $8,600,000,000. This is almost four times the amount of the interest bearing debt. Within recent years the total pension payments have been about $140,000,000, more than the annual expense bill of the navy, and enough to build a battleship fleet of 15 Dreadnoughts.

Only two persons are on the rolls as pensioners of the revolutionary war. They are Sarah C. Hurlbutt, 90 years old, daughter of Elijah Weeks, who served with the Massachusetts troops under Washington, and Phoebe M. Pelmeter, 87 years old, daughter of Jonathan Wooley, who fought with the New Hampshire colonials.

Members of Atlantic Fleet to Lose Vote



TWELVE thousand American citizens on the Atlantic fleet, bound around the world, will have no part in the coming national election.

The fleet will be anchored in Manila bay election day, and the Philippine statutes refuse citizenship to soldiers, sailors and marines of the United States. Eighteen hundred votes will be missing from the ballot boxes of New York. The Empire state contributed the largest number of enlisted men to the fleet.

Massachusetts and Pennsylvania are tied for second place, with 1,200 each. New England alone is represented by 1,800 and other eastern states by 3,837. Eighteen hundred southerners are with the fleet.

Illinois is represented by 865, Ohio by 750, Michigan 525 and Indiana 465. The newest state, Oklahoma, found 125 recruits. The territories are not unrepresented. There is one from Alaska, two from Arizona and six from New Mexico. The District of Columbia sent 150 men.

Three hundred on the fleet are classified as foreign or address not given.

As a matter of fact, nearly 100,000 men in the employ of the military branch of the government will not vote—60,000 soldiers and 40,000 sailors and marines. In the navy the only chance that an enlisted man has of voting is to get leave and go home at his own expense. Few do this. Officers here say that it is the custom on all ships to have a ballot box where the men vote, but this is only to satisfy the curiosity of the men themselves. It has no effect on the result.

Whether a soldier may vote depends on the laws of the state in which he is stationed. Some of the states allow the men to acquire residence, while others do not. The war department says that it has been the experience of years that the soldiers seldom avail themselves of the privilege even when it is open.

Style Requires Dash.

"I wish I had as many clothes as my bachelor girl friend," said the impecunious girl. "She always is getting something new every time I go there."

"Yes," said her companion, "but she never looks stylish. You are more stylish than she is with all her clothes. She is too neat. Her excessive neatness stamps her an old maid. You must have a sort of reckless dash about your things to look stylish."

PRESCRIBED CUTICURA

"Our baby boy broke out with eczema on his face when one month old. One place on the side of his face the size of a nickel was raw like beefsteak for three months, and he would cry out when I bathed the parts that were sore and broken out. I gave him three months' treatment from a good doctor, but at the end of that time the child was no better. Then my doctor recommended Cuticura. After using a cake of Cuticura Soap, a third of a box of Cuticura Ointment, and half a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent he was well and his face was as smooth as any baby's. He is now two years and a half old and no eczema has reappeared. Mrs. M. L. Harris, Alton, Kan., May 14 and June 12, 1907."

Aptly Defined.

A woman in a town lying under the Rockies was much distressed at hearing a small clique in her town refer to themselves as the "smart set." She appealed to an ex-United States senator and asked him what he understood by the term "the smart set." He replied: "I think I can give you an inkling. In the eastern part of Colorado and the western part of Nebraska there is a large tract of land known as the 'rain belt.' It never rains there."

Sporting Gossip.

Frederick Merkle, the substitute first baseman of the New York club of the National league, was purchased from the Tecumseh club of the Southern Michigan league. The youngster was born in Toledo, O., 22 years ago. He weighs 190 pounds in playing form, and is six feet tall in his socks. He began semi-professional ball as a pitcher about Toledo, his home. In the spring of 1906 he played for a time with the independent teams of Ohio and Indiana and later in that season was signed by Tecumseh to play third base. Subsequently Merkle was played at first base and at once made good in that position. His youth, size and strength as a natural basis for a ball player were augmented by plenty of pepper, lots of ability in fielding, strength and considerable certainty at the bat, speed and good judgment on the bases. He soon became the star player of the Southern Michigan league and attracted the attention of the major league scouts, with the result that the New York club bid for him and secured him for $2,500—a high price for a player from the Southern Michigan class. Merkle has been tried at several infield positions by Manager McGraw and in every case he acquitted himself so creditably that an indefinite retention by the New York club is assured.

Frederick Merkle.

There is great fear and much consternation among the spit-ball pitchers of the American league. The opposition that has arisen against the spitter, and the fact that it may be legislated against this winter, is the cause of all the trouble. Many of the league's best hitters contend that if the spitter is abolished it will mark the passing to the minors of a number of big league pitchers now rated as stars. There are in the American league a number of twirlers who depend almost entirely on the moist ball for success. Prominent among them are Dygert, Chesbro, Walsh, Lake and many others. The passing of the much-discussed gay deceiver would be a severe hardship to them. There are other twirlers, like Harry Howell, Tom Hughes, George Mullin and Charley Smith, who use the spitter with success, but who are still clever pitchers without it. During the last few months Howell has only used the spitter when in the hole, although he has done a lot of bluffing to deceive the batsmen. According to the Washington scribes, Tom Hughes passed up the spitter entirely in the two shutouts he administered to the Naps. These pitchers have good speed and curves as well as a change of pace, and the abolition of the spit ball would have but little effect on their work. The twirlers, however, who have done nothing but experiment with the saliva ball will be hard hit. No doubt there will be some strenuous opposition to its abolition, but it must come if batting is to be improved.

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

Gross Earnings.

St. Paul.—The supreme court is to be asked to decide whether the state or the railroads are correct in their interpretation of the meaning of "gross earnings" in the law prescribing a tax on the gross earnings of the companies.

The railway companies generally protest that they should not be asked to pay taxes on other than direct income to the corporations. The public examiner says that taxes should be paid on income from the rental of cars and equipment, from work trains used for other roads, and other items.

The state claimed taxes on these items in a recent case against the Minnesota & International road, the total back taxes being $5,256. The district court awarded only $1,400. At the same time the court gave the state a verdict for $1,450 out of $5,355 claimed from the Northwestern Telephone company. The state will appeal these two cases to the supreme court to obtain a ruling on the meaning of gross earnings.

The total amount involved among all the roads and corporations amounts to about $100,000, as there are a number of roads which have resisted payment of back taxes on disputed items.

Unusual Ignorance.

Mendota.—Living on a farm five miles beyond Mendata, in almost unbelievable ignorance of the advance of affairs in the world, it required the death of the father of the family, Peter Burke, to bring the family into contact with experiences which are almost as common as the shining of the sun or the moon. Previous to the father's death Friday no member of the family had ever been to Rosemount, a town a few miles beyond the farm; the 32-year-old son had never ridden on a railroad train, and it was during the second trip he had ever made to St. Paul, caused by his father's death, that he rode on a street car.

When the father died at a rather old age last week the family did not appear to realize what they should do with the body. A physician had not been called until the old man was practically beyond hope, the members of the family not recognizing the seriousness of his illness. Following the death no move was made to secure an undertaker until thirty-six hours later. At that time an outsider suggested that the body be taken in charge by an undertaker. Accordingly a St. Paul man was called.

Huge Deposits.

Minneapolis.—Bank deposits in Minneapolis are at the highest mark in the history of the city. They have increased $15,025,126 since the last call made by the controller of the currency for a statement of the condition of the national banks at the close of business on July 15.

The loans and discounts show an increase of $4,614,999.01 at the close of business Sept. 23, the date of a call issued late yesterday from Washington. The total resources foot up an aggregate increase of $15,576,482.12.

In making these large gains, the banks have passed their individual records for deposits, and the largest of the institutions in total resources reaches a mark unequaled in any city west of Chicago, with the exception of St. Louis. The Northwestern National is in the $30,000,000 class, a mark which it passed both the day before and the day following the call.

Coincident with the call, the clearings statement for the week ending the following day, Sept. 24, amounted to $31,434,000, a gain of 39.1 per cent over the corresponding week of last year.

Gold.

Embarrass.—There is considerable excitement among the farmers of this territory over the announcement that gold and silver has been discovered on the land of C. H. McDermott, passenger conductor on the Iron Range railroad.

Mr. McDermott had a drill driven down forty feet and sent samples to an assayer in Denver, who, after a thorough test, reported back that while there was both gold and silver in the samples submitted it was not in sufficient quantities to pay for mining it. McDermott and his neighbors believe that if the drill is sent down a few hundred feet it will strike a vein of pay ore.

Faribault.—Jon St. George and his son Fred were both badly injured by a premature blast. The men were blasting in a stone quarry when a charge of powder failed to go off. St. George, senior, began probing with a crowbar, when the entire charge exploded, throwing rocks over both of the men.

St. Paul.—The Wisconsin Central railway wired that they would honor a draft by the state for $1,644.75, being the amount of back taxes claimed by the public examiner to be due on account of certain errors and omissions in the report of the company to the state. The unreported earnings amounted to $50,812.

Red Wing.—The state board of control instructed F. A. Whittier, head of the girls' training school at Red Wing, that all girls coming under the decision of Judge Williston in the Mary Pittman case, should be released immediately from the institution. This will affect seven girls now in the school and eight others on parole.

"Sis Hopkins," that delightful rural drama, of such strong heart interest that it has almost become one of the classics of the American stage, will be the attraction at the Bijou opera house, Minneapolis, the week of October 11th. Miss Rose Melville, the famous character actress, who originated the part of "Sis," will, of course, appear in her familiar role.

Moorhead.—Two gamblers who gave their names as Charles Lundgren and Iver Johnson, and their place of residence as Duluth, fleeced Tony Jorgenson, a harvest hand, out of $30. They were hailed into police court, where they each was fined $25. They were compelled to refund Jorgenson's money and were ordered out of town. They took a train for the east.

East Grand Forks.—William Wilson, of Skagway, Alaska, went into a news depot here to buy some souvenir postal cards, and left his pocketbook containing $500 in cash and a certified check for $500 on the counter. Three hours later he missed the pocketbook and broke all the speed records to the news store. He found the book just where he left it, although a score of persons had visited the store.

THE PARAMOUNT PROBLEM.

MORE GOULD CASE BRIBERY

HOTEL EMPLOYE TOLD PRIEST OF BEING OFFERED $2,000.

Wife Submits Affidavit Defending Herself Against Charge of Drunkenness Made by Husband.

New York. — That $2,000 had been offered an employe of the Hotel St. Regis to give false testimony against Mrs. Howard Gould was the substance of an affidavit, purporting to have been made by Rev. Father Joseph G. Murray, which was presented to Justice Giegerich in the supreme court Friday.

The case came up before the justice on a motion to strike out certain allegations in Mrs. Gould's complaint in her suit for a separation from her husband, as scandalous and irrelevant. Mrs. Gould's counsel opposed the motion and presented several affidavits in which it was charged that certain witnesses had been hired to testify in favor of Mr. Gould. The affidavit of Father Murray was one of the papers presented. It declares that Michael H. Doody had told the priest that while he was employed at the Hotel St. Regis where Mrs. Gould lived, a detective went to him with the proposition that he "give a proper report of Mrs. Gould's comings and goings at the hotel, the amount of wine she drank and the names of her visitors, notably those of them that were men."

Another affidavit, made by Maurice Molloy, alleges that Molloy was under contract, while custodian of Castle Gould at Port Washington, to treat Mrs. Gould in a contemptuous fashion. The lawyer for Mrs. Gould recited how it was alleged that Molloy had gone into the house, sat on divans and puffed cigarette smoke in Mrs. Gould's face when she ordered him out of the house.

An affidavit submitted by Mrs. Gould in reply to allegations of her husband that she is addicted to the use of intoxicating liquors, says:

"When living in the country and spending most of my time in the open air, I have drunk a cocktail on sitting down to luncheon, and generally a glass of white wine with luncheon. At dinner, whenever I felt like it, I drank a cocktail and a glass of champagne. We were always accustomed to have wine served at these meals, but that was the extent of my drinking."

All the factories capable of supplying war material, the dispatch adds, are working day and night and preparations for mobilization are being openly pushed forward.

OPPOSE DR. KOCH'S THEORY.

Experts Dislike His Human-Bovine Ideas.

Washington. — Pronounced opposition to the theory advanced by Dr. Robert Koch, the eminent German scientist, who minimizes the danger of human infection from bovine tuberculosis, and who declares that the tubercle bacilli of bovine tuberculosis are different from those of human tuberculosis, developed itself at Friday's session of the International Congress on Tuberculosis. The controversy occurred in the section on "The Prevalence and Economics on Tuberculosis of Animals," and the German scientist's theories were combated by some of the most prominent veterinary physicians in the United States. Leaders in the opposition to Leaders in the opposition to the Koch theory were Dr. Otto G. Noack of Reading, Pa.; D. Arthur Hughes of Cornell university; C. J. Marshall of Philadelphia; H. Reno Reynolds of the University of Minnesota, and Veranus A. Moore of Ithaca, N. Y.

LORD ROSSLYN IS DEFEATED.

His Roulette System Proved Fallacious by Sir Hiram Maxim.

London.—The unique gambling contest between Sir Hiram Maxim and Lord Rosslyn came to an end Tuesday afternoon and shows defeat for the system advanced by the latter.

Lord Rosslyn claimed that by his system of playing it was possible to win at roulette against the Monte Carlo bank. Sir Hiram said this was impossible, and in order to settle the controversy the two men began playing roulette in a Picadilly club, Sir Hiram conducting the game in the same way it is played at Monte Carlo. Lord Rosslyn started to play with $50,000 in "dummy" money and the bank had an equal amount. Lord Rosslyn's system has been proved to be utterly fallacious.

DAVIS HELD FOR MURDER.

Suspect in Rustin Case Released on $10,000 Bail.

Omaha, Neb.—Following a five-days' legal battle before Police Judge Crawford, Charles Edward Davis was bound over to the district court Tuesday to answer the charge of murder in the first degree for the killing of Dr. Frederick Rustin on the morning of September 2. Bail was fixed at $10,000, which was promptly furnished by two brothers of the defendant, and the accused man was permitted to go, although he will remain in charge of a guard which has been retained by the Davis family.

Carload of Abandoned Children.

St. Paul, Minn.—A carload of 60 bright-looking boys and girls from New York reached St. Paul Wednesday. The unusual consignment was made up of children who had been deserted by their parents and had been sheltered in the foundling hospital of the metropolis. They are being taken to the Dakotas, where homes have been found for them among the farmers. On their arrival here about 35 of the children were transferred to a Soo line coach to be taken to points along that road in North Dakota.

Nebraska Bank Robbed.

Fairfield, Neb.—The State bank at Deweese was dynamited and robbed early Friday. All the cash, about $2,500, was taken. Tools were taken from a railroad tool-house to make an opening through the brick walls of the vault, after which the steel safe was blown open. The number of the bandits and their way of coming and going is entirely unknown.

EVANS' SON ACCUSED

HE WILL BE TRIED BY COURT MARTIAL AT MANILA.

CHARGES VERY SERIOUS

Philippine Capital Greets the Atlantic Fleet—Great Water Parade is Followed by Formal Calls.

Manila.—Lieut. Frank Taylor Evans of the battleship Louisiana and Lieut. Charles Burt of the battleship Georgia, will be tried before a special court-martial board which will assemble on the battleship Wisconsin Monday.

The charges against Lieut. Evans are for being absent from his station while acting as chief of the deck, using profane and disrespectful language to a superior officer and intoxication. The charges against Lieut. Burt are for "conduct unbecoming an officer and gentleman."

Lieut. Evans denies the charge of intoxication and says that he will offer the testimony of a number of witnesses to prove that he has been sober and quite fit for duty.

Rear Admiral as Chairman.

Lieut. Frank Taylor Evans, is the son of Admiral Robley Evans, who took the battleship fleet from Hampton Roads to the Pacific coast.

Midshipman Richard Bernard of the battleship Louisiana was tried before a court-martial board at Albany, Australia, and the sentence was dismissal from the service. Bernard was found guilty of being under the influence of liquor while on parade in Melbourne.

Midshipman Edward H. Connor of the battleship Minnesota will be tried on the charge of being under the influence of liquor while at Albany, Australia. Capt. Hugo Osterhaus of the battleship Connecticut acted as president of the court which sentenced Midshipman Bernard.

Fleet in Double Column.

Fresh from a triumphant reception in Australian ports, and with their cruise around the world two-thirds accomplished, the 16 battleships of the American fleet, which started from Hampton Roads last December, were anchored in double column Saturday off the breakwater close to the Luneta, whence a splendid view of the warships was obtainable Friday night.

After the fleet had come to anchor, thousands of residents of the islands crowded every available spot commanding a view of the anchorage and the general air of expectancy and excitement added to the eager interest that has attended the fleet's coming.

Noisy Welcome for Fleet.

Thousands of persons Saturday thronged the Luneta, or public square, which was brilliantly illuminated. A band concert with a spirited program and selections by the bugle corps of the Ninth cavalry were features of the entertainment provided for the crowds. From the harbor the long line of lights, marking the berths of the warships, twinkled in response to the blaze of electric illumination on shore, and as it grew later the buzz and hum of clattering crowds settled into the stillness of the tropical night.

There were no exchanges of formal calls with the shore until Saturday. After the water parade in the morning, in which all Manila participated, Gov. Smith called upon Admiral Sperry, who later landed and returned the call, also paying his respects to Maj. Gen. Weston, commanding the troops stationed in Manila.

Rear Admiral Sperry has finally decided not to land any men here and to maintain a practical quarantine of the ships during their stay. The officers will be allowed brief shore liberty under close restrictions.

Lively Day in Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, Pa.—Over a score of men, women and children were injured, some of them so painfully that treatment at the various hospitals was necessary, during the great historical and industrial pageant Thursday in celebration of Pittsburg's sesqui-centennial anniversary. It is estimated that over 300,000 persons lined the route of the parade. At night the streets of the city were crowded with gay masqueraders.

Minnesota Town Burned.

St. Cloud, Minn.—Foley, the county seat of Benson county, Minn., a village of 1,000 people, was practically destroyed by fire. The place has little fire protection, only a gasoline engine. Owing to strong winds, the fire spread rapidly. St. Cloud was appealed to for aid, but could do nothing. The loss is estimated at $75,000.

Cloudburst Drowns Eight.

Manila.—A belated official telegram has just been received here which reports that a cloudburst struck the penal colony at Iwahig and that eight persons were drowned, including Harold MacKnight, the superintendent of the farm.

REYNOLDS ELECTED HEAD

CHICAGOAN MADE PRESIDENT BY BANKERS AT DENVER.

Proposition to Establish Postal Savings Banks Condemned in Resolutions Adopted by Financiers.

Denver, Col.—The thirty-fourth annual convention of the American Bankers' association came to an end Thursday afternoon with the election of George M. Reynolds of Chicago, president, and Lewis E. Pierson of New York, first vice-president.

Thirty-eight new members were announced and a vice-president representing each of the states having representatives in the association was named.

The convention also placed itself squarely on record as against both the proposition to guarantee bank deposits and that to establish postal savings banks.

A lively discussion occurred over the report of the federal legislative committee opposing these plans. The resolution offered by the committee, however, contained a condemnation of the guarantee law only, making no mention of the postal savings banks. A fight led by Clifton R. Breckenridge of Arkansas was made to include condemnation of postal savings banks in the same resolutions.

An amendment to the resolution was offered substituting the words "It is a delusion that the tax upon the strong will prevent the failure of the weak," for section 8 as reported, which read: "It unjustly weakens the strong and unfairly strengthens the weak banks." The amendment was adopted and the report of the committee with its resolution was then carried without a dissenting voice.

Mr. Breckenridge then offered the following resolution, which was also adopted with only two or three dissenting votes:

"That the American Banking association condemns as unwise and hurtful all proposals to establish postal savings banks."

Nearly two hours were consumed with the reports of vice-presidents from the several states, the consensus of which was that the effects of the recent panic are rapidly passing away throughout the country.

FUTILE ATTEMPT TO ROB BANK.

Yeggmen Use Dynamite in Cogswell, N. D., and Then Flee.

Cogswell, N. D.—Citizens, aroused at 1:15 a. m. Wednesday by three distinct explosions, poured out from their homes to find that yeggmen had blown off the front door of the safe in the Sargent County State bank, but had fled before they secured any loot. The robbers stole a handcar at Nicholson on the Soo road and came here upon it. They transferred the car to the Milwaukee line and used it to make their escape. They abandoned the car near Newark, S. D., and attempted to conceal it in a cornfield. The authorities have sent to Bismarck for hounds to track the fugitives and posses are out after them.

MICHIGAN OFFICIALS OUSTED.

Collector and Special Agent at Port Huron Removed.

Washington.—As the result of a report made by the civil service commission, President Roosevelt late Friday removed Lincoln Avary, collector of the port at Port Huron, Mich., and also directed the removal of Charles H. Dalloy, special agent of the treasury at that place. The civil service committee found proof of charges of serious violations of the rules and regulations in regard to campaign assessments, which also involved, on the part of Special Agent Dalloy, "pernicious activity in politics."

Big Strike Has Collapsed.

Winnipeg, Man.—Indications are that the Canadian Pacific railroad mechanics' strike has collapsed. Bell Hardy, who has been conducting the strike from Montreal, arrived in this city Tuesday to confer with Vice-President Whyte, and if possible arrange for the men to be taken back. It is understood that a message was received from the International Labor Federation at Washington advising the men to approach the company immediately with a view to going back.

Can't Take Liquor from Depot.

Lawton, Okla. — It is a violation of the prohibition law for a transfer man or any other person to convey liquor from the railroad depot. Liquor shipped from without the state ceases to be interstate commerce after it leaves the carrier's hands. This is the opinion of Judge J. H. Wolverton of the county court, announced in a liquor case here Wednesday.

Powder House Blows Up.

Spencer, N. C.—Two lives were lost and 20 or more persons were injured in Spencer Thursday night by the explosion of a powder storage house on the yards of the Southern Railway Company, and most of the buildings near by were damaged by the shock and the fire which followed.

The Onion In Cooking.

The greatest of French cooks, being asked to give the secret of his success, answered; "The very foundation of all good cooking is butter and onion! I use them in all my sauces and gravies. They have the effect of making a customer come back for more. Butter without onion will drive the customer away after a few days. Boil the onion till it melts or entirely disappears; then add the butter and call the mixture stock."—Exchange.

Circus Folks Most Moral.

Notwithstanding the absence of the artificial safeguards that a conventional society has ordained, circus performers are, as a class, the most moral folk on the face of the earth. An old circus man expressed the fact in this way:

"For 200 years there has not been a domestic scandal nor a divorce among us when both husband and wife were from recognized circus families. In every case where there has been a scandal, either one or the other has been an outsider."—Everybody's Magazine.

The Color of Flames.

You have often noticed the many tinted bars and bands that rise in the shape of "forked tongues of flames" from wood burning in the grate. It is ten to one, however, that you never have thought to figure on the cause of the variegated hues presented by flames. To bring the matter quickly to the point, we will say that the many colors are the result of combustion among the different elements of the wood. The light blue is from the hydrogen and the white from the carbon; the violet is from the manganese, the red from the magnesia and the yellow from the soda, which are constituent parts of the wood.

A Good Opening.

Ian Maclaren was talking to a group of literary beginners in New York. "Begin your stories well," he said emphatically. "There's nothing like a good beginning. Indeed, it's half the battle." Then, with a smile, this excellent beginner of stories added, "Always bear in mind the case of the young man who, desiring to marry, secured a favorable hearing from his sweetheart's irascible father by opening the interview with the words, 'I know a way, sir, whereby you can save money.'"—Good Health.

SAYS WEALTH IS DISTRIBUTED.

Chief Statistician of Census Bureau Writes on "The Assets of the United States."

The nation's wealth is not in the hands of a few, according to L. G. Powers, chief statistician of the census bureau at Washington.

Writing on "The Assets of the United States" in the September number of the American Journal of Sociology, issued recently from the University of Chicago press, Mr. Powers has the following to say of the concentration of wealth in America:

"If we start with the value of farms and other homes which are known to be owned by men of small possessions, the savings bank deposits and other known possessions of those of moderate means, and then add the lowest popular estimates of the possessions of our millionaires, we have an aggregate far in excess of the census appraisal of national wealth, and the conclusion under such circumstances is irresistible either that the census estimates are ridiculously small or the popular estimates of the wealth of our millionaires are greatly exaggerated.

"The writer does not find any evidence that would justify either the statement that our national wealth is grossly understated or that our millionaires own so large a share of that wealth as to leave the great majority without property."

WHAT TAFT WILL DO.

"If elected I propose to devote all the ability that is in me to the constructive work of suggesting to Congress the means by which the Roosevelt policies shall be clinched."

Taft is making a good impression by his thoughtful speeches. Bryan is as clever and as interesting as ever—and as superficial.—Milwauke Evening Wisconsin.

TAFT'S INJUNCTIONS.

I ask that every responsible and fair-minded labor leader, every responsible and fair-minded member of a labor organization, read these (Taft's) injunctions for himself. If he will do so, instead of condemning them he will heartily approve of them and will recognize this further astonishing fact that the principles laid down by Judge Taft in these very injunctions, which laboring people are asked to condemn, are themselves the very principles which are now embodied in the laws or practices of every responsible labor organization. The principles which he therein so wisely and fearlessly laid down serve as a charter of liberty for all of us, for wage workers, for employers, of the general public; for they rest on the principles of fair dealing for all, of even-handed justice for all. They mark the judge who rendered them as standing for the rights of the whole people; as far as daylight is from darkness, so far is such a judge from the time-server, the truckler to the mob, or the cringing tool of great, corrupt and corrupting corporations.—President Roosevelt.

Democratic Inconsistency.

The Democratic leaders have been for years making loud declarations against corporations and trusts and railroads and have, nevertheless, instituted no legislative steps in all this time for the purpose of restraining abuses. They are now indignant that the Republican party, in carrying out the promises of its own platform, is putting into practice the principles which they, with a superb self-complacency, claim are really covered by a Democratic patent.—Hon. Wm. H. Taft, at Greensboro, North Carolina.

Society Is Sound.

In spite of the general comfort, there have been made manifest by signs not to be misunderstood, a quickening of the public conscience and a demand for the remedy of abuses, the outgrowth of this prosperity, and for a higher standard of business integrity. Every lover of his country should have a feeling of pride and exaltation in this evidence that our society is still sound at the core.—Hon. Wm. H. Taft, at Columbus, Ohio.

TRYING TO HOOD-WINK NEGROES

Democrats Pursuing Their Usual Double Faced Policy.

Upholding Disfranchisement In the South While Forming Colored Bryan Clubs in West.

(From the Baltimore Sun, Dem.)

General Winfield S. Hancock, who was the Democratic nominee for President in 1880, declared the tariff was principally a "local question"—that is to say, a Pennsylvania Democrat might be a protectionist for protection's sake, while a Democrat in Georgia or in Iowa might hold fast to the doctrine of a tariff for revenue only. The Massachusetts Democrat might be a free trader without reservation of any kind, while the West Virginia Democrat might be a free trader only with respect to commodities which were not produced by his own State. General Hancock's pronouncement was considered an ingenious evasion of the tariff issue, but it did not produce harmony in the Democratic party, and the general was defeated.

Twenty-eight years have passed since General Hancock defined the tariff as a local question upon which the Democrats of each State were free to act with regard chiefly to local interests. The principle which he then formulated seems to have been adopted by Democrats in the West in respect to the relation of the Democratic party to the negro. Last week the West Virginia Democratic convention embodied in its platform planks demanding certain qualifications for voters, designed to disfranchise many negroes. Their platform also contains a declaration in favor of separate coaches for white and negro passengers on railroads. The West Virginia Democrats not only refuse to hold out the olive branch to the negro and invite him into their fold, but they are determined to limit his political activity by a disfranchising law and to bring him under the operation of a "Jim Crow" law when he travels on the railroads of that State.

What are the Promises?

Out in Nebraska and in Kansas the Democratic campaign managers are organizing negro voters into Bryan clubs. In Ohio no effort will be spared to secure the support of the negro voters for the Democratic national ticket. What pledges have been given and what inducements have been offered does not appear. But it is a fair inference that the managers have promised to do "something for the negro," perhaps, to recognize him in the distribution of offices, if Mr. Bryan should be elected, and also to take such action as the negroes may demand in respect to the reinstatement of the negro battalion dismissed from the army by President Roosevelt for the attack on Brownsville. Last week when the West Virginia Democrats were declaring for a disfranchisement law and for a "Jim Crow" law, the Democratic convention in the Twelfth Congressional district of Ohio adopted a platform favoring "the enactment of laws which shall accord to all men accused of wrongdoing, whether soldiers or civilians, a fair and impartial trial and an opportunity to be heard before conviction or punishment." This apparently refers to the Brownsville incident. It may also have a broader meaning and a more extended application and may be susceptible of an interpretation which will make Southern Democrats open their eyes with amazement and possibly with apprehension.

Race Question "Local Issue."

There seems to be no ground for reasonable doubt that the Democratic campaign managers in the West, in the effort to secure negro support for the national ticket, are acting upon the principle that the race question is only a "local issue." It is evident that the South does not approve this plan of campaign, but is powerless to check it. The Democracy of the South is in full accord with the position taken by the West Virginia Democrats last week. And yet it is assumed by those who are trying to get negroes to support Mr. Bryan that the South will act in hearty co-operation with the Ohio, Nebraska, Kansas and Illinois Democrats, who are welcoming the negro into free fellowship in the Democratic party and probably promising to annul the decision of President Roosevelt in the Brownsville matter. The theory of Western Democrats that the race problem is merely a local issue is calculated to give the South much concern. Many Democrats in that section may question whether it is worth while to elect a Democratic president who may open wide the door of political opportunity to the negro.

"A STATESMAN WITH A CONSCIENCE."

Description of the Republican Presidential Candidate by Senator Borah of Idaho.

(From Senator Borah's Boston Speech.)

"Now, it seems to be conceded by friend and foe that few men have been nominated for the presidency whose experience, whose training and whose sound and wholesome fashion of grasping and dealing with public questions were equal to these of William H. Taft.

"He is not a crusader, he is a statesman with conscience. He has won his present position through a cheerful, unhesitating and undeviating devotion to duty, through actually achieving things on the open field of action, through an intelligent conception of the strength and worth of our great government with its checks and balances; and the strength and capacity of our citizenship with its loyalty and its patriotism.

"No man ever had a deeper regard for the fundamental principles and precepts upon which this government is founded, and no one ever had a firmer conviction that the constitution is a sufficient chart by which to measure all rights and obligations and to gauge all the demands and all the aspirations and restrain and control all the recklessness of this indomitable race of ours. Trained in the law, eleven years on the bench, he explored well the sources of jurisprudence and carried away from his work an everlasting devotion to order and justice.

"Under all circumstances and under all emergencies, he has proved himself a brave, clean-minded, self-poised and courageous statesman. No man can put his finger upon a little or cowardly act, an incompetent or questionable piece of public service—no stain upon his private life, no shadow upon his public career. And standing now in the full fierce light which beats upon a throne, with eager eyes scrutinizing every act of a long and arduous public career, no doubt arises as to his experience and ability, no challenge comes to his fine sense of duty or his patriotism."

I believe our strong party with its great principles is only in its infancy. Our glory as a nation has but just begun. There are mighty problems yet to be solved, grave questions to be answered, complex issues to be wrought out, but I believe we can trust the Grand Old Party and its leaders to care for the entire future of our Nation and of our people as it has cared for them so well in the past.—Hon. James S. Sherman.

In Des Moines Mr. Bryan talked free trade, in Indianapolis sailed into corporations, and in Topeka proclaimed the necessity of the guarantee of bank deposits. Mr. Bryan is geographically adjustable at a moment's notice, and never dismayed when one of his paramount issues blows up.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Ringing In the Ears.

"Ringing" in the ears is a most peculiar condition. It is interesting to learn that, though the brain so distinctly receives an impression of sound, there is really no sound at all. The sensation is produced by derangement of the nerves of the ear, caused by poor circulation or such pressure and interference as come from hardened, excessive wax, boils, etc. Some one oddly remarked that when the ears were ringing they were "insane." Truly, they carry wrong impressions to the brain. They record things that do not happen.

Helping the Postoffice.

In a history of the great advance in postal methods accomplished by Sir Rowland Hill is given this anecdote: To the postoffice of at that time tiny Ambleside came one day a well to do man to buy a stamp to put on the letter he was about to post. "Is this new reform going to last?" he asked the postmaster. "Certainly," was the reply. "It is quite established." "Oh well, then," said the man, resolved to give the thing generous support, "give me three stamps!"

"Why, of course I am! Anybody would if they would just deal at a reliable place," the young wife declared. "Now, there is my grocer," she continued; "he is just as obliging and thoughtful as can be. The other day I ordered a dozen oranges, and when they came I found there were but eleven in the bag, so when I went to the store again I told him so.

"'Why, yes, ma'am,' he said. 'I know there were. I had put in a dozen, but I noticed that one of them was spoiled, and of course I wouldn't send you any but the best goods, so I took it out.'

David Hume and His Wine.

A jocular bequest of David Hume to his friend John Home was curious. Home liked claret and disliked port, calling it poison, and the two friends had many discussions on the subject. They also used to have disputes as to which of them took the proper way of spelling their common family name. The philosopher, about a fortnight before his death, wrote with his own hand the following codicil to his will: "I leave to my friend, Mr. John Home of Kilduff, ten dozen of my old claret at his choice and one single bottle of that liquor called port. "Let's take his penny away from him," one bad boy suggested to the other.

"No," replied his wicked companion, "it's best to wait until he goes in and buys chocolate with it, and then we'll steal the chocolate. Wot's the use of doin' extra work?"

A Warning.

Handsome Percy Hashbrooke, the young chauffeur, drew the girl more closely to him.

"All the world loves a lover, dearest," he whispered.

But Lotta Golde's red lip curled somewhat skeptically.

"You haven't interviewed papa yet, Percy," she warned him.

With an ominous moaning sound the great car sped on.

NO GUSHER

But Tells Facts About Postum.

"We have used Postum for the past eight years," writes a Wis. lady, "and drink it three times a day. We never tire of it.

"For several years I could scarcely eat anything on account of dyspepsia, bloating after meals, palpitation, sick headache—in fact was in such misery and distress I tried living on hot water and toast for nearly a year.

"I had quit coffee, the cause of my trouble, and was using hot water, but this was not nourishing.

"Hearing of Postum I began drinking it and my ailments disappeared, and now I can eat anything I want without trouble.

"My parents and husband had about the same experience. Mother would often suffer after eating, while yet drinking coffee. My husband was a great coffee drinker and suffered from indigestion and headache.

"After he stopped coffee and began Postum both ailments left him. He will not drink anything else now and we have it three times a day. I could write more but am no gusher—only state plain facts."

VETERAN STAR OF CHICAGO WHITE SOX

Little Fredd's Parent has been doing fine work in the short field the past season for the Chicago American league team. His timely hitting has also aided greatly in making the team a contender for the pennant. Before coming to Chicago, Parent played with the Boston Americans.

MANY FREAK RECORDS MADE IN AMERICAN ASSOCIATION

Unexpected Happenings During Season of 1908—Pitchers Who Made Good When Let Go.

Numerous are the peculiar happenings that will be chronicled in the "oughty-8" history of baseball.

Unusual, astonishing and wonderful are the other adjectives that fittingly may be used when referring to other incidents of the season just finished. The American association history will be replete with things peculiar, unusual, astonishing and even wonderful. Review the "cast-off" pitchers, twirlers who were discharged from certain clubs as useless and who made doubly good and then some with other teams. Louisville passed Loulee Durham an unconditional release, and the fans who had seen the solid Lou hand out the walks by the bushel approved of the release. But Durham caught on with Carr and "came back" with a vengeance. He won many games for Indianapolis and has a record of five double-header victories. The New York Giants have hooked him for next year.

Clyde Goodwin is another. The stocky German was a screaming farce in Kansas City, but what a change there was when the former Milwaukeean sunk his signature to a Columbus contract. The metamorphosis of C. Goodwin was wonderful. He pitched winning ball from the start, and hit the ball, O, how he did clout the pill. He twirled grand ball, and hit good enough to hold down an outfield position. Then there is "Vinegar Bill" Earle Essick. He wasn't good enough for St. Paul and Kansas City got him for the draft price of $750. "Vinegar Bill" has tossed a fancy brand of ball for the Blues and he's considered some pitcher in these parts. The number of hit games, six in all, is another feature that will glisten brilliantly in this season's A. A. history.

The fine phiz of Oscar Kialock Swan, from the south, will head the no-hit gallery in the American association's section of baseball's hall of fame. "Duckey's" features have been there several years, and there may be a little dust on them, but "Swanie" cannot help but cheer up immediately when he beholds the picture master putting up such classic mugs as those of Messrs. Jess Stovall, Cliff Curtis, C. Milton Brandom, Joseph Wood, Hi West, George Upp and Rube Marquard. Seven in one season is a phenomenal record and attests in no uncertain terms the ability of the twirlers. Nothing in organized baseball has ever approached this record.

Wonderful was the early season record of Pitcher Rube Marquard of Indianapolis, so wonderful, indeed, that Brush and McGraw of the New York Giants gobbled him for the remarkable price of $11,000. Joe Wood's no hit, no run game in which only one man reached first base and then after there were two out in the ninth, was another marvelous performance. Only for a wide throw by Monte Cross, the Kansas City youngster would have equaled the world's record that has been made only twice. The unusually classy pitching and the high grade fielding this season have astonished the American association patrons as well as the American association batsmen. The great number of players who will find their way from the American association into the major league next year is still another proof that Dame Fortune has been kinder to Mr. O'Brien's league this year than ever before.

Prep School for Umpires.

Umpires have this season been abused by players, managers, owners, the press and the fans more than was ever known in the history of the game. This, in view of the time and thought given to the business by the executives of the different leagues, makes it plain that there should be a prep school for all aspirants before they are allowed to appear on the field with credentials.

MUCH DEPENDS ON COACH IN THE NEW FOOTBALL

Success or Failure of Team Is "Up To" Its Teacher More Than Ever Before.

Football under the new rules which will be more used this season will depend more upon the ability of the coach to win the games than upon the individual player, for success can only come by a careful studying out of the merits of each player who presents himself on the field and the proper preliminary coaching which will enable him to meet certain individual responsibilities which may come during the progress of each game. Under these conditions success on the gridiron this season offers more to the coach than ever before, and it is for this reason that every college is seeking talent in this direction.

The old game, with its fixed signals for each play, was easy to drill into the mind of the man, for many had learned it all at the preparatory schools. Under the revised rules, however, the coach must adopt plans to suit his team. There will be the open game for the fast and shifty back field, an average line, and good quarterback, but for the reverse conditions the line plunging and mass plays might be more effective.

The development of the kicker and those who can pass the ball accurately will cause the coaches the hardest study, and the faculty of inventiveness by the player to meet all emergencies will commend that player to the coach more than any other faculty. The ability to recover the ball on a forward pass, provided it does not touch an opponent, according to new rules, will give a player plenty of study for accuracy, while the new defense requires the team to be on its tiptoes all the time to meet the exigencies which a coach could not prearrange.

Although the preliminary training season has started, it is as yet too early to figure out the comparative merits of any team. The schedules, as a rule, are harder this season and their arrangement such that interest awakened by the opening games will be carried on throughout the season.

GETS READY FOR BIG SERIES

National Commission Adds New Rule to World's Championship Games.

In order to facilitate arrangements for the world's championship series of baseball games the national baseball commission has announced an additional detailed rule to govern the contests as follows:

'Rule 18—In order to facilitate the arrangements for all of the games during the world's series the national commission will furnish to the contesting clubs all of the general admission tickets, consisting of two sets each game, one set to be at the rate of one dollar admission and the other for the rate of $1.50 admission. All of the said tickets to have rain checks attached for all games played and the following regulations with regard to the sale of tickets and the settlement therefor shall govern:

"No tickets, excepting reserved seat coupon tickets, shall be sold before the gates are opened, and all tickets other than reserved seat tickets shall be sold only at ball park ticket offices.

"In order to furnish an accurate check on turnstiles the home club, before each game, shall furnish the business representatives of the commission with a list of the tickets given each ticket-seller. The count of the number of tickets sold shall be taken each day and compared with the turnstile registers, the larger amount to be taken as the official count.

"The contesting clubs on the day prior to the first game in the respective cities shall furnish to the representatives of the commission a diagram or list of all reserved seats, settlement to be made by the difference between the reserved seats not sold and the number listed."

FROM SICK BED.

Hope Had Vanished.

Mrs. J. H. Bennett, 59 Fountain St., Gardiner, Me., says: "My back used to trouble me so severely that at last I had to give up. I took to my bed and stayed there four months, suffering intense pain, dizziness, headache and inflammation of the bladder. Though without hope, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, and in three months was completely cured. The trouble has never returned."

MINISTER A TRIFLE MIXED UP.

Consequently There Was an Awkward Perhaps in Funeral Oration.

It was at the funeral of a man who had left his young and attractive helpmeet a widow for the third time. At the time of his death their clergyman was away on a European trip, and in this emergency the Rev. Dr. Blank was called upon.

A neighbor instructed him hastily as to the admirable qualities of the deceased, his benevolence, piety and kind disposition, and gave him various points as to his family relations. During the funeral discourse no outsider would have suspected that the clergyman had not been a lifelong friend of the dead man. When, however, he came to mention the widow in his prayer, it was evident that his data in regard to her had become a trifle confused. He said:

"And now we commend to thy care this widowed handmaid, who has been bereaved again and again and again.' Then hesitating an instant, he added: "And perhaps again."

SKIN TROUBLES CURED.

First Had Itching Rash—Threatened Later With Blood-Poison in Leg—Relied on Cuticura Remedies.

"About twelve or fifteen years ago I had a breaking-out, and it itched, and stung so badly that I could not have any peace because of it. Three doctors did not help me. Then I used some Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Resolvent and began to get better right away. They cured me and I have not been bothered with the itching since, to amount to anything. About two years ago I had la grippe and pneumonia which left me with a pain in my side. Treatment ran it into my leg, which then swelled and began to break out. The doctor was afraid it would turn to blood-poison. I used his medicine but it did no good, then I used the Cuticura Remedies three times and cured the breaking-out on my leg. J. F. Hennen, Milan, Mo., May 13, 1907."

How It Felt.

An Irish maid in the service of a Washington family recently sought permission of her mistress to take an afternoon off for the purpose of consulting a dentist.

Upon her return, the mistress said: "Well, Rosalie, did you have the tooth filled?"

"I did, mum."

"And what did the dentist fill it with—gold or amalgam?"

"I don't know just what it was, mum; but from the way I feel, I should think it was with thunder and lightning, mum."

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Arrange for Pure Milk.

Chicago has a medical cow. She was bought by a woman health department inspector, Dr. Caroline Hedger, to produce pure milk for desperately sick babies in a crowded tenement district, and, according to reports, this latest Chicago experiment in municipal ownership has been a great success. "I purchased the cow for the department," said Dr. Hedger. "I told Commissioner Evans I needed a cow to save the lives of the sick babies out my way, and he told me to buy one; so I did. Some friends of mine are taking care of her, milking her and taking the milk direct to the sick infants. It doesn't go through a dozen hands before it reaches the babies. We get enough milk to supply the babies of 14 families."

Temporarily Indisposed.

One of the workers in a Chinese mission in Philadelphia became interested in two Chinamen who, she found, owned a flourishing laundry business in her own home neighborhood. She looked in once in a while to see how things were going with them, and one morning found Sam smiling and cheerful, as usual, but John was missing.

"Where is John this morning?" she asked.

"Oh," answered Sam amiably, "Chlistian gen'leman hit him in the head with a blick, and he all same in hospital"

Australia's Wild Oysters.

Oysters are sometimes regarded as dangerous but they are not usually considered savage. A Queensland judge, however, has decided that they are wild beasts. Before a royal commission on the pearling industry, which has been sitting at Brisbane, a witness stated that eight years ago he had laid 100,000 shells in the neighborhood of Friday island. The Japanese stole the shells, and the district court judge held that as pearl shell oysters were wild animals there was no penalty for stealing them.

Difficult Advice.

"In your campaign speeches," said the idealist, "and in your private conversation, too, you must tell people only the simple and direct truth."

"Do you know," returned the candidate thoughtfully, "I don't believe people would vote for a man who seemed as ill-natured as all that!"—Washington Star.

Gave It to Them Straight.

At a heavy transfer point on Sixth avenue, says a letter to the New York Times, few seats being vacant on a Twenty-third street car, a youth darted under the arm of a stout woman and plumped himself down in the seat she was about to occupy. Glaring, she hurled at him: "If I wasn't a perfect lady I'd swat you one on the mouth." Another young man arose, raised his hat, and begged her to sit down. When seated she beamed upon him and said: "Sir, you're a gentleman; them others is hogs."

WOMAN'S BACKACHE

The back is the mainspring of woman's organism. It quickly calls attention to trouble by aching. It tells, with other symptoms, such as nervousness, headache, pains in the loins, weight in the lower part of the body, that a woman's feminine organism needs immediate attention.

In such cases the one sure remedy which speedily removes the cause, and restores the feminine organism to a healthy, normal condition is

GREAT BRITAIN SENDS WARSHIPS TO AID TURKS

Squadron Despatched from Malta to Aegean Sea--Iswolsky Conferring with Sir Edward Grey--Rumelians Welcome the "Czar" of Bulgaria.

Valetta, Island of Malta.—The battleship Prince of Wales, flagship of Prince Louis of Battenberg, the battleship Glory, the cruisers Diana and Suffolk and the torpedo boat destroyers Angler and Banshee sailed Friday for the Aegean sea.

The squadron will be followed later by the battleship Canopus and the cruiser Minerva.

It is believed the warships are going to the Turkish island of Lemnos and will go to the sultan's aid if necessary.

Rumor of Conflict on Frontier.

Vienna.—A telephone message received here from Budapest says Servians Friday killed three Austrian gendarmes on the Bosnian frontier, whereupon gunboats bombarded the Servians. No confirmation of the story has been received here.

Iswolsky Arrives in London.

London.—The center of diplomatic interest in the Balkan situation has been transferred from Paris to London by the arrival here Friday night of M. Iswolsky, the Russian minister of foreign affairs, who purposes a conference with Sir Edward Grey, the British minister of foreign affairs, concerning the situation and particularly with regard to a concert of the powers to settle the outstanding difficulties.

Rumelians Welcome Ferdinand.

Philippopolis, Bulgaria.—"The Czar of Bulgaria," or Prince Ferdinand, as he is still known officially to the rest of the world, entered Philippopolis, the capital of eastern Rumelia, at five o'clock Friday evening. He was greeted by salvos of artillery and the enthusiastic shouts of the populace. He was welcomed at the railroad station, gayly decorated in his honor, by the civil and military authorities and high dignitaries of the church, who accompanied him on a triumphal tour of the city.

New Demonstrations in Belgrade.

Belgrade, Servia.—Theater Square Friday was the scene of renewed demonstrations by the populace. They were directed mainly against the government, the demonstrators demanding the resignation of the cabinet.

The already strong movement against King Peter is growing and the organizers of it are demanding that he either declare war against Austria-Hungary or abdicate in favor of his son, Crown Prince George.

Wants Servia to Explain.

Budapest.—An explanation is being demanded of Belgrade regarding the reported calling out of the Servian reserves. Meanwhile Austria-Hungary has notified the signatory powers of the necessity adequately to protect her frontiers, including that of Bosnia and Herzegovina. Baron von Aehrenthal, the foreign minister, in view of Friday's dispatches from Belgrade, is hopeful that Servia will refrain from any further hostile action.

Austria's Big Army Ready.

Vienna.—Austria-Hungary's military preparations are so complete that should it be necessary, which is not anticipated, 150,000 men could be thrown across the Servian frontier in 24 hours. There are 10,000 men in garrison near the Drina river, between Bosnia and Servia, ready for any eventuality.

Crete Unites with Greece.

Canea, Island of Crete.—A decree announcing the union of Crete with Greece was published here Wednesday evening. Events leading up to the climax followed each other throughout the day with dramatic rapidity.

The town was bedecked and early in the morning people began flocking in from all directions. There was much firing of guns and revolvers, with plenty of cheering, but perfect order prevailed. Mussulmans mingled with Christians freely and unmolested.

At two o'clock in the afternoon a great demonstration in favor of union with Greece occurred on the military review grounds. More than 100,000 people, one of the largest crowds ever seen here, gathered at this place.

Greek Flag is Raised.

Ten thousand men marched singing and shouting to the various consulates, leaving at each of them a written copy of the resolutions adopted. They then surged to the governor's palace and lowered the flag of Crete, raising the Greek flag in its place. The flags on all the public buildings were similarly replaced by the flag of Greece. With incessant and wild cheering for the union, the great procession made its way to the fortress, where a Greek flag also was sent up to the top of the flagstaff, but the French troops insisted upon lowering it, and unfurled the flag of Crete and those of the four protecting powers.

Turkey to Appeal to Powers.

Constantinople.—The council of ministers held a long session Tuesday morning to consider the action of Bulgaria in declaring her independence of Turkey at Tirnovo Monday. It was decided that it was impossible to accept any proceedings that violated existing treaties, and that Turkey should address a circular note to the powers pointing out the necessity of taking measures to enforce respect for the treaty of Berlin.

Replying to the telegram sent to the Turkish government by Prince Ferdinand, in which he said that in declaring the independence of Bulgaria he had been compelled to respect the voice of the nation and expressed the hope that the friendly relations between the two countries would continue, Turkey says she has invited the powers to confer on the situation, and as her rights are guaranteed by the powers, she will look to them for their defense.

Servians Are Enraged.

Belgrade, Servia.—The news of Austria-Hungary's action with regard to the annexation of the provinces of Bosnia and Herzegovina has aroused Servia to the danger point. The streets are thronged with a wild mob, many of the rioters discharging their revolvers and demanding war with Austria rather than annexation.

Mediation by France.

Paris.—France has essayed the role of mediator with the object of preventing war between Turkey and Bulgaria, and as a result of Foreign Minister Pichon's series of conferences Monday with the representatives of the powers, including M. Iswolsky, the Russian foreign minister; Naoum Pasha, the Turkish ambassador to France; the Austro-Hungarian, the British, the American and the Italian ambassadors, and of active exchanges which have been going on between the various cabinets. It was announced that France, Great Britain, Russia and possibly Italy were prepared to act in unison to preserve peace and to call a conference of the signatories of the Berlin treaty to deal diplomatically with the situation that has arisen between Turkey and Bulgaria and to harmonize conflicting interests so that fresh complications may be avoided.

Bulgaria Declares Independence.

This action was taken at Tirnovo by Prince Ferdinand, who was elected prince of Bulgaria in 1667. The Bulgarian cabinet was present with the prince, having met Sunday at the frontier and journeyed with him to Tirnovo.

The proclamation was made at the cathedral of Tirnovo at 11 o'clock Monday. It was a dramatic scene, accompanied by much enthusiasm. A manifesto of independence addressed to the nation was subsequently issued by the prince.

PRETTY GIRL SLAIN

FOUND MURDERED BY ROADSIDE NEAR WADSWORTH, O.

HER FIANCE IS DETAINED

Marriage Was Set for Saturday and No Motive for the Crime Has Been Revealed.

Wadsworth, O.—With unusual energy the police authorities endeavoring to unravel the mystery of the murder of Ora Lee, 21 years old, a handsome factory girl, whose body, pierced by two bullets, was found early Friday on the road between Wadsworth and the hamlet of Custard Hook.

Guy Rasor, the man whom Miss Lee was to have married Saturday, is detained by the sheriff pending developments of the police investigation. Rasor denies all knowledge of the tragedy and in support of his denial exhibits a marriage license procured at Wooster Thursday.

The body of the young woman was found by Charles Rasor, a cousin of Guy Rasor, as he passed along the road. Two bullets had entered the girl's skull, one piercing the forehead while the second crashed through between the eye and the nose.

Motive is a Mystery.

No positive motive for the murder of the young woman yet has come to light. The band of farmers, led by Marshal Bricker, that hurried to the scene of the murder as soon as word of the tragedy was received, met Guy Rasor on the road, walking toward Wadsworth.

The police theory is that Miss Lee was killed while riding in a buggy with a male friend. The principal clew that led to the detention of Guy Rasor is the fact that along the road where the murder was committed are plainly seen the tracks of a horse with one shoe missing. An examination of the stables at the Rasor home disclosed the fact that one of Rasor's horses has a shoe missing from one of its front feet. Rasor refuses any explanation concerning this feature of the case. He declares he can prove an alibi.

May Have Seen Discarded Lover.

Another police theory is that a rival for the affections of Miss Lee may have shot the girl on learning of her approaching marriage to Rasor.

Miss Lee left Wadsworth Thursday night ostensibly to prepare for her wedding. When the body was found the hands were folded over the breast and the legs straightened out as if the corpse had been carefully arranged after death. The girl's suitcase was on the ground beside her. Her hand bag was still on her right wrist and in her left hand she clutched a handkerchief. There was no evidence of a struggle. A hundred yards from the body tracks in the dust indicated where a horse and buggy had been hitched to the fence.

Rasor apparently is overcome with grief. He declares the last time he saw his fiance was Wednesday night when they went driving.

Springfield, Ill.—After 16 hours' deliberation, the jury in the case of Abe Raymer, alleged mob leader, charged with destruction of property during the recent riots, returned a verdict of not guilty Thursday afternoon. Raymer had previously been acquitted of murder in connection with the lynching of W. K. Donnegan, an aged negro.

Lower Taxation.

St. Paul.—Owing to the increase in the amount of taxable property found in the state the state auditor, in making the levy for the taxes to be paid next year, recommends a tax of 3.33 mills, as against 3.48 mills for this year. The total amount of assessed property in 1907 was $1,048,000,000, as against a net valuation of $1,063,630,000 for this year.

Slight decreases are made in the levy for state revenue and for the university campus fund. The other levies are the same as before. To the levy made by the auditor must be added the levy of 1.23 mills for state school purposes.

In speaking of the levy State Auditor Iverson said:

"The legislature of 1907 made a tax levy of $1,700,000 for state revenue purposes for each of the years 1907 and 1908, and fixed the maximum rate of 1.7 mills for each year.

"In 1907 the maximum rate was levied. For this year, owing to the increased assessment, it is possible to reduce the rate, and we have accordingly made the rate for state revenue purposes 1.6 mills, which will produce the amount levied by the legislature. The legislature of 1907 also made a levy of $175,000 for each of four years for university campus purposes.

"In 1907 .2 of a mill was levied for that purpose. This produced more than the amount of the levy. This year the levy for university campus purposes is .15 of a mill, which will produce somewhat less than the $175,000; but taking the two years together it will produce about the required sum for the two years.

"The total levy for all state purposes in 1907 was 3.48 mills. That included .1 for soldiers' relief, .2 funding tax, 1.7 state revenue, .05 state road and bridge, .2 for university campus, 1 for the state school tax and .23 for the university."

The State's Finances.

St. Paul.—State Treasurer C. C. Dinehart has just completed a statement comparing the condition of the state's finances on Oct. 1, 1908, with Oct. 1, 1907. The reports show the total receipts of his office for the year up to Oct. 1, 1908, were $2,141,804.75, as compared with $1,683,885.40 for the previous year, a gain in favor of the present year of approximately half a million dollars.

The revenue fund on Oct. 1, 1908, contained $368,092.94 and on Oct. 1, 1907, $217,879.56.

There was $88,031.75 in the university campus fund on Oct. 1, 1907, and $264,338.05 in that fund on Oct. 1, 1908.

According to a report just completed by State Insurance Commissioner Hartigan, the receipts for his office for the nine months ending Sept. 30, 1908, showed a gain of $3,784.84 over the corresponding period for 1907. The total receipts for the current period were $56,905.38 as against $52,121.54 for 1907.

Scalded to Death.

Faribault.—Scalded alive in a large tank of boiling water was the fate of Henry Kuehl, twenty-one years of age.

Kuehl was employed at the packing plant in the North end and was assisting in killing hogs. He tried to pull one of the killed animals into the vat by its ears, when he lost his hold, slipped and fell bodily into the tank of boiling water.

It was several minutes before he could be rescued from his perilous position. Large pieces of skin and flesh fell from the body after he was taken from the tank.

Kuehl was hurried to the hospital, but there was not the slightest chance for his recovery.

Breaks the Record.

Minneapolis.—The record total of 27,667,990 bushels grain made up the September business of the Chamber of Commerce. The state inspection department passed upon 23,755 cars. Reports appeared late, delayed a day by the greater labor involved in preparing them.

Of wheat alone 17,115,440 bushels arrived in Minneapolis, most of which was immediately taken by local or country flour mills, although there was some accumulation of wheat in elevator storage late in the month.

Compared with the 27,667,990 bushels in the total, September of last year was light, receipts in that month having reached but 13,594,910. The excess for this year is 14,073,080.

With Fearful Eczema—Pain, Heat, and Tingling Were Excruciating—Cuticura Acted Like Magic.

"An eruption broke out on my daughter's chest. I took her to a doctor, and he pronounced it to be eczema of a very bad form. He treated her, but the disease spread to her back, and then the whole of her head was affected, and all her hair had to be cut off. The pain she suffered was excruciating, and with that and the heat and tingling her life was almost unbearable. Occasionally she was delirious and she did not have a proper hour's sleep for many nights. The second doctor we tried afforded her just as little relief as the first. Then I purchased Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills, and before the Ointment was three-quarters finished every trace of the disease was gone. It really seemed like magic. Mrs. T. W. A SUDDEN COLD.

Miss Helen Sauerbier, of 615 Main St., St. Joseph, Mich., writes an interesting letter on the subject of catching cold, which cannot fail to be of value to all women who catch cold easily.

PERUNA ADVISED FOR SUDDEN COLDS.

It Should be Taken According to Directions on the Bottle, at the First Appearance of the Cold.

St. Joseph, Mich., Sept., 1901.—Last winter I caught a sudden cold which developed into an unpleasant catarrh of the head and throat, depriving me of my appetite and usual good spirits. A friend who had been cured by Peruna advised me to try it and I sent for a bottle at once, and I am glad to say that in three days the phlegm had loosened, and I felt better, my appetite returned and within nine days I was in my usual good health.

Polk county farmers hav ught on to their job and will ive Jacobson their solid support

The talk of independent candi ates seems to have died out ith the healing of the wounds f the primary election.

There are numerous political eals being made, but the latest ne reported is that sheriff Nelson has made a deal to capture retty near the solid vote of Red ake Falls How did he do it? 'on answer.

Senator Sageng wants to run or congress There are a lot of ss able men that have held jobs ere, but this Otter Tail states an will hardly measure up with teenerson, who by reason of ong service has became a leader hough he is not identified with e Cannon crowd to any considerable extent. Hendram Review.

According to reports there will e a tremendous change in the ote for governor in Polk county. wo years ago Johnson carried olk by over 2000 majority while ow reports indicate 1000 majority for Jacobson. The farming ommunity are beecomming aroused to the fact that in Jacobson ey have a personal candidate r governor and they are going turn out on election day and st practically their solid vote r his election.—Norman County ndex.

Crookston will turn down the resent proposition to set off the astern part of the county and stablish the county of Nelson, he proposed county seat at 'osston is so far to the eastern art of the new county that the estern part are further from 'osston than they are from 'rookston. Under these circumstances the western part of the roposed new county have appealed to the good people of 'rookston to help them defeat he scheme, and they have not ppealed in vain, as Crookston vill cast their vote quite solid gainst any division.

Ole Sageng, says in his anocement card as a candidate for ongress that, "Minnesota has ight lawyers and one humorist o represent them in congress," and says, "The Ninth District hould send a farmer down there." Well now would not that be a bright idea for this district o send a farmer to represent hem with seven lawyers and a umorist from other parts of the tate? If you were in a lawsuit where your vital interest were at stake, which would you employ to look after your interests in court? Ole Sageng the farmer from Otter Tail county or Halvor Steenerson of Crookston one of the best lawyers in the Ninth Congressional District? Other states and other parts of this state send their best and ablest men to represent them in congress. Why should not we?

SOME FACTS.

How Nelson Earns His Salery.

When you pay a man a salery of one thousand dollars a year to attend to your work, do you expect him to do your work? If he was neglecting your work and spending his time, and your money loitering around the saloons filling up his carcass with beer, do you think you would hire him for two years more, even if his name was Nelson?

Now Mr. tax payer do you like to have the other fellow pay his share of the taxes, or do you like to pay a little more the next year to make up the deficiency?

Read this list of uncollected taxes with the citations for collections in our sheriffs pocket and our sheriff enjoying himself with "tho boys" instead of attending to the business that he is paid to do,

Partial list of uncolleceted due taxes that there was never any attempt made to collect:

Emma Fernholzon R.L.F.	$1.74,
Joseph Myron, Gervis,	2. 46.
Joseph Torgeson, Equality	2 46
Paul Provost, Louisville	6 50
Chas Wilber, Poplar River	14 76
W. A, Arthur, St. Hilaire,	13.90
Dr. Bloomberg, Do.	7. 58
Wm. Soresliel, Do.	21.05
Johnson & Jenkins, Thief River Falls,	18.78
Robert Sothern, Do.	22.67
W. A. Wright,	4.53

Citations were Issued and placed in the hands of Sheriff Nelson to collect these taxes, on August 7th, and we challenge him to cite one instance where he, or his large flock of deputy sheriffs have tried to colect one dollar of it This is the way he does our business that we are paying him a thousand dollars a year to do. But when it comes to presenting bills to the county for special deputy sheriffs, for the tax paying people to foot, he is all wool and a yard wide. We do not understand how a tax payer can go to the polls and vote for him, and then go to the annual school meeting and vote the school away from his own children to save taxes.

Prevention Better Than Cure.

In these days, when most medical men are on the still hunt for miraculous cures, specifics in one or other form, it is easy to lose sight of, at least to fail to give sufficient attention to, the matter of the cause or causes of disease and of the means of prevention as well as of the really scientific because so often simple measures calculated so to help nature as to enable her to successfully perform a cure.

We all remember how the profession ransacked the entire earth for some medicament that should "cure" scurvy. No better illustration of what good old Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes declared to be shameful to the profession could be given than the various "treatments" for scurvy till some thoughtful layman discovered the true cause of the disease to be lack of vegetable food. A rational supply of vegetables or fruit and fruit juices and a diminished ration of salt meat sufficed to render all the armies, navies and camp dwellers of the world "immune."—Health Culture.

Circus Folks Most Moral.

Notwithstanding the absence of the artificial safeguards that a conventional society has ordained, circus performers are, as a class, the most moral folk on the face of the earth. An old circus man expressed the fact in this way:

"For 200 years there has not been a domestic scandal nor a divorce among us when both husband and wife were from recognized circus families. In every case where there has been a scandal, either one or the other has been an outsider."—Everybody's Magazine.

"Years ago," said an Auburn woman eighty years young, "it was counted a sin among the good wives of the little Maine town where I was born to waste a single moment of time. I have heard my grandmother tell the story of one dame who much scandalized the church people on one never to be forgotten occasion. People who went early to church were surprised one Sabbath morning to see Aunt Betsy sitting away up in front, gray yarn stockings in her hands and her knitting-needles clicking merrily away as she worked. The minister stopped in surprise as he passed her on his way to the pulpit, but the old lady was not one whit disturbed by his disapproving air. Smiling serenely, she said complacently: 'Thought I'd knit a stitch while the people are gathering. I never was one to waste a minute, elder.' And the good dame continued to click her needles, while the horrified minister hastened to his desk. Not till he began his sermon did Aunt Betsy lay aside her Sunday knitting work."—Kennebec Journal.

LABOR LEGISLATION

Republican States Have Been Liberal in Legislation for Labor.

Democratic States Have Done Little to Make Labor Conditions Better Within Their Bounds.

It is a fact that every important step for the benefit of American labor has been taken either by a Republican Congress and administration, or by the Legislature of a Republican State, of course with the consent, and sometimes by the advice, of the State executive. Democratic Congresses have been notably negligent in this respect, and Democratic States have either done nothing to make labor conditions better within their bounds, or have slowly and reluctantly followed at a distance in the trail of Republican reforms.

State Legislation.

The States have control of labor legislation within their respective bounds, federal authority being confined, so far as labor is concerned, to the District of Columbia and the territories, federal reservations and federal public works. The story of labor legislation shows that nearly all labor-reforms originated in Republican States, and at the present day the Republicans are far ahead of the Democrats in the enactment and enforcement of laws for the welfare of men and women and children who work for a living. Twenty-six out of thirty Republican States have labor bureaus, and only seven out of sixteen Democratic States have similar bureaus, without which labor laws are often dead letters. Twenty-three Republican States have factory inspectors to see to the enforcement of the factory laws. Only six Democratic States have factory inspection services. Fifteen States—thirteen Republican and two Democratic—have free employment agencies. Eighteen States have laws on their statute books prohibiting labor on government works or public contracts for more than eight hours a day. Of these States sixteen are Republican and two Democratic. Four Republican States and one Democratic State have laws declaring eight hours to be a legal working day in the absence of a contract. Twenty-seven States prohibit the employment of children under fourteen years of age in factories. Of these twenty-three are Republican and four are Democratic States. Laws limiting the hours of the employment of children in factories or stores have been enacted in twenty-four Republican and thirteen Democratic States. Eighteen Republican and ten Democratic States prohibit night work by children. Twelve Republican and three Democratic States prohibit the employment of children in operating dangerous machinery or cleaning machinery in motion. Fifteen Republican and six Democratic States limit the hours of labor of women. It should be noted that twelve of the Republican States which limit women's hours of labor have factory inspectors to see that the law is obeyed, while only three of the Democratic States make such provision. In twenty-three Republican and ten Democratic States employers are required by law to provide seats for female workers.

Twelve States have enacted legislation intended to effect the extinction of the sweatshop system, with its degrading and revolting accessories. Of these twelve States ten are Republican and two Democratic. Seventeen Republican and five Democratic States have laws requiring the payment of wages weekly or fortnightly, or, in some instances, prohibiting a longer period than one month between pay days.

Trade-Union Labels.

Fourteen Republican States and only one Democratic State—Nevada—have laws in force prohibiting employers from discouraging persons on account of membership in labor organizations, or from compelling persons to agree not to become members of labor organizations as a condition of securing employment or continuing in their employ. Forty States have passed laws allowing trade unions to adopt labels or trademarks to be used to designate products of the labor of their members, and prohibiting the counterfeiting of the use of such labels or trade-marks by unauthorized persons. Of these States twenty-eight are Republican and twelve are Democratic.

The foregoing presents for consideration by intelligent, patriotic labor substantial facts and figures taken from the statute books of the several States. No platitude can upset them. They prove the records of the Republican party and of the Democracy on the labor issue, and they must convince every reasonable reader that the Republican party has not only brought American labor up to its present honorable standard, but that labor can look only to the Republican party for assurance of protection and prosperity in the future.

Would Restrain Unlawful Trusts.

Mr. Bryan asks me what I would do with the trusts. I answer that I would restrain unlawful trusts with all the efficiency of injunctive process and would punish with all the severity of criminal prosecution every attempt on the part of aggregated capital to suppress competition.—Hon. Wm. H. Taft, at Columbus. Ohio.

COCKRAN ON TAFT.

There is a remarkable unanimity of opinion of Judge Taft in all parties and in all sections. Men pay tribute to his remarkable ability even where party politics may exert such an influence as to demand the espousing of the rival presidential candidate's cause. As an illustration W. Bourke Cockran in an interview at Boston the other day said:

"Yes, I shall support Bryan; he is the best candidate the Democrats could put up. Taft, however, is the greatest and best qualified nominee ever offered in any republic in the world. He is a greater man than Roosevelt, and when surrounded by the same environments that made Roosevelt great will prove a bigger man. Taft is a wonderful administrator, the greatest the country has ever seen, and is a wonderful worker."

Hanging as a Sport.

We would not deny the gravity of death. It is a quite serious matter even to those of us who, while conscious of, or at least admitting, no really sinful performances in the past, would nevertheless, if pressed, confess to certain minor indiscretions which we would be only too willing to join with the Lord in forgetting. Nevertheless, if form or ceremony or general interest be considered the criterion, dying is one of the most popular things one can do. Nobody goes to see a man born, but the entire community turns out to see him buried. Indeed it is well known that many people, perhaps a majority, derive actual enjoyment from beholding with their own eyes life flicker out of a person's body. The almost universal satisfaction found from time immemorial in witnessing a hanging we can understand. The event is more spectacular and less expensive than a circus, possesses grisly human interest to a distinctive degree, is presumably grimly just and, in any case, is unpreventable. If the hanging is to take place anyway, why shouldn't we see it? That is the reasoning, and it seems good enough, if one cares for that variety of sport. — George Harvey in North American Review.

Joining the Great.

An Oxford undergraduate was reciting a memorized oration in one of the classes in public speaking. After the first two sentences his memory failed, and a look of blank despair came over his face. He began as follows:

"Ladies and Gentlemen—Pitt is dead. Fox is dead. Gladstone is dead." Then, forgetting, he hesitated for a moment and continued, "And—I—I am beginning to feel pretty sick myself."—Life's Weekly.

Carlyle Was a Terror.

The domestic infelicity of the Carlyles is common knowledge, but it is not inappropriate to give Mrs. Carlyle's view of her husband. "If he would only be satisfied!" she used to sometimes complain of Carlyle. "But I have had to learn that when he does not find fault he is pleased, and that has to content me."

On one occasion when Carlyle was away from home Mrs. Carlyle busied herself to get all in perfect order for her husband's arrival, and when all was complete—his dinner ready, his armchair in its usual position, his pipe and tobacco prepared, all looking as comfortable as possible—Mrs. C. sat down at last to rest and to expect him with a quiet mind. He arrived, and "after he had greeted me, what do you think he did? He walked to the window and shook it and asked, 'Where's the wedge of the window?' And until we had found that blessed wedge nothing would content him. He said the window would rattle and spoil all."

Soft and Light.

A lady famed for her skill in cooking was entertaining a number of her friends at tea. Everything on the table was much admired, but the excellence of the sponge cake was especially the subject of remark.

"Oh," exclaimed one of the guests, "it is so beautifully soft and light! Do tell me where you got the recipe?"

"I am very glad," replied the hostess, "that you find it so soft and light: I made it out of my own head."—Illustrated Bits.

Great Writers Not Correct Writers.

There is not a single great author in our literature in whose works numerous errors have not been pointed out or thought to be pointed out. They are charged with violating rules involving the purity if not the permanence of the language. A somewhat depressing inference follows from the situation thus revealed. The ability to write English correctly does not belong to the great masters of our speech. It is limited to the obscure men who have devoted themselves to the task of showing how far these vaunted writers have fallen short of the ideas of linguistic propriety entertained by their unrecognized betters. As a result of these critical crusades there is no escape from the dismal conclusion that the correct use of the language is not to be found in the authors whom every one reads with pleasure, but is an accomplishment reserved exclusively for those whom nobody can succeed in reading at all.—Professor Thomas R. Lounsbury in Harper's Magazine.

S. A. Swanson Republican candidate for Judge of Probate, has been a resident of what is now Red Lake County for 27 years, coming here with his parents from New Jersey April 12, 1881. In 1892 he began teaching, and divided his time between that vocation and work on the homestead until Dec. 26, 1896, when he was appointed the first Register of Deeds of Red Lake County in which capacity he served two years.

Since that he has asked for no county office, but has twice been a candidate for the legislature, in 1900 carrying this county by over 300 for Representative, and a second time in 1902 getting a majority of 841 for State Senator both times being defeated by the heavy opposition vote from the other counties in this district where he was unknown.

His fidelity to friends and fairness in all business transactions have gained him cordial support in the parts where he is known.

As a candidate for Judge of Probate before the voters of Red Lake County he asks a fair consideration from every voter in the county.

An Unexpected Burns Lecture.

John Augustus O'Shea used to be in considerable request as a lecturer on his military experiences. Once, at Dumfries, he came upon the platform wearing in his buttonhole a daisy, which he quietly removed and held up.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he began, "I hold in my hand a 'wee modest flower' I plucked this evening from the grave of Robert Burns." The audience was interested and became enthralled as the lecturer went on to speak of the national poet. Then, suddenly recollecting that Burns had nothing to do with his subject, he stopped abruptly. "And now," said Mr. O'Shea, "I will proceed to relate my experiences in the war."

But by this time he had thoroughly engaged the sympathies of his listeners, who would not hear of another subject. "Never min' the war, sir," they vociferated; "gie us Robbie Burns!" And he did. This extempore oration afterward became one of the most popular of Mr. O'Shea's lectures. —London Chronicle.

Shadow Etiquette.

"I saluted the Kaffir chief respectfully and hearty," said the sailor. "Can you imagine my surprise when he give me a kick?

"'Get off my shadder,' he says.

"'Wot?'

"'Get off my shadder.'

"I was standing, by chance, on his shodder, the shadder of his stomach. I skipped from there to the face. He groaned. When I got on to sunlit ground again he says to me:

"'Didn't you never have no bringin' up? Look at you now, lengthenin' out your shadow longer'n mine. Crouch, consarn you, or I'll warm your hide with this here club.'"

The sailor gave a loud laugh and emptied his glass of milk.

"Them Kaffirs," he said, "regards their shadders as part of themselves. A polite Kaffir would no more walk on another's shadder than a polite American would hit a lady. They have a regular shadder etiquette. You mustn't on no account let your shadder be longer than a superior's. You must crouch to make it smaller, and that there crouch for the purpose of diminishin' the shadder is thought by the Spencerian philosophers—I don't say I think so, mind—to be the origin of the bow."—New Orleans Times-Democrat

Family Secrets.

A father complains that his little six-year-old girl is too talkative. He says: The worst of it is when we have visitors she is continually making mistakes of the worst sort, mistakes that tend to rattle the dry bones of the family skeleton in the cupboard. Recently she allowed her tongue to run away with her, as usual, the result of which was that she very much embarrassed both her father and mother, although the guests seemed delighted.

I had a very serious talk with her and impressed upon her, or tried to, that she must not tell any family secret. The next time we had company she was permitted to come to the table only by promising that she wouldn't utter a word.

She behaved beautifully and had nothing to say until the dessert was about to be taken away. Then her lips began to quiver, and finally she burst into tears.

"Why, what's the matter, darling?" her mother asked.

RHEUMATISM PRESCRIPTION

The increased use of whiskey for rheumatism is causing considerable discussion among the medical fraternity. It is an almost infallible cure when mixed with certain other ingredients and taken properly. The following formula is effective: "To one-half pint of good whiskey add one ounce of Toris Compound and one ounce of Syrup Sarsaparilla Compound. Take a tablespoonful doses before each meal and before retiring."

Toris compound is a product of the laboratories of the Globe Pharmaceutical Co., Chicago, but it as well as the other ingredients can be had from any good druggist.

PASSING OF JOE GANS ENDS VARIED CAREER

Colored Wonder, Always a Figure in Lightweight Championship, Now a Has-Been.

The sun of fame set on one of the most spectacular pugilistic careers in the history of the prize ring when Nelson—a mere physical entity, a personified iron jaw, an embodied punch tester, a quantity which might be stamped with little more than the purely physical—for the second time battered down Joe Gans, and thereby closed the last chapter in the history of this famous colored fighter at Colma.

Gans was a real factor. He stands out before the world as a man who was a self-confessed cheater, a person who bartered even his own good name for the chance of a little loose change, a prevaricator and stronger than that, and for everything that in a pugilist of integrity is considered impossible.

Yet, from the flames of his past, cleansed in the eyes of the public, he won back the championship. Not only that, but, despite his color, he was a popular fighter, and won his way into the game as an able exponent of it.

Exposure of dishonesty in almost any sport, professional or amateur, is certain to be followed by loss of reputation and standing and ultimate oblivion; yet Gans not only survived his own story of his early shortcomings, but was never more popular in his entire career than after he told the San Francisco newspapers how he had cheated the public in the McGovern, Britt and other contests.

The mind of man fails to fathom such things. It may be possible that the fighter was among that number of great history makers whose ability at his one specialty was such that his shortcomings in other respects were condoned.

Pugilistically, Gans died at the age of 34—not so advanced a period of life but that he might have been supposed to have retained his best form. Fitzsimmons did it at a much later stage of his career. But then the freckled one was 27 years of age when he entered upon his real ring career, whereas Gans was but 16 years old when he began to attract attention. Since that time Gans has been fighting for his livelihood and the end of a seesaw approximates the story of his life in the ring.

For years Gans has been a lightweight champion factor, but his celebrated relapses continually prevented him from rising to any safe degree of celebrity. Years ago he was believed to be the best man in the world at his weight. He always had the edge on Frank Erne, who was then champion, but Gans lost to him the first time through manipulation, according to Gans' own story. When they subsequently met again, Gans put it over the clever white boy in one round.

CUE KNIGHTS STIRRING

Well Known Billiard Experts in Training for Busy Season.

Billiards will be given a great boon this season by a big championship tournament which is being planned for the fall months following the elections. All the professional stars are getting into shape, and from the ranks of the shortstops it is expected that several new men will be brought into prominence. The falling off of the old champions and the rapid advance of several of the younger generation is giving the billiard world a variety of changes.

Jake Schaefer, who has been the bright particular star for a half century, has been taking a complete rest for several months out in the Rockies, following his breakdown last spring. Schaefer says his health has considerably improved and that he hopes to again wrest away the trophy from his old rival.

Sutton is just getting in his fall crops on his Illinois farm and will soon be back in his Chicago room to begin his cue practice. Willie Hoppe, who won the 18.2 championship trophy and then returned it because he wished the conditions changed for three instead of one night games, has been taking things easy since last spring, and as a result is getting to be a great strapping youngster. Hoppe does some practice at home, and believes that this season he will play better billiards than ever.

MANY NOVELTIES PREDICTED IN THIS YEAR'S FOOTBALL

Coaches of Big College Elevens Expected to Spring Startling Play—To Develop Forward Pass.

If the football season of 1908 does not produce several times as much novelty and science in the way of new plays as any of its predecessors it will not be the fault of the coaches and players who represent the eastern "Big Five"—Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Pennsylvania and Cornell. At every one of these institutions there has been shown a disposition to rush the season. Rudimentary knowledge of the game is not being ignored, but it is being rushed along and made subsidiary to the strategic side of the game. That this is so is proven conclusively by the manner in which veteran players of former days have been flocking back to assist in building up new offensive tactics.

The forward pass is certain to be productive of the most startling revolutions this fall. Without exception all these coaches are working with it as the basis of their new plays. It has now been a part of the rules for two years, but this time has been required to familiarize players with its basic principles. Its possibilities have not by any means been explored to their limit.

Accuracy in throwing and catching the forward pass will be the keynote to success with this play this fall. When the play was first introduced it did not matter a whole lot how much accuracy there was in the play, because it was in such an indiscriminate manner. Then the play was used very much as the resort of the weaker and inferior team, which trusted largely to luck in making the play a success. But this year a team is so restricted in the use of the play that it must be developed to a high degree of perfection to be a winner. First emphasis must be placed on developing several players who can throw the ball any given distance with enough speed and accuracy to enable one of his team mates to recover it without fumbling. The change in the rules, whereby a fumbled forward pass can be recovered only by the player who fumbled it on the passer's side, makes this point doubly important.

It has been one of the inexplicable things of modern football that so much poor passing and poorer catching of the forward pass should be tolerated by up-to-date coaches. At any rate coaches appear to have realized the handicap this weakness has been to winning teams, and we may look for a radical improvement this fall.

NOTES OF THE DIAMOND

Kid Elberfeld has behaved unusually well for the manager of a team that only wins a game every now and then.

According to those who know, the famous Ed. Walsh is drawing only $3,500 for his services as the White Sox's star twirler.

Joe Cantillon doesn't frequent the coaching lines as often as of yore. He does most of the directing from the bench.

Catcher Street of the Washington team, enjoys the nickname "Gabby" because he's always talking.

Washington's four outfielders, Milan, Ganley, Pickering and Clymer, all hit from the left side of the plate.

Chase Will Remain Outlaw.

If reports from San Jose, Cal., are correct appearances indicate that Hal Chase, the former first baseman of the Yankees, who quit the team the latter part of last month to return to his California home, intends to make good his statement that he was through with the east and major league baseball. It is said that the Boston American league team, through its western agent, had made Chase a good offer to join that club.

According to report the Red Sox management want so far as to offer the first baseman the captaincy and managership of the team for next season if he would refrain from playing outlaw ball and join the ranks under John I. Taylor. Chase is said to have turned down the proposition and reiterated his farewell statement.

SINKS AND DRAINS A FREQUENT CAUSE OF TYPHOID

Purify These and You Will Be Safe From Contagion.

DISINFECTING THE ONLY PREVENTIVE

Borax, a Simple, Safe and Sure Method.

How to keep our homes clean, sweet and free from germ influences is a question.

While there is no occasion for alarm, it is always well to be forearmed on the theory that "An Ounce of Prevention Is Better Than a Pound of Cure," and no ounce of prevention has yet been discovered that is more simple, more direct and more effective, yet harmless to the human system, than Borax.

Borax has been known and used for generations as a purifier and preventive against epidemic influences originating from uncleanly conditions resulting from unsanitary sinks and drains, and when used as a hot solution in the proportion of two tablespoonfuls to a gallon of hot water flushed through the offending locations, removes every trace of disease germs and renders the pipes clean and wholesome.

Borax in addition to its hygienic qualities, is a household necessity, and can be used for numberless domestic purposes. It softens the water, makes linen dazzling white, will cleanse every article in the kitchen or dining room and make it bright, will prevent moths, soften and whiten the skin, remove dandruff and cleanse the scalp, and for cleansing and sterilizing baby's milk bottle and nipple has no equal.

Borax, unlike every other cleanser and disinfectant, is absolutely harmless to the system, and is safe, simple, economical, and can be purchased at any druggist or grocery. A dainty book in colors, called the "Jingle Book," will be sent free to any Mother sending name and address of her baby and tops from two one-pound cartons of "20-Mule-Team" Borax, with 5c in stamps. Address Pacific Coast Borax Co., Chicago, Ill.

A QUESTION OF OWNERSHIP.

"Hullo, there goes old Richman! I hear he's got two lovely daughters."

"No, he hasn't, only one. I've got the other."

India's Precious Metals.

It is estimated that $1,500,000,000 in gold, and perhaps as much in silver, is hidden away in the Hindu stocking. Vast quantities of the precious metals are known to be kept in the form of personal ornaments. From time immemorial India has been a reservoir into which the precious metals have flowed from all quarters of the globe, only to disappear from statistics. Could the idle wealth be drawn upon, the effect on the industrial and commercial life of the country would be very great. It is, therefore, a matter of concern to try to turn India's dormant capital to active use. It may be impossible to do it. The Oriental mind views everything in a way incomprehensible to westerners. But if only a tithe of the concealed hoards of India were vitalized a new aspect might be given to the conditions of life in England's great eastern empire.

WANTED TO KNOW

The Truth About Grape-Nuts Food.

It doesn't matter so much what you hear about a thing, it's what you know that counts. And correct knowledge is most likely to come from personal experience.

"About a year ago," writes a N. Y. man, "I was bothered by indigestion, especially during the forenoon. I tried several remedies without any permanent improvement.

"My breakfast usually consisted of oatmeal, steak or chops, bread, coffee and some fruit.

"Hearing so much about Grape-Nuts, I concluded to give it a trial and find out if all I had heard of it was true.

"So I began with Grape-Nuts and cream, 2 soft boiled eggs, toast, a cup of Postum and some fruit. Before the end of the first week I was rid of the acidity of the stomach and felt much relieved.

"By the end of the second week all traces of indigestion had disappeared and I was in first rate health once more. Before beginning this course of diet, I never had any appetite for lunch, but now I can enjoy a hearty meal at noon time." "There's a Reason."

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

Shot by Policeman.

Minneapolis. — Theodore Hedine, five and a half years old and residing with his parents at 2436 Thirty-second avenue south, was shot through the eye and killed, and Miss Julia Churchill, 2341 Twenty-eighth avenue south, was disfigured probably for life in Minneapolis Sunday night by shots fired by Officer John Connoly of the South Side station.

The shooting occurred while Officer Connoly was trying to arrest Ernest Dwinell for drunkenness and disorderly conduct shortly before six o'clock at Twenty-seventh avenue and Twenty-fifth street south, in a district which is known as "the Hub of Hell."

When the officer attempted to make the arrest he was attacked by a band of rowdies who tried to get Dwinell away from him. The officer fired one shot to frighten them, and this shot struck the ground, glanced upward, and struck the Hedine boy, who was standing with his father on the opposite corner, about 150 feet distant.

Resort Burns.

White Bear.—Wildwood, the popular summer resort on the shores of White Bear Lake, was swept by a conflagration last night that caused a loss estimated at between $50,000 and $75,000 and destroyed most of the buildings in the park. The losers by the fire are the Twin City Rapid Transit company, which owns the buildings, and H. M. Barnet, who operates the amusement privileges and the pavilion. The company places its loss at about $40,000, with 70 per cent insurance, and Mr. Barnet estimates that his loss will be between $15,000 and $20,000, fully covered by insurance.

The fire started in the kitchen of the pavilion and was discovered by Andrew Peterson, the night watchman, who attempted to put out the fire, but a stiff breeze, blowing from the lake, quickly put the flames beyond his control, and in an incredibly short time the entire structure was enveloped in flames.

Big Game.

America.—Big game is becoming more numerous in the vicinity of the Lake of the Woods. More members of the bear family have been killed this season in eastern Roseau county than in many years. Charles McLana of Warroad already has nineteen black bears to his credit, all killed by him in the rocky fastnesses bordering the northwest shore of the Lake of the Woods.

That the numerous forest fires are in part responsible for the increased number of bears in this section is probable, although black bear, with an occasional brown bear, were frequently seen prior to the forest fires.

Moose and deer are also apparently increasing in numbers.

Vandals at Chisholm.

Chisholm.—The month just closed has been the heaviest in municipal court work in the history of the village. The receipts from fines have amounted to over $1,300. A room in the schoolhouse has been fitted up as a jail, with cells taken from the burned jail, and on the average four intoxicated men a day are either compelled to pay fines or are sent to the temporary jail.

The fire is indirectly the cause of an increase in crime. Pickpockets, thieves and toughs came in to ply their trade. The next month will probably bring the court records down to practically where they were before the fire.

School Apportionment.

St. Paul.—State Superintendent J. W. Olsen certified to the state auditor the lists of the several classes of schools entitled to special state aid for the year ending July 31, 1908.

On account of the increase in the number of schools that have qualified for the aid, the appropriations are not sufficient to admit of each school receiving the full amount to which it is actually entitled under the law. It will be necessary to ask the legislature to make a deficiency appropriation. State high schools are entitled to $1,500 each, graded to $550, semi-graded to $250, first class rural to $125 and second class rural to 50.

NEWS NOTES.

Short Course Scholarships.

As one means of promoting the cause of agriculture in St. Louis County, the Commercial Club of Duluth and the Land Department of the Duluth and Iron Range Railway jointly offered to pay the entire expense of sending one member to the Farmers' Short Course at the College of Agriculture from each of the three farmers' clubs making the largest and most desirable contribution to the St. Louis County exhibit of the recent state fair. The farmers' clubs of Meadowlands, Embarrass River and Ashawa are the winners. D. O. Anderson, of Meadowlands, has been selected by his club to be one of the beneficiaries and a selection will soon be announced by the club at Embarrass River and at Ashawa.

This Short Course for Farmers has been established for eight years. Its benefits are for mature men and women who cannot avail themselves of the regular and longer courses of study. The next session will open on Friday, Jan. 15, 1909, and will continue for four weeks. Instruction will be given in subjects of interest to farmers of today. One hundred forty-one registered for the course last winter and found it exceedingly helpful.

Brandon.—A farmers' co-operative store just organized here, has purchased the $15,000 stock of general merchandise of F. W. Ruppelius. August Lane is president and Nels Augdahl secretary of the new firm. Mr. Ruppelius will manage the store.

Red Wing.—Frontenac for the third time within a year was the scene of a daring daylight robbery and August Santleman, manager of the Frontenac store, was the three-time victim. Some time in the afternoon while he was busy waiting upon his customers sneak thieves entered and unobserved successfully extracted a $400 roll of currency from the open safe and made their escape.

The attraction at the Bijou Opera House, Minneapolis, for the week of October 25th, will be a new melodrama of New York life, produced under the management of A. H. Woods, entitled "Tony the Bootblack," in which Dave Genaro and Ray Bailey, the well known vaudeville headliners, are starring. It will be handsomely staged, and a competent company will be seen in support of Genaro and Bailey.

Dassel.—Fully conscious that she was acting contrary to her parents' injunctions and wishes, Mrs. George L. Peterson and little daughter, Helen, left town, where they had been living with her parents, and after stopping in St. Paul for a few hours, went to Stillwater yesterday afternoon to visit the husband and father who is a convict in the hospital ward of the state penitentiary.

C. L. Pillsbury, a noted electric engineer, has designed for the new Miles Theatre of Minneapolis one of the most complete electric equipments in the west. Nearly 6,000 electric lamps will be used in the interior and exterior decorative and illuminative lighting, installed in steel conduits. The contract for the electrical work has been let to the Minneapolis Electric Equipment Co., of which Mr. Theo. L. Hays is the head.

St. Paul.—John A. Hartigan, state insurance commissioner, has issued a bulletin dealing with the work of his department. During the last nine months the receipts of the insurance department have been $56,906.38 against $52,121.54 in 1907. This is an increase of $4,784.84. The California Insurance company of San Francisco and the Midland Life association of St. Paul have been licensed to transact business in the state.

TRAINING FOR THE NEXT MARATHON.

FLEET DELAYED BY STORM

RAN INTO A TERRIFIC GALE NORTH OF LUZON.

One Man Drowned and Some Damage Done to Vessels—Arrival at Yokohama Sunday.

Tokyo. — The delay of the American battleship fleet arriving at Yokohama was due to a tremendous storm off the north coast of the Island of Luzon of the Philippine group. The storm began on the morning of October 12 and continued until the afternoon of October 13. One man was drowned and some damage resulted to the fleet.

The wireless dispatch from the Connecticut was dated 5:10 a. m. October 17 and was sent by way of Shimonozeki wireless station to this place. It did not give the details of the storm encountered by the fleet, but simply stated that on the morning of October 12 the fleet ran into a terrific gale that assumed the proportions of a typhoon, off the northern coast of Luzon.

Tremendous seas were kicked up and one man was washed overboard. The dispatch did not state from what ship the man was lost. There was some slight damage caused by the heavy seas, but nothing of a serious nature, and the dispatch stated that all was well with the ships at that time.

Vice-Admiral Saito has received a wireless message from Rear Admiral Sperry thanking him for the welcome extended to the fleet by wireless telegraph.

One More Balloon in Sea.

The men were brought here and Schreider is now in an infirmary, where his condition is said to be quite serious. The rescue took place about 240 miles from Spurnhead.

The Connecticut, the flagship of Admiral Sperry, had taken a position to one side and was witnessing the maneuvers. The warships are described as all being in splendid condition. The gunboat Yankton came into Yokohama harbor at ten o'clock Friday morning.

TURKEY FEARS WAR

DISTURBED BY THE MILITARY ACTIVITY OF BULGARIA.

THREAT FOR MONTENEGRO

Austrian Fleet Anchors Close to Its Seaport — Powers Agree on Program for the Conference.

Constantinople.—Disturbed by the news of Bulgaria's military activity, the Porte has instructed the Turkish representatives abroad to call this matter to the attention of the powers and to state also that Turkey will decline to take the responsibility should Bulgaria's persistence in her present attitude result in hostilities.

Austria Threatens Montenegro.

Cettinje, Montenegro.—Six Austrian warships were anchored Thursday off Spinza, in Dalmatia, a crown land of Austria-Hungary. They are no more than ten miles from Antivari, the sole seaport of Montenegro.

Agreement Between Powers.

London.—Great Britain, Russia and France have reached an agreement on a program to be submitted to the other powers as a basis for discussion by the proposed European conference to settle the Balkan situation. The proposals to be laid before the powers are eight in number. The first is to the effect that articles 1 to 22 of the treaty of Berlin, which relate to Bulgaria and eastern Roumelia, should be replaced by stipulations recognizing the independence of Bulgaria as at present constituted and determining the financial obligations of Bulgaria toward Turkey. New clauses probably will settle also the question of the Oriental railway.

The second and third proposals are that the powers shall take note of the annexation by Austria-Hungary of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the return of the sanjak of Novipazar to Turkey.

Provision Regarding Crete.

Article 4 relates to Crete. It replaces article 23 of the treaty of Berlin by clauses recognizing the annexation of Crete to Greece, and determining the financial obligations of Greece in respect to Crete, toward Turkey. It is understood that the four powers charged with the protection of Crete, Russia, Great Britain, France and Italy will settle the Cretan question in concert with Turkey before referring it to the conference. It is proposed that the second part of article 23 of the Berlin treaty, which provides special regulations for the government of other parts of European Turkey, shall cease to have force when the powers are assured that a satisfactory settlement has been effected.

The fifth proposal is to the effect that arrangements similar to the above shall apply to the Armenian provinces of Turkey.

Article 6 deals with Montenegro. The Montenegrin rights of sovereignty are limited by article 29 of the treaty of Berlin. It is proposed that articles 26 to 33, inclusive, of the Berlin treaty, shall be condensed to a single article, abrogating all the restrictions imposed by the treaty under the original article 29, which it is proposed to sweep away.

Plan Compensation to Servia.

The seventh point in the program is the statement that it is desirable to seek and give compensation to Servia and Montenegro by a rectification of the Bosnian and Herzegovinian frontiers, adjoining Novipazar. This is taken to imply that a strip will be taken from the territory annexed by Austria-Hungary.

Proposal 8 concerns the river Danube and declares it is desirable to revise the regulations governing Danube traffic, so as to give larger rights to the states bordering on the river.

CHICAGO CHAMPIONS AGAIN

CUBS CAPTURE THE FIFTH GAME FROM DETROIT TIGERS.

Decrease of Interest This Year Shown by Attendance—Teams' Share of Gate Receipts Is $46,115.

Detroit, Mich. — By defeating Detroit Wednesday afternoon, 2 to 0, the Chicago team of the National league retained its title as the champion baseball team of the world. The present series differed but little from that of last year. In the previous series Detroit managed to get one tie game and then went down in four straight defeats. In the present series, Detroit snatched one victory out of the five games played.

The Chicago team, according to the critics, showed superiority in every department of the game in the series as a whole, although this superiority was not so apparent on the day that Detroit won.

Detroit was handicapped by Schmidt's inability to cut down runners at second and by the failure of her heavy hitting outfield to bat at critical moments when hits meant runs. None of the Detroit pitchers seemed able to consistently puzzle the Chicago batsmen, for even Mullin, who pitched Detroit's only victory, was found for seven hits. Throughout the series Chicago's hitting was opportune. The occasions were rare when, with men on bases and runs needed, a Chicago batsman was not there with the needed hit.

The games were singularly free from squabbling and on only two or three occasions were the decisions of the umpires questioned. At no time was it necessary for a player to be sent to the bench to enforce discipline and good order. The series, however, created less interest in the two cities most affected than that of last year, if the attendance may be taken as a guide.

The paid admissions were only 62,232 for the five games and the receipts totaled but $94,976, as compared with $101,000 last year. The attendance at the final game Wednesday afternoon was but 6,210, with gross receipts of $9,577.50.

Of the money taken in the players of Chicago, the winning team, get $27,669, and the Detroit players $18,446. The club owners get $19,681 apiece, and the national commission $9,497.

Jennings was not beaten Wednesday until Schmidt's foul in the ninth had found secure and final lodgment in Kling's capacious mitt. Through the fierce uphill battle he stood on the coaching line off first base, coaching the runners on every move and spurring the batsmen on to make their best efforts. No success of the rival team and no failure of his own club dampened his determined cheerfulness. There was never a faltering note in his well-known cry of "Wee ah" and any slight advantage set him to executing his peculiar war dance.

A feature of the game was Schmidt's recovery of his throwing arm. Chicago was not able to steal a base on him for the first time during the series.

EXPLORER HEADED FOR POLE.

First Message Is Received from the Cook Arctic Expedition.

New York. — The first message from Dr. Frederick E. Cook, the arctic explorer, since he started for the pole from a point north of Etah February 26, has been received in this city. It was brought here by Rudolph Franke, who accompanied Dr. Cook on the early stage of his journey and who received it from the explorer by messengers whom he sent back to the winter base after he was well on his way to the north. The message was written March 17, about three weeks after Dr. Cook had started on the last stage of his journey. It was dated "Polar Sea, North of Cape Hubbard," and said that up to that point everything had gone well, although the weather was extremely cold. He was making a straight line for the pole at that time, he said, and expected to be back at the base late in May.

"I am making a straight course for the pole," Dr. Cook wrote. "The boys are doing well and I have plenty of dogs. I hope to succeed. At any rate, I shall make a desperate effort. While I expect to get back by the end of May, still I wish you to be ready to go to Acpnnie, the island off North Star, where the whalers' steamers come, by the 5th of June; and if I am not back, to go home with the whalers. I think, however, we will be back."

Some of the henchmen of the corporations claim that Jacobson cannot speak plain english, but the trouble is they are afraid he will give them to much of that plain english that he had the habit of handing out to them when he was in the legislature.

Hon F. M. Eddy once said he heard a laborer say that he was told to vote the democratic ticket and he would never have to do a nother days work and he beleived them and voted it and he found out he was told the truth, as he could not get a days work to do if he was starving to death.

It sounds funny to us to hear a 45 cent wheat raiser during the democratic times of 1893 95 say that the people want a change. All right old man you will get it if you get a return to the good old democratic times, then don't kick at 45 cent wheat because you will be getting just what you voted for.

We can not say that we suffered any during the last administration of Grover Cleveland as we were busy drawing chattel morgages at a good income, but we always felt sorry for the poor fellows that were compelled to give them, for the reason that our vote to a certain extent helped to make the hard times but we will not be guilty of the same offense this year, as we vote for Taft.

The interests whom Mr. Jacobson has opposed in his fight for the rights of the farmers are out to defeat him. If the farmers stand by him he will be elected. If, after all the service he has rendered them, they turn him down, it will be poor encouragement for anyone else to follow his example. The corporations stand by their friends. Are the farmers going to do likewise? -Ex.

The Democratic State Central committee is making an unfair and dishonest attack upon J. F. Jacobson in this section of the state. It is circulating the report that Mr Jacobson voted against the drainage bill when a member of the legislature. That is true but so did Gov. Johnson who at that time was a member of the state senate. Later, however, Mr Jacobson voted for and supported the first comprehensive drainage bill ever passed in the state. Gov. Johnson never voted in favor of a drainage bill, although it is only fair to say that since he became governor that he has been very friendly towards drainage —and so is Mr. Jacobson now. There can be no issue made up on this subject. —Thief River Falls News.

A Tardy Act of Justice.

Marriages between English actresses and men of a high social position began in the eighteenth century, if no earlier. There was Lavinia Fenton, the Polly Peachum of Gay's "Beggar's Opera," who became Duchess of Bolton; there was Miss Farren, who married Lord Derby; also Miss Brunton became Lady Craven not long before Lord Thurlow married Miss Bolton. Earliest of the list, though, comes the Earl of Peterborough, who married Anastasia Robinson, the singer, and kept the marriage secret until a few days before his death in St. James' palace, when he assembled his relatives and friends and publicly acknowledged the woman "to whom he owed the best and happiest hours of his life," a tardy act of justice that caused the lady to swoon away.

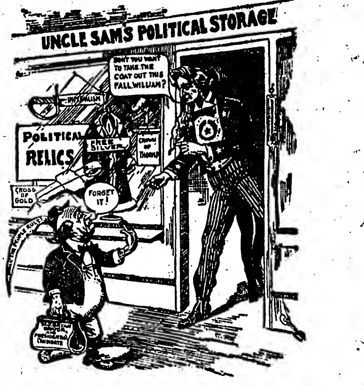
SPEAKING OF ISSUES.



—From the Philadelphia Press.

TRUE PROPHETS AND FALSE.

HOW TO TEST THEM.

"I will not deny that there may be prophets to-day, but the trouble is to tell the true prophets from the false ones. The Bible says that false prophets will rise. It tells us how to distinguish the false from the true. It says: 'By their fruits ye shall know them.'"—William J. Bryan's Speech at Baltimore, Jan. 20, 1900.

BRYAN PROPHECIES.	THE ANSWERS.
"TARIFF WILL CRUSH THE FARMER."
1892, Free Trade. "Thus in every State, so far as these statistics have been collected, the proportion of home-owning farmers is decreasing and that of tenant farmers increasing. This means but one thing: it means a land of landlords and tenants, and, backed by the history of every nation that has gone down, I say to you that no people can continue a free people under a free government when the great majority of its citizens are tenants of a small minority."—William J. Bryan; speech on the protective tariff in the National House of Representatives, March 16, 1892.	The Answer in 1908. The answer is found in the prevailing good prices for grain, corn, hogs, cattle, hay and all the products of the farm, together with the fact that since the date of Candidate Bryan's "crushing" speech Western farm lands have doubled in value, and thousands of "tenant" farmers of that date have become prosperous home-owners, tilling their own land in peace, happiness and plenty. Under the National Irrigation Act, and the Republican conservation movement, the West is soon to be the intense agricultural and horticultural producing area of the United States.
"GOLD STANDARD WILL DESTROY HOMES."
1896, Free Coinage!—16 to 1. "I reply that if protection has slain its thousands, the gold standard has slain its tens of thousands."—William J. Bryan; speech at Democratic National Convention, July, 1896. "The Democratic party has begun a war of extermination against the gold standard. We ask no quarter; we give no quarter. We shall prosecute our warfare until there is not an American citizen who dares to advocate the gold standard. You ask why? We reply that the gold standard is a conspiracy against the human race, and that we should no more join in it than we would an army to destroy our homes and to destroy our families."—William J. Bryan; speech at Albany, N. Y., August, 1896.	The Answer in 1908. The gold standard has "slain" no one, nor did it write the "future in blood," nor did it destroy our homes nor foreclose the farm mortgage, nor did it close the district school; on the contrary, it has proved the sound and solid foundation of widespread prosperity, leading to individual progress and happiness, aided in paying off the farm mortgage and expanding the country's educational facilities. It has brought such prosperity to our country as was never known before. Americans are the happiest and most prosperous people on earth to-day.
"NO MORE FOURTH OF JULY."
1900, Imperialism. "The fight this year will be to carry out the sentiment of that song we have so often repeated: 'My Country, 'tis of Thee.' If we lose, our children and our children's children will not succeed to the spirit of that song, and celebrations of the Fourth of July will pass away, for the spirit of Empire will be upon us."—William J. Bryan; speech to the Bryan Home Guards, Lincoln, Neb., July, 1900.	The Answer in 1908. Answer this for yourself. Do you know of any spot in the United States where the spirit of 1776 is dead and forgotten and the Fourth of July a meaningless date on the calendar? On the other hand the humblest citizen is growing prouder of his American citizenship and the spirit of 1776 is permeating the entire body politic.

The Care of Goldfish.

The secret of success in caring for goldfish is to keep the water they are in fresh and sweet. Their globe should be emptied and its water renewed as often as every second day. Lift each fish out gently in a glassful of water, empty the globe, wash it out, then put in fresh water and put the fish back again. Clear, sweet rainwater should be used, and its temperature should be raised to 75 or 80 degrees by warming a part of it. Sparkling well water is too cold for the fish to thrive in and too pure, for the animalculae of rain water form an important part of the food of these fish. They need no other sustenance than a very few bread crumbs sprinkled in their water daily. For overfeeding will kill them very quickly.—Housekeeper.

HE GOT THE BEER.

Did you ever hear of the part our sheriff took in the Anderson wedding at Plummer last winter? At the time of the marriage It was in Plummer, and immediately seized the opportunity to satisfy his thirst for beer. Going after Anderson he demanded money to get liquor to treat the crowd, Mr. Anderson informed him that he was a church member and a temperance man and did not like to buy intoxicating liquors for anyone to drink, but in order to pacify him gave him $5 to treat to cigars. After he had got the five dollars of Anderson he, our sheriff, threatened to take Anderson, who is a small man, by the neck and take him to the saloon and pour liquor down him, when the marshall of Plummer intefeered to protect the little man from an assault, by OUR SHERIFF. A man elected by the people of Red Lake County to inforce the laws and uphold the peace and dignity of the state of Minnesota.

After he, our sheriff, had been driven away from Anderson he turned his attention to the woman that Anderson had secured through a matrimonial agency, and had repudiated, and bought beer and carried to her. * * * * Here follows facts that are unfit for publication, but were given us by witnesses that will swear to the facts in any court.

If All Candidates Were White.

The word "candidate" is from the Latin "candidatus," literally it means white robed, and it was thus called because in Rome those who sought office wore a glittering white toga. Fancy if you can, all our modern Americans dressed in accordance with their political ambitions. In some sections there would be no such thing as a dark suit of clothes. Washington would simply be one shining center of universal whiteness.—Saturday Evening Post.

S. A. Swanson Republican candidate for Judge of Probate, has been a resident of what is now Red Lake County for 27 years, coming here with his parents from New Jersy April 12, 1881. In 1892 he began teaching, and divided his time between that vocation and work on the homestead until Dec. 26, 1896, when he was appointed the first Register of Deeds of Red Lake County in which capacity he served two years.

Since that he has asked for no county office, but has twice been a candidate for the legislature, in 1900 carrying this county by over 300 for Representative, and a second time in 1902 getting a majority of 844 for State Senator both times being defeated by the heavy opposition vote from the other counties in this district where he was unknown.

His fidelity to friends and fairness in all business transactions have gained him cordial support in the parts where he is known.

As a candidate for Judge of Probate before the voters of Red Lake County he asks a fair consideration from every voter in the county.

LEGAL WORD SPECIALISTS.

Have to Know Exact Shade of Meaning in Words and Phrases.

"Some people seem to think that an important legal document can be drawn up by a lawyer in the time it takes his client to smoke a cigar," remarked a gray haired law clerk the other day. "It takes time and the most scrupulous care to get things just right. If lawyers were not careful the Lord only knows where the clients would land.

"Why, I know a man in one of the great law offices who is a specialist in the exact shade of meaning of each word or phrase used in a legal document. Nothing goes out of that office without being submitted first to him to pass upon. Sometimes he will give a week to the study of but one short but very important paper, theorizing as to the possibilities of its meaning being construed this way and that. When he gets through with a document, however, and has submitted every word of it to the acid test there is practically no chance of its not being exactly right, as to its verbiage at least. In some cases, too, it is deemed desirable by clients to becloud the meaning of a contract so that there is a loophole for its being construed in another way in the event of certain contingencies occurring. That is where the services of an expert word juggler are indispensable.

"The biggest case that I ever heard of in this line was when one of the great corporations wished to issue some mortgage bonds against its property. A long contract had to be drawn, and the wording on the back of the bond had to be decided upon. The matter was so important that, after the attorneys themselves had decided on the forms to be used, it was turned over to two of these experts in verbiage.

"They looked up the dictionary meaning of practically every word used in the two documents and made innumerable changes and suggestions. Before the papers were finished thirty different drafts of each of the two documents had been made, and there was not a word used in the final form of the papers that had not been considered carefully, not only as to its individual meaning, but also as to its individual relation to the other words of the phrase or sentence containing it. It is safe to say that these two documents are never likely to be assailed successfully in a court of law and that they mean exactly what the corporation and its counsel wished them to mean."—New York Press.

Ready, Whatever Happens.

"Work as though you were to live forever; live as though you were to die to-night," says an old writer. It is counsel that fits many, though the man whose life is well insured may claim some exemption. He has no need of working as though death were ready to come, for he has already anticipated and guarded his dependents against the monetary distress that so often trails in the grim visitor's wake. As for the rest of the advice, his policies are tangible evidence of his noble forethought and readiness to die, if need be, to-night.

CURE

That Charles W. Murphy, the owner of the Chicago National league baseball team had offered $50,000 for Christy Mathewson, the crack pitcher of the Giants, and that John T. Brush and John McGraw had spurned the offer, is a story that has recently gone the rounds in baseball circles. When through an intermediary Murphy and Frank Chance, his manager, set a price of $50,000 on Mathewson, the New York management sent back word that even this unprecedented price was not half enough to obtain the transfer of Mathewson. To make sure that their message was thoroughly understood, they added that Mathewson was not for sale at any price. Murphy's offer of $50,000, which it is said, was made in good faith, and with no intention that it should become public, was communicated to Brush and McGraw through a business man in New York city, who is interested in thoroughbred and other horses, and who has the confidence of both the New York and the Chicago National league baseball managements. In making the offer for Mathewson Murphy and Chance explained that the Chicago team, which has been a unit for so long, must eventually disintegrate, and that the addition of Mathewson to the Chicago roster would be of the highest importance to them.

John J. McGraw, Jekyll and Hyde. That is how the little manager looks to folks who really know him. Outside of New York so few of the fans know anything about J. Muggs, off the ballfield, that he has come to be regarded as the incarnation of rowdyism, the personification of meanness and howling blatancy. That's what J. Muggs is, all right, when it comes to the arena. And yet—this is what the real McGraw is, off the field. The kindliest, most generous and most sympathetic of men. The supporter of a herd of pensioners—the prop and stay of a long list of poor creatures, who, if McGraw should die or be reduced to sudden poverty, would at once fall into utter destitution. The most loyal of friends, the most steadfast of good fellows. John J. McGraw spends his big salary, it is said, in horse racing. He does—a few dollars of it. Fifty per cent. of John McGraw's money goes direct to the support of sick, crippled, helpless dependents, most of them people who have no real claim on McGraw, but were brought to his notice by sympathetic friends. The little manager has a charity list that would make most millionaires look like pikers. He has charity towards all, malice towards none, and will go miles out his way to help an invalid woman or a crippled child. The great heart of John McGraw contracts to the dimensions of a bean when he gets upon a ball field. The gentle sympathy and eager kindliness narrow down to the shape of a spike, with rust on the same. The generous giver becomes the howling wolf. The prince of nature's noblemen becomes so fierce, so vicious, so unendurable, that his own men ever and anon take a good punch at his chops in the dressing-room. How do you figure it all out? And which situation gives John J. the more fun—a battle with the umps and the opposing team or an hour in the sickroom of some one who knows that the little fellow will not see him want, and has come to help him through his troubles?

JOHN J. McGRAW

Honus Wagner, the Flying Dutchman of the Pittsburg club, has carried off the batting honors again in the National league this year. This is the third year in succession that Honus has led the major league in hitting. He took part in 148 games and clouted the ball so hard that he secured a percentage of .352. Mike Donlin, captain of the Giants, who tried hard to supplant Wagner as the star swatter of the league, finished second, his percentage being .327. "Kitty" Bransfield, the first baseman of the Philadelphia club, is third on the list with a percentage of .309. Ira Thomas, the utility catcher of the Detroit team, leads the American league in hitting with a percentage of .327. "Ty" Cobb, of the same club, is second with .326.

Doan's Kidney Pills helped me quickly and in three weeks' time there was not a symptom of kidney trouble remaining."

Husband and Wife.

No man yet was ever made more tender by having tenderness demanded of him; no man yet was ever cried into loving his wife more. I am willing to admit that men are as faulty creatures as women themselves, unsympathetic in small things, often blind, and that they may easily be exasperated into small brutalities of speech. If a woman refrains from exacting devotion, and is unswervingly kind and unselfish, a husband who has any affection for his wife at all can be left to look out for doing his share. He will look out for it anyway; no one else can make him. Neither tears nor entreaties will wring from him those small kindnesses and attentions so dear to women.—A Wife, in Harper's Bazar.

Congratulations Wanted.

On entering his club one evening not long ago a young Philadelphian was accosted by a friend, who exclaimed:

"Why, Charley, you are positively beaming! What's up?"

"I'm in the greatest luck imaginable," responded the other. "You know, I've been hanging about a pretty Yonkers girl for almost a year. During all this time she would never admit that she loved me; she would only say that she respected me. But now, old chap, congratulate me, for last night she confessed that she respected me no longer—that she loved me!"—Lippincott's.

Humorously Worded Rebuke.

Theodore P. Roberts had a fluent command of language, both in speaking and writing, and was well liked by everybody. He could secure the attention of a negligent publisher if need be. To one such, who was remiss about sending vouchers, he once closed up a long letter with the sentence: "And, finally, my dear sir, permit me to say that it would be easier for a camel to ride into the kingdom of heaven on a velocipede than for anyone to find a late copy of your paper in the city of New York."

A Discomfiting Witness.

The following colloquy took place between Councilor Sealingwax and a witness who "would talk back:" "You say, sir, the prisoner is a thief?" "Yes, sir. 'Cause why, she has confessed she was." "And you also swear she worked for you after this confession?" "Yes, sir." "Then we are to understand that you employ dishonest people to work for you, even after their rascalities are known?" "Of course. How else would I get assistance from a lawyer?"—Argonaut.

NOT A MIRACLE.

Just Plain Cause and Effect.

There are some quite remarkable things happening every day, which seem almost miraculous.

Some persons would not believe that a man could suffer from coffee drinking so severely as to cause spells of unconsciousness. And to find complete relief in changing from coffee to Postum is well worth recording.

"I used to be a great coffee drinker, so much so that it was killing me by inches. My heart became so weak I would fall and lie unconscious for an hour at a time. The spells caught me sometimes two or three times a day.

"My friends, and even the doctor, told me it was drinking coffee that caused the trouble. I would not believe it, and still drank coffee until I could not leave my room.

"Then my doctor, who drinks Postum himself, persuaded me to stop coffee and try Postum. After much hesitation I concluded to try it. That was eight months ago. Since then I have had but few of those spells, none for more than four months.

"I feel better, sleep better and am better every way. I now drink nothing but Postum and touch no coffee, and as I am seventy years of age all my friends think the improvement quite remarkable."

"There's a Reason."

CORNET BROUGHT ABOUT PEACE.

Spite Controversy Happily Ended Without Legal Warfare.

"Fellow was raising bees back in the foothill country," remarked Frank H. Short of Fresno. "Plenty of sagebrush; sage makes clear, delicious honey. Got in a row with a neighbor; shot his dog; said its barking annoyed his queen bees. Neighbor waited a whole year to get even, plowed up a big patch, planted wild mustard; grew fine. Bees thick on mustard flowers. Mustard makes bitter honey. Like to ruin the bee man's sales. Bee farmer came to me, wanted to sue for damages. 'What can I do?' he asked.

"'Nothing,' I said. 'He has a right to grow mustard on his own land.'

"'Well,' he said, 'I'll get some scheme to annoy him.'

"So he got a cornet; used to sit up from midnight till four o'clock in the morning practicing 'Wearing of the Green.' CURE AT CITY MISSION.

Awful Case of Scabies—Body a Mass of Sores from Scratching—Her Tortures Yield to Cuticura.

"A young woman came to our city mission in a most awful condition physically. Our doctor examined her and told us that she had scabies (the itch), incipient paresis, rheumatism, etc., brought on from exposure. Her poor body was a mass of sores from scratching and she was not able to retain solid food. We worked hard over her for seven weeks but we could see little improvement. One day I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap and a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, and we bathed our patient well and gave her a full dose of the Resolvent. She slept better that night and the next day I got a box of Cuticura Ointment. In five weeks this young woman was able to look for a position, and she is now strong and well. Legend of Magpie and Robin.

The peasants of France, in accordance with a tradition, pierce the head of a magpie with a thorn whenever they catch one. According to the French legend, after Jesus had been nailed to the cross two birds alighted on the extended arms of the instrument of death. One was a magpie with a beautiful aigrette on its head and a long waving tail, then the handsomest of birds but the wickedest, chirping insult at the suffering Jesus. The other bird was a modest little bird with gray plumage, which approached the cross timidly, uttering cries of grief. With its beak it tried to pluck away one of the thorns. A single drop of the blood fell on the pitying little gray bird and gave the robin redbreast.

Willing to Help Him.

He had gone to the dry goods store with a bit of dress material which his wife had bidden him to match. "I am very sorry, sir," said the salesman, "but I have nothing exactly like this. The very last remnant was sold this morning."

"But I must have it!" exclaimed the husband. "Otherwise, how can I face my wife?"

"If you will permit me, sir," said the salesman, "I would venture to suggest that you invite a friend home to dinner with you."

MIX FOR RHEUMATISM

The following is a never failing remedy for rheumatism, and if followed up it will effect a complete cure of the very worst cases: "Mix one-half pint of good whiskey with one ounce of Toris Compound and add one ounce Syrup Sarsaparilla Compound. Take in tablespoonful doses before each meal and at bedtime." The ingredients can be procured at any drug store and easily mixed at home.

"The Law."

Parents of Wayne, a suburb of Philadelphia, are required to report promptly any case of contagious disease, in compliance with the regulations of the local board of health.

In accordance with this order, Health Officer Leary received this post card recently:

"Dear Sir: This is to notify you that my boy Ephraim is down bad with the measles as required by the new law."—Harper's Weekly.

WANTED IT OVER WITH.

Game Youngster Preferred Drastic Action in Punishment.

"Youngsters are pretty philosophical," observed Wallace Knight, and then he went ahead to set forth the point of view of a small daughter at his house.

The child was sent to bed early the other evening as punishment for some act contrary to rules and regulations.

After she had been tucked in bed for some time and was supposedly asleep, the youngster called her father and told him she wished he would go ahead and spank her and have it over with, instead of sending her off to bed that way. "This lying in bed never's going to make me any better," she said, "and a good spanking would. Besides it makes me so mad I can't sleep and so what's the use of it?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Making Sure.

Our Freddy is fully endowed with the inquiring mind of youth. Recently he said: "Mamma, who puts the bottle of milk on our front porch every night when we are all asleep?"

"Isn't that a rather foolish question?" his mother answered. "Whom do you suppose?"

"Well," said the small investigator, thoughtfully, "I suppose God does, but I'd like to know for sure!"—A. M. A.

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

Grand Stand Burns.

St. Paul.—The grand stand at Lexington Park was entirely destroyed by fire which started from an unknown origin early in the evening. An alarm was turned in at 8:15 o'clock, and before the engine companies arrived on the scene the entire stand was doomed and part of it had collapsed.

It was only by the fast work of the companies under the charge of Assistant Chief Rodecker that the bleachers on the first and third base side of the field were saved. The fire had evidently started in the middle of the stand, probably in the dressing rooms in the clubhouse, for the fire had eaten its way about an equal distance from that portion of the structure when the firemen arrived. Both bleachers had begun to burn, but two streams of water from the companies working from the hydrants on University avenue and from Lexington stopped these fires before any great amount of damage was done.

Beats the Farmers.

St. Cloud.—By using a pipette buyers for central creamery houses have been paying the farmers less for cream than they should.

The pipette is a measuring instrument in connection with testing the quality of milk. When used for cream it produces a result which shows that the cream is lower in butter fat than it really is. The price paid depends on the quality. These facts are shown in the bulletin of the state dairy and food department. In four towns buyers used the pipette in July, when the inspection was made, and in two of these towns, Holloway and Graceville, there is no local creamery to make the competition necessary to have the buyers give a fair price for the quality of

An attempt was made in the last legislature to prohibit the use of the pipette for cream, but the bill was lost.

State Buys Pheasants.

St. Paul.—Sixty China pheasants are to be purchased by the state game and fish commission to be placed over the state for breeding purposes. They can be purchased for $1 each, which is cheaper than the state can raise them. The commission has been engaged for several years in the attempt to stock the state with these pheasants and they are protected by law for several years.

The commission also decided to buy additional land near the Deerwood hatchery if the engineers find it necessary. The land will amount to two and one-quarter acres, with flowage rights over an additional forty acres.

Blow Open Safe in Depot.

Taconite, Minn.—Yeggmen blew open the safe in the Messaba depot here about 1 o'clock in the morning, but were frightened away before they secured any of the money inside. Two suspects have been arrested at Holman and will be given a hearing.

The night watchman employed by the railroad company was eating his lunch in a nearby restaurant when he heard the explosion and ran toward the depot. He saw a man fleeing and took a shot at him without result. Examination showed that the door had been blown from the safe, but nothing inside had been tampered with.

After Pulp Wood.

International Falls.—Chairman Mann and the select congressional committee on pulp and paper have been in the woods tributary to this place for two days in consummation of their efforts to ascertain the available pulp wood supply of northern Minnesota. For seven hours the party under the guidance of Eric Franson of International Falls tramped in the rain through the timber to inspect tracts containing high land spruce and to search for a virgin forest where, as a congressman once unhappily described it, "the hand of man had never set foot."

County Division.

Crookston.—A large mass meeting to consider the proposed dividing of Polk county into two parts, the eastern end being made a new county, with Fosston as the county seat. The advocates of county division consider the outcome of the meeting—no action—as a decided victory for themselves. They think it will be easy to get the 300 Crookston votes necessary.

News Notes.

Minneapolis.—State board of equalization makes a decrease of about $10,000,000 in realty of state from last year.

Hibbing.—Gen. Andrews says law requiring immediate burning of slashings would have prevented Chisholm fire.

Mankato.—Mayor Andrews has issued orders to the police force to stop dice games. The order is being obeyed.

St. Paul.—Increase of $25,000,000 in valuation of state property is shown by figures of state board of equalization.

St. Paul.—Reports read at semicentennial meeting of Presbyterian synod show a shortage of candidates for the ministry.

Crookston.—Crookston's market day celebration was one of the most successful ever held in Northwestern Minnesota. Fully 2,000 farmers and their families spent the day in the city.

Morris.—Peter Hanson, an unmarried man aged about forty-five years, committed suicide here in his room over the Mickelshack restaurant by shooting himself through the head with a revolver.

St. Cloud.—The Baptists of Minnesota will erect a monument to the late "Uncle" Boston W. Smith, who came to Minnesota in 1880 as a representative of the American Baptist Publication society.

East Grand Forks.—Ole Wagen of Petersburg, N. D., dropped dead in a saloon here. He had been drinking. Coroner Chesterman came over from Crookston, but decided that no inquest was necessary.

Duluth.—Reports of the state labor inspectors show that ninety new manufacturing industries have been started during the first seven months of this year. These give employment to 589 operatives.

St. Paul.—Gov. John A. Johnson and State Oil Inspector William E. McEwen were thrown from an automobile, and narrowly escaped serious injury. Both suffered slight bruises but were not otherwise hurt.

Austin.—The state game and fish commission will ship 50,000 bass and crappies for planting along the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul. The fry are gathered from ponds along the Mississippi, where they were left stranded after the high water.

Moorhead.—In the district court the jury which had in hand the case of Lena Dahlby vs. W. B. Auger, arising out of injuries alleged to have been sustained by the plaintiff at the defendant's laundry, brought in a verdict for the plaintiff for $1,500.

Minneapolis. The body of a well developed infant was found near the mouth of the Broadway sewer by Mabel Boucher, 209 Water street, who was gathering driftwood in the river. It is supposed that the body came from the sewer and drifted to the shore.

Faribault.—Burglars entered the home of Mrs. Rosa Wallener, living south of town, for the ostensible purpose of robbing the aged woman, who lived alone. Frightened by her screams they fled and later entered the home of J. Harling, where they were also frightened away.

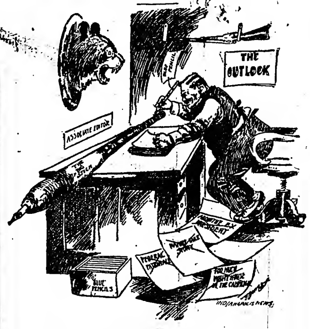
Thief River Falls.—Farmers of Red Lake county and the adjoining counties are already laying plans for attending the annual convention of the Red River Valley Dairymen's association that will be held this year at St. Hilaire, this county, on Wednesday and Thursday, Nov. 11 and 12.

Duluth.—The intention of the part of either an independent capitalist, or of the Soo road to get into the Cuyuna range district early and be on hand to secure a portion of the ore business, which is expected to result from the development of that district, is made evident by articles of incorporation of the Cuyuna Range Railroad company.

St. Paul.—The board of control opened and rejected bids for an addition to the school for feeble-minded at Faribault, a working boys' building. The sum appropriated by the state for the new wing is $25,000 and the bids called for practically the entire amount. New bids will be asked, or changes made in the plans drawn by State Architect Clarence H. Johnston of St. Paul.

"In Montana," the play which will be the attraction at the Bijou Opera House, Minneapolis, the week of November 1st, life on the plains is shown in all its phases. There is the big-hearted ranchman, the typical western girl, the foreman, the cowpuncher and ranch hands. The piece has been compared by many who have seen it as the equal of "Arizona" and "The Virginian," and in some respects is said to surpass them.

A PEEP INTO THE FUTURE SANCTUM.



MAN SLAIN BESIDE BRIDE

LOUISIANA TEACHER MURDERED BY REJECTED SUITOR.

Grim Tragedy on Train—Persons Concerned All Members of Prominent Families.

New Orleans.—On her bridal tour which had begun scarcely one hour before, and seated in a railroad coach almost between her husband and a suitor for her hand, Mrs. Fred Van Ingen Thursday night saw the flash of the suitor's revolver, felt the sudden grip of her husband's hand as the bullet killed, and then turned and fought for her life. When the girl appeared about to become the victim of the second bullet from the revolver, her uncle, a man with gray hair, but strong and cool under the excitement, rushed up and thrust his thumb beneath the hammer of the revolver, jamming the mechanism and rendering the weapon harmless.

This was the story which the other passengers on the Texas & Pacific "cannonball" told when they reached this city Friday, but the principal actors in the tragedy, most of whom are connected with Louisiana's leading families, have so far refused to discuss the matter.

The former suitor is F. S. Benuve of Plaquemine, La., at which place he was taken from the train and placed under arrest. The unfortunate husband was Prof. Fred Van Ingen, a prominent teacher of Alexandria, La., and a relative of former Gov. Blanchard. The bride is the daughter of James M. Rbarer, one of the leading officials of Iberville parish, residing at Baton Rouge. Beauve is 24 years old, and Van Ingen was 23.

The wedding took place Thursday at Alexandria. Benuve was in town, having arrived there, it is reported, on the same day as Miss Rbarer. When the bridal couple left for New Orleans, he boarded the train also and after a time sat in a seat where he was facing Mr. and Mrs. Van Ingen, with the bride between him and her husband. Other passengers say Benuve talked with the bridal couple just before the shooting, and that his manner appeared cordial.

WARSHIPS FOR ABRUZZI.

Two Will Escort Him and His Bride to Italy.

Rome.—The Italian cruiser Fieramosca has been ordered to await the duke of the Abruzzi at New York, whither the cruiser Etruria also will be dispatched. It is understood that the two warships will escort the duke and his bride to Italy.

The statement is made also that no member of the Elkins family will attend the official ceremony of the transcription of the marriage deed in Rome, and that when Senator Elkins visits Italy later he will be given the title of chevalier of Annunciade.

German Prince Is Married.

Berlin, Germany.—Princess Alexandra Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein, daughter of Prince Frederick, duke of Schleswig-Holstein, was married in the chapel of the imperial palace at five o'clock Thursday afternoon to Prince August William of Prussia, fourth son of Emperor William. The ceremony was witnessed by the members of the imperial family and about 50 princes and princesses of the minor German royal houses. The chancellor of the empire, Prince von Bulow, as well as the other high state functionaries, the members of the diplomatic corps, including Dr. Hill, the American ambassador, and the members of the embassy staffs with their wives, with about 800 other guests, were present.

JOE JAMES IS EXECUTED.

Negro Whose Crime Started Springfield Riots Is Hanged.

Springfield, Ill.—Having confessed his guilt and with a prayer upon his lips, Joe James, 18-year-old negro murderer, was hanged in the Sangamon county jail Friday. Chief Deputy Fred Long sprung the trap at 10:32 and in 11 minutes and 39 seconds James was pronounced dead by Dr. J. O. Salyers, and the body cut down and prepared for burial.

James murdered C. A. Ballard, a well-known C. P. & St. L. engineer, on the night of July 3, last. The crime was largely responsible for precipitation of the recent fatal race riot in this city.

In a drunken stupor he wandered into the home of Mr. Ballard, on North Ninth street, entered the bedroom of Miss Blanche Ballard and seized her hand. The girl screamed. Her father came to her assistance, drove the negro from the house, followed him to the sidewalk, where a fight ensued in which James stabbed Ballard to death. James fled. Next morning he was discovered by Ballard's two sons asleep in the grass north of the city. The Ballard boys almost beat James to death. Deputies rescued the negro from the crowd which gathered. While James was in jail the alleged assault by another negro upon Mrs. Earl Hallam took place, and the mob moved on the jail.

STORM WAS FATAL TO 300.

Disaster in Cagayan Valley, Philippines, Worst Within Memory.

Manila.—Belated reports indicate that the storm of October 12 in the Cagayan valley was the worst and most destructive within the memory of living inhabitants of the valley. The official figures are not yet available, as many places have not been heard from, but it seems certain that the number of dead will reach 300.

At Aparri, which was almost completely under water, the American residents, headed by Lieuts. Trendway and Clark, Postmaster Foss and Engineer Clark, formed a rescue brigade which saved scores of natives, taking many off their houses which were floating down the river. It is reported that cholera has broken out among the refugees.

CANNON HIT BY LABOR.

Illinois Federation Adopts Resolution Condemning the Speaker.

Peoria, Ill.—Speaker Cannon was specifically condemned in a clause in the resolutions which were passed at the final day's session of the Illinois State Federation of Labor. The clause met with opposition, but was finally passed.

The politician in labor affairs was killed when the convention amended its constitution to shut out the political delegate who has forced his way into past conventions to the detriment of union labor while attempting to make good with their political bosses.

Four Persons Probably Drowned.

Glenn Haven, Mich.—Patrick Henry and wife and Peter Swanson and son have been missing since Monday evening when they left their homes at North Manitou islands in a power launch to set fish nets in Lake Michigan. A high easterly wind carried the little boat out into the lake.

COL. TAYLOR IS UNHARMED

ESCAPES BY BOLD DASH FROM THE MASKED MOB.

Plays 'Possum Under Log—Tennessee Night-Riders, Believing Aged Attorney Is Dead, Depart.

Tiptonville, Tenn.—Unharmed, save numerous scratches received in a 30-hour trip through unfamiliar woods and the fatigue incident to the trip without food, and the mental strain, Judge R. Zachary Taylor reached here Wednesday after a miraculous escape from night riders at Reelfoot Lake, who murdered his partner, Capt. Quentin Rankin.

Col. Taylor Wednesday told how they were seized by the masked men, and continued:

"The leader of the mob talked with us, telling us we were associated too much with Judge Harris, and were taking entirely too much interest in the lake. He said that the course of Harris and the West Tennessee Land Company in prohibiting free fishing was causing the starvation of women and children, and that something had to be done.

"I never dreamed that the mob intended us any harm, but just then they threw a rope around Capt. Rankin's neck and swung him to a limb. He protested, and said: 'Gentlemen, do not kill me,' and the reply of the mob was a volley of 50 shots.

"This was the first evidence of any intention to harm us, and when the firing began I jumped into a bayou, and made for a sunken log. Behind this I hid and the mob fired several hundred shots into the log. They evidently believed I was dead, for I heard one of them say: 'He's dead, and let him go,' and with that he rode away.

"I remained in the water until after the mob was out of hearing and went to an island in the lake, where I remained all day Tuesday. At night I started out and walked all night, coming up to a house at six o'clock this morning."

TOKYO FETES COME TO CLOSE.

Scene of Entertainment Is Changed to Yokohama.

Yokohama.—The series of incomparably brilliant functions which have characterized Japan's reception of the American battleship fleet came to a close here Friday night with a dinner on board the battleship Fuji, the guests of which were confined to the American ambassador, rear admirals and other officers.

There was also a brilliant reception on the battleship Mikasa to which all the prominent Americans here were invited, with the accompaniment of an illumination of the fleet, fireworks and torchlight processions on shore.

Rear Admiral Sperry endeared himself to the Japanese people by personally attending the funeral of Gen. Count Nadzu and placing a wreath on the casket. Later a luncheon was given at the Shiba palace and the admiral, accompanied by his aides, walked from the palace to the Shimbash railway station, passing along the Ginza, the principal street of Tokyo, which was massed with people.

The admiral was recognized and almost mobbed by tens of thousands of enthusiastic people, but everywhere was treated with respect. Thousands sought to shake him by the hand and the ovation lasted the whole length of the street. The stern old admiral evidently was deeply impressed.

Rear Admiral Sperry was accompanied by Rear Admirals Schroeder and Wainwright, who with their aides were kept equally busy exchanging greetings.

MEXICAN PLOTTERS GUILTY.

Two Convicted of Fomenting Revolution on United States Soil.

El Paso, Tex.—Charged with fomenting a revolution on United States soil against a friendly nation, Precilliano G. Silva and Leocantio Trevino were found guilty by a jury in the United States court for the western section of Texas Friday. Benjamin Silva and Jose Maria Ramirez were acquitted on the same charge.

Trevino and Silva will be sentenced by Judge Maxey. The penalty prescribed is not less than one, nor more than five years' imprisonment.

Two Die in Wreck of Speeder.

Gowrie, Ia.—Two men were killed and five injured, one fatally, in a wreck of a gasoline speeder on the Newton & Northwestern, four miles northwest of here. The speeder, loaded with nine men of Rinard, dashed into a box car which had been moved from a siding onto the main line.

Jacobson is gaining ground every day The democrats got out their "Roarbacks,"to early.

There will be some of the candidates for County office be short of votes next Tuesday and sheriff Nelson should be one of them.

The farmers should turn out on election day, Don't stay at home and say "we hope Jacobson will be elected,"but GO to election and give him a vote X.

Of course we believe that every body up this way should vote for Stennerson, but for fear some of you may forget it, again let us remind you to not forget to put X oppoalt his name.

It is up to the people, and the farmers of Minneseta will not forget J, F. Jacobson, the man that spent the best part of his life making their fight in the legislature of this state.

Next Tuesday the Democratic party will find out that the Republicans are not loaning them votes this year. The rank and file of the party have confidence in J. F Jacobson, and the votes will prove it

In his Barnsville speech on Sept. 28, Mr. Taft, who was Introduced by Mr Steenerson said: "I am glad to stand up by your tall congressman and congratulate you on having such a representative, He does you honor in Washington and looks after your interests, as I can assure you." Good backing that.

We see where the representative of the Hamms Brewing Co., took a straw vote, the other day on the train, which gave Johnson 33 votes to Jacobsons 28. We presume he set up a keg on that vote, but just wait until the farmers indorse Hon. J, F. Jacobson next Tuesday. and he will get the wheat vote, and don't you forget it.

When Ole O. Sagerig spoke in Thief River Falls he said. "I will not take up much more of your time", then Ole wondered what made the people applaud so, for the above remark was the only applause he got, which showed that the people wanted to get rid of him. Wouldn't he be a nice duck to send down to Washington to represent the big Ninth District of Minnesota.

A Story For Papa.

There is a moral in this little story of child life.

"Mamma," asked little three-year-old Freddie, "are we going to heaven some day?"

"Yes, dear, I hope so," was the reply.

"I wish papa could go, too," continued the little fellow.

"Well, and don't you think he will?" asked his mother.

"Oh, no," replied Freddie; "he could not leave his business!"

Nature.

Nature is just toward men. It recompenses them for their sufferings; it renders them laborious, because to the greatest toils it attaches the greatest rewards.—Montesquieu.

Charged.

"Your lawyer made some pretty severe charges against the other fellow, didn't he?"

"Y-e-s, but you ought to see how he charged me!"

McGinty For Sheriff.

J, W. McGinty is now quite sure of election for sheriff next Tuesday, and he had ought to be elected, as this is a case of honor and integrity; sobriety; and moral. Against, drunkeness; neglect of official duty., and a moral character that would make the keeper of a bawdy house blush with shame. Which man are you going to vote for?

ORGANIZED LABOR SUPPORTS TAFT.

Majority of the Real Leaders and Workers Will Vote for Their Real Friends.

No Longer Any Doubt But That Taft Will Get the Majority of Labor Votes Despite the Unscrupulous Fight Made by Gompers in Behalf of the Democratic Bosses.

Leaders of organized labor are opposed to Samuel Gompers in his efforts to deliver the labor vote to Bryan, and there is every indication that Taft will get the votes of most laboring men. At least three of the most influential vice presidents of the American Federation of Labor evidently disagree with Gompers.

One of the men who called on President Roosevelt recently gave assurance that John Mitchell is not for Bryan, as intimated in a telegram alleged to be from him published in the last two days. He declared on authority, said to be that of Mr. Mitchell himself, that the noted labor leader did not write any telegram putting himself in the Bryan column. The telegram is said to be a fabrication.

James Duncan, first vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, next in authority to Gompers and a man of great influence in the organization, has written a letter to Willis Moore, chief of the weather bureau, pointedly antagonizing the attitude of Mr. Gompers and asserting that each individual should be allowed to vote without pressure from any one.

Daniel Keefe, sixth vice-president of the federation and president of the Longshoremen's union, is out for Taft and working hard for him. Keefe advises labor people to vote for Taft. Thus three of the six vice-presidents under Mr. Gompers are either supporting Taft or are opposing any plan that will place the organization as a body against the Republican nominee. Mr. Keefe said recently:

"Bryan has not been indorsed for president by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor. Neither has any one the right to criticise a union man for voting for any other candidate for president. In fact I will vote for Taft."

Taft's True Attitude Understood.

The Labor World of Pittsburg says: "Every day it is becoming more and more apparent that the more the 'labor' record of Judge Taft is discussed the more does the fact shine forth that he is a real friend of labor. The truth has always been recognized by the intelligent and fair-minded trade union leaders and officials, many of whom have the courage to stand boldly out and declare themselves to this effect despite the fact that undue pressure is being exercised to subdue such declaration."

The United Mine Workers of America, the strongest organization numerically in the country, will not be bound by the political program of the American Federation of Labor, to support Bryan and the Democratic platform. In an official circular issued by T. L. Lewis, international president of the union, to the 300,000 members, he says the membership has intelligence enough to know how to vote without any advice from him and he will do nothing to influence their political preferences in any way.

"Paupers and Beggars" Story Confirmed.

A campaign sensation was sprung at Wheeling, West Virginia, at a Republican rally when Honorable M. M. Garland of Pittsburg, former president of the Amalgamated Association, declared he was present when William Jennings Bryan stigmatized union labor leaders as "beggars" and labor unions as "nuisances" in 1893, when the Ways and Means Committee of the National House of Representatives was considering the original Wilson tariff bill.

William H. Fairley, of Alabama, for the last ten years a member of the executive board of the United Mine Workers, has come out with the statement that it was the duty of laboring men to vote for Taft and Sherman. His stand is a practical repudiation of the leadership of Samuel Gompers, and additional evidence that the attempt of Gompers to "deliver" the labor vote to Bryan is a dismal failure.

Among the well-known trade unionists of Pennsylvania is George W. Boyd of the Structural Ironworkers' Union. He is fearless in the declaration of his opinion and is always guided by what he absolutely believes to be the truth. He is a believer in W. H. Taft as a friend of labor.

Prominent Chicagoan Damns Gompers

In the Piano, Organ and Musical Instrument Workers' Official Journal Charles Dold, the editor, who was formerly president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, bitterly assails Samuel Gompers for his effort to deliver the union labor vote in this campaign. He criticizes in particular a circular issued by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, asking the wage-earners to contribute to the Democratic campaign fund. Two quotations from the editorial are sufficient to show what is thought of Gompers' effort:

"We have searched diligently for some act or deed of the Democratic party justifying labor's support, but have been unable to find one.

"The most deplorable working condition in the United States, the lowest wages, the greatest illiteracy, are all to be found there under the Democratic regime of the 'Solid South.' And the 'Solid South' controls the Democratic party."

On behalf of the International Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paper Hangers a statement has been issued, saying "a man is known by the company he keeps, and Mr. Bryan has publicly chosen to associate himself with men with whose unsavory past he is quite familiar."

The Alton (Ill.) Glassblowers' union, the largest union in the American Bottle Blowers' association, has repudiated interference by Samuel Gompers, who advised the union to indorse Bryan for President, and summarily laid on the table the communication from President Gompers at their business meeting.

The president of Highland lodge, Amalgamated Iron and Steel Workers, of Terre Haute, Ind., said his organization cannot join in partisan politics, and that it also turned down an appeal from Gompers sent from American federation headquarters for a contribution to the Democratic campaign fund.

Minnesota and Iowa for Taft.

Bryan is not to receive the solid labor vote of Minnesota. Contrary to the repeated predictions and efforts of Democratic labor leaders there appears to be a big split in the ranks of organized labor, and Taft will receive his due share of votes from the union men. Fifteen of the most prominent union men in Minneapolis have signed a circular letter declaring they take exception to the methods used by the Bryan element of the organization, and many believe the labor men of the State will exercise their individual wills when voting and will cast their ballots for the Republican nominee.

There is every reason to believe that a movement has set in among the laboring classes of Iowa, the workers in the large industrial communities, towards Taft and the Republican ticket. Not only are the labor leaders who early in the campaign were advocating the election of Bryan less active in the support of the Democratic ticket, but many men less prominent but no less influential in the councils of the various labor organizations are openly counseling a more rigid scrutiny of party promises and records.

August A. Bablitz, secretary of the Central Labor Union of Lexington, Ky., urges his fellows to vote the Republican ticket in order to insure a continuation of prosperity.

Some of the Democratic newspapers recognize the situation well enough to begin already to pick out Cabinet officers for President Taft, but that is something that President Taft can do much better himself.—Philadelphia Press.

A Sly Dog.

"At one time my dog was fond of going to the railway station to see the people, and I always ordered him to go home, fearing he would be hurt by the cars. He easily understood that if he went there it was contrary to my wishes. So whenever he was near the station if he saw me coming he would look the other way and pretend not to know me. If he met me anywhere else he always bounded to meet me with great delight. But at the station it was quite different. He would pay no attention to my whistle or my call. He even pretended to be another dog and would look me right in the face without apparently recognizing me. He gave me the cut direct in the most impertinent manner, the reason evidently being that he knew he was doing what was wrong and did not like to be found out. Possibly he may have relied a little on my nearsightedness in his maneuver."

Rideing Two Horses.

Sheriff Nelson is trying to ride two horses to get into office. When he is in Red Lake Falls, he is for Red Lake Falls for county seat, and when he is in Thief River Falls he s for Thief River Falls. With this and his dirty record, as sheriff, he will take a trip up salt river next Tuesday.

Turned Out The Horse Thief.

Last week sheriff Nelsons jailor left the keys on the inside of the lock, and the horse thief walked out to liberty, with a tab on his back, "Vote for Nelson for sheriff." These are facts Mr. voter, and every word that we have published about him, and his dirty official record IS TRUE He has faild to do his offical duties. Let horse thieves out of jail; and employed large numbers of deputy sheriffs at the expense of the tax payers, and should not be re-electd to the high office of sheriff of Red Lake County. A l'Espagnole.

"I wonder why it is," remarked the stranger to me.

"Why what is?" I queried.

He groaned and explained thus:

"Why is it that chefs at restaurants think that the mere addition of a tomato to anything under the sun justifies their calling the combination something 'a l'Espagnole?'

"I see 'eggs a l'Espagnole.' My curiosity is at once aroused. 'What,' I ask myself, 'do the Spaniards do to eggs?' So I order 'eggs a l'Espagnole.' What are they? Eggs with tomato.

"I see 'chicken fricassee a l'Espagnole.' Nothing but tomato mixed with chicken. And thus it goes on and on through life, a continual round of hopes deceived. Spanish sauce is tomato catchup. It is absurd; it is careless. Chefs have no right to be so lazy. Why, if the same degree of carelessness is allowed to run rampant through other classes of men besides chefs I do not doubt"—

Here the stranger got positively tragic.

"I do not doubt that the good old phrase 'walking Spanish' will be applied to stepping on a tomato. I fear it; I fear it."

Tennyson and Lowell.

Mrs. Procter, the wife of Barry Cornwall, was a great figure in London literary society when Mr. Lowell was United States minister at the court of St. James. Mrs. Procter was most anxious to bring Tennyson and Mr. Lowell together. Tennyson, who was whimsical in his prejudices, made various excuses and affected to believe that Mr. Lowell was a poet of little importance and an after dinner orator whose graces of style were overrated. One day Mrs. Procter told Mr. Tennyson that Mr. Lowell had written some lines on her birthday and that she must insist upon reading them to him. The English poet looked at her askance and submitted with bad grace. Mrs. Procter did not go farther than the opening line, "I know a girl—they say she's eighty." Tennyson scowled and sprang to his feet with a gesture of impatience. "Too familiar!" he growled out in high disdain and refused to listen to the remaining lines. Mrs. Procter persevered in her efforts to bring the two poets together, and they finally met and became intimate friends. Mr. Tennyson was a man of many caprices and had a touch of shyness and cold reserve which made him unwilling to meet a stranger.

FOR JUDGE OF PROBATE.

S. A. Swanson Republican candidate for Judge of Probate, has been a resident of what is now Red Lake County for 27 years, coming here with his parents from New Jersy April 12, 1881. In 1892 he began teaching, and divided his time between that vocation and work on the homestead until Dec. 26, 1896, when he was appointed the first Register of Deeds of Red Lake County in which capacity he served two years.

Since that he has asked for no county office, but has twice been a candidate for the legislature, in 1900 carrying this county by over 300 for Representative, and a second time in 1902 getting a majority of 644 for State Senator both times being defeated by the heavy opposition vote from the other counties in this district where he was unknown.

His fidelity to friends and fairness in all business transactions have gained him cordial support in the parts where he is known.

As a candidate for Judge of Probate before the voters of Red Lake County he asks a fair consideration from every voter in the county.

No Resemblance.

"Woman and cats," said the youthful boarder, "are alike."

"Wrong, young man," said the cheerful idiot. "A woman can't run up a telegraph pole, and a cat can't run up a millinery bill."

Belated Revenge.

"Once when I was a small lad on my father's farm in Ohio," said a judge, "a peddler got me to help him make some repairs to his wagon. I did so without any thought of pay, but when the vehicle was mended as he drove off he told me the next time he came by our house on his rounds he would bring me a gift in the shape of a copy of 'Robinson Crusoe,' a book I had long coveted. How I waited for him to come again and how my heart fell when he failed to bring me the volume! Again and again he promised, but never made good his word. Years passed, and I grew to manhood, but the memory of that cruel disappointment never vanished from my mind. I was made a school trustee of my district, and one day a man applied for a position as teacher. In him I recognized the peddler who had blasted my youthful hopes. There was another candidate for the job, and mine was the deciding vote. Nothing in life ever gave me more pleasure than in voting against the ex-peddler, who for his deception on a boy lost a good place. It was perhaps carrying the spirit of revenge too far, but there are not many who would have done otherwise."—Baltimore American.

How Ledgers Got Their Name.

On the authority of the best lexicographers "ledger" is an adaptation of a once common word, "ligger," signifying any large book suited better for lying on a desk than for carrying about. Sometimes this was applied to a large account book, cartulary, or the like, frequently a great breviary for use in church, as distinct from a "portas," or small one, carried by a "book bosom priest." "Coucher" is another old synonym for "ligger," the foregoer of the now general "ledger."

The Duchess' Philosophy.

The old Duchess of Cleveland invited a relative to her husband's funeral and told him to bring his gun, adding, "We are old, we must die, but the pheasants must be shot."—Sir Algernon West's Reminiscences.

FRANK JEFFERS.

SWANSON GETS WARM

Rhoda Minn. Oct. 28th, 1908

Editor The Sunbeam.

I understand there are stories being circulated, by one of the candidates for county office, that Frank Jeffers is drunk and disordely most of his time. This is a base misrepresentation of facts, a dirty way to try to take advantage of a poor cripple, that has a large family to support, to try to gain a few votes. The facts are; that there can not be one single flaw found with the work he done as Register of Deeds for the term he served It would look better for them to state, that Jeffers had spent most the time the past year on his knees; and in hospitals, and that he is now a poor cripple on his knees; asking us to give him an opportunity to earn bread for his family and himself. Any man that is personaly aquainted with Jeffers and his crippled condition would have a heart of stone; if he did not put an X opposit his name on November 3rd.

Let us try to remember the golden rule, "do unto others as you would have others do unto you," If you went to your old neighbor on your bended knees asking him for his vote, (after you had both your feet cut off in a railroad accident), would you expect him to say no? We say yes with a good big X on Nov. 3rd opposit the name of Frank Jeffers, for Register of deeds of Red Lake County.

Yours truly,

PERUNA A TONIC OF GREAT USEFULNESS.

HON. R. S. THARIN.

Hon. R. S. Tharin, Attorney at Law and counsel for Anti-Trust League, writes from Pennsylvania Ave., N. W., Washington, D. C., as follows:

"Having used Peruna for catarrhal disorders, I am able to testify to its great remedial excellence and do not hesitate to give it my emphatic endorsement and earnest recommendation to all persons affected by that disorder. It is also a tonic of great usefulness."

Mr. T. Barnecott, West Aylmer, Ontario, Can., writes: "Last winter I was ill with pneumonia after having la grippe. I took Peruna for two months, when I became quite well. I also induced a young lady, who was all run down and confined to the house, to take Peruna, and after taking Peruna for three months she is able to follow her trade of tailoring. I can recommend Peruna for all such who are ill and require a tonic."

"Several months ago, my little boy began to break out with itching sores. I doctored him, but as soon as I got them healed up in one place they would break out in another. I was almost in despair. I could not get anything that would help him. Then I began to use Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, and after using them three times, the sores commenced to heal. He is now well, and not a scar is left on his body. They have never returned nor left him with bad blood, as one would think. Cuticura Remedies are the best I have ever tried, and I shall highly recommend them to any one who is suffering likewise. Mrs. William Geeding, 102 Washington St., Attica, Ind., July 22, 1907."

LEADER OF THE WORLD CHAMPIONS

FRANK L. CHANCE

Frank Chance is captain and manager of the Chicago National league team, three-times winners of the league pennant and twice holders of the world's baseball championship by virtue of their second defeat of the Detroit team, winners of the American league pennant. Chance is credited with having one of the best heads in the game and is very popular with both players and "fans."

SCHULZ MAY BE LOST TO MICHIGAN ELEVEN

Tied Down with "Cons," Great Center May Be Barred from Playing on Team.

According to a report from Ann Arbor, Mich., "Germany" Schulz, the pivot around which Yost built his whole team last year and upon whom the coach relied to turn out a winning eleven this year, may not be in the game until the Pennsylvania game—possibly not then.

Capt. Schulz has three conditions in the engineering course, more than a player can carry and continue his athletic relations. By much burning of the midnight oil Schulz may possibly remove these conditions by the end of the month, but this is an optimistic view of the situation shared by few.

In his All-America selection last fall, Walter Camp picked Schulz as the best center of the year. This is what Camp had to say about the big Teuton:

"Schulz of Michigan was the best center of the year. Not more active than Grant, nor steadier than Phillips, nor a better openfield tackler than Congdon, he had all the advantages of all these men, together with experience, and he turned them all to account. He is well over six feet in height, and yet a fast, powerful man, who gets well over the field and makes more tackles in a game than any other man on his team. In addition, he is an accurate passer and feeds the ball well to his backs either from kicks or runs."

"Matty" an Insurance Agent.

Christy Mathewson, the Giants' pitcher, has been engaged as a special agent of a life insurance company. Matty expects to write about $200,000 worth of insurance during the season. "This is my first venture in the insurance business," said Matty, "but I'm sure I can make good. Of course I'll go back to baseball in the spring."

GOOD KICKERS ARE NOW ESSENTIAL ON GRIDIRON

Strong and Accurate Booters Are a Great Factor Under the New Football Rules.

By Walter H. Eckersall.

The tremendous importance of kicking under the new rules in football has been again and again emphasized by contests in the last two years, and is likely to be exemplified again in the big games to come. In these kicking is likely to play an extremely important part and may readily decide many of the issues.

Kicking, in the true sense, includes the following and the handling of the ball quite as much as the act of driving it up and down the gridiron. The ability of a kicker to get away tremendously long kicks may prove a detriment to a team rather than an advantage, by reason of lacking ends and tackles fast enough to follow the ball. Just as readily may the whole advantage of a good kicker be thrown away by the failure of the backs to catch returning punts, so that in weighing a team's kicking ability it is as essential to consider the corollary play as well.

A great factor in helping the kickers is the inflation of the ball, a point frequently overlooked in the west. Few kickers seem to realize they can get better distance and accuracy in their boots if the ball is not blown too hard. The oval should never be inflated to its capacity, as it does not permit of a rebound, and if not kicked just right will not travel through the air any distance. Before each game the punter should take the trouble to go to the gymnasium and have the ball inflated to his liking, always bearing in mind not to have it too hard. Another thing which also aids a kicker is an elastic ankle brace or a rubber bandage around his ankle, as these give the instep a better surface and the ball receives more force than otherwise.

Taken as a class the punters and drop kickers of to-day are better than those of the olden days. The "old grad" frequently moans the absence of the kickers like O'Day, Sweeley, Hershberger, Hare, Hammon and Capron, but the average to-day is higher, and as drop kickers Bull, Brooke and Hudson were not one whit better than the men who are dropping to-day. Of course in the old days the place kick from scrimmage was unknown, Vane Newton introducing it in his closing days at Pennsylvania State college, but there were no kickers then who could have discounted some of the men who are kicking such goals to-day.

NOTES OF THE SPORTS

Forest Moore, the new pitcher of the Chicago Cubs, won 20 and lost 7 games with the Springfield team of the Three-I league this season.

With 26 won of the 33 games pitched, Adkins of the Baltimore club leads the Eastern league pitchers.

Johnny Glaze, last year's captain at Dartmouth, is coaching the Exeter football team.

There is a little knocking going on against McKay, the Harvard tackle. Not paying enough attention to the coaches seems to be the cause.

Among the Carlisle Indian football squad are noticed such "sure-enough" Indians as Cries-for-Ribs, Goes-Back Wounded-Eye, Little-Old-Man, Two Hearts, Tall Crane, Little Boy, Afraid-of-a-Bear and Little Wolf.

Mike and the Motorists.

An Irishman one day was told to put up a signboard on which were the words: "To Motorists—this hill is dangerous."

Away went Mike with the signboard and placed it at the bottom of a very steep hill. A few days later his employer went to see how the board was put up, and, finding it at the bottom of the hill, sought and found Mike.

"You blooming fool!' he cried, "why didn't you put that sign in the right place?"

Naming the Culprit.

A member of the flock was nodding with closed eyes during the sermon. The preacher said:

"I think mebbe some membah has been up too late durin' the ebenin' precedin'. He better set up or I'll name him."

Failing to accomplish the desired result the preacher soon stopped his sermon again. Shaking his finger at the culprit, he shouted:

"Jim Shepherd, dis is de secon time I stops to wake yo' up! If I have to stop a third time I'll expose yo' by name to de whole congregashun!"

ASTONISHED THE DOCTOR

Old Lady Got Well with Change of Food.

A great scientist has said we can put off "old age" if we can only nourish the body properly.

To do this the right kind of food, of course, is necessary. The body manufactures poisons in the stomach and intestines from certain kinds of food stuffs and unless sufficient of the right kind is used, the injurious elements overcome the good.

"My grandmother, 71 years old," writes a N. Y. lady, "had been an invalid for 18 years from what was called consumption of the stomach and bowels. The doctor had given her up to die.

"I saw so much about Grape-Nuts that I persuaded Grandmother to try it. She could not keep anything on her stomach for more than a few minutes.

"She began Grape-Nuts with only a teaspoonful. As that did not distress her and as she could retain it, she took a little more until she could take all of 4 teaspoonfuls at a meal.

"Then she began to gain and grow strong and her trouble in the stomach was gone entirely. She got to enjoy good health for one so old and we know Grape-Nuts saved her life.

"The doctor was astonished that instead of dying she got well, and without a drop of medicine after she began the Grape-Nuts." "There's a Reason."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Dance to Mark Social Debut of Ethel

WASHINGTON.—The date for the coming out dance of Miss Roosevelt, the president's second daughter, has been set for Monday, December 28. While this will mark her debut into the social life of the younger set, as has been announced before, the first state dinner she attends will really mean her formal debut. This dinner will be the first cabinet dinner of the season and will be given shortly before Christmas.

Though the announcement sent out from the White House describes the entertainment as a "small" dance, the number of invitations will not fall far short of 1,000. The dance will be held in the East room of the White House, and, according to present intentions, will follow the plan adopted when Miss Alice Roosevelt came out, that of dispensing with the cotillion.

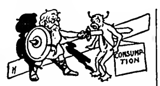
President and Mrs. Roosevelt have maintained that entertainments given to the young members of their family should be as personal as possible. When Miss Alice Roosevelt made her debut even the first assistant secretary of state was not invited, and, in general, that rule will be followed this year. Miss Roosevelt is only 18 years old, and the guests will probably be the youngest assemblage of the kind that ever gathered in the White House.

The fact that the dance will be given during the holidays means that a special effort will be made to have on hand Miss Roosevelt's school friends from New York and the college mates of Theodore Roosevelt, Jr. Her brother will come to Washington for the occasion, and Miss Christine Roosevelt and Miss Dorothy Roosevelt, cousins of the debutante, are also expected.

In all, about 200 young New Yorkers will be invited. At least that number was present at Miss Alice's debut, and the president has been careful that his children should not weaken their affiliations with their New York friends. Young Theodore will bring with him a number of his Harvard college mates, and perhaps one or two of the friends he has made since going into the carpetmaking business. The list of those to be invited is almost completed, and the invitations will be sent out very shortly.

The debut of Miss Roosevelt is expected to introduce a very gay winter at the capital. Since the marriage of Miss Alice Roosevelt to Congressman Nicholas Longworth in 1906, the White House has been voted a dull place by young people.

Texas Doctor a Picturesque Figure



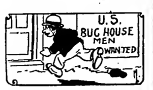
PERHAPS the most picturesque figure at the International Tuberculosis congress, in session here lately, was Dr. A. J. Beall of San Marcus, Tex. Dr. Beall is 85 years old, has been a practicing physician in Texas for more than half a century, and, because of his long record and his fidelity as a practitioner, is one of the best beloved men in the Lone Star state.

Dr. Beall's trip to Washington was intended to be the closing and crowning feature of his career. When he returns to his home at San Marcus, so he told his friends and patients before he left, it will be as a man retired from active professional pursuits—a private citizen.

The esteem in which the veteran physician is held by his neighbors is attested in a way by the fact that he was urged to make the trip to Washington by and at the expense of his friends in and near San Marcus. The fund to pay the expense of the trip was not contributed by any one philanthrophically inclined person, but by the entire community. The money was raised by a popular subscription.

The doctor came to Washington on the special train of the Texas delegation, and during the week was an interested, as well as an interesting, participator in the proceedings and demonstrations of the congress.

Here's a "Bughouse" Job for Some One



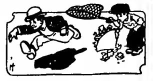
A "PREPARATOR" is now wanted by the bureau of entomology of the United States department of agriculture to assist in making the bug business profitable to the government or to the rural communities. The ruralists have found that they had a legal excuse to advance the prices on eggs because the bug crop was cut short by the dry weather, and there were no bugs for the chickens to eat.

So the preparator is to prepare bugs for chicken feed and other uses. At the civil service examination to be held soon embryo preparators will be required to assemble ten specimens of lepidoptera that will be furnished them and the one who succeeds in matching the dissected pieces of the ten bugs will be entitled to the price, which is a position at $50 a month and board yourself or beat the landlady.

Those who fail in the examination will be entitled to admission to the bughouse on the proper presentation of credentials. Another examination will be held for applicants for the position of aid in the division of insects of the National museum. This department pays better salaries than the department of agriculture, as the salary is $75 a month. The government also wants a chief for the cattle and grain investigation laboratory.

The bureau of corporations, department of commerce and labor, wants special examiners at salaries ranging from $1,200 to $3,500 a year.

Blase Bachelors of National Capital



THE man question is the most serious proposition a fashionable girl in Washington has to contend with.

Trouble No. 1 is, there aren't any men. Trouble No. 2 is, the men that there are—that's good Irish—are so spoiled to death they are a negligible quantity.

Said a religious young woman in the innermost clique the other day: "Conditions in Washington are fierce where male creatures are concerned. Men have no obligations—no responsibilities. They seem to think they are conferring a favor on the opposite sex by simply existing. Of course, for many a long day they have absolved themselves from the duty of paying dinner and party calls—it was kind enough in them to come in the first place—but half the time they don't even answer your notes of invitation. We girls have discovered that the only way to clinch the men when we really must have them at our affairs, is to catch them on the telephone before they have time to dodge. Extort a verbal promise that they will come, and to facilitate things offer to send a carriage for them as well.

"In ancestral days," the young woman went on, "I believe it was the privilege of the 'beaux' to pay all the expenses of the spree when they took the girls to balls and rooms. Not so in 1908. It's a Thanksgiving day to a girl if she can corral a partner for the cotillion, even when she pays her own subscription fee and supplies her own carriage and flowers. It takes money to be a girl nowadays.

Masculine stock is way above par, and a man who knows how to dance, or will dance if he knows how to, instead of swelling the mob of blase blackcoats near the exits of ballrooms, idle and unproductive, is indeed a bonanza."

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

FIGURED IN OIL DISCLOSURES

Joseph C. Sibley, the Pennsylvania congressman whose name figured in the recent Standard Oil disclosures of W. R. Hearst, will not be so directly affected by the unpleasant revelations as the Ohio statesman, for the Keystone man voluntarily retired from congress a couple of years ago and has not sought political preferment since. While he was in the house he occasionally shot up into the limelight for a moment, but upon the whole was considered a faithful if not a brilliant representative of his district. At one time he made an attack upon the president from the floor of the house which attracted considerable attention, and at the time of the postoffice scandals some unpleasant attention was attracted to Sibley by the discovery that a company in which he was heavily interested had an important contract for furnishing supplies to the postoffice department.

Sibley was born 57 years ago in New York, and after teaching school, farming, merchandising and selling goods on the road he struck a paying lead as an oil producer and amassed considerable wealth through the medium of a signal oil.

He went into politics while still comparatively young, and was elected mayor of Franklin, Pa., at the age of 29. He was a Democrat in those days, and it was that party which sent him to congress in 1892. He was one of the original free silver boomers, but his convictions underwent a pronounced change later on, for in 1900, while still in congress, he reversed himself and became a Republican. A little incident like that did not, however, appear to affect his grasp upon his constituency, for he continued to be elected to congress by his new partisans.

He has been active in various cattle breeding, agricultural and dairymen's organizations, and it appears from the recent revelations that he also took something more than a mere passing interest in the affairs of the Standard Oil Company.

MAY GET SENATE TOGA

Ollie M. James, congressman from the First Kentucky district, will undoubtedly succeed Senator Thomas H. Paynter if a Democratic legislature is elected in that state. Here is the interesting pen picture a prominent Democratic paper paints of him:

"He stands six feet four inches in a pair of No. 11 shoes that are filled completely by a pair of old-fashioned feet, shaped in the rows of the corn-field to tread the paths that lead to future greatness.

"He has size without symmetry, sort of thrown together carelessly as if nature in a good-humored, convulsive mood had done a big thing and [illegible] have time to carve it into the shapeliness of an Apollo Belvidere. A party of Liliputians could dance a minuet on his broad back. No Kentucky thoroughbred is wider through the heart than he.

"James is not the ordinary southern orator, smothering his audiences in flowers of rhetoric and blowing bubbles of wit and fancy just to amuse the crowd. His speeches are models of clear-cut, vigorous English.

"Whether in congress measuring merits with the Republican leaders on great national questions, before a chancellor arguing an intricate question of law, facing a jury in whose hands the life or property of his client is held or on the hustings with thousands of Democrats anxious to hear the word proclaimed, he is equally effective, his presence magnetic, his manner engaging and his resonant voice a never ending delight. He is 'Big Ollie' to his intimates and 'Plain Ollie' to every one else. He is easy to get acquainted with. There are no frills about him, no affectation and a wholesome welcoming atmosphere surrounds him."

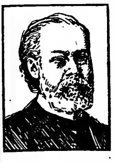
AUTHOR IN POLITICS

Edward W. Townsend is another literary man who has broken into political life recently. He has been nominated for congress by the Democrats of one of the New Jersey districts.

The Seventh New Jersey district, which will be the scene of his political efforts, has been represented in congress by a Republican for the last 15 years, but it is a close district and Townsend will only have a majority of a few hundred votes to overcome.

By the average reader Townsend is remembered chiefly as the creator of that unique and slangily interesting young gentleman, "Chimmie Fadden," whose self-told adventures and experiences made interesting reading a dozen years ago. He also wrote the "Major Max" sketches, as well as several novels, sketches, plays and poems of varied sort. Although he was born in Cleveland, O., he lived much of his life in San Francisco, where he worked as a newspaper writer and where he first made a reputation as an author of clever special articles and humorous hits that were widely copied and quoted. For some years past he has worked on the New York newspapers, and has made his home in the pretty town of Montclair, N. J., within easy reach of the metropolis. The present is his first serious venture into politics.

HONORED BY FRENCH ACADEMY



Louis Frechette, the bard of French Canada, has been named as laureate of the French academy. While a most unusual honor, particularly since its recipient is a resident of this continent, it adds nothing to the distinction that is universally accorded Dr. Frechette as the last of that brilliant group of poets and novelists who have made French Canada and the simple life of the habitant known to the world. Of this group, Frechette and Drummond were undoubtedly the leaders, although Gaspe with his "Les Anciens Canadiens," Mannette and Routhier have all made enviable names in the world's literature.

Dr. Frechette was born in Quebec a half century ago, and was originally intended for the law. He abandoned that dry profession, however, and after a five years' residence in Chicago he returned to Quebec and plunged into politics. For a few years he was a member of the Dominion parliament, but politics, too, failed to hold his fancy and went over to Montreal and to literature.

Honors have come to the poet from many countries before this later tribute of the academy. He was elected a knight of the French Legion of Honor nearly 30 years ago, when two of his books were crowned by the Immortals. He has been given many high orders and decorations by the rulers of Great Britain and other countries, and he is accounted a member of many learned societies. He was lately president of the Royal Society of Canada.

New Velvet Carpets for Mrs. Sage

NEW YORK.—Mrs. Russell Sage has new velvet carpets in her home, 632 Fifth avenue, soft, rich and beautiful, with deep, thick pile into which the foot sinks.

"I am glad," said a woman who has known Mrs. Sage for years, that she could have these velvet carpets before she died. In all the years of her married life down at the house at 506 Fifth avenue, she had nothing except an ancient Brussels carpet on her parlor floor. It was one she had when she first went to keeping house and had those great, set medallions in it that they used to use for carpet patterns 40 years ago. The nap was worn off all over it, so that the brown warp showed through.

"When it finally got so bad that it was impossible to use it longer, matting was put down in the parlor, as it long had been in the rest of the house. She always used the old horsehair furniture she had when she was married, such as one saw in country parlors 40 years ago, and there were great cracks in the parlor walls of the home at Forty-second street which went for years without fixing.

"Mrs. Sage suffered from mortification of such things, just as much as any other woman would, and I'm glad she is able to have the velvet carpets for a few years before she dies. But they came too late to give her much pleasure. After they had all been put down and the furniture was in place, she walked through the house observing and admiring and then sat down and cried. She said not a word in explanation, but it was easy to understand. She was thinking of all the stinted years when she might have enjoyed such things, and now she has them when she is too old to care very much.

"There scarcely is a day that Mrs. Sage does not weep," continued this old friend of hers. "She simply sits and cries at the intolerable burden of having $65,000,000 on her shoulders, at the burden of distributing that huge fortune in the way that will do the most good. She is 80 years old and has a New England conscience. She wants to do just the right thing with it all, and it requires an amount of thought and study and imposes a feeling of responsibility that is hard on an old woman who only wants a quiet corner to spend her few remaining years in."

Good Society Not Silly, Says Mrs. Fish

SOCIETY does none of the silly things it is accused of. I ought to know, for I lived in Newport more than fifteen years."

Thus broadly did Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish answer the criticism and attacks which have been made on the "400" by Mrs. Astor and by Mrs. Cornwallis West. She declared that society had been defamed and that the sensational stories were circulated "to make us ridiculous abroad."

"Being a true American, I naturally would defend my own countrymen, wouldn't I?" said Mrs. Fish. "Mrs. West was an American woman, but she hasn't been in this country for years. What does she know of New York society? Why doesn't she come over and find out?

"I never attended any of the extraordinary social functions Mrs. West speaks of. They certainly must be funny. I wonder what they would be like? I really never heard of any of these things before.

"Newport society is perfectly sane and normal. It is high time the silly stories about it were stopped. They are absolutely false, every one of them, and no loyal, patriotic man would publish stories which belittle abroad the dignity of his own countrywomen and men.

"Good society is the same everywhere, and a lady is a lady in any country. Being an American, I consider myself just as good as any of the foreign blood, superior probably to some.

"New York society, if anything, is more dignified than that abroad. I believe it is really more exclusive in some respects. King Edward is very democratic and goes about socially a great deal more than President Roosevelt does.

"I agree with Mrs. West that if New York society were to open its doors a little wider its influence might be felt."

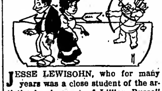
City's Annual Coal Bill Is Enormous

NEW YORK feels more than a merely curious interest in the oft-repeated prediction that the coal mines of the country will be exhausted in another hundred years, for the city is the greatest coal consumer in the world.

According to statistics recently collected the metropolis uses 25,000,000 tons annually and requires the services of 50,000 men to keep itself warmed and lighted. More than $150,000,000 is invested in the business of supplying New York residents with coal, and 2,000 barges and 150 tugs are kept busy transporting it about the harbor. These barges average in capacity from 350 to 1,500 tons, and in them there is always afloat more than 1,500,000 tons. Every day there is loaded into barges in the harbor of New York more coal than is used in a year throughout the empire of China. Last year the wharves in the city handled 28,400,000 tons and this year the total promises to run well above 30,000,000 tons.

Averaging factories and small consumers at a price of four dollars for each ton, New York will spend during the approaching winter $120,000,000 to keep itself warm.

Millionaire Sportsman to Wed Actress



JESSE LEWISOHN, who for many years was a close student of the artistic development of Lillian Russell as an actress and connoisseur in Persian rugs, is reported engaged to Miss Edna McCauley.

The romance involving the millionaire sportsman and son of the late copper king, is said to have had its inception at Atlantic City last summer. Mr. Lewisohn spent the greater part of the summer there, as did Miss McCauley.

Atlantic City mathematicians, who are adepts in putting two and two together and making it six, forecasted early in the summer that the little god Hymen was camping on the trail of the tall young son of copper millions and the vivacious beauty of the footlights. Not that Mr. Lewisohn has not been reported engaged before, or that there was anything new in his ardent interest in affairs histrionic.

But then, it seems, he was only slightly bruised by the shafts of Eros, whereas now the dart has ripped right through his waistcoat, a twin dart inflicting a similar wound in the bosom of Miss Edna McCauley.

Mr. Lewisohn recently gave an exclusive little banquet. Miss McCauley was present and so were several of her intimate friends and several intimate friends of the millionaire. The occasion, it is said, was to serve as a farewell to single blessedness and during the height of the jolly little dinner the couple confessed their happiness and fixed the marriage day. The wedding, according to friends of Mr. Lewisohn, will be very quiet and after the ceremony the bride and bridegroom will sail to Europe for their honeymoon, visiting on the other side Oscar Lewisohn, Jesse's brother and Oscar's attractive wife, who was Miss Edna May.

China's Unwelcome Guest.

China has troubles of its own, and one of them is the presence in that country of the Dalai Lama, the head of the Buddhist faith, whose traditional home is in the sacred city of Lhassa in Tibet. Several years ago when a British expedition forced its way to and into the holy city the Dalai Lama gathered his voluminous skirts about him, assembled a big and gorgeous retinue, shook the dirt of the town from his sandals and set out for regions where his privacy would not be disturbed. He took refuge in northern China, and he has been on Chinese soil ever since. Apparently he has conceived a liking for travel, for he has moved about a great deal, his latest procedure being a ceremonious visit to Peking, where of course he was received by the imperial authorities as became his state and his position in the religious world. But it seems that the Chinese government is getting a little tired of the visitor. It was all very well to have him as an honored guest for a short time, but he has manifested a strong disinclination to return to his home. What makes matters worse is that the hundreds of retainers who follow him about are a rather unpleasant lot. A Peking dispatch describes them as "a wild, disorderly, unkempt looking crew, giving an impression of their religious affiliations." As they live on the country, insist on being well cared for and are not above creating very lively disturbance if they do not get what they want, their presence is not an unmixed joy to the kindly and hospitable but peace-loving Chinese.

An examination of candidates for the new women's nurse corps of the United States navy was recently held in Washington. Of those who passed, 20 young women have been selected to take a preliminary course in the Navy Medical school. There they will study for six months, at the end of which time they will be examined again and, if they pass, will be assigned to one of the 18 naval hospitals in this country as nurses. It is intended that they shall be the nucleus of a corps which will eventually number 150 highly trained nurses, some of whom will be stationed in the naval hospitals in Yokohama, Honolulu and Manila. The woman selected to organize the new corps is Miss Esther V. Hassan, who is not only an experienced nurse, but has seen service in the relief corps in Cuba, Porto Rico, the Philippines and various army camps in the United States.

The truth about us as a people lies somewhere between the constant warnings against corruption and pleas for altruism from idealists like President Tucker of Dartmouth and the flattering pronouncement of a learned French woman recently arrived in this country for her third long visit. "As a people," she said, "your ideals and your moral tone are ahead of any European country; individually you are apt to be disappointing. But the fact alone that here one constantly hears reference to 'service,' and the desire and intent to render 'service'—that serving has been made, however recently, a public ideal, strikes the foreigner forcibly."

Cheese must have been a rather dear or scarce article of food in 1502, for it is recorded in the "blackbooks" of the Honorable Society of Lincoln's Inn that at Easter term, 1502, it was "agreed by the governors and benchers this term that if any one of the society shall hereafter cut cheese immoderately at the time of dinner or supper, or shall give cheese to any servant or to any other, or shall carry it away from the table at any time, he shall pay four pence for each offense. The butlers of the society shall present such defaulters weekly, under pain of expulsion from office."

There will not be a wireless station in Washington on top of Washington's monument. There are yet a few places left in the modern human heart in which pure sentiment has still the better of bald utility, and it does seem a trifle shabby to turn a testimonial to the Father of His Country, supposed to be erected by a grateful nation, into a self-supporting institution.

New submarines will bear the names of Snapper, Pickerel, Carp, Tarpon and Bonita, which don't sound so warlike as Shark, Adder, Tarantula and the like, now in use. Still, it wouldn't do to trifle with either.

A Newark woman applied for a divorce on the ground that her husband was unbearably religious, and among other things prayed for her wicked soul every night. This is a very rare complaint, however. It must be admitted that the majority of American husbands are too polite to be so spiritually rude to their wives.

Fifty miles without lighting, in a flying machine with no gas bag to hold it up, beats all the ballooning ever done in all the world.

MRS. ASTOR IS DEAD

AMERICAN SOCIETY LEADER PASSES AWAY.

LONG A SOCIAL LIGHT

New York Woman Who Was Known as First Among Country's Aristocrats Taken by Death—Heart Trouble Cause.

New York.—Mrs. William Astor, who for 30 years had been regarded as the social leader of New York, died Friday night of heart disease at her home on Fifth avenue.

For nearly four weeks Mrs. Astor, who was 82 years old, had been in a critical condition owing to the return of a heart affection that had given her trouble for years.

There is not a name in the social register that is so well known from one end of the land to the other as that of Mrs. Astor. Despite her advancing years, Mrs. Astor continued to hold her social domination up to a year ago, when failing health compelled her to retire into comparative seclusion.

In Ill Health a Year.

It was in the summer of 1907 that Mrs. Astor's friends learned of her ill health. While she was abroad last year, her son, Col. John Jacob Astor, made the announcement that Beechwood, the summer home of Mrs. Astor at Newport, would not be opened and this led to the discovery that Mrs. Astor was in poor health. Word came later from Mrs. Astor, while she was in Paris, saying that she would open her Newport villa and that she would make the season there one of the gayest in years.

This promise was not fulfilled, however, for when Mrs. Astor returned from abroad she broke down in Boston and had to return to New York. She had remained at her home ever since.

Society Functions in History.

The society functions given and presided over by Mrs. Astor have gone down into history as the most brilliant on record. It is said that the ballroom in the mansion on Fifth avenue would accommodate 1,000 people. It was Mrs. Astor who established the famous "400," her visiting list being confined to that number of names. In 1905, however, Mrs. Astor was said to have "let down the bars," when she invited 1,200 persons to one of the most memorable social events ever given in New York. Mrs. Astor received her guests at these gatherings seated in a high-backed chair beneath a portrait of herself, painted by Carolus Duran.

Spouse Not Tall Socially.

The Astor jewels were worn by Mrs. Astor on these occasions. It is said the Astor emeralds are the finest in the world.

William Astor, who died in Paris in 1892, took little part in the social activities his wife enjoyed. Mrs. Astor, before marriage, was Miss Caroline Schermerhorn, a daughter of Abraham Schermerhorn, a well-to-do merchant. She was married to William Astor on September 23, 1853. John Jacob Astor was their only son. There were four daughters, two of them, Mrs. Ogilvie Haig and Mrs. Orme Wilson, are now living. The eldest daughter, Miss Emily Astor, who married J. J. Van Alen, died some years ago.

BATTLESHIPS REACH AMOY.

Second Squadron of Eight Vessels at Chinese Port.

Amoy.—Eight battleships comprising the second squadron of the American Atlantic fleet, under command of Rear Admiral William H. Emory, arrived here Friday morning after an uneventful voyage from Yokohama. To the Chinese the visit of the Americans is of far-reaching importance and every preparation has been made not only to extend to the representatives of the United States a flattering welcome, but to impress upon them China's desire for even more cordial relations with the republic than have prevailed hitherto.

Montgomery Again Convicted.

Pittsburg, Pa. — William Montgomery, cashier of the Allegheny National bank until the discovery of a shortage in its funds of over $1,250,000 early last summer necessitated closing the institution, was for the second time this week found guilty Wednesday of embezzlement and abstraction of funds, his peculations in the two cases amounting to $613,000. This case involved the abstraction of $144,000 worth of the bank bonds, and as in the first case, Montgomery offered no testimony in defense.

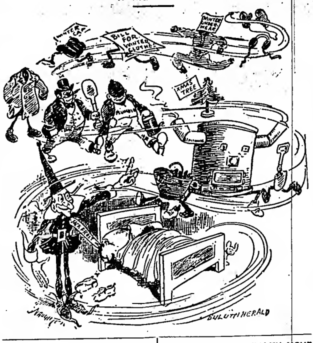
A NIGHTMARE.



TO BETTER FARMERS' LIFE

"UPLIFT" COMMISSION GIVES OUT ITS ITINERARY.

One-Day Hearings Will Be Held First in South, Then Through Entire West.

Ithaca, N. Y. — The itinerary of the first trip of President Roosevelt's farmers' uplift commission was announced Wednesday by Chairman Liberty Hyde Bailey, who has been planning for the investigation of farmers' life in this country.

The commission will hold its first hearing at the agricultural college of Maryland on November 6. The party will then go south and the next ten days will be spent on hearings in the states south of Washington and east of the Mississippi river. During this period the commission will separate in order to cover the territory more fully. Dean Bailey will come and go between the two divisions. On the night of November 7, the day after the Maryland meeting, Dean Bailey will journey to Philadelphia and there address the American Academy of Political Science on the work of the country life commission.

The commission will be in Washington on November 16 and 17. There the commissioners will meet the masters of the state granges and the farmers' institute workers of the United States on November 16. The next day they will meet with the delegates of the Association of Colleges and Experiment Stations. On the night of November 17 the party will leave for the southwest, going through Tennessee and Texas, swinging up through Arizona and into California. The northern and southern states of the Rocky mountain group will be covered. The trip back across the country will embrace hearings in all the states of the middle west. The party will return for a final hearing in Washington on December 18. The hearing in Ithaca will occur about the middle of December.

Messrs. Boardman and McAlphins of the International Y. M. C. A. will be with the party on part of the trip, and ministers and various professional men will be picked up on the journey. The hearings will be of one-day's duration each.

JAMES KERR PASSES AWAY.

Democratic National Committeeman Dies at New Rochelle, N. Y.

New York. — James Kerr, Democratic national committeeman from Pennsylvania, died Saturday morning at his summer home in New Rochelle, following an operation for an intestinal disorder which had made him practically an invalid for a year. His wife and sons were with him at the end.

William J. Bryan visited Mr. Kerr last Monday, and the latter was much elated over the visit of the Democratic candidate, but almost immediately afterward suffered a nervous collapse which greatly aggravated his already weakened condition. There have been several consultations of physicians within the last few days, and it was determined Friday that the only chance of saving Mr. Kerr's life lay in performing an operation.

Bloomington, Ill.—William Doyle and William Finney of Mason City were struck by a Chicago, Peoria & St. Louis switch engine at Petersburg Friday and killed.

ROOSEVELT AIDS HEALTH MOVE.

Promises to Make Recommendation in Next Message.

New York. — That President Roosevelt has agreed to recommend to congress in his next message the passage of a law to conserve the public health, similar to the one proposed by the American Medical association, was the statement made in an address before the New York Academy of Medicine by Dr. Charles A. L. Reed of Cincinnati, chairman of the association's committee on national medical legislation. In speaking on the campaign for national health laws, Dr. Reed said:

"On the heels of the various steps forward I am gratified to be able to assure you that the president has authorized the statement that he will formulate definite proposals and transmit them with his indorsement to the next congress. It now devolves upon the 13,000 doctors in the United States not only to back the president in his work, but to anticipate those actions by a persistent campaign in behalf of this fundamental feature of the public welfare."

NEW FARMERS' ORGANIZATION.

Society of Equity Is Formed at Indianapolis Convention.

Indianapolis, Ind.—The Farmers' Society of Equity was organized here Thursday afternoon at a convention of representatives from a number of states. The constitution of the society embodies practically all of the basic principles of the American Society of Equity, the principal change being that all delegates to the conventions of the society must be producing farmers.

The following officers were elected: J. A. Everitt of Indianapolis, president; W. E. Creflick of Travis City, Mich., vice-president; J. C. Rous of Indianapolis, treasurer. The directors are: N. N. Asbhy of Sebree, Ky.; J. A. Myers of Ramsey, N. J.; R. Sherad of Keosauqua, Ia.; W. H. Mitchell of Hutchinson, Kan.; L. H. Johnson of Attica, Ind.; and F. W. Morris of Rochester, Minn.

AUTO ACCOMPANIES A BALLOON.

Thus Aeronauts May Return to Starting Point Easily.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Something new in aeronautics was attempted here Friday afternoon when a monster balloon with a capacity of 110,000 cubic feet of gas shot up into the air with an automobile in the place where a basket is usually suspended. The ascension was made in the north part of the city, the balloon carrying two occupants—Carl G. Fisher of Indianapolis and G. L. Baumhaugh of Springfield, Ill. The idea of the aeronauts in using an automobile instead of the usual basket is to be able to immediately roll up the balloon, load it in the automobile and return to the place of starting or other destination.

SQUADRON TOUCHES ISLES

FIRST SECTION OF ATLANTIC FLEET AT OLONGAPO.

Second Division at Amoy, China, Tells Indifference of the Natives—Few "Passes" Cause.

The weather was fine throughout the entire trip from Japan and the ships have been occupied with squadron evolutions and careful preparations for target practice. Otherwise the journey has been uneventful. Wireless communication will be maintained with Manila while the fleet is at Olongapo.

Amoy. — Chinese people were indifferent regarding the arrival here Friday of the second squadron of the United States Atlantic fleet. Only a few natives turned out to see the battleships composing the strongest naval force that ever entered this port.

Not more than 100 Chinese guests were admitted to the grounds on which the celebration planned for the reception of the American officers and sailors was held, and resentment at the severe measures to exclude the natives was the cause of the apathy. The British consul issued a circular stating that the local officials have declined to issue more than 60 passes to the inclosure to British subjects and that in consequence he refused to accept one.

The fleet appeared off Tai-Tan island at 6:30 a. m. Friday, having been met ten miles out at sea by the torpedo gunboat Fei-Ying, which escorted the visitors to their anchorage. The ships entered the harbor in single file, the Louisiana, flagship of Rear Admiral William H. Emory, leading, and after forming a double line they dropped their anchors at 9:30 o'clock while the forts on shore and the flagship of the Chinese squadron, the Hai-Chi, fired the usual salutes, to which the Americans responded.

CHAIN THEMSELVES TO GRILLE.

Suffragettes Create Remarkable Scene in House of Commons.

London.—Suffragette disturbances have driven the government to the unusual course of temporarily closing the strangers' and ladies' galleries in the house of commons. Wednesday evening a sensation was caused by the display of a placard and sudden shrill cries from the ladies' gallery, demanding votes for women, while simultaneously a bundle of handbills fluttered down from the strangers' gallery at the opposite end of the chamber, and a man shouted protests against "injustice to women."

Attendants hurried to the galleries and the male offender was unceremoniously ejected, but from the ladies' gallery sounds were heard of a desperate struggle. Two suffragettes had firmly chained themselves to the grille and resisted for a time all efforts at removal, crying continuously in shrill tones their demands for votes.

The scene was watched with amazement from the floor of the house, but finally the suffragettes were dragged from their posts and removed, but only after portions of the grille were removed with them.

PEACE STEPS BY BULGARIA.

Agrees to Compensate Turkey and Discharges the Reservists.

Sofia.—The Bulgarian government Tuesday informed the representatives of the foreign powers here of its acceptance of the principle of paying compensation to Turkey, which has been the burden of persistent diplomatic representations during the past fortnight on the part of all the great powers. This decision was arrived at by the cabinet Tuesday morning after a long debate, in which Emperor Ferdinand used all his influence in favor of peace with compensation.

As a further step in the direction of peace, 60,000 reservists will be discharged at once, leaving the army at its normal strength of 60,000.

KEPT GETTING WORSE.

Five Years of Awful Kidney Disease.

Nat Anderson, Greenwood, S. C., says: "Kidney trouble began about five years ago with dull backache, which got so severe in time that I could not get around. The kidney secretions became badly disordered, and at times there was almost a complete stop of the flow. I was examined again and again and treated to no avail, and kept getting worse. I have to praise Doan's Kidney Pills for my final relief and cure. Since using them I have gained in strength and flesh and have no sign of kidney trouble."

The Doctor's Fee.

The average man will give a lawyer $300 to $500, together with a lifetime's praise, to keep him out of the penitentiary for from two to ten years, and at the same time he will raise a phosphorescent glow and a kick that can be heard around the world if a doctor charges him $50 to $100 to keep him out of hell for a lifetime. We are the only people under God's ethereal tent to-day who keep open shop 24 hours each day and 365 days in each year. We are also the only laborers to keep on working for people who do not pay. I can carry my part of charity with as good a grace as most men. I can go through rain, snow or mud and do my best, provided the case is one of worthy need, but to reward continually downright rascality, willful drunkenness and wanton laziness is getting out of my line.—Texas State Journal of Medicine.

MODESTY.

Teacher (encouragingly) — Come, now, Willie, spell chickens.

Willie—I'm afraid I'm too young to spell chickens, teacher, but you might try me on eggs.

A Queer Harvest.

It was little Ethel's first visit to church, and the sermon had for its text, "As ye sow, so shall ye reap." But on her return home she could not remember it, and in consequence was chided by her mother for being stupid.

A fortnight later a seamstress came to the house to do a day's work. After watching her for awhile fashion old-style garments into those that were th evogue, Ethel suddenly exclaimed:

"O mamma, I know now what the preacher said. It was: 'What you sew in the winter you shall rip in the summer.'"

Not an Up-to-Date Church.

Two colored sisters living in a suburban town met on the street one day, and Sister Washington, who had recently joined the church, was describing her experiences.

"'Deed Mrs. Johnsing, I'se j'ined the Baptist church, but I couldn't do all the j'ining here, 'cause they had to take me to the city church to baptize me. You know there ain't no poolroom in the church here."—Success.

The Good That Never Dies.

Dickens: There is nothing, innocent or good, that dies and is forgotten. Let us hold to that faith or none. An infant, a prattling child, will live again in the better thoughts of those who loved it, and will play its part, through them, in the redeeming actions of the world, though its body be burnt to ashes or drowned in the deepest sea.

PUZZLE SOLVED.

Coffee at Bottom of Trouble.

It takes some people a long time to find out that coffee is hurting them.

But when once the fact is clear, most people try to keep away from the thing which is followed by ever increasing detriment to the heart, stomach and nerves.

"Until two years ago I was a heavy coffee drinker," writes an Ill. stockman, "and had been all my life. I am now 56 years old.

"About three years ago I began to have nervous spells and could not sleep nights, was bothered by indigestion, bloating, and gas on stomach affected my heart.

"I spent lots of money doctoring—one doctor told me I had chronic catarrh of the stomach; another that I had heart disease and was liable to die at any time. They all dieted me until I was nearly starved but I seemed to get worse instead of better.

"Having heard of the good Postum had done for nervous people, I discarded coffee altogether and began to use Postum regularly. I soon got better, and now, after nearly two years, I can truthfully say I am sound and well.

"I sleep well at night, do not have the nervous spells and am not bothered with indigestion or palpitation. I weigh 32 pounds more than when I began Postum, and am better every way than I ever was while drinking coffee. I can't say too much in praise of Postum, as I am sure it saved my life."

THAT SATSUMA BRACELET

By Frank Lovell Nelson

Fearful Tragedy and Tearful Romance Cling to Small Ornament—Death of Lieut. Robinson Ends Queer State of Affairs.

THAIDA was in Chicago. This was enough to upset the daily order of Clarke and myself and make work out of the question. Just why she came I was not informed. Clarke, I knew, was not in active correspondence with her, and since our thrilling experiences off the gulf coast when we had rescued her from the clutches of Count Armand de Lamp and his band of devil worshipers he had not mentioned her name. But now that she was at a fashionable North side hotel looking, if it be possible, more beautiful, more queenly and more utterly fascinating than ever, he appeared to live and move in another world. For myself I could feast my eyes upon her by the hour, but I dared not, for the sake of friendship and loyalty and all that I held most dear in my association with Clarke, allow my mind to fallow. My heart I knew already was lost beyond my ever regaining it. But it was a joy to walk the streets with her, to feel her presence at one's side and to share the conscious pride in the admiring looks that followed her whenever she appeared in public.

Right royally we entertained her in our humble apartments.

Among the guests and second only to Thaida herself in beauty was Katharine Randall. Clarke and I met her for the first time. She was a guest of the Armatages and when our good and long valued friend Mrs. Armatage telephoned asking the privilege of bringing her we were quite unprepared, despite Mrs. Armatage's glowing description, for such a vision of feminine pulchritude. She was Thaida's direct opposite, a perfect blonde with the clear blue eyes and the pink and white skin that would have given her the face of a doll had it not been for the soul that shone through it.

Just then there was a ring at the telephone and Togo, our Jap boy, who answered it, said: "It's for Mr. Chief Ship."

The young woman alighted and the chief met her at the door and was closeted with her for some ten or fifteen minutes. When he returned his face wore a puzzled look and he beckoned to Clarke and whispered:

"I'd like you to hear Miss Atwell's story. I shouldn't be surprised if it was more in your line than mine."

"As I told Mr. Ship," began the young woman, "I am engaged to be married to Lieut. Morton Robinson of the army. He has been in the Philippines for the past two years, this being his second term of duty there. He will sail for home shortly and when he arrives we were to have been married, but with what I have to tell you unexplained I do not feel that I can look him in the face again," and her eyes became suffused with tears.

"It's the things he has sent me, the most beautiful things you ever saw, and now I haven't a single one of them, and what is worse I cannot explain how or why they disappeared. It seems like fate. Every single thing he has given me has been something to wear or some handsome piece of jewelry, and the very first time I have put any of them on it has disappeared as completely and as mysteriously as if it just melted into air.

"First it was a handsome tortoise shell and gold comb. It could never be duplicated in this country for I have searched the shops ever since for one. The very first time I wore it I lost it, and I never lost a comb before in my life.

"Then Lieut. Robinson sent me a beautiful little jeweled brooch in the shape of a stiletto. It was set with rubies, diamonds and sapphires he had picked up in Ceylon on his way out and he had them mounted in Manila. I kept it three months before wearing it, and then I was invited to a box party and the temptation was too great. I knew the fastening was secure and I was conscious all during the performance it was there but when I got home at night it was gone and I cried all the rest of the night.

"Then there was my wonderful cameo. Lieut. Robinson got it in Malta and had it mounted in the most beautiful native fashion in China. I wore it for a belt buckle and not only was the fastening secure but I took the precaution of sewing it to the belt."

"My best men have worked on every case except the last which Miss Atwell has yet to tell you," said the chief. "We have raked the pawn shops of the city with a fine-toothed comb and I believe Miss Atwell's father has spent pretty nearly the value of the articles in advertising bills. But tell him of the bracelet, Miss Atwell."

"It was a bracelet of medallions of antique satsuma ware linked together with curiously wrought bands of gold. I received it two months ago but I had been so unlucky with all the rest of his presents that I resolved never to wear it when I thought how I had lost the others, but what's the use of having nice things if you can't wear them? So last night when I was going to a dance at the North Shore Country club I wore the bracelet. But previously I had taken it to a jeweler and had a little gold chain and padlock put on it in addition to the other fastening. It made it perfectly secure. More than that I had elbow gloves on over it when I got in the auto to come home. I know it was on my arm when I got into the car. When I took my gloves off it was gone.

"Now, Mr. Ship says you can help me find these things. Every one of them would be easily identified for every one is unique. And besides I have one of the medallions of the bracelet still which was loose so I took it out fearing to lose it."

Miss Atwell opened a gold chain bag that she carried and handed us a little medallion. I looked at it intently and a suspicion that had been forming in my mind became a certainty. It was identical with the medallions in the bracelet on Katharine Randall's beautiful arm.

Miss Atwell left with brightened face and as we turned once more to our guests Clarke whispered: "Make no mention, either of you, of the bracelet on the arm of the blond girl, Miss Randall, but notice if it has a link missing."

The circlet was complete. Not a medallion was missing.

"I will do anything you wish to help, Carlton," answered Thaida, seating herself in a reclining chair.

Clarke quickly put her first in the hypnotic and then in the cataleptic state. Then pressing against her forehead the satsuma medallion from Miss Atwell's bracelet, he said:

"Look well into the past, Thaida, and tell us what you see."

The voice came soft and cadenced like a message from the unknown:

"I see a tropic port. There are white houses back upon a beautiful hill. White roads of shell twine their way up the slope. At its foot and running down to the harbor is a military post. Soldiers are all about, bathing in the azure waters of the harbor, smoking and sipping drinks under the verandas. They are Americans. Back on the hills stands one native house of white plaster more pretentious than the rest. Upon its broad veranda swings a hammock and in it languidly reclines a beautiful young girl. She is dark of skin and hair and her deep black eyes glow like coals of fire. On her arm there is a bracelet of quaint and curious design. It is of satsuma medallions, like one that I have seen, linked with finely wrought gold.

"At the young girl's feet sits an officer in khaki and putees. He is an American, and he lifts his boyish sun darkened face to hers and his soul goes out to her in his eyes while she toys with the bracelet on her arm and answers his love messages in kind.

"But wait, they are speaking. It is Spanish."

"Translate it, Thaida."

"'It was so good of you, light of my life, to give me this beautiful thing,' says the girl. 'But you must not spend all the money your government gives you thus. Some day you will take me back to your own land and we shall need other things besides combs of tortoise and gold, and jeweled stilettos and cameos and this.'

"'They are nothing,' answers the young officer. 'Surely I may give pretty things to my wife, though they cannot make her more beautiful than she is.'

"'Your wife, Morton? Tell me again that the marriage is a good one. I know you gave the friar much money, $5 gold, but there are times when I start out of my dreams and see the face of a girl, and she is fair and of your own race and I speak to her in the night. She tells me that I shall never see that far off country of yours. And then I look again and see her fair form and she has my comb in her hair, and my stiletto at her throat, and my cameo at her waist and my bracelet on her arm.'"

Thaida paused in her recital and Clarke spoke:

"Follow the bracelet closely where it touches the lives of those who have handled it. What next do you see?"

"I see a darkened room in which many candles are burning. Upon a bier of bamboo lies the body of a young girl. The bracelet is on her arm. By her side lies the corpse of a new-born child. On bended knees a man in khaki uniform sobs as only a strong man can sob. Until the morning he is shaken with his grief. A distant bugle sounds. He arises and unclasping from the pallid arm the bracelet he presses it to his lips and places it within his blouse next his heart."

"I see a fair-haired girl in a beautiful richly furnished home. She is opening a box and from it she takes the bracelet. She is speaking. I listen.

"'Oh, mamma,' she says, 'see what Lieutenant Robinson has sent me,' and she holds the bracelet before the eyes of an elderly woman.

"I see the bracelet now upon the arm of the young woman. She is alighting from an automobile and as she puts her hand out upon the tonneau door a figure steps from out the darkness. It is the native girl who once wore the bracelet. No, that cannot be. She lay dead in a white house in a tropical isle. It is her astral self, for she removes, despite its fastenings, the bracelet from its outstretched arm."

"The bracelet, Thaida; follow it!"

"I next see it upon the arm of a fair-haired girl. It is not the one who is in the automobile. Wait, I know her. I saw her to-day in this room. I see her now in a dingy shop. She is matching medallions from a tray held by a cringing Japanese with those of the bracelet. She finds one that is the exact duplicate and she takes off the bracelet and hands it to the Japanese. It has left her. I can see no more."

Our long acquaintance with Mrs. Armatage made formality unnecessary, and to Clarke's telephone message saying he wished to see her on a matter of importance and would bring Thaida and myself, she replied that she had no other engagements and would be at home to us all evening.

So with Thaida, now fully herself again, we proceeded by cab, after a light repast, to Mrs. Armatage's beautiful South side home. On the way Clarke told Thaida the complete story.

"And now I shall be guided by your advice," he said. "For I have never known your wonderful feminine intuition to be at fault."

"Then tell Mrs. Armatage just what you want. You can trust her. She knows her guest and knows how to act. If Miss Randall has the other ornaments my 'power,' as you call it, has not been at fault. If she has not, she doubtless can prove property rights in the bracelet. If there has been any dishonesty you may be sure Mrs. Armatage is not the woman to shield it."

And Thaida was right, as she always is. Mrs. Armatage's eyes opened in wonder as she heard the story.

"Yes, yes," she exclaimed, when Clarke had finished. "Katharine has them, every one of them. I've seen them all on her dresser and admired them. Heavens yes, they may have been advertised. I never look at the classified columns. And I never asked Katharine where she got them. But, Mr. Clarke, there can't be anything wrong. Katharine is in her rooms now and just to prove my faith in her I'll call her down here and before all of you ask her where she got these trinkets. There cannot be anything wrong with my little Katharine."

"Oh, yes, there can be, aunty," wailed a tear-choked voice, and a fair-haired girl staggered from behind the portiere and emptied into the lap of the astonished Mrs. Armatage a tortoise comb, a cameo, a jeweled stiletto brooch and a medallion bracelet. Then she fell at Mrs. Armatage's feet and burying her face in that good woman's lap, sobbed as if her heart would break.

Mrs. Armatage soothed her and she finally lifted her tear-stained face and said:

"Aunty, I am very, very wicked and I want to confess it all. I overheard you talking and I slipped down with the things and heard it all. You know when I first came to Chicago I told you how lucky I was. Every time almost I went out on the street I found some beautiful thing. I found all these. They were always lying on the sidewalk just as if some one had just dropped them. I knew they were not mine but I wanted to keep them so badly. I tried not to look at the classified ads., and from that moment classified ads. had a perfect fascination for me. Whenever I picked up a paper they were staring at me. At last I saw one. It just caught my eye:

"'Lost—Satsuma medallion bracelet.'

"I tore up the paper without reading any farther and told myself I hadn't read it. I had the bracelet repaired so it could not be identified. I never dared to wear any of them until this afternoon when I couldn't resist putting on the bracelet, and when Mr Clarke said there must be a mystery about it I thought I should faint."

"Was the bracelet locked when you found it, Miss Randall?" asked Clarke, gently.

"Yes, I had to take it to a locksmith and have a key fitted for it," said the penitent girl as she rose and fled from her self-inflicted auto-da-fe.

"Do not be too hard on her, Mrs. Armatage. Just remember what a temptation these things would be to any of us women," pleaded Thaida, as we said good night.

Promptly on the minute next afternoon Miss Atwell's big touring car rolled up to our door. We received her in the library and Clarke held in his hands a little jewel case.

"If this box contains the jewels you have lost and I restore them to you, may I exact of you a solemn promise, Miss Atwell?" said Clarke.

"I'll promise anything, Mr. Clarke," said the girl, impulsively.

"Then promise me first that you will never wear one of these ornaments but that you will keep them as sacred heirlooms for your children, when that time shall come. Second, that when you are married to Lieut. Robinson you will never ask him more than he chooses to tell you of his experiences in the Philippines; and third, if he ever seems to have a buried grief you will be very gentle with him and never for one moment let a pang of jealousy have a place in your heart. Do you promise all this?"

"I promise," said the girl, wonderingly, while her woman's curiosity struggled for the mastery.

Clarke's thoughtful tact was unnecessary, for Lieut. Robinson was destined never to become the husband of Miss Atwell. Before the war was out the list of officers killed in a punitive expedition against the treacherous Moros of Mindanao contained his name.

"And do you believe he really had a beautiful native wife who once wore those jewels?" I asked Clarke, when he showed me the paper.

"Sexton, I don't know," was all I could get out of him.

NEW DISTRICTS AND NEW RAILWAYS

WESTERN CANADA AFFORDS BETTER CONDITIONS THAN EVER FOR SETTLEMENT.

To the Editor — Sir:—Doubtless many of your readers will be pleased to have some word from the grain fields of Western Canada, where such a large number of Americans have made their home during the past few years. It is pleasing to be able to report that generally the wheat yield has been good; it will average about 20 bushels to the acre. There will be many cases where the yield will go 35 bushels to the acre, and others where 50 bushels to the acre has been recorded. The oat and barley crop has been splendid. The prices of all grains will bring to the farmers a magnificent return for their labors. An instance has been brought to my notice of a farmer in the Pincher Creek (Southern Alberta) district—where winter wheat is grown—who made a net profit of $19.55 per acre, or little less than the selling price of his land. 30, 40, and 50 bushel yields are recorded there. The beauty about the lands in Western Canada is that they are so well adapted to grain-raising, while the luxuriant grasses that grow everywhere in abundance make the best possible feed for fattening cattle or for those used for dairying purposes.

The new homestead regulations which went into force September, 1908, attracted thousands of new settlers. It is now possible to secure 160 acres in addition to the 160 acres as a free grant, by paying $3.00 an acre for it. Particulars as to how to do this and as to the railway rates can be secured from the Canadian Government Agents.

"The development throughout Western Canada during the next ten years will probably exceed that of any other country in the world's history," is not the statement of an optimistic Canadian from the banks of the Saskatchewan, but of Mr. Leslie M. Shaw of New York, ex-Secretary of the United States Treasury under the late President McKinley and President Roosevelt, and considered one of the ablest financiers of the United States. "Our railway companies sold a good deal of their land at from three to five dollars an acre, and now the owners are selling the same land at from fifty to seventy-five dollars, and buying more up in Canada at from ten to fifteen."

The editor of the Monticello (Iowa) Express made a trip through Western Canada last August, and was greatly impressed. He says: "One cannot cross Western Canada to the mountains without being impressed with its immensity of territory and its future prospects. Where I expected to find frontier villages there were substantially built cities and towns with every modern convenience. It was formerly supposed that the climate was too severe for it to be thought of as an agricultural country, but its wheat-raising possibilities have been amply tested. We drew from Ontario many of our best farmers and most progressive citizens. Now the Americans are emigrating in greater numbers to Western Canada. Seventy-five per cent. of the settlers in that good country located southeast of Moose Jaw and Regina are Americans. Canada is well pleased with them and is ready to welcome thousands more."

Colombia's One Iron Foundry.

The only iron foundry in Colombia, South America, is at Bogota. It is known as La Paradera and is operated on a small scale, native ores being smelted, the iron being subsequently remelted for casting purposes. There are several commercial iron deposits in the interior of the country, and one ore body situated near the coast of the Caribbean sea is now being drilled by American engineers.

320 Acres of Wheat Land
IN WESTERN CANADA
WILL MAKE YOU RICH

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Fifty bushels per acre have been grown. General average greater than in any other part of the continent. Under new regulations it is possible to secure a homestead of 160 acres free, and additional 160 acres at $3 per acre.

"The development of the country has made marvellous strides. It is a revelation, a record of conquest by settlement that is remarkable."—Extract from correspondence of a National editor, who visited Canada in August last.

The grain crop of 1908 will net many farmers $20.00 to $25.00 per acre. Grain-raising, mixed farming and dairying are the principal industries. Climate is excellent; social conditions the best; railway advantages unequalled; schools, churches and markets close at hand. Land may also be purchased from railway and land companies.

The Munich Jugend has discovered five signs by which to detect the school to which a painter belongs: (1) If he paints the sky gray and the grass black, he belongs to the good old classical school. (4) If he paints the sky yellow and the grass purple, he is a colorist. (5) If he paints the sky black and the grass red, he shows possession of great decorative talent.

A Skater's Daring.

Few feats of skating have ever excelled the exploit of one of Napoleon's officers performed shortly after the fight at Jena in 1806. The emperor dispatched an officer to Marshal Mortier requiring him to seize certain important towns without delay. When the officer arrived at the mouth of the Elbe, where the river is seven and one half miles wide, he was threatened with serious loss of time. The river was just covered with ice; therefore to row over was out of the question. He could not cross by the nearest bridge without going twenty miles out of his way on roads heavy with snow, and he grudged the time that would thus be wasted. So he resolved to skate across the Elbe, freshly formed ice. Had he tried walking he would have sunk at once, but by skimming along on his skates at the top of his speed he got over the river both dry and unharmed. By this daring if dangerous deed he saved six hours, did what Napoleon bade him do and won great credit for his bold and clever exploit.

London Bakers In 1310.

In 1310 we find the following Rom bakeresses accused of selling halfpenny loaves deficient in weight: Sarra Foting, Christina Terrice, Godiyeva Foting, Matilda de Bolingtone, Christina Prichet, Isabella Sperling, Alice Pegges, Johanna de Cauntebrigge and Isabella Pouveste. One wonders why the husbands were not summoned. In a similar case in 1310, when Agnes Foting's bread was seized, it was "adjudged that her bread should be forfeited and given to the prisoners in Newgate because her husband did not come to avow (own) the bread." Are we to assume that in the absence of the husbands the bread was merely forfeited without the infliction of a fine? An indication of the importance of the breadmaking business is also found in an enactment of the reign of Henry III, to the effect that "every cart of Stratford (Bromley-by-Bow) or Stevenhithe (Stepney) that comes into the city with bread shall pay each day a halfpenny."—St. James' Gazette.

Barrie's Critic.

J. M. Barrie some years ago was persuaded to take the chair at a Burns celebration in Scotland. He was extremely silent and stole away at the earliest opportunity. Next week appeared in the National Observer a humorous article entitled "Mr. Barrie In the Chair," in which Mr. Barrie's lack of social tact was held up to ridicule. Many people thought the writer had gone too far and protested. But the author of the article was Mr. Barrie himself.

A LESSON IN SPANISH

How Tourists In Mexico Wrestle With the Language.

A QUEER RESTAURANT ORDER.

The Way an American Woman Shocked a Waiter With a Demand For a Dish That the Cook Would Not Prepare.

"It's no wonder that men who go from the States down to Mexico on business do not get along better," said a returned New Yorker. "They don't study Spanish as they should. In the clubs half of the stock stories are about these half educated Americans.

"It was in a restaurant where only Spanish is spoken that a party of American tourists assembled. There were a woman and her two daughters and, of course, the attendant and patient papa with the wad.

"'Let me order,' said the matter. 'I want to use my Spanish.' And she proceeded to pull out a handy book of conversation. 'Let me see,' scanning the menu; 'we want oysters, I'm sure. A small fry for each would be just the thing.'

"Running her fingers through the leaves, she found that 'chiquita' means 'small' and 'frita' means 'fry.' Perfectly simple. 'Chiquita fritas' would mean 'small fries.' She held up her fingers to indicate four and said complacently to the expectant and polite waiter:

"'Chiquitas fritas.'

"The waiter's eyes bulged out, and his Latin politeness got a shock. 'Oh no, senora,' he cried as he backed away; 'no chiquitas fritas!'

"'Why not?' returned the patron 'Don't you have 'em?' for in her surprise she had fallen back on her vernacular. Then she remembered her role and consulted her book.

"Nothing doing. No end of gesticulations on the part of the waiter.

"'Nice country where one can't get fried oysters,' tilped the woman, and she added, 'I wonder why?'

"'You can get 'em, ma'am,' said a man's raucous voice at an adjoining table. He continued: 'You ordered fried babies, and they don't serve 'em in this part of the republic. The word "chiquitas" means babies, a term of endearment, but you're all O K. as to the fritas. If you had asked for "ostras fritas" the order would have gone through all right.'

"And she ordered 'em, though she looked daggers at the stranger, who was a New Yorker and had lived in Mexico for twenty years.

"It was the same sort of woman," continued the traveler, "who tried to air her Spanish by asking the amount of her bill after she had taken her dinner in a restaurant in the City of Mexico. With a bland smile she addressed the head waiter with 'Como mucho?' intending to ask how much.

"Now, the word 'como' not only means 'how' but also 'I eat,' so that the woman had remarked to the waiter, 'I eat a good deal.' This was as much as to say that the dinner was so good that she had eaten all or more than she ought. In fact, it was a compliment and such a compliment as is highly appreciated in any Latin country.

"With a deep bow the servitor expressed his delight that his humble viands should have found approbation in the sight of the most excellent senora. It was expressed in the choice phrases that so readily lend themselves on such occasions through the Castilian tongue.

"But my lady didn't understand a word of the lingo. She meant business, and she repeated in a louder tone: 'Como mucho? Como mucho?' She was sure of her correct Spanish but somehow she couldn't get the waiter to do anything but bow and scrape and smile.

"The puzzle was solved when the proprietor, hearing the excited voices, entered and learned that the lady merely wanted to pay her bill and she knew that not 'Como mucho' but 'Cuanto es la cuenta?' ('What is the account?') is the correct expression she would have been saved trouble and mortification.

"Time and again United States consuls have set forth in federal publications the advantages of a real knowledge of Spanish to the business man. The need is growing more emphatic with every day, as our relations in trade are growing with Mexico daily. But I guess that federal publications don't hit the people at large as a general rule.

"One of the easiest ways to learn a foreign language is to read good novels in that tongue. You get so interested in the story that you just have to go on to the end to learn whether the hero and heroine come out all right.

"Students of Spanish don't adopt that method in New York, I guess, for you can't find any Spanish novels on the secondhand bookstore tables up or down or across the city. The only specimens I have found have been Spanish novels translated from the French novels. It is strange, too, for there are many excellent novels nowadays by Spanish writers.

"Of course an instructor is needed to obtain the correct pronunciation, but on visiting Mexico with a good, ready knowledge of the language you can soon acquire the needed pronunciation. In fact, you have to do it in order to get along."—New York Sun.

The Crab in the Oyster.

"The little crab found in the oyster," said a dealer, "is not, as supposed by two-thirds of the oyster eaters, the young of the blue crab, but is a distinct species. It is a messmate of and caterer to the wants of the oyster, being, therefore, a benefit instead of a detriment to the latter. In return for the oyster's kindness in protecting it against its enemies the little crab catches and crushes food which in its entire state could not be taken by the oyster. A singular thing in connection with them is that all found inside of the oyster are females. The male of the same variety has a hard shell."

ABOVE THE LAW.

Courts Have No Jurisdiction Over Foreign Ambassadors.

The chief of an embassy is an august being and one who boasts some remarkable privileges. It may be mentioned to begin with that in the land in which he is officiating an ambassador ranks immediately after the princes of the blood royal.

The ground on which an embassy stands is in theory as well as in practice the territory of the nation to which its principal occupant belongs. Even if a criminal were harbored in an embassy the police could not enter the premises without permission.

An ambassador is above the law of the country to which he is accredited. The courts have no jurisdiction over him, and, strangely enough, his subordinates and even his domestic servants are also inviolate. The humblest employee in the embassy if he committed a punishable offense could not be arrested without the consent of his master, nor can an embassy official be imprisoned for debt.

Ambassadors are to be envied most of all perhaps for their freedom from the burden of taxation. They disburse not one penny in taxes, either directly or indirectly, and, as for the custom house, it is nonexistent so far as they are concerned. No duty whatever is charged in respect of wines, cigars, cigarettes, etc., that are consigned to them.

Again, their excellencies need not bother about taxes unless they please. That they do so is purely an act of grace on their part. They are not legally exempt from these tantalizing demands on the purse, but if they declined to meet them there would be no means of enforcing payment.—Cassell's Journal.

Opulence In Sight.

"Well," demanded the man who was having his fortune told, "what do you see?"

"You are married," said the lady who was examining his palm.

"Yes. But I knew that before I came here."

"You have always had to fight your way ahead—that is, you have progressed by hard work. You have never been favored much by luck."

"Very true. Still, that isn't exactly what I came here to find out. Can't you tell me something about the future?"

"Yes. You are going to live long. Your life line is very strong. And here I see something very important—something that will encourage you. Your salary is going to be increased."

"Good. That's the kind of news I want. You're sure about it, are you?"

"Yes. You will get it before long."

"And is there anything to indicate about how much it is to be increased?"

"It will be much larger than it is now. Let me see. Yes. It will be as large as your wife tries to make her friends think it is at present."

He could ask no more. With a feeling of courage in his breast he handed out $2 and went away to the triumph that awaited him.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Managing Small Sailboats.

It is quite a trick to lower a mainsail properly. In the first place, the hoops should be just large enough—not so large, however, that the sail does not set close to the mast. Lower the throat first and follow it with the peak. If the peak is dropped first, says a writer in Country Life In America, the sail will not come down. It goes without saying that the sail must be shaken when you want to lower it. To lower a centerboard when under way put the helm up and keep the boat off. A small boat can be stopped by putting the helm up and down across the boat quickly. This is useful in coming up to a dock or mooring. A boat can be got out of stays by dropping her peak and then hoisting it when she is under way. Another way is to put the helm down, slack the main sheet and let her drift back; then trim her quickly and she will sail away. Always go to the lee side of a dock. When a boat is towed make sure that it has a good painter, especially at night.

Candor.

The colonel had remonstrated vigorously with Uncle Eph about the old darky's persistent excursions into the state of inebriation. Uncle Eph, though he promised faithfully to refrain from frequent dips into the flowing bowl, failed to live up to the colonel's expectations. On numerous occasions the colonel saw Eph under the influence of liquor, but the darky when taken to task stoutly denied the accusation, affirming emphatically that he did not drink. One evening the colonel met Uncle Eph in a condition which made it plainly evident that the darky was "caught with the goods on."

"Eph," began the colonel seriously, "I thought you told me that you had given up drink?"

"Ah sho' did, Massa Kernel; Ah sho' did," replied Eph. "But lately Ah dun took up drinkin' an' gib up lyin'."—Harper's Weekly

A Skater's Daring.

Few feats of skating have ever excelled the exploit of one of Napoleon's officers performed shortly after the fight at Jena in 1806. The emperor dispatched an officer to Marshal Mortier requiring him to seize certain important towns without delay. When the officer arrived at the mouth of the Elbe, where the river is seven and one-half miles wide, he was threatened with serious loss of time. The river was just covered with ice; therefore to row over was out of the question. He could not cross by the nearest bridge without going twenty miles out of his way on roads heavy with snow, and he grudged the time that would thus be wasted. So he resolved to skate across the Elbe freshly formed ice. Had he tried walking he would have sunk at once, but by skimming along on his skates at the top of his speed he got over the river both dry and unharmed. By this daring if dangerous deed he saved six hours, did what Napoleon bade him do and won great credit for his bold and clever exploit.

London Bakers In 1310.

In 1310 we find the following Row bakeresses accused of selling halfpenny loaves deficient in weight: Sarra Foling, Christina Terrice, Godiyeva Foting, Matilda de Bolingtone, Christina Prichet, Isabella Sperling, Alice Pegges, Johanna de Cauntebrigge and Isabella Pouveste. One wonders why the husbands were not summoned. In a similar case in 1316, when Agnes Foting's bread was seized, it was "adjudged that her bread should be forfeited and given to the prisoners in Newgate because her husband did not come to avow (own) the bread." Are we to assume that in the absence of the husbands the bread was merely forfeited without the infliction of a fine? An indication of the importance of the breadmaking business is also found in an enactment of the reign of Henry III. to the effect that "every cart of Fromlde (Bromley-by-Bow) or Stratford (Stepney) that comes into the city with bread shall pay each day a halfpenny."—St. James' Gazette.

Barrie's Critic.

J. M. Barrie some years ago was persuaded to take the chair at a Burns celebration in Scotland. He was extremely silent and stole away at the earliest opportunity. Next week appeared in the National Observer a humorous article entitled "Mr. Barrie In the Chair," in which Mr. Barrie's lack of social tact was held up to ridicule. Many people thought the writer had gone too far and protested. But the author of the article was Mr. Barrie himself.

A LESSON IN SPANISH

How Tourists In Mexico Wrestle With the Language.

A QUEER RESTAURANT ORDER.

The Way an American Woman Shocked a Waiter With a Demand For a Dish That the Cook Would Not Prepare.

"It's no wonder that men who go from the States down to Mexico on business do not get along better," said a returned New Yorker. "They don't study Spanish as they should. In the chief half of the stock stories are about those half educated Americans.

"It was in a restaurant where only Spanish is spoken, that a party of American tourists assembled. There were a woman and her two daughters and, of course, the attendant and patient papa with the wad.

"'Let me order,' said the mater. 'I want to use my Spanish.' And she proceeded to pull out a handy book of conversation. 'Let me see,' scanning the menu; 'we want oysters, I'm sure. A small fry for each would be just the thing.'

"Running her fingers through the leaves, she found that 'chiquita' means 'small' and 'frita' means 'fry.' Perfectly simple. 'Chiquita fritas' would mean 'small fries.' She held up her fingers to indicate four and said complacently to the expectant and polite waiter:

"'Chiquitas fritas.'

"The waiter's eyes bulged out, and his Latin politeness got a shock. 'Oh no, senora,' he cried as he backed away; 'no chiquitas fritas!'

"'Why not?' returned the patron. 'Don't you have 'em?' for in her surprise she had fallen back on her vernacular. Then she remembered her role and consulted her book.

"Nothing doing. No end of gesticulations on the part of the waiter.

"'Nice country where one can't get fried oysters,' piped the woman, and she added, 'I wonder why?'

"'You can get 'em, ma'am,' said a man's raucous voice at an adjoining table. He continued: 'You ordered fried babies, and they don't serve 'em in this part of the republic. The word "chiquitas" means babies, a term of endearment, but you're all O K as to the fritas. If you had asked for "ostras fritas" the order would have gone through all right.'

"And she ordered 'em, though she looked daggers at the stranger, who was a New Yorker and had lived in Mexico for twenty years.

"It was the same sort of woman," continued the traveler, "who tried to air her Spanish by asking the amount of her bill after she had taken her dinner in a restaurant in the City of Mexico. With a bland smile she addressed the head waiter with 'Como mucho?' intending to ask how much.

"Now, the word 'como' not only means 'how' but also 'I eat,' so that the woman had remarked to the waiter, 'I eat a good deal.' This was as much as to say that the dinner was so good that she had eaten all or more than she ought. In fact, it was a compliment and such a compliment as is highly appreciated in any Latin country.

"With a deep bow the servitor expressed his delight that his humble viands should have found approbation in the sight of the most excellent senora. It was expressed in the choice phrases that so readily lend themselves on such occasions through the Castilian tongue.

"But my lady didn't understand a word of the lingo. She meant business, and she repeated in a louder tone: 'Como mucho? Como mucho?' She was sure of her correct Spanish but somehow she couldn't get the waiter to do anything but bow and scrape and smile.

"The puzzle was solved when the proprietor, hearing the excited tones, entered and [illegible] that the lady merely wanted to pay her bill. Had she known that not 'Como mucho' but 'Que es la cuenta?' ('What is the account?') is the correct expression she would have been saved trouble and mortification.

"Time and again United States consuls have set forth in federal publications the advantages of a real knowledge of Spanish to the business man. The need is growing more emphatic with every day, as our relations in trade are growing with Mexico daily. But I guess that federal publications don't hit the people at large as a general rule.

"One of the easiest ways to learn a foreign language is to read good novels in that tongue. You get so interested in the story that you just have to go on to the end to learn whether the hero and heroine come out all right.

"Students of Spanish don't adopt that method in New York, I guess, for you can't find any Spanish novels on the secondhand bookstore tables up or down or across the city. The only specimens I have found have been Spanish novels translated from the French novels. It is strange, too, for there are many excellent novels nowadays by Spanish writers.

"Of course an instructor is needed to obtain the correct pronunciation, but on first [illegible] Mexico with a good, ready [illegible] of the language you can soon acquire the needed pronunciation. In fact, you have to do it in order to [illegible]."—New York Sun.

The Crab in the Oyster.

"The little crab found in the oyster," said a dealer, "is not, as supposed by two-thirds of the oyster eaters, the young of the blue crab, but is a distinct species. It is a messmate of and caterer to the wants of the oyster, being, therefore, a benefit instead of a detriment to the latter. In return for the oyster's kindness in protecting it against its enemies the little crab catches and crushes food which in its entire state could not be taken by the oyster. A singular thing in connection with them is that all found inside of the oyster are females. The male of the same variety has a hard shell."

ABOVE THE LAW.

Courts Have No Jurisdiction Over Foreign Ambassadors.

The chief of an embassy is an august being and one who boasts some remarkable privileges. It may be mentioned to begin with that in the land in which he is officiating an ambassador ranks immediately after the princes of the blood royal.

The ground on which an embassy stands is in theory as well as in practice the territory of the nation to which its principal occupant belongs. Even if a criminal were harbored in an embassy the police could not enter the premises without permission.

An ambassador is above the law of the country to which he is accredited. The courts have no jurisdiction over him, and, strangely enough, his subordinates and even his domestic servants are also inviolate. The humblest employee in the embassy if he committed a punishable offense could not be arrested without the consent of his master, nor can an embassy official be imprisoned for debt.

Ambassadors are to be envied most of all perhaps for their freedom from the burden of taxation. They disburse not one penny in taxes, either directly or indirectly, and, as for the custom house, it is nonexistent so far as they are concerned. No duty whatever is charged in respect of wines, cigars, cigarettes, etc., that are consigned to them.

Again, their excellencies need not bother about taxes unless they please. That they do so is purely an act of grace on their part. They are not legally exempt from these tantalizing demands on the purse, but if they declined to meet them there would be no means of enforcing payment.—Cassell's Journal.

Opulence In Sight.

"Well," demanded the man who was having his fortune told, "what do you see?"

"You are married," said the lady who was examining his palm.

"Yes. But I knew that before I came here."

"You have always had to fight your way ahead—that is, you have progressed by hard work. You have never been favored much by luck."

"Very true. Still, that isn't exactly what I came here to find out. Can't you tell me something about the future?"

"Yes. You are going to live long. Your life line is very strong. And here I see something very important—something that will encourage you. Your salary is going to be increased."

"Good. That's the kind of news I want. You're sure about it, are you?"

"Yes. You will get it before long."

"And is there anything to indicate about how much it is to be increased?"

"It will be much larger than it is now. Let me see. Yes. It will be as large as your wife tries to make her friends think it is at present."

He could ask no more. With a feeling of courage in his breast he handed out $2 and went away to the triumph that awaited him.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Managing Small Sailboats.

It is quite a trick to lower a mainsail properly. In the first place, the hoops should be just large enough —not so large, however, that the sail does not set close to the mast. Lower the throat first and follow it with the peak. If the peak is dropped first, says a writer in Country Life In America, the sail will not come down. It goes without saying that the sail must be slacken when you want to lower it. To lower a centerboard when under way put the helm up and keep the boat off. A small boat can be stopped by putting the helm up and down across the boat quickly. This is useful in coming up to a dock or mooring. A boat can be got out of stays by dropping her peak and then hoisting it when she is under way. Another way is to put the helm down, slack the main sheet and let her drift back; then trim her quickly and she will sail away. Always go to the lee side of a dock. When a boat is towed make sure that it has a good painter, especially at night.

Candor.

The colonel had remonstrated vigorously with Uncle Eph about the old darky's persistent excursions into the state of inebriation. Uncle Eph, though he promised faithfully to refrain from frequent dips into the flowing bowl, failed to live up to the colonel's expectations. On numerous occasions the colonel saw Eph under the influence of liquor, but the darky when taken to task stoutly denied the accusation. [illegible] emphatically that he did not drink. One evening the colonel met Uncle Eph in a condition which made it plainly evident that the darky was "caught with the goods on."

"Eph," [illegible] the colonel seriously, "I thought you told me that you had given up drink?"

"Ah sho' did, [illegible]. Ah sho' did," replied Eph, [illegible] Ah jus' took up drinkin' [illegible]."—Harper's Weekly.

The sense of sight sleeps first, then the sense of taste, next the sense of smell, next that of hearing and lastly that of touch. PETER ADAMS

An Old Time Quack.

In the right hands it is a poor root that will not work both ways. An old quack doctor, according to the Washington correspondent of the Boston Herald, was once called to see a boy who had chills and fever.

He proceeded to scratch the bark off a root and put some in one glass of water and some in another glass of water.

"Give the medicine in this glass for the chills," he then said to the lad's mother, "but give this in the other glass when the fever comes on."

"But, doctor," the mother protested, "it is exactly the same in both glasses."

"Oh, not at all," declared the quack.

"But I saw you scrape the bark off the same root and put it in each glass."

"Yes," admitted the quack smoothly, "but you didn't see how I did it, my dear lady. This for the chills I scraped up on the root and that makes it high cockalorum. This for the fever I scrape down on the root, and that makes it low cockalorum."

Tobacco and Tin Foil.

General Winfield Scott was responsible for tin foil being wrapped around tobacco. That fact came out in the legal contest over the will of the eccentric millionaire tobacco dealer John Anderson. Early in the forties of the last century Mr. Anderson kept a popular cigar store on Broadway. Felix McClosky, for many years the tobacconist's salaried companion and agent, testified that one day in 1843 he thought, General Scott came into the store and asked Anderson if he couldn't devise some way of keeping tobacco so it would not be affected by age and changes in climates. Anderson thought about it and shortly after hit upon the plan of wrapping cigars and chewing tobacco in tin foil, thereby keeping the tobacco moist for a long time. His tin foil covers became popular, and his preserved tobacco was much in demand during the Mexican war and the California gold rush, swelling his business to enormous proportions and soon making him a multimillionaire.

A Comprehensive Word.

The word "vermin" seems to have become exceedingly comprehensive in scope now that the society which is devoted to the destruction of such creatures has included not only rats, mice, cockroaches and such small deer among them, but even cats, dogs, sparrows and canaries, on the ground that all these transmit disease to man. By derivation (Latin "vermis") vermin ought to mean only worms and the like, in which literal sense Tennyson writes of the "vermin in a nut." But the term has constantly been loosely applied to all sorts of objectionable animals, from crocodiles to foxes. Purchas told of the people of Java how they "feed on cats, rats and other vermins," and Izaak Walton denounced "those base vermin, the otters." He used the word exactly in the temper in which a naughty little boy is berated as a "young varmint."—London Chronicle.

The Nine Tailor Saw.

The tailor—he was a cutter at a big tailor's—sighed as he looked about his luxurious apartment.

"She refused me," he said. "Why? Because she didn't love me? No. Because of that old saw about its taking nine tailors to make a man. And that saw is a mistake. It is a corruption of 'nine tellers mark a man.' It doesn't signify that tailors are effeminate. It simply shows that mankind is liable to error. The toll of a bell in the olden time was called a teller, and in the olden time the church bells tolled nine times for every man's funeral; hence the saying 'nine tellers mark a man.' In our stupidity we have corrupted that into 'nine tailors make a man' or 'it takes nine tailors to make a man.'"

The cutter sighed.

"This rank error," he said, "dooms me to bachelorhood."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Suicidal Flying Fish.

The Indian ocean is singularly devoid of fish and bird life, but one night dozens of flying fish flew on board a vessel there. They were attracted by the lantern on the foremast, against which they dashed and fell stunned to the deck. In appearance they are very like a sand mullet. The wings resemble an extended dorsal fin, and open and shut like a lady's fan. Not only are they edible; they are a dish for an epicure.—Sydney (N. S. W.) Freeman's Journal.

Mrs. Sloan's Curiosity

By Mabell Shipple Clarke

(Copyright, by Shortstory Pub. Co.)

A scene of embarrassment was in progress in Mrs. Parker Sloan's library. Mrs. Sloan was very much a woman of the world, yet it was evident that there was an undercurrent of feeling beneath her air of calm attention. The young man before her, though usually of enviable self-possession, wore an expression approaching guilt. The fact was that Mr. Simms—Mr. G. F. S. Simms, North Carolina, his card read, in the generous style in which southerners imply that they are known throughout their state—Mr. Simms was asking Mrs. Sloan for the privilege of marrying her daughter, and Mrs. Sloan very properly had asked him several questions, one of which he had declined to answer. Hence the strained situation.

Not that it should be inferred for a moment that so practical and far-seeing a person as Mrs. Sloan had not made investigation anent Mr. Simms, and his position, financial and social, long before his ardor had reached the present crisis. Left for many years a widow, she had proved herself an excellent woman of business, and when young Simms became devoted to Nathalie, she had, as a matter of course, written to a lawyer in the town from which he came, and asked certain questions which she felt sure that Mr. Sloan would have asked had he been living.

The reply had been satisfactory. G. F. S. Simms was the only child and heir of McRaa Simms, a man rich, philanthropic and eccentric. Mr. Simms had left his son this, that, and the other real estate, valued at an amount that would have gone far to content Mrs. Sloan had his social position been not so satisfactory as it was. She knew, besides, that he had come to Easton well introduced, was a member of two good clubs, was good looking, with the dark hair and eyes that northerners think is more typical of the south than is true, and was well read, and altogether a desirable match for Nathalie.

Of course Nathalie knew nothing of her mother's researches. She had been asked to be the handsome young fellow's wife, and she had said that she would if mamma was willing. There was a look in her blue eyes—a look strikingly like her mother's, too—that said that she would even if mamma were not willing.

And now this painful interview. It had not been painful until after Mrs. Sloan had asked her questions—very spontaneously, be it said, to the credit of her dramatic power—and received replies to them which corroborated her North Carolina correspondent, and at last had said with her most gracious smile, for she could be very winning:

"My dear Mr. Simms, I see no reason why you and Nathalie should not be happy, and as for me, I shall be glad to have a son as well as a daughter."

Simms had beamed upon her, and had thought her charming, with her fine figure, and snow-white hair rolled high above her still fresh face.

But she spoiled it all. Mr. Simms had known that it must come, sooner or later, but he wished that it had not come just now, when he was so happy.

"It seems curious to think that, though we know you so well, we don't know your first name. What am I to call my son?"

Mr. Simms flushed, but answered without hesitation: "My family and my intimate friends have always called me 'G.'"

"G? How very strange! and what is it really?"

"Oh, a curious name of my father's selection. I've told you, haven't I, that he was eccentric?"

"I always say that a child ought not to have a name until he is old enough to be consulted about it. And yours is?"—tentatively.

Simms felt that he must take his stand at once, and he replied with decision.

"My name, Mrs. Sloan, is very disagreeable to me, and I have never used anything but my initials. My family and friends, as I said, have called me 'G,' and I should prefer not to tell my Christian name even to you."

It was here that Mrs. Sloan's appearance of calm attention was ruffled just a wee bit by the irritation she was experiencing, and that the young man on the other side of the room wore a distinctly guilty look.

"But wouldn't it be better for us to talk it over frankly now? You see there will be so many questions asked about a newcomer. Norham is like Concord and Andover—it requires a residence of three generations, at least, to remove the stigma of being a late arrival."

She said it very well, but she had met with an obstinacy equal to her own.

"Should it ever be necessary, Mrs. Sloan, you may depend upon me for meeting the necessity; and, until then, let me ask that you will not refer to the matter."

"And Nathalie?"

"I suppose I may see her now?" returned Simms, wilfully misunderstanding her.

Mrs. Sloan went to call her daughter, and "G" told her all about it, and she said that she didn't care the least bit in the world what his name was or whether he had any at all.

However, as time went on, Nathalie saw an uncomfortable something in the mental atmosphere to which even the preparations for the wedding could not blind her. For one thing, her mother and her lover, the two people she loved most dearly, were on terms of formality which she could not change. Then the torrents of questions that her mother had anticipated duly were asked, and Nathalie grew tired of saying: "He has a funny name that he doesn't like, and I always call him 'G,'" and of being begged: "Oh, do tell me what it is, Nathalie, I'll never tell."

At first she owned frankly that she did not know it, and was met by a stare of amazement. Then these friends went forth and told others.

After several people had said: "I understand that you don't know what Mr. Simm's name is, Nathalie," and several more had hinted, just hinted delicately to Mrs. Sloan: "Do you think it's quite safe to let Nathalie marry—er—you know?" And after Mrs. Sloan could endure it no longer, and had given her daughter a sound scolding for the delinquencies of her lover—it was after all this, that Nathalie told "G" all about it, and cried out all her worry and annoyance on the shoulder that its possessor hoped would bear her burdens for her evermore.

"Now listen, sweetheart. I'll tell you this miserable old name, and you can tell your mother and every one else, if you like, that you know it, but what it is I don't want you to make known to any one at all unless I give you permission. Will you promise?"

Of course Nathalie promised.

Then "G" whispered to her.

"Oh, 'G,' not really? That's awful! Oh!" and the young girl sat aghast, looking at the man she loved as if he were a living curiosity.

"Isn't it a howler, pet? Do you wonder I don't use it? How do you think your mother would like it?"

"Can't you change it, 'G'?"

"My dear, it was given me by my father, a good man, but extremely eccentric. When, as a boy, I rebelled against it, he declared that if I gave up my Christian name I gave up my family name as well. And as I love and respect his memory, as I loved and respected him, I shall continue to bear the name he gave me, though it has proved and still will prove a great annoyance."

"OH, 'G,' NOT REALLY? THAT'S AWFUL! OH!"

Naturally, it was not soothing to Mrs. Sloan to know that her daughter knew a secret that she did not, even though it concerned Nathalie more nearly than it did her mother. As the time appointed for the wedding drew near, Mrs. Sloan's annoyance was so great that Nathalie ventured to intercede with "G."

"Do tell her, 'G.' I believe that once you tell her, she'll forget all this irritation and be sweet again."

"I tell you what, dear, I'll compromise with her," returned "G." "You wait here while I go and speak to her," and he ran up to Mrs. Sloan's sitting-room like a repentant schoolboy.

"Mrs. Sloan," he said, "I've come to compromise. I'm truly sorry that not telling you my name annoys you, and agree to have it in full on the wedding invitations, provided you agree that Nathalie shall not get a single peep at them till they are sent out."

After due deliberation the compromise was accepted.

Mr. Simms visited the engraver after the cards had been ordered by Mrs. Sloan, and at the proper time the bundle came home.

Mrs. Sloan did not disguise her eagerness to cut the strings, and hastily seized the uppermost sheet.

It read:

That is how the descendants of the Massachusetts Puritans became one of the joint owners of a name which is really inscribed on the records of a southern state. This may sound like romance, but it is an actual fact, and one which can easily be verified.

POULTRY AND BEES

PICKING OUT THE LAYERS.

How You May Be Able to Tell Which Is the Business Hen.

An experienced, closely observing poultry raiser knows at a glance the laying hen. The small feminine neck and head count, the bright, alert eye tells a tale, the drooping tail tells another tale and when she picks her feet up and jumps them down we have another pointer.

How manage the hens? There are several ways. The trap nest is a practical thing and would be especially valuable to the small breeder or to any poultryman or poultrywoman who had the time or would take the time to properly manage the traps. Most people know the meaning of trap nests, but for the few that might not know I will mention that they are a nest in a box that confines the hen until the owner releases her; hence it is known what hen laid the egg.

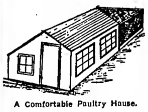
And there are other ways to improve the flock. A close observance and constancy with them enables us to know by sight what hens lay every day and those that lay every other day or do not lay at all. We must never lose sight of the fact that the cockerels are half the flock in breeding value. Many of the same rules that apply to the race horse, the cow or the hen also apply to cockerels. The small neck and head, the alert eye and activity are all pointers in the right direction.

I am one of those who believe the 200-egg hen will never be excelled to any great extent. But I do believe that any ordinary flock can be improved to a point where the 200-mark would fit where the 150-mark now fits. If the time ever comes that egg records will be a part of score cards, then the work of improvement will be on.

PRACTICAL POULTRY HOUSE.

One That Will Comfortably Accommodate About Fifty Hens.

A good, comfortable house for the hens is shown in the illustration. It can be built, up to a certain extent, any size desired, or to accommodate comfortably from 25 to 50 hens. As suggested by the sketch, it should face the south or southeast, and, preferably, occupy a warm, sunny location. The front part should be five feet high, the center eight feet and the rear four and one-half feet above ground. The roosts should be in the back part, leaving the front for scratching floor, with nests for laying arranged along the sides and in the corners. A small door should open into the yard at one end, but only in favorable weather need the fowls have access to this, and then not until it has been well carpeted with straw or hay, for to let hens onto the bare ground in cold weather will check their laying at once. Such a house, says Farm and Home, should have either a good board floor or one made of cement, and be constructed throughout of first-class lumber. Kept well painted, it will then last almost a lifetime.



A Comfortable Poultry House.

ALFALFA MEAL.

It Is a Splendid Feed for Chickens of All Ages.

Alfalfa meal is said to be a fine feed for both growing chicks and laying hens, as good as the growing alfalfa is through the summer. This will prove a boon to the poultry growers in places where alfalfa is grown so largely.

One lady cures limber neck in fowls by feeding dry feed only, and asafoetida. The latter is a fine disinfectant at any rate.

Extra warm houses are not as much thought of as they were a few years ago. One poultryman in Iowa that I know of, writes a correspondent of the Indiana Farmer, in a climate that gets 30 degrees below zero, makes a success by using the open shed housing, and the following feed with about one-tenth part of beef meal, and some clover meal, for the morning feed.

After this is cleaned up some wheat is thrown in deep litter. Hunting for this grain keeps them busy until noon. At noon more wheat is raked in the litter to keep them busy most of the day; at night a full feed of corn is given, warming it in the oven during coldest weather. Once a week green cut bone, and hang up a cabbage head for them to pick at and at all times, fresh water is kept before them.

Curtain front houses are used, the curtains sewed to rings, top and bottom, two wires are stretched, and these rings slide back and forth on these wires. When weather is very inclement these curtains are stretched snugly, but on nice days they are drawn back. The top and bottom fastenings prevent the curtains blowing in the wind. Grit and oyster shells are always handy and eggs are gathered all winter through.

OLD HENS NOT PROFITABLE.

Tests Show That Egg Production Decreases After the First Year.

In embarking in the poultry business don't put too much faith to any one breed being the best. It has been demonstrated by the trap nest that there is more difference in individuals than in breeds. Hens must be properly cared for, no matter of what breed. When eggs are selling at fancy prices of what good is the breed if the hens are not laying. Under such conditions some poultry raisers blame the breed instead of themselves and change to some other kind of fowl. One of the problems of the poultry raiser is to find the most profitable age of the hen. On this James Dryan, an Oregon authority says:

"Poultrymen who have kept in touch with poultry investigations during the past few years are pretty well informed on this point, but the importance of this subject is not yet generally appreciated. The writer carried on for several years at the Utah experiment station a line of experiments with the object of determining the value of the hen at different ages for egg production. The same hens were kept year after year under similar conditions and a record kept of production and of food consumed. These experiments proved that the hen is different from the cow, which retains or improves her production with age. The first year was the most profitable, and there was a gradual decrease in productiveness each succeeding year. It is safe to figure this decrease at 25 per cent. each year. With average prices for food and for eggs it is not profitable to keep hens after they have finished their second year of laying. The first, or pullet, year is very profitable; the second will give a satisfactory profit, but during the third year the egg yield will seldom pay for the food consumed.

"These conclusions apply only, of course, where the eggs are sold at market prices. Fowls that have a special value as breeding stock should be kept longer, but the notion that 'the old speckled hen' is the good layer should not be cherished unless she is caught in the trap nest. The fact that she sings a joyful lay, paints her comb a brilliant red and scratches a vigorous scratch should not be accepted as sufficient grounds for commuting sentence.

"It is safe to say that the poultry keepers of this state would be many thousand dollars in the pocket by rigorously killing off the hens every two years and replacing them with new stock—with the exceptions noted above.

"Where the pullets and hens are allowed to run together it will be necessary to mark them, otherwise it will be difficult to separate the old stock from the young when it is desired to market them. The usual method of marking is to punch a hole in the web between the toes when the chicks are hatched. This is easily and quickly done with a punch which may be purchased from the poultry supply houses for 25 cents. A number of different markings may be made in this way. Where the practice is to dispose of the hens every two years it will be sufficient to mark them every other year."

IMPORTANCE OF COMB.

Breeders of Fine Stock Pay Much Attention to Comb.

There is perhaps no part of the pure bred bird that receives or should receive more attention than the comb. A good comb will often give style to a bird otherwise faulty. The bird with a good comb is often adjudged before the rest of it is examined. The standard allows eight points for the comb, all of these being for shape alone. It is well for the breeder of fancy fowls to know the comb requisites and to breed accordingly with an ideal in view.

Where the breed requires a small, neat comb, care must be taken in feeding meat. Too much meat promotes growth of comb, and in the Mediterranean breeds may cause crooked or falling comb. Excess of heat will also increase the size of the combs. Long exhibition tours with constant showing in heated rooms will often permanently destroy the neatness of a comb. Particular Leghorn breeders will not permit the hen to mother the chicks after they can keep them comfortably in a roomy brooder, and will not use a brooder which has a cloth hover touching the heads.

The comb is a good indicator of disease. It has been said that the hen carries her health certificate on top of her head. The exception to this rule is in liver complaints. The first symptom of this disease in its later stages is an unnaturally bright comb, often mistaken for vigorous health. The comb has diseases peculiar to itself. There is "white comb," a scurfy condition of the comb due to unsanitary surroundings, which is treated by washing with carbolic soap and anointing with zinc ointment. Favus is another disease of the comb, something of the same nature as white comb, but more severe. Favus is caused by a vegetable parasite or fungus; white comb is not.

The Roosters.

As soon as the young rooster begins to crow, you should either feed him to the threshing gang or sell him in the market catalogued as the "old rooster" variety. Rooster flocks should be constantly culled and those which do not meet the standard from a breed standpoint should be promptly disposed of in some way. From the roosters our flocks develop and by constant weeding out the flock gradually improves in standard.

LAMENT FOR CHANGED TIMES.

Adoniram Corntop Discourses on Present-Day Extravagance.

"Yes, siree, Bill, times is changed since you an' me was doin' our courtin'," said Adoniram Corntop, with a note of sadness in his voice, to old Andy Clover, who had come over to "set a spell."

"When we was doin' our courtin', Andy, a gal thought she was bein' treated right harnsom if a feller bought her ten cents' wuth o' pep'mints once in awhile, an' if he tuk her to any doin's in town she didn't expect him to go down into his jeans to the tune of a dollar or two fer ice cream an' soda water an' candy at fo'ty cents a paound. My son Si tuk his duckey-doodle to the band concert in town yistiday an' there wa'n't a quarter left of a dollar bill he struck me fer time he got home. Beats all the way young folks throw the money away nowadays. I tell ye times is changed mightily since we was boys, an' the Lawd only knows what the end will be with a feller layin' out 75 cents on a gal in one day."—Puck.

LAME BACK PRESCRIPTION

The increased use of whiskey for lame back rheumatism is causing considerable discussion among the medical fraternity. It is an almost infallible cure when mixed with certain other ingredients and taken properly. The following formula is effective: "To one-half pint of good whiskey add one ounce of Toris Compound and one ounce Syrup Sarsaparilla Compound. Take in tablespoonful doses before each meal and before retiring."

Toris compound is a product of the laboratories of the Globe Pharmaceutical Co., Chicago, but it as well as the other ingredients can be had from any good druggist.

Revelations of the Breakfast Table.

To girls about to marry one would tender the advice that they study their intended victim at breakfast. If he is feeding like forty, reject him as the direct descendant of Circe's herd of swine. If he is melancholy, beware of the abrupt curves of his temperament. If he be boisterous and facetious, remember that an empty drum gives the greatest reverberation and a chatterbox at 8 a. m. is as tiresome as Chanticleer at 3 o'clock in the morning. By their breakfasts you shall know them.—Saturday Review.

The Highest Character.

The highest of characters, in my estimation, is his who is as ready to pardon the moral errors of mankind as if he were every day guilty of some himself; and at the same time as cautious of committing a fault as if he never forgave one.—Pliny the Younger.

Unusually Severe Drought.

The water in Lake Champlain during the recent drought reached the lowest point recorded in local history, nine feet below high water mark. Steamers were obliged to abandon many of their trips on account of the impossibility of making landings at the docks. The mountain brooks became almost dry, and the beds of some of the largest rivers were mere threads of water. The drought and forest fires were ruinous to agricultural interests.—New York Sun.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

Yeggmen.

Duluth—That a well organized and desperate gang of professional bank thieves are operating around the lakes is no longer a matter of doubt. Within the past two months three attempts at bank robbery have been made in the different places.

The first was at Barnum, where, when the robbers were discovered in the principal bank attempting to blow open the safe, they stood off a number of citizens with shotguns.

The second attempt was at Biwabik, where they shot a passerby whom they believed had discovered them looting the bank, while the third was at Lake Nebagamon, where three charges of nitroglycerin were used to force the safe.

So far as known, the only haul the burglars have made was at Lake Nebagamon, where they secured $1,700.

Those experienced in the working of crooks of this kind believe that it is being done by an organized gang that has come into this part of the Northwest to loot banks where protection is not sufficient.

Butter and Cheese.

Mankato.—There were 87,044,817 pounds of butter produced in Minnesota creameries in 1907, according to figures just compiled by the state dairy and food commission. The wholesale value of the product is estimated at $23,502,100. There were 851 creameries in operation and 71,769 farmers supplied them, receiving $17,912,043 for their milk and cream, from 546,695 cows. The running expenses of the creameries were $2,187,373. They used 855,866,470 pounds of milk and 16,819,567 of cream. Seventy-four cheese factories operated in the state made 4,266,778 pounds of cheese, which at the average wholesale price of 12 cents brought $512,013. Less than half of the cows in the state worked for the creameries, so considerably over a million contributed to the state milk and cream supply. The value of the milk and cream sold to the people in the cities and towns last year is estimated at $19,000,000.

Robber Foiled.

Minneapolis.—Kicking a cash box out of the hands of a masked robber, a cash girl employed by Hannon & Co., 31 South Washington avenue, Minneapolis, saved her employers over $150 late one night and routed the thief.

At a late hour last night the man had not been apprehended, but the girl was rewarded for her kicking ability by her employers.

From the evidence procured by the detectives, it is said that the man secured a stepladder from the W. K. Morison Hardware company in the rear of Bannon's, tied a black handkerchief over his face, placed the ladder against the Bannon building and went to the window of the cashier's department. He probably knew the lay of the building and thought that no one was looking. He reached through the window of the cashier's table and grasped the heavy cash box.

At that moment the cash girl looked around, saw the masked bandit and, with a scream, kicked the box from his hand onto the floor.

Dragged From River.

St. Paul.—Isaac Spellmann, employed at the Palace clothing store in the tailoring department and who lodges at the New Grand hotel, Eighth and Robert streets, was dragged from the river by the crew of the steamer Hiawatha nearly exhausted. He told the police that three men whom he met at the hotel walked with him toward the river and after holding him up and taking $9 from his pockets pushed him into the river. He will be held for an examination today.

The crew of the steamer heard his cries for help and saw the bald head of a man protruding from the water while he was clinging to one of the posts in the river. The engineer of the steamer held him with a pike pole while two other members of the crew lowered a rowboat and finally rescued Spellmann.

Minneapolis.—Harry Nonfelt, 1819 Western avenue, ten years old, who was accidentally shot while hunting at Saratoga Lake Oct. 19, with his brother, died at the Minneapolis city hospital. The bullet that caused death entered the boy's head between the eyes and lodged in the brain.

SPORTING GOSSIP

President Garry Herrmann of the Cincinnati ball club has completed negotiations with Clark Griffith to manage the Cincinnati team next season. It has long been known that John Ganzel would not have the management of the Reds another season, and many prominent players have been mentioned as his successor. Griffith is a manager of wide experience, having served in a managerial capacity with the Chicago White Sox and with the New York club. He resigned from the latter club about midseason after the Highlanders had made a poor showing. Griff said at the time he severed relations with Farrell that he left the club hoping that some other manager might have better success with the team. Griffith is an old time National league player, and made a name for himself as a pitcher for the Chicago National league club. Later he went to the South side club in the American league, and was one of the star pitchers there. He was later chosen as manager by Comiskey, and made so good that he was wanted by the New York management to take charge of the club which was placed in that city by the American league. To promote the interests of the new organization Comiskey consented to the change.

Charles F. Moll of Milwaukee has made good as president of the Wisconsin-Illinois league, the directors showing their faith in the head of the organization by re-electing him for two more years. It is likely that under his regime there may be a change in the circuit in the near future, possibly next year.

CHARLES F. MOLL

Frank A. Farrell, owner of the New York American League club, stands ready to give $25,000 for a manager of the Hughey Jennings or John McGraw type. He also announced that he would spend $250,000 to put his club on a winning basis.

"I realize," says Mr. Farrell, that the success of a ball club depends upon the able manager of a team. A team of stars is absolutely helpless without the directing hand of a great manager. When the season of 1908 opened I had a team that in my judgment was second to none in playing ability, but there was a missing something of a vital nature that would make the winning of the pennant possible.

"Two years ago the Detroit Tigers wondered why they could not occupy a higher place in the league race, but the mystery was solved when Jennings took hold. He whipped the team into a pennant-winning combination, and it was through his efforts solely that they carried off the pennant last year.

"Give an ordinary team a manager like Jennings or McGraw, and they will get mighty close to winning the pennant. Of course, such managers are rare, but if I would get a Jennings or a McGraw, for my team, I'd give up $25,000, in fact, money would be no consideration.

"I have spent $250,000 to land the pennant in New York, and I stand ready to part with as much more if it were possible for any manager to develop the greatest team in the American league."

"We did not finish as high as I hoped we would," said Manager McAleer of the St. Louis Browns, the other day, "but I do not care to discuss the cause of our fall to fourth place after leading the league for so long a time that we were conceded to be a prominent candidate for the championship. I hope to strengthen departments in which we were not strong and will make public any deals that I may put through on the day that they are consummated. I will not commend or criticise individuals on my team. Those with whom I am satisfied will stay; those who disappointed me will wear another uniform in 1909 and probably make good in it. We'll have a grand park in 1909 and I am going to do my best to give St. Louis a team that will satisfy. I cannot promise a pennant-winner, but I'll work my head off to get one."

BUSINESS MANAGER FOR CHURCH

Cleveland Institution Plans to Try a New System.

The Epworth Memorial Methodist church in Cleveland has decided to try a new system of church management. A business manager has been appointed who will give his entire time and attention to the finances of the church. As executive secretary he will collect the benevolences, dues of members, subscriptions, etc., and pay all expenses. He will serve as secretary of the standing committees of the church and keep a record of their business for transmission to the official board. This, it is expected, will leave the pastor free to give attention to the larger plans of the work and to his pulpit and pastoral duties. Epworth Memorial has the largest membership of all the Protestant churches in the city. It has an extensive charity work and handles over $35,000 in contributions every year. Dr. G. K. Morris, district superintendent, strongly commends the innovation. "To my mind," he says, "it is the ideal of church government. I expect to see the plan adopted in many other cities."

LIVED ON TEN CENTS A WEEK.

Bill Doolittle's System a Good One, But Not Attractive.

"D'y'u find smoking hurts y'u?" asks Hi Biddle, a Yankee lawyer, in Willie Brook's story, "The Solar Machine," in Harper's.

"It probably doesn't do me any good," I said; "but I'd have trouble quitting it."

"No, y'u wouldn't. Smoke this." He took from his vest pocket the fellow to the stogey in his mouth and tossed it across the table to me. "Ever hear how Bill Doolittle lived on ten cents a week?"

I confessed that Bill's economies had never been brought to my attention.

"Wal," said Biddle, "he took dinner with a friend on Sunday, an' ate enough to last 'im till Wednesday. Then he bought ten cents' wuth o' tripe, an' he hated tripe so like thunder that it lasted 'im the rest o' the week. These seegars work a good deal like that tripe. You take to smokin' 'em, an' y'u won't want more'n one or two a day."

15 YEARS OF SUFFERING.

Burning, Painful Sores on Legs—Tortured Day and Night—Tried Many Remedies to No Avail—Cured by Cuticura.

"After an attack of rheumatism, running sores broke out on my husband's legs, from below the knees to the ankles. There are no words to tell all the discomforts and great suffering he had to endure night and day. He used every kind of remedy and three physicians treated him, one after the other, without any good results whatever. One day I ordered some Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Resolvent. He began to use them and in three weeks all the sores were dried up. The burning fire stopped, and the pains became bearable. After three months he was quite well. I can prove this testimonial at any time. Mrs. V. V. Albert, Upper Frenchville, Me., July 21, 1907."

Well Prepared.

"I learn," she said reproachfully, "that you were devoted to no fewer than five girls before you finally proposed to me. How do I know that you didn't make desperate love to all of them?"

"I did," he replied, promptly.

"You did!" she exclaimed.

"Certainly," he returned. "You don't suppose for a moment that I would be foolhardy enough to try for such a prize as you are without practicing a little first, do you?"

A Difficult Task.

An old Irish laborer walked into the luxurious studio of a New York artist and asked for money to obtain a meal, as he was too weak to work.

The artist gave him a quarter and then, seeing possibilities for a sketch in the queer old fellow, said: "I'll give you a dollar if you'll let me paint you."

"Sure," said the man, "it's an easy way to make a dollar, but, but—I'm wonderin' how I'd get it off."

"Friend," he exclaimed, "I have sinned and done wrong, I must patiently suffer the most extreme agony to save myself from eternal damnation. Can you tell me some supreme test of repentance?"

"Certainly," answered the other, with an air of experience. "Go to a boarding house and live there for a year."

For Sprains

Sloan's Liniment is the best remedy for sprains and bruises.

It quiets the pain at once, and can be applied to the tenderest part without hurting because it doesn't need to be rubbed—all you have to do is to lay it on lightly. It is a powerful preparation and penetrates instantly—relieves any inflammation and congestion, and reduces the swelling.

Sloan's Liniment

is an excellent antiseptic and germ killer—heals cuts, burns, wounds and contusions, and will draw the poison from sting of poisonous insects.

Price, 25c., 50c., and $1.00.

INVENTOR EDISON, WORTH $50,000,000, RETIRES

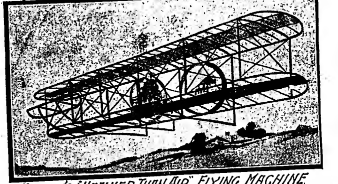
EDISON AS A TRAIN BOY

THOS. A. EDISON



EDISON'S "HEAVIER THAN AIR" FLYING MACHINE.

THOMAS A. EDISON, known as the "father of invention in America," is worth close to $50,000,000, it is said. To cap the climax of his career of turning out thousands of useful contrivances, he has retired from the field.

His life is now being devoted to the pursuits of science, merely for the enjoyment which he gleans from that sort of thing. He has awarded himself a life commission of roving into the depths of pure science and he is steering clear of the commercialism which was previously attached to his inventions.

He figures that he has already more than his share of worldly goods and it is his aim to live from his early accumulations for the rest of his life. All his life he has been devoting himself to the invention of money-making devices, which, when put upon the market, drew into his coffers great amounts of coin of the realm.

Hence the laboratory at Llewellyn, N. J., which for years has been his constant habitation, sees little of him these days. In the darkened rooms of that laboratory he often worked for five days and nights at a stretch, with little or no sleep, on some problem which had been given him for solution.

The country's men of money declare that there have been few puzzles which Edison failed to solve, whether they were of chemical, electrical or mechanical nature. Now, however, finances have been put behind him and he is delving into various subjects regardless of the money consideration attached to them. In fact things have come his way so easily in the past few years that there are few fields left for him to conquer, hence his retirement.

To-day, at the age of 61 years, he is roving the country seeking chemical problems which he may solve for his own amusement. No man in the world's history has solved as many intricate puzzles in the realm of inventions as has Edison, and most of his achievements have been in the line of electricity, but despite his many marvels with the mysterious currents, he has not the love for that study that he has developed for chemistry. While there was plenty of mysteriousness about electricity to draw the whole intellect of an inventor, Edison has taken far more interest in the study of chemistry, and, it is recorded, no chemist the world over is quite as efficient as Mr. Edison.

Chemistry was the first science to captivate the wonderful intellect of this man, but he says himself that he has never had the chance to delve into its mysteries with the full power of the fertile mind he possesses. And now he is taking advantage of the opportunity which made itself by reason of his marvelous success in all lines of invention.

He is now taking life more easily than since the time he started out to earn his living as a newsboy at the age of 12 years. His education was a limited one, but, thanks to his mother, he received the essentials of a grammar school education.

He promised his friends that since his announced retirement he would give up slaving days, nights, Sundays and holidays in his laboratory at Llewellyn and he has kept his promise faithfully. He invades the dark corners of his workshop only when some fanciful problem in chemistry presents itself and he feels impelled to get at the bottom of it.

This fall Mr. Edison took jaunts about the country in pursuit of some of the pleasure which his years of work compelled him to miss. He promised himself that he would see something of the world. He aimed to travel a great deal during the remaining years of his life, and he has already laid out a route of travel which will probably occupy his time for several years to come.

Early in 1909 he plans to repair to his newly-purchased Florida home where he will pass the late winter months and early spring. He took much interest in planning for this Florida home, for it was almost the first time he had any particular longing for a home of high class type. He had previously been so wrapped up in his works of invention that a home to him was a mere vision put aside in a moment by the appearance of a problem which needed solving.

Towards the last of August he departed for the Pacific coast with his family, and he announced on leaving New York that he would be there perhaps a month if the west interested him to that extent. It is hard to interest Thomas A. Edison, and his friends and family know it. He has seen so much more of the wonderful accomplishments of mechanics, chemistry and electricity that there are few problems which can prove of interest.

That the life of Thomas A. Edison has entered a new epoch was evidenced by his recent visit on a fun-making tour on Long Island, where he spent three days. Soon after that visit, however, the spell of delving into chemistry took possession of him and he repaired to his laboratory and was not seen for several days among his friends. Then he departed for the Pacific coast, and Florida will see him early in 1909.

To the art of telegraphy Edison has given many inventions of the greatest imaginable efficiency. The automatic repeater was an evolution of Edison's ideas and also the quadruple telegraph, printing telegraph, etc. It was in his early life, soon after he left the employ of the telegraph companies of the country. Later in life he perfected machines for quadruplex and sextuplex telegraphic transmission; the carbon telegraph transmitter; the microtasimeter for detection of small changes in temperature; the phonograph, the aerophone, the incandescent light system, the kinetescope and hundreds of other inventions of somewhat similar nature.

If one scans the average American home of to-day, he sees dozens of Edison inventions in every-day use and many which the housewife finds she cannot get along without. The visitor entering the hall of a big apartment building is admitted to the flat he wishes to visit by a tap upon an electric bell, the evolution of Edison's experiments with electricity. The place is perhaps heated by electricity, the heating device being Edison's invention also. On the sitting room table is a phonograph, evolved by Edison. Then there is the telephone, parts of which are products of his wonderful intellect. Those are the principal devices about the household of the middle-class American, for which the world must thank Thomas A. Edison, but, besides these, there are dozens of other small contrivances which few persons know as his inventions.

Edison is known as one of the country's most noted men, and, it is recorded, the fame of the inventor seldom attaches itself to his name until after his remains are laid to rest, therefore even greater credit should be given him, for he is a world-famed character despite the fact that he is not dead.

Thomas Alva Edison is an Ohio production. He was born at Milan, O., February 11, 1847. He was the favorite son and his parents Samuel and Nancy E. Edison, while they took great pride in their boy, found themselves incapable of giving him the education that such a bright lad deserved. His mother, however, realized that his intellect was above the average of that of a lad of his age, and having had a fairly good education, as learning went in those days, tutored him at home in reading, writing and arithmetic.

At the age of 12 years home ties were broken and he left the hearth which he had known since his birth to take up a position as newsboy on the Grand Trunk railway. He fell in with many railway telegraph operators, and his love for the mysterious about that vocation led him to study it at the instance of his friends among the knights of the key.

Soon he went into telegraphy actively as an operator and, though he was yet a very young man, he clicked off messages in all parts of the United States and Canada.

Soon familiarity with his instruments led him to see flaws in them and the possibility for evolving new ideas to add efficiency to the system. Telegraphy then was young and there was plenty of opportunity for a wide-awake person to add improvements to the system.

A few years as an operator sufficed to show him where there was an opening for his ideas. He established a workshop at Newark, N. J., working there evenings while he was employed as a telegraph operator near by. In 1876 he removed to Menlo, N. J., and later to West Orange, N. J.

In 1873 he married Miss Mary G. Stillwell, and his home now is in the town where he established himself when his work first showed signs of success—West Orange, N. J.

Many honors were conferred upon Mr. Edison in his later years. The French government, because of a favor which he conferred, bestowed upon him the titles of chevalier officer, and afterwards he was made honorary commander of the Legion of Honor. In 1903 he was appointed honorary chief consulting engineer of the St. Louis world's fair.

AGAINST AMBIDEXTERITY.

Sir James Crichton-Browne, lecturing recently at Cambridge, said that in the present movement in England and Germany in favor of ambidexterity he fancied he detected the old taint of faddism. Ambidexterity on a large scale is impossible and undesirable, according to Sir James. It was by the superior need of his right hand that man gained the victory and to try to undo his dextral preeminence is simply to fly in the face of evolution. There has been no instance, said Sir James, of any tribe, community or people that has grown out of it or broken away from it and found salvation in ambidexterity. A recently published book alleged that the Japanese were by law and practice ambidextrous, but he had the authority of the Japanese ambassador emphatically to deny this.

Chairman Payne of ways and means committee is re-elected.
Chairman Hepburn of interstate and foreign commerce committee is defeated.
Congressman Dalzell of Pennsylvania, identified with tariff legislation, is re-elected.

William Howard Taft of Ohio, Republican, has been elected twenty-seventh president of the United States, and James Schoolcraft Sherman of New York has been chosen vice-president. This is the outcome of one of the most remarkable political campaigns in the history of the republic.

William Jennings Bryan of Nebraska, the Democratic candidate, went down in the third defeat of his life's ambition to occupy the White House.

Among the more significant results were the re-election to congress of Speaker Cannon and Chairman Sereno E. Payne of the house committee on ways and means, and the re-election for a third term of Gov. John Johnson Democrat, in Minnesota.

One of the results surpassing the most sanguine hopes of most Republicans was Mr. Taft's carrying the greater city of New York by a plurality which approached 10,000. Furthermore, his plurality in New York state will be approximately 189,334, exceeding by nearly 14,000 Roosevelt's big plurality of 1904.

Only second in point of general interest was the victory of Gov. Charles E. Hughes, who was re-elected by a plurality estimated as well above 75,000 over the vote cast for his Democratic opponent, Lieut. Gov. Chanler. While Greater New York gave a plurality for Taft, it gave Chanler a margin of 56,843.

With 31 United States senators to be elected by legislatures chosen now or earlier in the fall. The Republicans will retain their control of both houses of congress.

Mr. Taft carried practically every so-called doubtful state except Nebraska, where Mr. Bryan was victorious. Mr. Bryan carried Nevada in addition to the solid south, excepting Missouri.

Republican Pluralities Reduced.

Some of the figures relating to the Republican slump in certain states regarded as certainly Republican, are little short of amazing. Pennsylvania's immense plurality of over 500,000 four years ago has been cut in two. Illinois, which gave Roosevelt 305,000 in 1904, has gone for Taft by about 170,000. The highest claim of the Republicans for Indiana is 15,000 as against a plurality of 93,000 for Roosevelt.

RESULTS ON STATE TICKETS.

Gov. Hughes Re-elected in New York and Deneen in Illinois.

Charles E. Hughes triumphed over his foes and was re-elected governor of New York by a plurality of about 76,000. This he accomplished by cutting down the expected Democratic plurality below the Bronx.

Deneen Wins in Illinois.

Gov. Deneen has been re-elected in Illinois by a plurality of from 20,000 to 30,000 while Judge Taft carried the state by more than 200,000.

Incomplete returns indicate that Taft has carried Iowa by a plurality now placed at 57,000. This is a tremendous falling off from the Roosevelt plurality of 158,000 of four years ago, but it represents only a slight falling off from the normal plurality. The entire Republican state ticket is elected, probably by about the same plurality.

Harris Beaten in Ohio.

Though Taft carried Ohio by about 50,000, Harris, Republican candidate for governor, was defeated by Harmon (Dem.), by probably 20,000 plurality.

The Republican national and state tickets were victorious in Wisconsin by a plurality estimated at 75,000. The congressional delegation probably will remain about the same as two years ago, nine Republicans and two Democrats. The legislature, which will elect a United States senator to succeed Isaac Stephenson, will be overwhelmingly Republican, the returns indicating the election of 73 Republicans, 21 Democrats and six Social Democrats in the assembly, and 27 Republicans, four Democrats and two Social Democrats in the senate.

Incomplete returns indicate Gov. Johnson's re-election as governor of Minnesota by a majority of 10,000 to 15,000. Returns so far received indicate that Taft's plurality will be between 80,000 and 100,000.

Unofficial returns from 114 of the 115 counties in Missouri, 86 of the counties being complete, give Bryan 289,698; Taft, 290,177; Taft's plurality, 479. For Gov. Hadley, Republican, 301,757; Cowherd, Democrat, 286,604; Hadley's plurality, 15,153.

It will require the official count to determine whether the rest of the state ticket was carried to victory by the vote for Mr. Hadley.

For the first time since Thomas A. Hendricks was elected governor on the Democratic state ticket and U. S. Grant received the electoral vote of the state for the Republican national ticket, Indiana has given a plurality to the Republican candidate for president and elected the Democratic candidate for governor, Thomas R. Marshall being the winner.

According to the latest estimate Mr. Taft received a plurality of about 15,000 and Mr. Marshall was victorious over James E. Watson, Republican candidate, by about 3,000.

The latest returns indicate that Taft carried Maryland by about 300 plurality, but that the state's electoral vote would be split.

CONTROL HOUSE AND SENATE.

Republicans Have a Good Majority in Both Houses.

Latest election returns indicate that the house of representatives is still heavily Republican, with a majority on division of 41. The Republican membership in the Sixty-first congress is 218 while the Democrats show only 173. The membership of the house is 391, and the majority necessary for control is 198.

Speaker Cannon was re-elected by a majority of from 6,000 to 10,000. Congressmen Hull, Dalzell, Payne and other leaders of national importance who had hard fights were all successful.

The districts on which the Democrats relied to increase their present strength have, in most instances, returned Republicans.

Practically No Change in Senate.

The senate will show practically no change in political complexion, the Republicans retaining a large majority. The membership of the senate is 92, the hold-over members number 61 (43 Republicans and 18 Democrats).

CONGRESSIONAL RESULTS

The congressional returns indicate that the Sixty-first congress will have Republican majorities in both branches. According to the latest reports the various states have elected congressmen as follows:

The election of 15 Republicans and 15 Democrats, as seems probable from the returns giving the make-up of the various legislatures which elect senators, would show the strength of the two leading parties in the senate to be: Republicans, 58; Democrats, 33; doubtful, 1.

One of the surprises of the election was the defeat in Iowa of Congressman Hepburn, chairman of the interstate and foreign commerce committee.

Chairman Hitchcock's Statement.

Chairman Frank H. Hitchcock of the Republican national committee made the following statement:

"The returns speak for themselves. There seem to be no longer any doubtful states. The electoral vote will show that my estimate was correct. It looks now, I think, as if I must have underestimated it. The returns have exceeded my expectations.

"The plurality in Indiana will be less than I expected. That in Illinois is far more than anticipated. And so it goes: where one state has not quite come up to the figures I had expected some other state has gone far beyond. The latest returns from Maryland indicate that we have carried that state by about 8,000 to 10,000 and that is more than I believed it would give.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

Big Ditching.

Brainerd.—R. A. Elzy of Marshalltown, who is taking out half a million cubic yards of earth for the state of Minnesota in Koochiching county, says that contractors in the swamps of the north generally have put in a very good year.

R. A. Elzy & Son are building two ditches in Koochiching county which they will complete in contract time, the first of the year. Both ditches drain into the Rainy river basin and are located near International Falls. One of the machines is digging down the ditch and on the other ditch the machine is digging up from the Rainy river. The ditches are very long and deep and will drain many thousands of acres of tillable land in that neighborhood.

The machines employed on the work are "floaters" or vertical dredges. Their progress has been threatened somewhat on account of the lack of water during the dry months of the year. Even at this time, however, water is very scarce and some difficulty is experienced in getting enough to float these huge machines.

Fatal Fire.

St. Paul.—Fire which started in the basement of the Shea livery stable on Selby avenue, next to the Angus hotel, is believed to have cost the life of one man. Seventy horses were destroyed.

The fire started about 2:30 o'clock this morning and before the department arrived the building was doomed.

The fire gained headway so rapidly that the fourteen men who slept in the place barely escaped with their lives and did not have time to dress.

Olaf Johnson, one of the employes, is missing, and it is thought he perished in the flames. He slept upstairs.

Herbert McDermott was badly cut about the body and was taken away in the police ambulance

John C Shea, the proprietor, had forty horses and the Igo Express company had thirty in the barn. None of them were saved.

All of the carriages, including a valuable hearse, also fell prey to the flames. The loss is estimated at least $40,000.

Colvill Statute.

St. Paul.—The Colvill commission met at the capitol and after definitely accepting the design of Mrs. George J. Backus of Minneapolis, for the statue of Col. William Colvill, allowed a preliminary estimate of $1,500 for the work. This commission was appointed pursuant to an act of the last legislature for the purpose of securing a monument of the famous leader of the First Minnesota. The statue is to be placed on his grave at Cannon Falls, where the citizens have made a small park. A replica will be the first of a number of statues of famous Minnesotans to be placed in the rotunda of the state capitol.

The commission went to Chicago a week ago to examine the clay model prepared by Mrs. Backus, and were pleased with it. The statue represents Col. Colvill in his uniform standing alone, looking directly ahead, with one hand on the unsheathed sword. The completed statue will be eight feet four inches high and the two will cast $8,150.

Little Girl's Hand Blown Off.

Thomas, the 12-year-old son of the family, and Mary, the 4-year-old daughter, were playing with a fulminating cap, used for setting off nitroglycerine.

The boy had found the cap with wires attached.

He was ignorant of the danger which the cap contained and carried it home, where he and his sister were playing with it.

When the cap exploded, it literally blew the entire hand off the little girl.

Miscellaneous News.

Heron Lake.—Freer's livery barn, with seven horses, carriages and harness, burned. It took great effort by the fire company to save the town.

Two Harbors.—The Lake county board has awarded the contract for the construction of a steel bridge across Beaver creek to Beaver Bay township, the work to be completed in a few weeks.

St. Paul.—S. F. Fullerton, state game and fish commissioner, returned from Wabasha with 14,000 bass and crappies, which after a brief rest in the state hatchery will be placed in lakes in the southern part of the state.

Minneapolis.—The offering at the Bijou Opera house the week of November 8th will be the new play entitled "The Lieutenant and the Cowboy." It is not a blood curdling, hair raising melodrama but is said to faithfully and realistically portray western people and customs as they really are.

Nothing I Ate Agreed With Me.

MRS. LENORA BODENHAMER.

Mrs. Lenora Bodenhamer, R. F. D. 1, Box 99, Kernersville, N. C., writes:

"I suffered with stomach trouble and indigestion for some time, and nothing that I ate agreed with me. I was very nervous and experienced a continual feeling of uneasiness and fear. I took medicine from the doctor, but it did me no good.

"I found in one of your Peruna books a description of my symptoms. I then wrote to Dr. Hartman for advice. He said I had catarrh of the stomach. I took Peruna and Manalin and followed his directions and can now say that I feel as well as I ever did.

"I hope that all who are afflicted with the same symptoms will take Peruna, as it has certainly cured me."

The above is only one of hundreds who have written similar letters to Dr. Hartman. Just one such case as this entitles Peruna to the candid consideration of every one similarly afflicted. If this be true of the testimony of one person what ought to be the testimony of hundreds, yes thousands, of honest, sincere people. We have in our files a great many other testimonials.

Nuts.

One very great advantage which nuts possess over most foods is their absolute freedom from adulteration. When you buy nuts, you always know what you are getting. Of course, those bought in the shell are also absolutely clean. And what a beautiful source they come from! How delightful to picture the trees upon which they grow, on the outermost branches dancing in the sunbeams.—Good Health.

By the Hurricane Route.

"He's long wanted to leave the country," says a Billville exchange, "but he never could afford the railroad fare, but just as he had given up all hope a hurricane came along and gave him and his house free transportation. It was providential and he pulled through at last."—Atlanta Constitution.

EAGER TO WORK

Health Regained by Right Food.

The average healthy man or woman is usually eager to be busy at some useful task or employment.

But let dyspepsia or indigestion get hold of one, and all endeavor becomes a burden.

"A year ago, after recovering from an operation," writes a Mich. lady, "my stomach and nerves began to give me much trouble.

"At times my appetite was voracious, but when indulged, indigestion followed. Other times I had no appetite whatever. The food I took did not nourish me, and I grew weaker than ever.

"I lost interest in everything, and wanted to be alone. I had always had good nerves, but now the merest trifle would upset me and bring on a violent headache. Walking across the room was an effort and prescribed exercise was out of the question.

"I had seen Grape-Nuts advertised, but did not believe what I read, at the time. At last when it seemed as if I were literally starving, I began to eat Grape-Nuts.

"I had not been able to work for a year, but now after two months on Grape-Nuts I am eager to be at work again. My stomach gives me no trouble now, my nerves are steady as ever, and interest in life and ambition have came back with the return to health."

"There's a Reason."

WHERE ARE WE AT?

The next legislature stands apprently 70 to 43 against county option. But among them 70 there are a number of good republicans that are ugly at the whole sale liquor dealers for the part they took in the campaign to defeat Jacobson for governor. We always have been opposed to county option, but it seems to us, it is getting to be about time to find out whether the "whiskey ring", or the people are running the state of Minnesota. There was not an agent for the sale of beer, or whiskey that traveled the roads, that did not make the boast, that the "booze" sellers would defeat Jacobson for governor, and now they say, "WE did what we told you we would do" "WE defeated him." Again we arise to inquire where are we at? Some of them fellows are liable to hear something drop, when that county option bill comes up this winter, for revenge is sweet, and they will find out that the ministers of the gospel and the prohibitionists will have some help, that will make it interesting for the WE that defeated Jacobson.

A Grateful Crab.

"Alfred Sommerlad, mu-hat director of the Devonshire Park theater, Eastbourne, and Edgar Bateman, the song writer, out fishing caught an edible crab," says an English periodical. "They tossed it back into the water. At that moment an accidental kick sent the bait box after the crab. There was one fragment of bait adhering to the hook, and this was lowered into the sea, and the anglers left the rod for a time. When they returned they found their basket, which they had left empty, full to overflowing with fine flounders, soles, rock, whiting and plaice. The explanation was soon forthcoming. Painfully making its way up the fishing line came the creature whose life had been spared bearing in its nippers a fine young conger eel, which it placed with the other fish on the basket. Then it dropped back into the water. Apparently the grateful crab, knowing that he had caused the bait to be lost, had deposited fifteen and one-half pounds of live fish in the creel as a thank offering for its life being spared."

Piracy's Romance.

Piracy is as old as history, but we think of it more particularly as woven inextricably into the romantic youth of the new world. The word itself suggests first of all to Americans at least such names as Captain Kidd, Bartholomew Roberts, Captain Edward England, Captain George Lowther and that terrifying and dashing buccaneer Sir Henry Morgan, and the chief exploits of these men were accomplished at the expense of the coast of North America and the much harried shores of the Caribbean. The history of piracy is full of drama, stirring action and daring deeds, and it is on this account rather than because of its darker side of fire, murder, killing and inhuman cruelty that children even today, years after the last of the genuine pirates has been swept from the seas, are constantly playing in imitation of piratical exploits and that men and women still find a unique fascination in reading of the followers of the black flag.—Jackson Cross in Metropolitan Magazine.

Taking Their Temperature.

For three days on a transatlantic cattle steamer, with passenger accommodations, Mrs. Billings had been endeavoring by persistent and continuous questioning to obtain some ideas as to nautical proceedings, and the other passengers had about reached the end of their patience.

"Well," remarked Miss Talbot at dinner as she passed the salt, "I am glad to find that they treat the cattle so humanely on board. Why, they take the temperature twice a day regularly."

"Oh," cried Mrs. Billings in a high piercing crescendo, "do they really? I'm so glad to hear it, but I shouldn't think they could very well."

"Why not, madam?" inquired an elderly man on her left.

"Well—well, why," said Mrs. Billings, "I should think that it would be hard to keep a clinical thermometer in a cow's mouth long enough to get any temperature without having it [illegible].—[illegible] Companion.

TALES OF THE DERBY

Some of the Winners That Were Not Liked as Youngsters.

BOUGHT FOR A MERE TRIFLE.

Little Wonder, Who Carried Off the Blue Ribbon in 1840, Cost His Owner Only $325—The Successes of Voltigeur and Thormanby.

Stories of Derby winners having been sold as youngsters for exceedingly small sums are fairly numerous, and without going too far back into the recesses of the past at least two instances can be cited of animals destined ultimately to win the "blue ribbon of the turf" which as yearlings no one thought good enough to buy. Voltigeur was one of these, and the other was Thormanby.

Voltigeur was bred by Robert Stephenson in 1847 and as a yearling was sent up to be sold at the Doncaster sales, a reserve price of $1,750 being placed on him. Not a man was found to bid that much for him; consequently he was withdrawn.

In all probability he would have remained unsold had not Williamson, a relative by marriage of Lord Zetland, seen him and, having taken a fancy to him, finally persuaded his lordship to buy him.

His judgment was triumphantly vindicated, for not only did Voltigeur win the Derby and St. Leger, but he succeeded in establishing a line of thoroughbreds which is at present dominant on the English turf and likely to remain so for some time to come.

Thormanby, too, was sent up to be disposed at the Doncaster and, like Voltigeur, did not reach a nominal reserve. Desirous of getting rid of him, however, Plummer, his breeder, requested his famous trainer, Matt Dawson, to come and have a thorough look at him.

This Dawson did and, perceiving at a glance good points about him, which no one else apparently had noticed, bought him for Merry, his patron. Strange enough, Dawson gave the same figure for Thormanby as that paid for Voltigeur.

As a two-year-old Thormanby ran fourteen times and out of this number scored nine wins, and in the Derby of the following year he beat a field of thirty. It was said that the race netted Merry the nice sum of $200 000.

The cheapest horse that ever won the Derby was Little Wonder, which was successful in 1840, for he cost his owner, Robertson, the meager sum of only $325.

Spaniel, too, winner of the race in 1831, was picked up for a very small sum, Lord Egerton, his breeder, letting him go for $750.

Pyrrhus J., which won in 1846, was purchased by John Day, the noted trainer, as a yearling at Doncaster, Gally, the pugilist, taking a half interest in him.

As a two-year-old the horse never ran, and seemingly his abilities were then of an unknown quantity, for at the end of the season Day agreed to sell his half share in him to Gally for $500. Day's chagrin at his subsequent victory in the Derby was very great.

Teddington, the winner of 1851, was bred by a blacksmith, who sold him as a foal, together with his dam, to Sir Joseph Hawley for $1,250 and a further $5,000 if he won the Derby.

Sir Joseph and his confederate, Massey Stanhope, to whom the horse really belonged, profited largely over the success, and the jockey, Marson, who rode the horse, received $10,000 as a token of victory, which in those days was unprecedented.

Sainfoin, which carried the colors of Sir James Miller to the front, was an exceptionally fortunate purchase by John Porter, the trainer. He bought the colt out of the Hampton Court lot of yearlings in 1888 for the very reasonable price of $2,720, Sir Robert Dardine taking a half interest in him.

As a two-year-old he was seen only once in public, and he won his race with the greatest ease. The year following he won the Esher stakes in a canter, after which he was sold to Sir James Miller for $30,000 and a contingency of half the stakes if he won the Derby. It was indeed a profitable deal for Porter and Sir Robert.

Another instance of Porter's shrewdness as a horse dealer was his purchase of the great horse Isonomy for the bagatelle figure, comparatively speaking, of $1,800. The real owner was Fred Gretton.

Isonomy gave no real promise of his worth as a two-year-old, his only victory being a nursery stake in the latter part of the season. As a three-year-old he was not seen in public until the Cambridgeshire, which he won easily by two lengths and incidentally earned no less than $200,000 in bets for his owner.

Had he been in the classic races he would in all probability have cleaned the board.

As a four-year-old he won the gold cup at Ascot and the Goodwood and Brighton cups and crowned these feats by literally running away with the Great Ebor handicap, carrying the crushing weight of 130 pounds.

The following year Isonomy proved himself a better horse than ever, not only winning the Ascot gold cup again, but also the Manchester cup with the almost impossible burden, one would think, of 138 pounds.

It has been calculated that altogether Isonomy won for his owner upward of $100,000 in stakes and bets, which for an $1,800 investment was a colossal profit.—Brooklyn Eagle.

J. M. Barrie some years ago was persuaded to take the chair at a Burns celebration in Scotland. He was extremely silent and stole away at the earliest opportunity. Many people thought the writer had gone too far and protested. But the author of the article was Mr. Barrie himself.

A Poor Bath.

A Frenchman was talking in New York about the excellent bathing beaches of America.

"There are no such beaches in Europe," said he. "And the sea over there is not so pleasant to bathe in. Frequently, you know, great pipes empty sewage into it. They who stay late for the bathing in Nice, for instance, swim about among lemon peel, orange skins, melon rinds, soaked but still buoyant newspapers—fearful rubbish. I once bathed in Nice. The Mediterranean was warm and pleasant, but it resembled soup or something worse. I heard an American after coming out say to the bathing master: "'Look here, friend, where do strangers go for a wash after bathing here?'"

How We Fall Asleep.

It is not generally known that the body falls asleep in sections. The muscles of the legs and arms lose their power long before those which support the head and these last sooner than the muscles which sustain the back. The sense of sight sleeps first, then the sense of taste, next the sense of smell, next that of hearing and lastly that of touch. These are the results of careful and lengthy investigation by a French scientist, M. [illegible]

So If there is any harm done, or any sin committed by having that social, that preacher is to blame for it, for if he had come and preached, as he promised to do, the social would never have been mentioned,

The Arab Mare.

The Arab is regarded as the first of horsemen and the Arab mare as the perfect steed. The Arab's idea of horse taming is of the simplest. The colt is treated from the first as a member of the family. It goes in and out of the tents and is so familiarized with the doings of that extraordinary creature, man, that there is never any need of breaking it in. The Bedouin is very careful of his mare. He does not mount her when he sets out to play his usual tricks upon travelers. He rides a camel to which the mare is tethered. Not until the caravan is in sight does he mount the mare and give chase. There is, by the way, an impression that the Bedouin is a bloody minded person who would as lief take your life as not. This is unfair to him. He is a thief of very peaceful inclinations and much prefers to effect any necessary transfer of property with as little bother as possible.—London Graphic.

The Poor Ensign.

The following story of German military officialism is published in London: One Ensign Flugge claimed compensation for damage to kit caused by a mouse having gnawed a hole in his best tunic. The officer who had to decide the point dismissed the claim and ordered the ensign to be severely punished on the ground that, contrary to orders, he had hung his best tunic on a nail when going on guard at night in an inferior garment instead of packing it in his knapsack, thus enabling a mouse to gnaw a hole in it "without having to overcome the slightest impediment." Ensign Flugge appealed, and on further hearing it appeared that the officer who first dealt with the case was mistaken in the facts, the tunic having been stowed in a knapsack at the time when the mouse defaced it and not hung upon a nail. The first decision was therefore set aside by higher authority, and Ensign Flugge was ordered to be severely punished for having stowed his tunic in his knapsack instead of hanging it on a nail, thereby giving opportunity to the mouse to knaw a hole in it "under cover of the darkness." The sentiments of Ensign Flugge are not recorded.

Philanthropic Misers.

In several remarkable cases real philanthropy has been a miser's motive in spending and saving to a grotesque degree. Thus when the first Pasteur institute was suggested in Paris to keep green the memory of the world famous scientist a poor wretch who lived in utter misery came forward with a subscription of $500. And when the city officials called upon him with a message of thanks they found him in an evil smelling slum behind the Cathedral of Notre Dame. When the door was opened the miser philanthropist was found quarreling violently with his miserable looking servant for throwing away a match that had not been burned at both ends. A similar case, but on a much larger scale, was that of Jacques Gurgot of Marseilles. Every one in the city knew and hated him for his incredibly sordid life, yet when the old miser's will was proved all France was amazed to find he had left $250,000 to his native city especially to furnish the poor with a good and cheap water supply. "I know," the old man wrote, "that 50,000 of our citizens died of the plague during the epidemic of 1720, which was generated by the noxious effluvia arising from filthy streets that were never cleansed."—New York Tribune.

Diamond Cutters and Their Work.

Not only is diamond cutting not a specially highly paid occupation, but it is one involving a most humiliating system of espionage to the worker. Each man has to strictly account for the stones he receives on going to work in the morning, and the count has to be carefully taken when the unfinished work is handed in at night to be locked up in a safe against the return of the workmen the next day. The possibilities of theft are great, though a dishonest workman knows that an attempt to dispose of an unfinished stone would bring suspicion upon him wherever the attempt was made.

EXCELLENT WEATHER AND MAGNIFICENT CROPS

REPORTS FROM WESTERN CANADA ARE VERY ENCOURAGING.

A correspondent writes the Winnipeg (Man.) Free Press: "The Pincher Creek district, (Southern Alberta), the original home of fall wheat, where it has been grown without failure, dry seasons and wet, for about 25 years, is excelling itself this year. The yield and quality are both phenomenal, as has been the weather for its harvesting. Forty bushels is a common yield, and many fields go up to 50, 60 and over, and most of it No. 1 Northern. Even last year, which was less favorable, similar yields were in some cases obtained, but owing to the season the quality was not so good. It is probably safe to say that the average yield from the Old Man's River to the boundary will be 47 or 48 bushels per acre, and mostly No. 1 Northern. One man has just made a net profit from his crop of $19.55 per acre, or little less than the selling price of land. Land here is too cheap at present, when a crop or two will pay for it, and a failure almost unknown. Nor is the district dependent on wheat, all other crops do well, also stock and dairying, and there is a large market at the doors in the mining towns up the Crows Nest Pass, and in British Columbia, for the abundant hay of the district, and poultry, pork, and garden truck. Coal is near and cheap. Jim Hill has an eye on its advantages, and has invested here, and is bringing the Great Northern Railroad soon, when other lines will follow."

The wheat, oat and barley crop in other parts of Western Canada show splendid yields and will make the farmers of that country (and many of them are Americans) rich. The Canadian Government Agent for this district advises us that he will be pleased to give information to all who desire it about the new land regulations by which a settler may now secure 160 acres in addition to his 160 homestead acres, at $3.00 an acre, and also how to reach these lands into which railways are being extended. It might be interesting to read what is said of that country by the Editor of the Marshall (Minn.) News-Messenger, who made a trip through portions of it in July, 1908. "Passing through more than three thousand miles of Western Canada's agricultural lands, touring the northern and southern farming belts of the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, with numerous drives through the great grain fields, we were made to realize not only the magnificence of the crops, but the magnitude, in measures, of the vast territory opening, and to be opened to farming immigration. There are hundreds of thousands of farmers there, and millions of acres under cultivation, but there is room for millions more, and other millions of acreage available. We could see in Western Canada in soil, product, topography or climate, little that is different from Minnesota, and with meeting at every point many business men and farmers who went there from this state, it was difficult to realize one was beyond the boundary of the country."

Would Risk One More Bottle.

A Frenchman from the provinces who was paying a prolonged visit to Paris found his hair was leaving him at the top of his head, and took his barber to task about it. "You sold me two bottles of stuff to make the hair grow." "It is very strange it won't grow again," said the modern Figaro; "I can't understand it." "Look here!" said the countryman. "I don't mind drinking another bottle, but this must be the last!"—Philadelphia Inquirer.

GOV. JOHNSON AGAIN ELECTED

HIS MAJORITY WILL NOT BE AS LARGE AS TWO YEARS AGO.

Late Returns Place His Majority at About 25,000. The Country as Well as Cities Helped Materially to Swell His Figures.

Minneapolis, Minn., November 5.—The returns from Minnesota in the governorship contest continue to be more or less incomplete. It can be asserted, however, that Taft has carried the state by 80,000 and that in the face of this, Johnson has swept the state by 25,000.

The city of Duluth, which the Republicans had expected to carry for Jacobson, has given Johnson a majority of 939, while reports from all sections of the country, including the city of Duluth, and with 70 precincts to hear from, give Johnson the county by 715. The tonnage tax fight in St. Louis county and other issues lead the Republicans to expect better results than this.

The Republican managers and leaders, of course, were disappointed at the result but were not discouraged. They had known all the time that they were fighting against odds, but in spite of this they had been hopeful throughout the long fight. They knew that Jacobson had to go against the prestige which Johnson's 72,000 majority in 1906 gave him, together with the prestige he received in his presidential candidacy. The Republicans also had to go against the tremendous organization which the Democrats have been building up.

Already there is talk among Republicans that Jacobson is the proper man to nominate for governor in 1910. He is a stronger man than ever, they say, and the acquaintance he has won in this campaign is a great asset. He had to go against great odds this year, and cutting Johnson's majority down to about 20,000 is no small feat. Jacobson had the united support of the party, and there was a real fight made in his behalf, but the time was too short to overcome the handicap with which he started out.

Ramsey county, although it gave over 6,000 for Johnson, did as well as the Republicans expected. St. Paul has been the governor's home for four years, and is the seat of the state capitol. Many of the appointees live here and the governor has been constantly mingling with the people here. Jacobson was a comparative stranger to the city, and the prejudice that has existed against him in the city took some time to overcome. That this was overcome among a great number of people is certain, but apparently not enough of them had met him and seen him enough to know him. However, the local Republicans had been told that if they held Johnson's majority down to what it was in 1906 in this city, Jacobson would get enough votes outside to elect him. Johnson's majority was cut in Ramsey as in Hennepin, but the country increased Johnson's lead over Jacobson.

Chairman A. D. Brown of the Republican state central committee did not give up hope until yesterday noon, when so many returns were in it was certain there would be no change in the result. The Democratic managers were confident of victory all along, except during the first hour Tuesday night, when a few Republican precincts gave them a scare, and for a time some of them thought Johnson was defeated.

The campaign was the hardest fought in a number of years, with the exception of the Dunn-Johnson fight in 1904. The campaign this year, however, was conducted on a higher moral plane, and although there were misrepresentations and abuse, it was generally free from mudslinging.

The returns received yesterday on Taft and Bryan bear out the first estimates of 100,000 or more for Taft. Nearly all the counties outside of Hennepin and Ramsey have been doing better than two to one for Taft.

St. Louis county has been a disappointment to the Republicans. The Republican leaders had confidently expected that they would carry the city of Duluth, but returns last night showed that Johnson had carried it by about 500, although Republican leaders there claimed that Jacobson would probably carry the county.

Bryan For Senate.

Lincoln Neb., Nov. 5.—A movement is on foot to elect W. J. Bryan to the United States senate as the successor of Elmore J. Burkett (Republican), whose term expires 1911.

Mr. Bryan has repeatedly asserted both on the stump and in private conversation that he would rather receive Dunlsiav's salary than be president. It is admitted his personal popularity carried the Democratic ticket through in the state and his friends declare just recognition demands his receiving the senatorial post.

Taft Votes.

New York.—Late developments in the election situation surprised the political leaders of both big parties, and the result may be a vindication of the judgment of Chairman Hitchcock, who declared that Taft would receive 325 votes in the electoral college.

Midnight returns indicate that he is practically assured of 309 votes and has a fighting chance for Missouri's eighteen votes, which would give him a total of two more than Mr. Hitchcock claimed.

The General Demand

of the Well-Informed of the World has always been for a simple, pleasant and efficient liquid laxative remedy of known value; a laxative which physicians could sanction for family use because its component parts are known to them to be wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, acceptable to the system and gentle, yet prompt, in action.

In supplying that demand with its excellent combination of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the California Fig Syrup Co. proceeds along ethical lines and relies on the merits of the laxative for its remarkable success.

That is one of many reasons why Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is given the preference by the Well-Informed. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

BOY KEPT SCRATCHING.

Eczema Lasted 7 Years—Face Was All Raw—Skin Specialists Failed, But Cuticura Effected Cure.

"When my little boy was six weeks old an eruption broke out on his face. I took him to a doctor, but his face kept on getting worse until it got so bad that no one could look at him. His whole face was one crust and must have been very painful. He scratched day and night until his face was raw. Then I took him to all the best specialists in skin diseases but they could not do much for him. The eczema got on his arms and legs and we could not get a night's sleep in months. I got a set of Cuticura Remedies and he felt relieved the first time I used them. I gave the Cuticura Remedies a good trial and gradually the eczema healed all up. He is now seven years old and I think the trouble will never return. Mrs. John G. Klumpp, 80 Niagara St., Newark, N. J., Oct. 17 and 22, 1907."

His Epitaph.

"I have just one request," said the dying man to his relatives.

"What is it?" they asked him earnestly. "We will grant you anything."

"Well," replied the man, feebly, "I want you to have carved upon my monument these words: 'Here lies a man who worked for his living.'"

Realizing that he had forestalled any attempt on the part of his rich relations to brag too much about their family connections, he sank into a sweet sleep.

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. METCALF STEPS OUT

SECRETARY OF THE NAVY WILL LEAVE CABINET DECEMBER 1.

LONG ILLNESS THE CAUSE

President Accepts Resignation with Regret—Truman H. Newberry of Michigan Will Be Appointed to Fill Vacancy.

Washington.—Secretary of the Navy Victor H. Metcalf Friday tendered his resignation to the president to take effect December 1 on account of ill health. Assistant Secretary of the Navy Truman H. Newberry will be named as Mr. Metcalf's successor.

For more than a year the fact that Mr. Metcalf had suffered serious illness has been well known at the navy department. Formerly of vigorous health, his friends expected that he would be able to regain his strength, but constantly recurring illness convinced him that the only course for him to pursue was to sever his connection with all active work.

Too Ill to Perform His Duties.

Mr. Metcalf has suffered from a nervous breakdown that has rendered it impossible for him to remain at his desk for any length of time, and the chronic nature of his trouble has caused him to abandon hope of recovery while burdened with the cares of office. On April 15 last, he went to California and to review the Atlantic battleship fleet. He took a long vacation, hoping to be permanently benefited thereby, returning here September 1. Upon his resumption of official duty, his illness promptly recurred and he frankly told the president that he could not remain in the cabinet.

Mr. Metcalf was thoroughly versed in naval matters, having served on the house committee on naval affairs while in congress. His first appointment under this administration was as secretary of commerce and labor, which he relinquished in order to accept the duties of secretary of the navy on December 17, 1906.

Praise from the President.

The president's letter accepting the resignation was as follows:

"My dear Mr. Metcalf: I accept your resignation with real reluctance, and only because you tell me that it is imperative that you must go on account of the state of your health. I had earnestly hoped that you would be able to continue with me throughout my term. I thank you warmly for your faithful and efficient service in both of the departments, at the head of which you have served under me. But, my dear Mr. Metcalf, you have always been more than the head of a department; you have been a cabinet minister upon whose aid and advice, and above all, on whose staunch and steadfast loyalty I could rely upon any and all occasions. No president could wish more loyal and hearty support than you have given me. I thank you for it. I shall miss you when you leave the cabinet, and I wish you well in whatever work you may undertake and wherever your life may lead.

"With regret, therefore, I accept your resignation to take effect upon the first of December."

ASST. SEC. OF THE NAVY NEWBERRY.

Newberry Good Man for Place.

Mr. Newberry had never filled any important public office prior to his appointment as assistant secretary of the navy November 1, 1905. Before that he was in business in Detroit, Mich. The intelligent interest he has displayed in connection with his post has caused much favorable comment. Mr. Newberry has entered into the spirit of naval improvement and has co-operated, whenever possible, in the development of naval matters. He will have an opportunity to use his personal prestige with the naval affairs committees of both houses in securing desired naval legislation.

FRANCIS J. HENEY IS SHOT

PROSECUTOR OF 'FRISCO BOODLERS BADLY WOUNDED.

Saloon Man Attempts to Kill Lawyer Because Latter Brought Out Fact He Was Ex-Convict.

San Francisco.—Francis J. Heney, a leading figure in the prosecution of municipal corruption in this city, was shot and seriously injured Friday by Morris Haas, a Jewish saloon-keeper, who had been accepted as a juror in a previous trial and afterwards removed, it having been shown by the prosecution that he was an ex-convict, a fact not brought out in his examination as a venireman.

The shooting occurred in Superior Judge Lawlor's courtroom during a recess in the trial of Abraham Ruef, on trial for the third time on the charge of bribery.

At six o'clock at night Mr. Heney was conscious. He said:

"I will live to prosecute him."

The physicians in attendance on Heney expressed the opinion that he would live. It had been ascertained that the bullet, which had entered the right cheek, had lodged under the left ear, and had not entered his brain, as at first feared. Mr. Heney was taken to the Lane hospital, where he is receiving the care of skilled surgeons.

When he was arrested, Haas said he shot Heney because he had ruined him. He is a married man and has four children. In a statement made to Police Captain Duke he said:

"Heney denounced me in public, which ruined my life and branded me as an ex-convict. It was an outrage. I am the wronged man. I do not care what becomes of me now. I have sacrificed myself not for my own honor, but for those who are situated like myself. I would not have brought my four children into the world to hear such a brand if I had known that the fact that I was an ex-convict would become known. Heney ruined me. That is why I shot him."

HIRES MEN TO KILL HER MOTHER

Cold-Blooded Plot of Chicago Woman Is Exposed.

Chicago. — Plotting matricide in the most cold-blooded manner, in order to obtain $7,300, May L. Otis, 36 years old, carried her plans to the point where she believed four days would see their fulfillment, then was arrested by the men she believed her fellow conspirators.

She was to point her mother out to the man she had hired to commit the crime, that he might make no mistake. She had paid over $100 cash and signed a note for $2,400 to procure the commission of the crime. She had outlined in detail how her mother was to be done to death and had warned him that she wanted a "good job" and did not want it to be "any ambulance case."

All her planning was due to the fact that her mother, in a recent will, had made Miss Otis her sole heir. The woman's supposed fellow conspirators were the head of a private detective agency and two city detectives.

Oil Rehearing Denied.

Chicago.—The petition by the United States government for a rehearing of the appeal of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana from the $29,240,000 fine of Judge Landis was overruled Tuesday by Judges Grosscup, Baker and Seaman in the United States circuit court of appeals. In a brief opinion, delivered by Judge Grosscup, the original opinion of the court, reversing Judge Landis' decision, was upheld.

HUNDREDS DIE IN A MINE

AWFUL RESULTS OF EXPLOSION IN GERMAN COLLIERY.

Dead Number 339—Efforts to Reach Their Bodies Are Frustrated by Fire.

Hamm, Westphalia, Germany, Nov. 13.—The greatest mine disaster in many years in Germany occurred Thursday morning at the Radbod mine, about three miles from this place. There was a heavy explosion in the mine about 4 a. m., and almost immediately the mine took fire.

Of 380 miners working under ground at the time only six escaped without injury. Thirty-five were taken out badly injured and 37 were dead when brought to the mouth of the pit. The remaining 302 have been given up for lost.

The explosion, which was unusually violent, destroyed one of the shafts, which had to be partly repaired before the rescue work was begun. In addition, the flames and smoke proved almost insurmountable obstacles in the early efforts of the rescuing parties. A special corps, composed of the men who rendered such valuable aid in the terrible mine disaster at Courrieres, France, in March of 1906, arrived upon the scene shortly before noon, but were unable to enter the mine, being forced to await the result of the determined efforts of the firemen to keep the flames in check.

Meantime heartrending scenes were being enacted at the mine when the dead and wounded were brought to the surface, and there were similar scenes in the town when the injured were transported through the streets to the hospitals.

At one o'clock the fire had made great headway, and later in the afternoon, after a consultation of the engineers, it was decided that any further attempts to rescue the entombed men were vain, owing to the impossibility of entering the galleries. At the same time an order was issued to flood the mine.

First reports indicated that the accident was the result of an explosion of coal dust, but the statements of the injured men render them improbable, and it is not clear just what caused it.

BANK EXAMINER IS DEAD.

E. B. Shaw Is Suddenly Stricken at Carroll, Ia.

Carroll, Ia.—The second tragedy in the affairs of the failed First National bank of Carroll, whose president, W. L. Culbertson, recently shot himself, occurred here Thursday in the death of the national bank examiner in charge, E. B. Shaw of West Union, Ia.

Although apparently in good health Wednesday night, he was found dying at eight o'clock in the morning when the clerk at his hotel sought to arouse him for breakfast. He had been stricken while undressing to retire, and had lain across the foot of the bed all night unconscious. He was removed to the hospital and there died at ten o'clock of hemorrhage of the brain.

Bold Attempt at Blackmail.

Denver, Col.—A woman giving her name as Mrs. H. C. Cones Monday afternoon compelled Mrs. Genevieve Chandler Phipps, divorced wife of Lawrence Phipps, the Pittsburg millionaire, to take her in her automobile to a bank for the purpose of getting $10,000 that she demanded of Mrs. Phipps on pain of being blown to pieces with dynamite. At the bank Mrs. Cones was overpowered by special officers and placed under arrest. She talked incoherently to the police and is thought to be insane.

KAISER WILLIAM CENSURED.

Members of German Reichstag Use Severe Language.

Berlin.—Emperor William never has been so severely judged by his parliament as he was Tuesday during the debate in the reichstag on the interpellations concerning the conversations published with the permission of the emperor in the London Daily Telegraph on October 28.

The criticisms of his majesty's court, his ministers and his majesty's treatment of the constitution, as well as of his freedom of speech, went to lengths that astonished observers acquainted with the traditional caution of the chamber in dealing with the personality of the sovereign. And the emperor seemed to have no defenders.

Chancellor von Buelow made an address lasting 15 minutes, but he lacked his usual spirit, and a person high in confidence is authority for the statement that he also had told the emperor that neither himself nor his successors could remain in office unless his majesty was more reserved. The house received his explanation in icy silence.

The conservatives, representing largely the landed nobility, were almost as relentless as the socialists, the radicals and the national liberals.

SIX CHINAMEN DROWNED.

Attempt to Smuggle Orientals from Canada is Disastrous.

Buffalo, N. Y.—A motor boat containing ten Chinamen and three white men was wrecked on the breakwall off the foot of Michigan street early Thursday. Six of the Chinamen were drowned or dashed to death against the rock-ribbed seawall. The four survivors were rescued by the crew of a police boat. The three white men escaped.

Mock Quong, one of the rescued Chinamen, speaks fairly good English, which he learned in a South Bend (Ind.) Sunday school class. He told the immigration inspectors that the ten Chinamen left Toronto a week ago and had been lodged in a barn on the Canadian side of the lake opposite Buffalo, awaiting a favorable opportunity to make a landing in the United States. Wednesday night they were taken to the lake by three white men and placed in a motor boat, which also had a rowboat in tow. They had been on the water about half an hour when they were wrecked.

EMPEROR OF CHINA DEAD.

Dowager Empress Also Said to Be Dying at Peking.

Peking.—The emperor of China was reported dying Saturday morning. It has, however, been impossible to secure official confirmation of this announcement. His majesty was transferred to the death chamber at two o'clock Friday afternoon. At that hour he was still breathing, it was said.

Two imperial edicts were issued from the palace Friday afternoon in quick succession. The first makes Prince Chun regent of the empire and the second appoints his son, Pu Wei, heir presumptive.

FATAL BOILER EXPLOSIONS.

Sergent, Ky.—In a boiler explosion at the Miller Lumber Company's plant at Pound, near Pound Gap Friday, four men were killed and four more severely injured.

Norton, Va.—Three men were killed outright, two were fatally injured and two others were seriously hurt in an explosion at a sawmill plant in Wise county Friday.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

Gored by Bull.

St. Charles.—Lying on a cot in the general hospital at Winona, the surgeons working heroically to stop the flow of blood from gaping wounds in her thigh and hip, Mrs. Thomas Griffith of Homer, Winona county, is the survivor of the most frightful experience that has ever befallen a resident of this vicinity.

Mrs. Griffith, who is the wife of a well-to-do farmer, was crossing a pasture accompanied by a small dog, when a bull which had never before displayed any dangerous tendencies stopped right in her path.

The dog barked and the bull charged at him full tilt. The dog quickly swerving to one side, however, the enraged beast turned upon Mrs. Griffith, and before the unfortunate woman had an opportunity to get out of his way, struck her full on the side with both horns, bearing her down and tearing frightful wounds through her thigh and hip.

Boy Drowned.

Eveleth.—William Rosilo, a ten-year-old boy, fell through the ice while playing on the Fayal mine pond. John Beason, a workman, tried to save him, but both were drowned. Joe Muhick, sixteen years old, who with Beason attempted to rescue the lad, had a very narrow escape.

It was the old story of venturing on the ice too early. Owing to the low temperature of the past few weeks a thin, sheet of ice has formed on all small bodies of water. On the Fayal pond it was quite extensive and tempted the boy. He was walking and sliding when the ice gave way and he fell through.

Boy Murderer.

Brainerd.—John Bushaway, Jr., the 10-year-old son of John Bushaway of West Brainerd, was instantly killed by Ralph Murray, the 11-year-old son of a neighbor.

The boys had quarreled and young Murray and a companion went to the house and got a rifle and loaded it, Murray then shooting Bushaway in the throat, killing him instantly. The only witness to the crime was Frank Bushaway, an 8-year-old brother of the victim.

The two Bushaway boys were piling brush across the street from the Murray home when the tragedy occurred.

Girl Shot in Play.

Hibbing.—Edna Geary, 12 years old, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Geary, was accidentally shot and killed while rehearsing with other children in an amateur play.

She was the "villioness" and Russell Barrett, aged 12, was the "hero."

While reciting the lines of the play, young Barrett aimed a gun, not supposed to be loaded, at the girl, and pulled the trigger. The little one fell dead.

The tragedy occurred at the home of W. C. Barrett, father of the boy, a livery man.

The play had progressed to the point where the villioness stole the "valuable papers."

Julius Is First.

St. Paul.—Julius A. Schmahl, secretary of state, set a good example to other state candidates by being the first to file an election expense account. He did not have to go far as the law prescribes that the accounts shall be filed in his office.

Mr. Schmahl states that he spent $834.75. Of this sum, $500 went to the republican state central committee; $50 to the Redwood county republican club; $50 for a filing fee, and the balance for railroad fare, hotel bills and incidentals.

May Be Adopted.

Minneapolis.—If ten counties are an indication of what the other seventy-five have done, the constitutional amendment providing for educational qualifications for county superintendents of schools is the only one of the four submitted at the last election that passed, although the good roads amendment came quite close to getting the necessary majority of the votes cast.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

Minneapolis.—Probably the most important offering which the Bijou Opera House in Minneapolis will present to the theatre-going public this season, is the famous musical comedy extravaganza, "Wine, Women and Song," which will be seen at that play house the week of November 15th., with Bonita as its star. This attraction went into New York for a limited engagement of four weeks at the New Circle Theatre. All New York was talking of her unique entertainment, and on Wednesday of the first week, the attraction to follow was cancelled, and Bonita's company remained at the theatre for over eight months.

BED-BOUND FOR MONTHS.

Hope Abandoned After Physicians' Consultation.

Mrs. Enos Sheerer, Yew and Washington Sts., Centralia, Wash., says: "For years I was weak and run down, could not sleep, my limbs swelled and the secretions were troublesome; pains were intense. I was last in bed for four months. Three doctors said there was no cure for me and I was given up to die. Being urged, I used Doan's Kidney Pills. Soon I was better and in a few weeks was about the house, well and strong again."

SEVERE HEMORRHOIDS

Sores, and Itching Eczema—Doctor Thought an Operation Necessary —Cuticura's Efficacy Proven.

"I am now 80 years old, and three years ago I was taken with an attack of piles (hemorrhoids), bleeding and protruding. The doctor said the only help for me was to go to a hospital and be operated on. I tried several remedies for months but did not get much help. During this time sores appeared which changed to a terrible itching eczema. Then I began to use Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills, injecting a quantity of Cuticura Ointment with a Cuticura Suppository Syringe. It took a month of this treatment to get me in a fairly healthy state and then I treated myself once a day for three months and, after that, once or twice a week. The treatments I tried took a lot of money, and it is fortunate that I used Cuticura. J. H. Henderson, Hopkinton, N. Y., Apr 26, 1907."

FUN FOR "HAPPY COUPLE."

Modern Wedding Described with Possibly Slight Exaggeration.

The young pair had so many friends that the police were quite unable to cope with the situation. The bride was headed up in a barrel and thrown into the river, while the groom was bound and gagged and suspended by his feet from a tall tree.

At this point the military was called out and arrived at double quick just in time to save the baggage from being pasted over with insulting placards.

A number of shot were exchanged.

At a late hour the city was reported quiet and the authorities, though not denying the popularity of the high contracting parties, were confident that there would be no more violence. —Puck.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Subscription price $1.00 per year in advance. If not paid in advance $1.50

The Democratic party thinks they have a Moses to lead them out of the wilderness, and defeat Steenerson for congres, in the person of Ole Sageng. But the next time Ole gets into the game he wont get along so fine, for people will be "next" to that little plowing deal, and them rotten circulars, and he will get a holt plowed all on him and his rotten political scheams, that he can drive his four horse plow team through, plow and all.

Mr. Oneil can now retir on his lurels. He has conducted three campaigns against Guvernor Johnson in Red Lake county, but has never yet brought the voter to believe that his candidate should be preferred.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

The above is about as fair a statement as the Gazette has been in the habit of making in in the campaign just closed but as a matter of fact Mr. O'Niel had nothing to do with the running of the republican campaign in Red Lake county two years ago, and Johnson carried the county by 1030 votes above Cole. This year with O'Nell as chairman he only carried it by 310 votes above Jacobson. Which one made the best campaign O'Neal, or the other fellows?

NOTED ANAGRAMS.

Ingenious Transmutation of Names of Well Known Persons.

Anagrams that transmute the names of well known men and women are often startlingly appropriate. What could be better in this way than these announcements, evolved from two great statesmen's names when the reins of power changed hands: Gladstone, "G leads not!" Disraeli, "I lead, sir!" Quite as happy is the comment on the devoted nursing of Florence Nightingale, whose name yields "Flit on, cheering angel." Among those that are most often quoted we may mention Horatio Nelson, "Honor est a Nilo;" Charles James Stuart, "Claims Arthur's seat;" Pilate's question, "Quid est veritas?" ("What is truth?"), answered by "Est vir qui adest" ("It is the man here present"); Swedish nightingale, "Sing high, sweet Linda;" David Livingstone, "D. V., go and visit Nile;" the Marquis of Ripon (who resigned the grand mastership of Freemasons when he became a Romanist), "R. I. P., quoth Freemasons;" Charles, prince of Wales, "All France calls. Oh, help!" Sir Roger Charles Doughty Tichborne, baronet, "You horrid butcher Orton, biggest rascal here," and many shorter specimens, such as telegraph, "great help;" astronomers, "no more stars" and "moon starers;" one hug, "enough;" editors, "so tired;" tournament, "to run at men;" penitentiary, "nay, I repent;" old England, "golden land;" revolution, "to love ruin;" fashionable, "one-half bias;" lawyers, "sly ware;" midshipman, "mind his map;" poorhouse, "Oh, sour hope;" Presbyterian, "best in prayer;" sweetheart, "there we sat;" matrimony, "into my arm."—Chambers' Journal.

Air and Water "Cures."

It is a remarkable fact that, as with various natural so called "mineral waters" so with various "airs" which people find beneficial, no one has yet clearly and decisively shown, in the first place, whether they exert any chemical effect of a special kind on the people who seem to benefit by drinking the one or breathing the other. Still less has any one shown what is the particular chemical ingredient of the air or of the water of any given resort which exerts the beneficial effect attributed to that air or that water.—Sir E. Ray Lankester in London Telegraph.

A Habit He Won't Contract.

A man who signs himself "A Son of Rest" sends us the following:

"Several people have asked me why I never work. I take this means of replying to all.

"The habit of working is like a habit of taking dope. If a man is a dope fiend and stops it he dies. Now, if a man gets the habit of working and then stops it he starves to death. Some thing I shall never contract [illegible]."

ROYAL RAGE.

A Story of Emperor William II. and His Mother.

In a character sketch of Emperor William II. in the American Magazine Octave Mirbeau tells an interesting story of the kaiser's relations with his royal mother. The incident was related by Prince Bismarck one night when he had been drinking too much. "And no one," remarks M. Mirbeau, "was more brutally sincere than Bismarck was under the influence of wine." Here is a part of the story:

"The relations between William and his mother, the Empress Frederick, became at last so bitter that William placed spies about her, even in the bedroom of his invalid father.

"Through one of these spies William learned of the existence of a journal which his father had kept for some years. Frederick had a taste for writing, and the fact that there was coldness between him and his son led William to fear that this secret journal might contain some criticism of his conduct.

"The empress, however, was clever enough to conceal the diary before her husband's death. Eluding the surveillance of her son, she sent the papers to her mother, Queen Victoria, or to her brother, then Prince of Wales, I don't remember which.

"Hardly had his father drawn his last breath when William over the dead body performed his first official act.

"It was to demand of his widowed mother the journal, which he termed a 'memorial.'

"The empress feigned ignorance. William insisted. He spoke as master, giving his mother the order to obey. She persisted in declaring that she knew nothing of the papers.

"'Well,' he commanded purple with wrath, 'you will remain under close arrest until you have obeyed me!'

"Bismarck, arriving at Potsdam two hours after this, found the palace surrounded by squadrons of armed cavalry.

"The emperor, whom he found still exalted, told the old chancellor how he had met the disobedience of his mother.

"'And she need not expect pity or consideration until she has obeyed me,' he declared. 'You understand that, Mr. Chancellor? Until she has obeyed me!'

"The pupil had gone much too far. Bismarck saw at once that the buffoonery continued might mar the whole of William's reign. Later in life, he said, he used to wonder how he kept from laughing in his sovereign's face.

"What he did was to receive William's news with deferential silence and later, when the emperor was calmer, show him that his course was sure to meet with general disapproval. There was a way, he thought, of proceeding much more vigorously and at the same time efficaciously. Why not rather cut down the income of the empress, suspend her appanages?

"'I know her majesty,' said the good Bismarck. 'She has pride. Forced arrest she can brave out, accepting it as a sort of martyrdom, but the money, sire, the money! Who can resist money?'

"Further, he laid tactful stress upon the probable representations of England. 'Is it really the moment, sire?'

"The kaiser, becoming appeased, listened to Bismarck's counsel. The arrest of the empress was removed. The officers led their cavalry back to quarters, and William turned his attention to the details of his father's obsequies, which he wished to be most fastidious."

The Garrote.

The garrote is a thing that a man of nervous temperament should look at. Once seen it never can be forgotten. Just to think of it months afterward brings up a choking sensation which makes one long to tear away his collar and breathe the free air as deeply as he can. It rests upon a raised platform, an ordinary straight backed chair, with thin iron clasps on the elbows and legs of the chair. These are for the arms and ankles of the condemned criminal. At the top of the back of the chair is a band of iron, one end of which swings out so as to admit of a neck being inserted. This band snaps around in place, and all is ready. A twirl of a crank in back and as the band crushes the neck back a pin pierces the medulla oblongata.—New York Sun.

Barrie's Critic.

J. M. Barrie some years ago was persuaded to take the chair at a Burns celebration in Scotland. He was extremely silent and stole away at the earliest opportunity. Next week appeared in the National Observer a humorous article entitled "Mr. Barrie In the Chair," in which Mr. Barrie's lack of social tact was held up to ridicule. Many people thought the writer had gone too far and protested. But the author of the article was Mr. Barrie himself.

A Poor Bath.

A Frenchman was talking in New York about the excellent bathing beaches of America.

"There are no such beaches in Europe," said he. "And the sea over there is not so pleasant to bathe in. Frequently, you know, great pipes empty sewage into it. They who stay late for the bathing in Nice, for instance, swim about among lemon peel, orange skins, melon rinds, soaked but still buoyant newspapers—fearful rubbish. I once bathed in Nice. The Mediterranean was warm and pleasant, but it resembled soup or something worse. I heard an American after coming out say to the bathing master:

"'Look here, friend, where do strangers go for a wash after bathing here?'"

How We Fall Asleep.

It is not generally known that the body falls asleep in sections. The muscles of the legs and arms lose their power long before those which support the head and these last sooner than the muscles which sustain the back. The sense of sight sleeps first, then the sense of taste, next the sense of smell, next that of hearing and lastly that of touch. HIS MISTAKE.

It Was Costly, but Cured Him of an Irritating Habit.

Bunsen was always a great kidder He isn't any more.

Bunsen is a lawyer, although, of course, he is known by a different name. Don't ever get the idea, though, that this didn't really happen just because Bunsen's real nomination isn't mentioned

As we were saying, Bunsen used to be pretty much of a kidder. He would even kid his own patient little wife. Those who care to read us down a little farther will learn why he ceased to be a kidder.

One evening last week when Bunsen got home his wife had a new hat to show him. It was some hat. Anybody could have seen that it was the final phrase in female headgear.

But Bunsen started in to make fun of it. He said it looked as if it had been trimmed by a cross eyed milliner on an empty stomach. And he made a lot of other disparaging remarks that were extremely harassing to poor Mrs. Bunsen.

"D'je buy it sight unseen?" he inquired "Say, how much do they pay the girl that sold you that? She ought to have a raise Any girl who could put that one over a customer must be something of a smooth saleslady, I'm here to remark."

Mrs. Bunsen was almost in tears Bunsen had to go into the other room to have a quiet laugh at her expense. Oh, he was the great kidder, all right.

The next day, though, he had forgotten all about the hat.

The day after that he was reminded of his little jokefest. Mrs. Bunsen handed him a slip of paper when he came home to get his victuals that evening. It was a bill for retrimming that hat: $18.34 it came to.

Bunsen paid it without a murmur and said the revised edition of the hat was just exactly right. He isn't making fun of hats any more.—Cleveland Plain Dealer

A SURGICAL OPERATION

If there is any one thing that a woman dreads more than another it is a surgical operation.

We can state without fear of a contradiction that there are hundreds, yes, thousands, of operations performed upon women in our hospitals which are entirely unnecessary and many have been avoided by

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

For proof of this statement read the following letters.

Mrs. Barbara Base, of Kingman, Kansas, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"For eight years I suffered from the most severe form of female troubles and was told that an operation was my only hope of recovery. I wrote Mrs. Pinkham for advice, and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has saved my life and made me a well woman."

Mrs. Arthur R. House, of Church Road, Moorestown, N. J., writes:

"I feel it is my duty to let people know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered from female troubles, and last March my physician decided that an operation was necessary. My husband objected, and urged me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and to-day I am well and strong."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, and backache.

"The Last Best West"

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

The government of Canada now gives to every actual settler 160 acres of wheat-growing land free and an additional 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. The 300,000 contented American settlers making their homes in Western Canada is the best evidence of the superiority of that country. They are becoming rich, growing from 25 to 50 bushels wheat to the acre; 60 to 110 bushels oats and 45 to 60 bushels barley, besides having splendid herds of cattle raised on the prairie grass. Dairying is an important industry.

The crop of 1908 still keeps Western Canada in the lead. The world will soon look to it as its food-producer.

"The thing which most impressed us was the magnitude of the country that is available for agricultural purposes."—National Editorial Correspondence, 1908.

Their First Thanksgiving

By CARLOS BAYARD.

"CAN nothing be done?" asked Carolina anxiously.

Vance Greenway shook his head.

"Not yet, dear," he explained. "I have considered the matter carefully and I think it will be best to wait."

"It won't make any difference in our marriage?" she pleaded.

"We can get married to-morrow," he declared. "I want to go to town and get to work on my own hook."

"There is nothing to prevent," assented the girl. "It is not as though I had a lot of relatives to consult."

"Then let's be married and get out of the way. It will make such a lot of talk," pleaded Vance.

He found when he left the girl that he had not exaggerated. Already the news that David Greenway had disowned his son had spread through the village, and the circumstantial reports of the row which had terminated in the dismissal had gained a wealth of detail in its rapid travel.

David Greenway was the richest man in Greenvale, and Vance had already made rapid advancement in the local bank; an advancement not altogether unconnected with his father's influence as the largest stockholder.

He had resigned his position that morning, and the following day, after a quiet wedding ceremony in the parsonage of the church, he and Carol set out for the city where Vance would start anew.

It was not an easy matter to find a position, even with the recommendation which the cashier of the home bank had given him, but in time Vance found a place, and they settled down to make a home in a tiny flat whose five rooms were scarcely larger than the dining room of the Greenway mansion.

The months sped by all too fast, and even when Vance had earned a raise in salary, and had been advanced to a more responsible position, she would not move.

"We'll save the rest," she declared. "It does seem so cozy here, dear. It's our first home. We shall have much to be thankful for next week."

"That's so," agreed Vance. "By the way, I've got an invitation to Thanksgiving dinner, so don't lay in a turkey."

Carol's face fell. She had been planning to make their first Thanksgiving a notable one, but she tried to smile her satisfaction at Vance's announcement.

Vance would make no explanation other than to say that the invitation came from an old friend, and the evening before the holiday he came home early and helped her pack her prettiest things in a suit case.

Not even when they arrived at the station did he enlighten her as to their destination, but the next morning, as the train neared the old home and she began to catch glimpses of familiar scenes through the frost-traced car windows, the tears came unbidden to her eyes.

As they encountered the curious glances of old acquaintances, she was glad that she had let Vance persuade her to purchase a set of furs. She wanted to look her best for his sake, but she did not realize the attractive picture she made as the sharp breeze brought fresh color to her cheeks and lent sparkle to the brown eyes.

Vance, sitting beside her, clasped his hands over hers.

"We shall have much to be thankful for this first Thanksgiving," he said tenderly. "But most of all I am thankful that you are my wife, dear."

She smiled her answer, too close to tears to speak, but as they turned in at a driveway she found her voice.

"There is some mistake," she cried. "Surely you are not going to your father's."

"Surely we are," he said with a happy laugh. "Do you suppose that any other Thanksgiving dinner would tempt me from our own home?"

"But—you have made up?" she asked.

"We never really quarreled," he explained. "I was dissatisfied at the bank. I wanted to be sure of myself; to know that on my own effort I could make my way. Father and I planned the dramatic scene for the benefit of the public. I did not tell you, for I wanted him to see that it was for myself and not my money that you cared. I was to have a trial for six months. The probation ended last week."

"And you are coming back home to live?" she asked. Vance nodded.

"There is my father waiting to welcome us to our new home," he said. "The honeymoon ends with our Thanksgiving, and dad has a new daughter—the best that ever was—to make him thankful, too."

SOME REMARKS FROM MINNESOTA EDITORS.

What They Think of Western Canada.

A party of editors from a number of cities and towns of Minnesota recently made a tour of Western Canada, and having returned to their homes they are now telling in their respective newspapers of what they saw on their Canadian trip. The West St. Paul Times recalls the excursion of the Minnesota editors from Winnipeg to the Pacific Coast ten years ago. Referring to what has happened in the interval the writer says: "Thousands of miles of new railway lines have been built, and the development of the country has made marvelous strides. Millions of acres, then lying in their wild and untouched state, have since been transferred into grain fields. Towns have sprung up as if by the wand of a magician, and their development is now in full progress. It is a revelation, a record of conquest by settlement that is remarkable."

The Hutchinson Leader characterizes Western Canada as "a great country undeveloped. The summer outing," it says, "was an eye-opener to every member of the party, even those who were on the excursion through Western Canada ten years ago, over considerable of the territory covered this year, being amazed at the progress and advancement made in that short space of time. The time will come when Western Canada will be the bread-basket of the world. It was a delightful outing through a great country of wonderful possibilities and resources."

Since the visit of these editors the Government has revised its land regulations and it is now possible to secure 160 acres of wheat land at $3.00 an acre in addition to the 160 acres that may be homesteaded.

The crops of 1908 have been splendid, and reports from the various districts show good yields, which at present prices will give excellent profits to the farmers.

From Milestone, Saskatchewan, there are reported yields of thirty bushels of spring wheat to the acre, while the average is about 20 bushels. The quality of grain to be shipped from this point will be about 600,000 bushels. Information regarding free lands and transportation will be freely given by the Canadian Government Agents.

WARNED OF THE CYCLONE.

Telephone Just a Few Seconds Ahead of High Wind.

Once upon a time a Kansas zephyr broke loose and meandered about the country, picking up various things. Bill Baumgartner's telephone, 20 miles away, rang:

"Is that you, Bill?" yelled an excited voice.

"Yes. What's the matter?"

"This is Frank. We've got a cyclone down here, and it's headed your way. Look out! I—" Frank's voice broke off suddenly. Bill heard a crash and a sputtering, then all was silence. He gathered up his family and rushed them to a deep ravine. They were just in time to dodge a funnel-shaped cloud that wrecked the house, picked up his barn, two cows, and a couple of miles of fence.—Hampton's Broadway Magazine.

UPWARD START

After Changing from Coffee to Postum.

Many a talented person is kept back because of the interference of coffee with the nourishment of the body.

This is especially so with those whose nerves are very sensitive, as is often the case with talented persons. There is a simple, easy way to get rid of coffee evils and a Tenn. lady's experience along these lines is worth considering. She says:

"Almost from the beginning of the use of coffee it hurt my stomach. By the time I was fifteen I was almost a nervous wreck, nerves all unstrung, no strength to endure the most trivial thing, either work or fun.

"There was scarcely anything I could eat that would agree with me. The little I did eat seemed to give me more trouble than it was worth. I finally quit coffee and drank hot water, but there was so little food I could digest, I was literally starving; was so weak I could not sit up long at a time.

"It was then a friend brought me a hot cup of Postum. I drank part of it and after an hour I felt as though I had had something to eat — felt strengthened. That was about five years ago, and after continuing Postum in place of coffee and gradually getting stronger, to-day I can eat and digest anything I want, walk as much as I want. My nerves are steady.

"I believe the first thing that did me any good and gave me an upward start, was Postum, and I use it altogether now instead of coffee." "There's a Reason."

Truth and Quality

appeal to the Well-Informed in every walk of life and are essential to permanent success and creditable standing. Accordingly, it is not claimed that Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is the only remedy of known value, but one of many reasons why it is the best of personal and family laxatives is the fact that it cleanses, sweetens and relieves the internal organs on which it acts without any debilitating after effects and without having to increase the quantity from time to time.

It acts pleasantly and naturally and truly as a laxative, and its component parts are known to and approved by physicians, as it is free from all objectionable substances. To get its beneficial effects always purchase the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists.

RHEUMATISM PRESCRIPTION

The increased use of whiskey for rheumatism is causing considerable discussion among the medical fraternity. It is an almost infallible cure when mixed with certain other ingredients and taken properly. The following formula is effective: "To one-half pint of good whiskey add one ounce of Toris Compound and one ounce of Syrup Sarsaparilla Compound. Take in tablespoonful doses before each meal and before retiring."

Toris compound is a product of the laboratories of the Globe Pharmaceutical Co., Chicago, but it as well as the other ingredients can be had from any good druggist.

VOL. VIII. SUNBEAM, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1908. NO. 35.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

Bank Protection.

Mankato.—Within two months there will be in operation among the country banks of Minnesota a new plan for the protection of bank deposits. It is a plan devised by bankers instead of by politicians, and those who are fathering it firmly believe that it will actually achieve all the beneficial results which were promised by the advocates of the bank guarantee scheme. Throughout the recent campaign, plans for the new idea have been quietly carried forward.

W. D. Willard, cashier of the First National bank was in Minneapolis. He is chairman of a committee appointed last spring by the bankers of the second congressional district of Minnesota to organize the banks in that district for the operation of an independent system of examination along the line of that now in operation in the twin cities. Sickness in the committee has delayed its work to some extent, but it is probable that the first of the new year will see the independent bank examination under way in the second district.

Amendments Fail.

St. Paul.—Nineteen counties that have given their official vote on the tax amendment leave it far short of the necessary majority of all the votes cast in those counties. These nineteen counties include the three big counties. Ramsey county gave the amendment just a little below a majority and the usual proportion against it. St. Louis county gave it only a small vote, with a large vote against it. But Hennepin county gave it the worst set back, for they were so busy voting for city officials, getting acquainted with the new knobs on their voting machines that they forgot to vote on the amendment. Only one of each four that voted cast an affirmative vote, and only about one of every sixteen cast a negative vote.

Famous Woods on Fire.

Chandler.—A forest fire has been raging in Lost Timber, west of this village and has destroyed a large part of the timber which is widely known because of the fact that under their protection the Jesse James band of desperadoes made escape after the famous Northfield robbery of Sept. 6, 1876.

The origin of the fire has not been discovered. Hunters may have started the blaze or it may have been set by farmer boys.

Lost Timber is in a sheltered portion of the long range of hills known as the Coteau del Prairie which extends for nearly 100 miles northwest from this village into the Dakotas.

Wheat to Germany.

Duluth.—Germany bought Minnesota and Dakota wheat today for shipment to Hamburg. There was much secrecy about the transaction. The first report was that a Minneapolis firm made the sale. The Peavy company did not confirm it. The Van Dusen-Harrington company said they did not sell it, but that five loads were sold to go down the lakes from Duluth. It was finally learned that the Ames-Brookes company sold the wheat, five boat loads in all, measuring canal boat measurement, which equals about 40,000 bushels. This is a trivial quantity, considering the mammoth proportions of the grain trade as a whole.

Drowned.

Duluth.—While skating on the artificial lake of the Great Northern Power company at 3 o'clock, Frank McLeod, aged twelve, and Ralph Haynes, aged twelve, were drowned. The boys were close together when the ice gave way and both went down and were drowned before help could be given them. The Haynes boy was a son of John F. Haynes, cashier of the First National Bank of Carlton. The bodies were recovered an hour later.

NEWS NOTES.

St. Paul.—W. E. McEwen, state oil inspector, was not informed of his appointment as state labor commissioner until the governor called him into his office.

St. Paul.—Henry Bonn, 104 South Robert street, who came to St. Paul about forty years ago from Philadelphia, was found dead on the floor by his brother.

Minneapolis.—At the Bijou opera house soon will appear Mr. Joseph O'Mara in a new melodrama entitled "Peggy Machree." Mr. O'Mara is a native of Ireland, and one of the sweetest singers that ever came from the "ould sod." His appearance in London was a tremendous success and staid old Philadelphia went wild over him. He is a student of old Irish songs and introduces several.

Red Wing.—Knute L. Haas, aged eighty-three years, as the result of a quarrel with his neighbor, Knute Hendrickson, seventy-five years old, lies at his home near Zumbrota in a serious condition. It is feared he will not recover.

Erskine.—The county division fight is to be gone all over again, for the people filed with Governor Johnson a petition asking for a vote of the people on the proposition of creating a new county with Erskine as the first county seat.

Duluth.—The authorities here have under arrest Charles Wood, who says he is a nephew of a Milwaukee hotel man named Alex Genard, whom they suspect was one of the two holdup men who murdered Brakeman Connolly at Proctor.

Brooten.—Roberts Bros., St. Paul contractors, have finished laying the steel on the Soo line from here to Duluth and have withdrawn their last establishment from the field of operations, preparatory for delivery to the railroad company.

Stillwater.—Orders for binder twine for next harvest are pouring into the state prison at a rate of six to eight cars daily and a force of clerks is listing them. These orders are being received from clubs of farmers and individual farmers of the state.

St. Paul.—Mary E. Marsh has filed a $20,000 damage suit against the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railway company, alleging that while she was traveling from Des Moines to St. Paul the coach in which she was riding was derailed, she being severely injured.

St. Paul.—St. Paul and Minneapolis banks have been experimenting quietly several months with a system for independent bank examination, which, it is claimed, will result in the establishment of Twin City financial institutions on a firm and impregnable basis.

St. Paul.—Helplessly drunk and claiming that he had been robbed of $10 a man whose name the police did not obtain was picked up on the sidewalk on Jackson street between Sixth and Seventh street and taken to the central station. Later he was released.

St. Paul.—Two young well-dressed youths, both armed with revolvers, held up Otto Lindberg, a clerk in the grocery store of C. Nelson, 808 Sixteenth avenue south, at the point of their guns, and rifled the cash drawer of $10.19. The highwaymen then escaped.

East Grand Forks.—A fire drill in the big Central school prevented a disastrous panic. The blaze broke out in the lower portion of the building and soon filled the rooms with smoke. Under perfect control 700 school children marched from the building and not one was hurt. The fire damage was not large.

Faribault.—Harry Opright was acquitted on the charge of manslaughter in the first degree. Young Opright got into a drunken quarrel and struck a stranger in the face, from which he died a week later. Self-defense was the defendant's plea. After being out three hours the jury this evening brought in a verdict of not guilty.

Stewartville.—John Gunnefson, a prominent Salem farmer, who has been confined for some years in the state hospital for the insane at Rochester, made his escape from that institution a few nights ago and was found unconscious by the roadside in Rock Dell, six miles from his home and twenty-two miles from Rochester. He is now lying in a precarious condition at his brother's house.

Minneapolis.—Miss Beulah Poynter, star, actress and author, will be seen at the Bijou the week of November 29th in her own dramatization of Mary J. Holmes' popular and widely read book, "Lena Rivers." The piece, as a play, is less than three years old, yet it leaped into such instant popularity that at one time there were three companies touring the country in it.

St. Paul.—State Treasurer Dinehart received from the United States government a draft for $20,361, being Minnesota's 5 per cent of federal lands sold in the state during the last year. The money received goes into the internal improvement fund, which with yesterday's addition now amounts to $51,000, and will be spent in the improvement of highways, including roads and bridges.

Hibbing.—Dan Larson, a nineteen-year-old boy, accidentally shot and killed himself in the woods south of Hibbing. With a boy named Leon Labreque he had started hunting with a team. They left the team several miles south of town and started out through the woods. In climbing over a windfall Larson pulled the gun after him. One barrel was discharged and he was instantly killed.

CHILDREN CONTRACT PLAGUE

FOUR HAVE FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE IN DANVILLE, PA.

Officials Believe Spread of Contagion Will Be Checked—Cattle Shipments Are Stopped.

Washington.—Alarming results following the outbreak of a contagious foot and mouth disease in New York and Pennsylvania, causing those states to be quarantined against interstate shipments of cattle, etc., were shown Friday in advices which reached Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, stating that four children in Danville, Pa., had contracted the disease.

A rigid investigation is in progress in Danville and elsewhere to determine whether others have become similarly affected. The officials believe that the spread of the contagion will be checked, although admitting that the situation is grave and will require energetic and concerted action by the state and federal authorities.

New York, Nov. 21.—Cattle shipments to foreign ports from New York and Philadelphia were brought to an abrupt close Friday by the cattle quarantine established in this state and in Pennsylvania on account of the outbreak of the foot and mouth disease. The quarantine does not affect ports outside of New York and Philadelphia, except as to cattle from the two states affected by the ruling. Western cattle may still be shipped abroad from either Boston or Baltimore.

Buffalo, N. Y. — Business at the stock yards here was completely tied up when at a meeting of the East Buffalo Livestock association Friday night, the members adopted a resolution calling on the railroads to cancel all orders for shipments of cattle or swine to or through Buffalo. The association formally approved the stringent measures of quarantine used by Chief Melvin of Washington and Commissioner Pearson of the state department of agriculture. Two cases of foot and mouth disease were found Friday on a Niagara county farm and one infected herd in Erie county was destroyed.

London. — Confidence is expressed here that the energetic action of the American officials soon will stamp out the foot and mouth disease. Officials are not alarmed concerning the possibility of a beef shortage. In this connection John Burns, president of the local government board, called attention to the rapidly growing consumption in England of home-grown cattle.

CAIRO TRACTION DEAL.

McKinley Syndicate Is Given City and Interurban Franchises.

Cairo, Ill.—The Cairo city council Thursday granted a 50-year interurban franchise and a 20-year street railway franchise to the McKinley syndicate. This syndicate has already bought the local electric street railway, the electric light plant, and the Cairo City Gas Company.

An interurban line will be built to connect Cairo with Mounds, Mound City and Villa Ridge, and will later extend to St. Louis.

Insane Farmer Kills Nephew.

Danville, Ky.—Hugh Thompson, a wealthy young farmer, became suddenly insane Thursday and shot and killed his nephew, Frederick Garrison, aged 18 years. The boy after being shot fired one shot at his uncle, the bullet lodging in a lower limb. The wound, it is believed, will prove fatal because of the large amount of blood lost. Thompson had only recently been released from an insane asylum.

EMPEROR WILLIAM YIELDS.

Promises People to Conform to Constitutional Methods.

Berlin.—Warned by the angry tide of popular feeling that swept the empire from end to end, Emperor William Tuesday yielded to the nation and promised henceforth to conform himself to constitutional methods of conducting the policies of Germany.

The climax to the public utterances of the emperor was reached in an interview which he gave to an Englishman and which was published in the London Daily Telegraph on October 28. As the outcome of this the whole country was aroused; the reichstag indorsed the attitude of many of its prominent members when they denounced the sovereign, and Chancellor von Buelow, while he attempted to smooth away the affair, undertook to communicate to his majesty a straightforward and unvarnished statement of how the German people viewed his intervention in affairs of state.

The interview between the emperor and the imperial chancellor took place at the new palace in Potsdam Tuesday morning and at its conclusion the emperor made formal promise to his people that in the future he would not act except through the chancellor and his associate ministers.

MINE HORROR IN MONTANA.

Nine Men Believed to Have Lost Their Lives at Red Lodge.

Butte, Mont.—Fire Friday morning in the fourth drift east from No. 2 slope of the Northwestern Improvement Company's mine at Red Lodge caused the death of nine miners. The bodies of three have been recovered. Six are missing and there is no doubt that they are dead.

Seven men were taken from the working at one p. m. in a half-dead condition and are now in the hospital. Members of the fire department and 50 volunteers then started the work of rescue and within half an hour the skips were running down the fourth entry and a hundred men were loaded on the cars and brought to the surface, many of them completely exhausted.

LOOKOUT INN IS BURNED.

Famous Hotel on Mountain Top Destroyed by Flames.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—Famous old Lookout Inn, on the crest of Lookout mountain, was burned to the ground late Tuesday, together with all its contents. The owners, Messrs. Jung and Shommotiaski, stated that a deal had just been consummated for the sale of the inn property, for a consideration of $135,000, and but for the fire the deal would have been closed Tuesday.

Aside from the hotel, four cottages and their contents were destroyed, entailing a loss estimated at $16,000.

The hotel was completed in 1889 and had been visited by persons of note from all over the world.

JOHN D. IS QUIZZED

SHARP CROSS-EXAMINATION OF STANDARD OIL CHIEF.

IMMENSE PROFITS SHOWN

Earnings of the Octopus in 1907 Were About $80,000,000—Witness' Memory Concerning Rebates Is Not Good.

New York. — For over five hours Friday John D. Rockefeller, witness for the defense in the government suit to dissolve the Standard Oil Company, faced an unceasing fire of questions from the federal counsel, Frank B. Kellogg, and when adjournment was taken until Monday the head of the oil combine was still being cross-examined on the charges that the company in its early days accepted rebates to the disadvantage of its rivals.

Mr. Rockefeller's cross-examination will probably not be concluded until late Tuesday, as Mr. Kellogg made it known that he would inquire into every detail of the company's business.

Enormous Earnings Shown.

The enormous earning power of the oil combination was sharply brought out in Friday's hearing when Mr. Rockefeller, after stating that the Standard had paid dividends amounting to $40,000,000 in 1907, said it had earned as much more and that this was added to the company's surplus, which was stated by the government's counsel to be $300,000,000. It was further stated by Mr. Kellog that the company within the last eight years had earned nearly half a billion dollars.

The course of Mr. Rockefeller's testimony in the hands of government counsel ran not so smoothly as on Thursday when he told his story under the direction of friendly counsel, but the rapid fire interrogations of the prosecutor were always met with unshaken imperturbability and readiness to answer except when, as he explained:

"It is quite impossible for me to remember after 35 years. I do not recall."

Remembers Only One Rebate.

Mr. Rockefeller was questioned closely regarding rebates which the Standard was charged with receiving, but with the exception of the agreement with the Pennsylvania railroad, which, Mr. Rockefeller explained, gave the Standard a rebate because it effected an equalization of oil shipments, he could not recall any other rebates, though he thought it was likely that he might have heard of it at the time.

The president of the Standard Oil Company when he learned that the government counsel would not be able to conclude the cross-examination by Saturday night, suggested an adjournment until Monday, which was agreed to by counsel.

Cross-Examined by Kellogg.

New York. — With the telling of the story of the first score of years of the industrial development of the Standard Oil Company, the testimony of John D. Rockefeller, president of the oil combine, on direct examination in the federal suit to dissolve the Standard Company, was brought to an unexpected close Thursday afternoon.

The head of the Standard told of the processes and causes of the company's growth up to the trust agreement of 1882 and, after he identified the parties to that agreement, counsel for the defense announced that Mr. Rockefeller had concluded his direct testimony and requested an adjournment until Friday.

Friday found Mr. Rockefeller on the witness stand under the sharp fire of the cross-examination of Frank B. Kellogg, special assistant attorney general, prosecuting the case for the government. The cross-examination by the government will be confined to the period from 1862 to 1882, except where the testimony has direct bearing on developments in the company's affairs in its later period.

New Revolution in Hayti.

Port au Prince, Hayti.—Gen. Antoine Simon, commander of the south for 20 years, having refused to comply with the recent request of President Nord Alexis to come to Port au Prince and confer with the president on the political situation, has been declared a rebel.

The revolutionary movement appears to be serious, as Gen. Simon is in the possession of arms and ammunition. Communication with the south is interrupted.

COUNTY DIVISION.

The first petition for the removal of the county seat from Red Lake to Thief River Falls has been found. It was found in old cupboard in the supream court rooms in St. Paule, but how it got from County Auditor O'Briens office to St. Paul will never be known, but the old rotten cat has been dug up and is again ready to transact business at the old stand. The supream court rendered a desison on November 20th, dismissing all proceedings had on the new petition, and placed the whole matter of acting on the old petition in the hands of the county Commissioners to act upon the first petition, which takes the whol matter back to the starting point, on the first petition, which may not now contain signature enough to make it a legal petition. This action will likely stir up a sentitement in the north eastern part of the county, that will submit a proposition to divide the county at the next general election, as they can not get a fair representation on that county board, as long as that county seat removel is before the County Commissioners. But the two north Commissione districts can divide this county, and choose their own lines, as long as they leave twelve townships to the southern part of the county, for they have a majority of the votes

No Fiction.

It was a clerk in a Detroit bookstore of whom a prim matron demanded a book for her son. "No fiction, please," she explained, "but absolute, literal truth, without unnecessary verbiage or absurdly fanciful pictures."

"Well, madam"— The bookseller paused, his eye running over his shelves; then! with a flash of inspiration, he took down a volume. "I should think this might meet your requirements." he said, and he handed her a popular geometry.

Feminine Fortitude.

Comparisons of the relative fortitude of men and women are idle as odious. Parallel lines never meet, as we all know. Still, no man ever yet smiled with the toothache, while women have been known to manifest continued gayety under the trying combination of new shoes, a violent headache and a pin sticking straight into the shivering spine.—Exchange.

George Eliot's Savonarola.

Savonarola is one of the most striking characters in George Eliot's great historical novel "Romola," the scene of which is in Florence and the period that of Savonarola's career. The idea of writing the book occurred to the novelist while on a visit to Florence, and on a second visit to the city, in 1861, she began to carry out her project. The subject and design were foreign to the author's genius, but she spared no pains in making a thorough study of the locality, the people and the literature of the Italian renaissance for the purposes of her story. In her own words, the work "plowed into her" more than any of her books. She began it, she says, as a young woman and finished it as an old woman. Her picture of Florence and Savonarola is undeniably impressive, and some critics declare "Romola" to be George Eliot's greatest novel and the character of Savonarola one of the finest delineations.—Pearson's.

Superlatives.

Dr Johnson says in his "Grammar of the English Tongue," "The comparison of adjectives is very uncertain and being much regulated by commodiousness of utterance, is not easily reduced to rules."

Then he quotes passages from "Paradise Lost" in which the words "[illegible]" and "powerfullest" are found, and a passage from "Samson Agonistes" which contains the word "[illegible]" [illegible]

BLACK FOX PELTS.

Only About Five Skins Are Secured Each Year.

In the estimation of trappers of the Canadian northland as well as in the eyes of the nobility of Russia there is only one king of beasts, the highly prized black fox. On an average five perfect pelts of this rare fur bearer are brought down from the northland each year and in rare years as many as ten or twelve, though each year thousands of men make a living trapping and the yearly catch of foxskins amounts to over 100,000 from Canada alone.

In no way except in color does the black fox differ from the red fox, whose pelt sells for about $2, or from the gray fox, whose winter coat is valued at from $150 to $400, but whenever a hunter can secure a black fox and remove its skin without marring the fur he is sure of receiving from $800 to $1,500 for his trophy. Not only is every black fox pelt bought as soon as taken, but a dozen Russian noblemen have paid agents traveling in North America all through the winter seeking out remote hillside farms and abandoned logging camps where it is possible that a shy and elusive black fox may have been seen

Within the last twenty years a number of wealthy men who have owned fenced game preserves have spent vast sums of money in buying foxes alive and turning them loose within private inclosures. By and by it may be that some skilled or fortunate breeder will produce a black pup or perhaps a pair of black foxes may be captured alive and from these a new breed of black foxes will arise and cause a [illegible] panic among the men who hunt black foxes. He who can [illegible] secret of breeding black foxes [illegible] nature is assured of riches past counting and can command the [illegible] homage of the Russian nobility and aristocracy, who seem willing to [illegible] like untold wealth for the pleasure of wearing overcoats made from the pelt of American black foxes.—Edmonton Cor. GROWTH OF CARICATURE.

John Law's Wild Schemes Gave It a Tremendous Impetus.

Caricature is nowdays one of the principal methods of criticism. No movement can overreach the mark without eliciting dozens of works of art from caricaturists all over this and all other countries.

This branch of criticism and attack dates far back, but the greatest impulse it ever felt came from the age of tremendous speculation, when, in 1719 and 1720, John Law was manipulating things financial in France. Never before had the financial world been so carried off its feet as it was at that time. Members of the nobility were waiting for a chance to purchase shares in Law's schemes. Duchesses and ladies of high renown tried their most persuasive charms on Law in the attempt to get hold of shares. Men hired out their backs for writing desks, so great was the press of business in making contracts, and one hunchback is reputed to have made 100,000 francs in this way in a few weeks. The French went veritably mad over the schemes to become wealthy. Naturally the papers of the time, especially those of Holland, caricatured the state of affairs. There were pictures of all sorts caricaturing Law, the nobility, the schemes and everything connected with them.

It was this tremendous amount of pictorial work that first directed the energies of William Hogarth in London in this direction. Caricaturing began to be used more and more in the political field, and soon afterward it caused the shelving of Robert Walpole from the English ministry. Ever since then has caricaturing been one of the bitterest and most effectual methods of checking public men and their schemes.

Another Knock.

"Hotel clerks are cold hearted," sighed the shabby tragedian, who was traveling with a toothbrush and a compass.

"Speaking from experience, pal?" asked his barnstorming chum.

"Sure! I approached the clerk of the Red Dog inn and told him actors deserved special terms."

"Ah, indeed! And what did he say?"

"He said yes, they deserved six month terms in the county workhouse."—Chicago News.

Diamond Cutters and Their Work.

Not only is diamond cutting not a specially highly paid occupation, but it is one involving a most humiliating system of espionage to the worker. Each man has to strictly account for the stones he receives on going to work in the morning, and the count has to be carefully taken when the unfinished work is handed in at night to be locked up in a safe against the next day. The possibilities of theft are great, though a dishonest workman knows that an attempt to dispose of an unfinished stone would bring suspicion upon him wherever the attempt was made.

A Tardy Act of Justice.

Intrigues between English actresses and men of a high social position began in the eighteenth century, if not earlier. There was Lavinia Fenton, the "Polly Peachum" of Gay's "Beggar's Opera," who became Duchess of Bolton. There was Miss Farren, who married Lord [illegible]; also Miss Brunton became [illegible] Craven [illegible] before Lord Thurlow married Miss Bolton. A Mystery of Indo-China.

The great mystery about Indo-China and one which must ever be insoluble is the story of the lost race and the vanished civilization of that strange country. The mighty walls of Angkor-Wat, rising in the midst of sparsely settled jungles, remain as the memorial of a great empire which has utterly disappeared and is altogether lost to history. No one will ever know who planned this gigantic temple or what tyrant hounded on his myriads of people to build up those immense blocks of stone and cover them with the most elaborate of sculptures. Angkor-Wat was one of the most astonishing monuments in the world, and this forgotten temple was built so as to endure as long as the earth itself were it not for the irresistibly destructive effect of plant life on the strongest walls that man can raise. Only a highly civilized and very wealthy people could have erected Angkor-Wat, a very different race from the Annamite of modern days. The whole nation has disappeared as utterly as the busy myriads who once populated the wastes and solitudes of Memphis.—Singapore Free Press.

The Crab in the Oyster.

"The little crab found in the oyster," said a dealer, "is not, as supposed by two-thirds of the oyster eaters, the young of the blue crab, but is a distinct species. It is a messmate of and caterer to the wants of the oyster, being, therefore, a benefit instead of a detriment to the latter. In return for the oyster's kindness in protecting it against its enemies the little crab catches and crushes food which in its entire state could not be taken by the oyster. A singular thing in connection with them is that all found inside of the oyster are females. The males of the same variety has a hard shell."

How Ledgers Got Their Names.

Insomnia.

Insomnia is the not uncommon fate of the brain worker who after years of continuous mental strain retires from active life. The reason is that mental activity demands a large supply of blood for the brain, and the blood vessels gradually accommodate themselves to this large supply. But when the hard work is over the brain does not always realize that it needs less nourishment, and hence the condition of excessive mental activity which is what insomnia is.—London Mail.

Men, Women and Adjectives.

Certain adjectives are reserved for men and others for women! A man is never called "beautiful." Along with "pretty" and "lovely" that adjective has become the property of women and children alone. "Handsome" and the weak "good looking" are the only two adjectives of the kind common to either sex. Even "belle" has no real masculine correlative in English, since "beau" came to signify something other than personal looks. It is singular that "handsome" should have become the word for a strikingly good looking person, since its literal meaning is handy, dexterous. But "pretty" likewise comes from the Anglo-Saxon word [illegible]

The Feeding of Dogs.

"No dog kept indoors and indeed very few outside should be fed on meat nor should he be fed from the table at mealtimes, as he will soon become a nuisance, especially when there are visitors. If he is always fed at the conclusion of a certain meal—dinner for instance—he will wait patiently until the prescribed time. It is a good plan to feed after one's midday meal, giving plenty of green vegetables, bread and potatoes, with a very few scraps of finely cut meat, the whole well mixed and some gravy poured over it. If two meals are given one should be at breakfast time and one in the evening One should consist of only a little oatmeal and milk or a piece of dry dog biscuit.

"At no time should the dog have more than he will eat, and if he leaves anything on his plate except the pattern his allowance should be reduced or a meal omitted."—Suburban Life.

The Shoulder Strap.

If it were possible to compile such data it would be extremely interesting to know to what extent women have influenced the uniforms and equipment of their fighting states. A little instance in point is the steel curb shoulder strap of the British cavalry.

When Sir George Luck was setting out for Kandahar during the Afghan operations Lady Luck, knowing probably something of the fighting methods of the tribesmen, whose four foot knife can cut clean from shoulder to belt, sewed a couple of steel curb chains under each of the shoulder straps on her husband's tunic. As a protection from sword cuts these proved so effective that at the end of the campaign Sir George made a report in relation thereto, with the result that they were adopted as a permanent feature of the cavalry uniform.—Harper's Weekly

The Tea Taster.

What are a tea taster's duties? He must distinguish the mixture of two blends; point out in each separate instance if the mixtures are of equal grades; he must know to a nicety the difference between a pure brand and an inferior one; he must know the taste of every individual sort of tea—not an easy thing, when it is remembered that brands of tea are many and the blends are constantly being reblended. In ten years' time a tea taster cannot be deceived as to the history or nationality of any tea in the world. He can prevent his firm from being deceived, for he has drunk tea with milk, cream, lemon, straight, served according to the peculiar wish of every nation. He is sent to China, Japan, Russia, India, to study the tea brew of each tea drinking nation.—Boston Herald.

Between Supper and Breakfast.

Many persons, says a well known doctor, though not actually sick, keep below par in strength and general tone, and he is of the opinion that fasting during the long interval between supper and breakfast, and especially the complete emptiness of the stomach during sleep, adds greatly to the amount of emaciation, sleeplessness and general weakness we so often meet. It is logical to believe that the supply of nourishment should be somewhat continuous, especially in those who are below par, if we would counteract their emaciation and lower degree of vitality; and as bodily exercise is suspended during sleep, with wear and tear correspondingly diminished, while digestion, assimilation and nutritive activity continue as usual, the food furnished during this period adds more than is destroyed, and increased weight and improved general vigor are the results.—London [illegible]

SPECIAL OFFER:

Marlin

THE Marlin Model 1894 is a medium light weight repeating rifle, a well proportioned, finely balanced gun with all the advantages and comforts of the Marlin solid-top, side-ejecting construction. It is quick and easy of operation, accurate up to 300 yards and a very pleasant gun to carry and to shoot.

For settled districts and farming country where the shooting of woodchucks, badgers, foxes, crows, hawks, etc., is at ranges from 100 to 200 yards, the .25-20 and .32-20 rifles with the black and low-pressure [illegible] loads cannot be equalled for accuracy and safety. The factory ammunition for the Model '94 rifles is cheap, and can be reloaded at very small cost.

The up-to-date sportsman needs the "Marlin Book" every day in the year. It contains 136 pages of live stuff for the man who loves a good gun, and wants to know everything about it. FREE for 3 stamps postage.

Perfect Philosophy.

We read of a certain Roman emperor who built a magnificent palace. In digging the foundation the workmen discovered a golden sarcophagus ornamented with three circlets, on which were inscribed: "I have expended; I have given; I have kept; I have possessed; I do possess; I have lost; I am punished. What I formerly expended I have; what I gave away, I have."—From the Gesta Romanorum.

MIX FOR RHEUMATISM

The following is a never failing remedy for rheumatism, and if followed up it will effect a complete cure of the very worst cases: "Mix one-half pint of good whiskey with one ounce of Toris Compound and add one ounce Syrup Sarsaparilla Compound. Take in tablespoonful doses before each meal and at bedtime." The ingredients can be procured at any drug store and easily mixed at home.

Remember what you possess in the world will be found at the day of your death to belong to some one else, but what you are will be yours forever.—Henry Van Dyke.

PE-RU-NA AS A LAST RESORT

MR. WM. F. VAHLBERG.

Mr. William F. Vahlberg, Oklahoma City, Okla., writes:

"One bottle of Peruna which I have taken did more toward relieving me of an aggravated case of catarrh of the stomach, than years of treatment with the best physicians.

"I had given up hopes of relief, and only tried Peruna as a last resort.

"I shall continue using it, as I feel satisfied it will effect an entire and permanent cure.

"I most cheerfully recommend Peruna to all who may read this."

Peruna is usually taken as a last resort. Doctors have been tried and failed. Other remedies have been used. Sanitariums have been visited. Travel has been resorted to.

At last Peruna is tried. Relief is found.

This history is repeated over and over again, every day in the year. It is such results as this that gives Peruna its unassailable hold upon the people. We could say nothing that would add force to such testimonials as the above. That people who have had catarrh and have tried every other remedy available, find relief in Peruna, constitutes the best argument that could be made.

SPORTING GOSSIP

Football punters who boot the ball with their left foot and quarterbacks who handle the pigskin with their left hand are rarely seen in the gridiron sport, yet the east boasts of two such oddities this year. Clay, one of the backs on the Naval academy eleven, does most of the punting for the navy and he does it all with his left foot. He kicks a peculiar spiral that is extremely difficult to handle, and the opposing backfields have all kinds of trouble judging his kicks. Clay is the first left-footed punter the east has seen since the days of Malcolm McBride, who was a star at Yale back in the late '90s. McBride used to kick the ball just over the line with terrific speed and his punts traveled much farther than those of the men who kicked the pigskin high in the air. Yale, however, has a left-handed quarterback that year in young Corey, the son of the steel king. Corey does most of the handling of the ball with his south paw, and the opponents of Yale have a hard time discovering whom he really intends to pass it to. When it comes to making the forward pass, his port side manipulation of the ball looks very queer.

When Frank Ferrell selected George T. Stallings to manage the Highlanders next season he probably picked the best man in the country to pull the team out of the rut. Stallings is not worried because of the task before him—that of making a pennant contender out of a cellar champion—and thinks he can take the material bequeathed to him by Clark Griffith and Norman Elberfeld and get good results. The new Highland chieftain does not start on his task of reconstructing the Hilltopers without knowing something about the players he is to command, for he watched them at work in the fall and obtained a thorough knowledge of their good and bad points. Stallings will have full control of the Highlanders and will draw a big salary for managing them. The engagement meets with the approval of President Johnson and clubs of the league.

GEO. T. STALLINGS

You don't hear much about big salaries for players in these times of peace, for the reason that there are few of the stars who are drawing as much as $5,000 per annum. Bobby Wallace and Hans Wagner are two high privates who are getting that much or more, but the men who are yanking down the big salaries nowadays are the managers. Lajoie draws something like $8,000 or a little more a season. Frank Chance and McGraw yank straight salaries of something like $10,000, and have a fat divvy in the profits besides. It's coming to them, too, for they are the men who made possible the big profits of the New York and Chicago clubs. Jimmy McAleer owns a big slice of stock in the St. Louis club, which showed profits of $100,000 last season, and James draws a fat salary besides. Fielder Jones is a cheaper man and perhaps that's the reason he is trying to quit. Jones has drawn a salary of $7,500 for the last two seasons. It sounds steep, but when it is considered that Jones commanded a team that has made Comiskey a barrel of money in the last three years, he seems to be a poorly paid manager. Jones is a first-class leader, a king among outfielders, a wonder on the bases and a splendid batter—not an average seeker, but a timely hitter.

Patsy Donovan probably will not be engaged as manager of the Brooklyn National league team next season. It is learned from a reliable source that the officials of the club are not wholly satisfied with the way in which Donovan handled the team during the last two seasons, and on that account have practically made up their minds to let Patsy out and secure another man for the job. Who the new manager will be is not known at this time. There have been rumors to the effect that Bill Dahlen will get the position, but it seems improbable that President Ebbetts will select him. It is said that there will be a big shake-up in the team next season and that four or five players will be released or traded.

ONE KIDNEY GONE

But Cured After Doctors Said There Was No Hope.

Sylvanus O. Verrill, Milford, Me., says: "Five years ago a bad injury paralyzed me and affected my kidneys. My back hurt me terribly, and the urine was badly disordered. Doctors said my right kidney was practically dead. They said I could never walk again. I read of Doan's Kidney Pills and began using them. One box made me stronger and freer from pain. I kept on using them and in three months was able to get out on crutches, and the kidneys were acting better. I improved rapidly, discarded the crutches and to the wonder of my friends was soon completely cured."

NO SKIN LEFT ON BODY.

For Six Months Baby Was Expected to Die with Eczema—Now Well —Doctor Said to Use Cuticura.

"Six months after birth my little girl broke out with eczema and I had two doctors in attendance. There was not a particle of skin left on her body, the blood oozed out just anywhere, and we had to wrap her in silk and carry her on a pillow for ten weeks. She was the most terrible sight I ever saw, and for six months I looked for her to die. I used every known remedy to alleviate her suffering, for it was terrible to witness. Dr. C—— gave her up. Dr. B—— recommended the Cuticura Remedies. She will soon be three years old and has never had a sign of the dread trouble since. We used about eight cakes of Cuticura Soap and three boxes of Cuticura Ointment. James J. Smith, Durmid, Va., Oct. 14 and 22, 1906."

No Cremation.

"I was visiting Atlanta during the late wave of reform there," recently said a Philadelphian, "when I overheard an amusing conversation in a barber shop between a patron and the boy who shines shoes.

"I saw you playing craps this morning," said the patron, by way of a joke. "If the grand jury got at you, it would make you tell all about the gambling among the darkies."

"No, suh, dey wouldn't," protested the negro, warmly. "I knows enough about de law to know dat a man doan have t' tell nothin' dat cremates his-se'f."

Mr. Lapsling's Mean Joke.

"You have named the baby Tetanus?" exclaimed the horrified caller.

"Yes," answered Mrs. Lapsling. "I think that's what we'll call her. It's the name my husband suggests."

"But think how it will mortify her when she grows to be a young woman! Do you know what 'tetanus' means? It means lockjaw."

"You must be mistaken about that. He says it means silent, quiet, reserved."

Spoils for Fashion's Followers.

At auctions in London during the last half of 1907 there were catalogued for sale 19,742 skins of birds of paradise, nearly 116,000 white heron plumes and a vast number of the skins and plumes of many other birds of beautiful plumage, including albatross quills and the tails of the lyre bird.

NEW LIFE

After one suffers from acid dyspepsia, sour stomach, for months and then finds the remedy is in getting the right kind of food it is something to speak out about.

A N. Y. lady and her young son had such an experience and she wants others to know how to get relief. She writes:

"For about fifteen months my little boy and myself had suffered with sour stomach. We were unable to retain much of anything we ate.

"After suffering in this way for so long I decided to consult a specialist in stomach diseases. Instead of prescribing drugs, he put us both on Grape-Nuts and we began to improve immediately.

"It was the key to a new life. I found we had been eating too much heavy food which we could not digest. In a few weeks after commencing Grape-Nuts I was able to do my housework. I wake in the morning with a clear head and feel rested and have no sour stomach. My boy sleeps well and wakes with a laugh.

"We have regained our lost weight and continue to eat Grape-Nuts for both the morning and evening meals. We are well and happy and owe it to Grape-Nuts." "There's a Reason."

DOWN MISSOURI WAY

CANADA'S RESPECT FOR LAW AND ORDER THE SUBJECT FOR FAVORABLE COMMENT.

Those who have visited Canada are always impressed with the strict observance that is given to the laws of the country, and the order that is preserved everywhere. The editor of the Gazette, of Fulton, Nev., recently paid a visit to Western Canada. He was so impressed with the conditions that he saw everywhere, that on his return home he was inspired to write as follows: "Reverence and respect for law is a dominant characteristic of the Canadian people. Wherever one goes in Canada, whether east or west, the law is supreme. The law is obeyed because it is law, seemingly, and not because violation carries a penalty. Canada enforces the law and makes every law effective. No country is more free than Canada. In name Canada is a dependency of the British Crown. In fact, it is almost a third republic. All its taxes are voted, collected and expended by the Dominion and the provinces. The nominal head of the Government is the Governor General, appointed by the English Crown. Practically his only authority is to veto the acts of parliament, which he scarcely ever exercises. Canada gives nothing to the support of the English government or the English king. She gives England the advantage in trade regulations and tariff laws, and in return receives the protection of the British army and navy. Canada enjoys the protection without sharing in the expense.

"The sale of liquor is strictly regulated. None but hotel-keepers may obtain license to vend the stuff, and before a license can be secured an applicant must prove good character and provide twenty rooms in his tavern for the accommodation of guests. The bar-rooms close at 7 o'clock Saturday evening and remain closed until Monday morning. The schools and churches in Western Canada excite admiration. Though new, Western Canada is not godless. The finest buildings in every town are the churches. Next come the school houses."

Turning to the wheat fields of Western Canada, the editor of the Laurel (Neb.) Advocate of Sept. 17th says: "I have often thought that the reason that the characters of Charles Dickens are so impressed upon the minds of his readers is because he dwells upon them so long and describes them so minutely that by the time one has waded through his long drawn out stories they are so burned into his brain that he can never forget them. It was this way with the Canadian wheat fields. Had we only seen a few the memory of them might have worn away in time, but a long drawn out experience such as we had is sure to leave an uneffaceable impression. Never while we live shall we forget the Canadian wheat fields. They call it the granary of the British Empire, and we don't blame 'em. Nobody who has seen these wheat fields can wonder at their enthusiasm." It is worth while to record that these fields have now been harvested, and in many cases yields as high as forty and fifty bushels per acre have been marketed, while the general average has been away above 20 bushels per acre. Oats and barley have also done well, and the profits, the prices of grains being high, have paid the entire cost of the farms of many a farmer. There is now 160 acres of land given away, in addition to the 160 acres that the homesteader may purchase at $3.00 an acre. Particulars of this as well as the lowest railway rates will be given by the Canadian Government Agent.

Many have paid the entire cost of their farms and had a balance of from $10.00 to $20.00 per acre as a result of one crop.

Spring wheat, winter wheat, oats, barley, flax and peas are the principal crops, while the wild grasses bring to perfection the best cattle that have ever been sold on the Chicago market.

Splendid climate, schools and churches in all localities. Railways touch most of the settled districts, and prices for produce are always good. Lands may also be purchased from railway and land companies.

Presidential Election.

St. Paul.—Minnesota's 11 presidential electors will meet at the state capitol in St. Paul on Monday, Jan. 11, to cast their ballots for William Howard Taft for president.

Aside from this wholly pleasant and formal act their most important duty will be to select one of their number to carry the vote of the state to the electoral college at Washington.

Naturally all of the electors are very anxious to make the trip, but the government permits only one to go, paying the expenses of the trip at the rate of 25 cents a mile. The bearer of the vote probably will be selected by placing 11 slips of paper in a hat, each slip bearing the name of one of the electors, and the lucky man will be picked by means of drawing.

Stewart Gamble of Gamble & Ludwig, druggists, Hennepin avenue and Third street, is the only one of the electors from this city, all the others, with the exception of John J. Ecklund of Duluth, being from country districts.

Millions of Cans.

Mankato.—During the season of 1908, 4,408,190 cans of vegetables and fruit were packed in the state of Minnesota, according to a report by Edward K. Slater, state dairy and food commissioner.

"Minnesota is the only state in the union that has a special law regulating canneries," says Mr. Slater. "It has been in operation two years and has been of great benefit. To this important industry, in addition to insuring the consumers of Minnesota canned goods, these products have been put up under the supervision of the state. Where so inspected the products may be labeled 'Minnesota Standard, Inspected and approved.'"

King Corn took the honors as the leader, 2,824,390 cans, or more than half the season's output being devoted to this vegetable. Peas came next with 531,960 cans. Beans were third with 480,760 cans.

Burned to Death.

Worthington, Minn., Nov. 21.—Fire completely destroyed the large barn of Sam Stewart and Charles Gordon and slightly damaged nearby buildings. Albert Lestico lessee of the Stewart barn, while trying to rescue four blooded horses was overcome by smoke and burned to death. His body was later found completely charred. A strong wind threatened town with destruction. The property loss is estimated at $10,000, partially insured.

NEWS NOTES.

Crookston.—Ole H. Hagen, former judge of probate and present auditor-elect of Roseau county, dies after a short illness.

St. Paul.—Frances Enright nearly loses life in futile effort to save her sister Patricia from drowning.

Minneapolis.—Minnesota has several football relations with Carlisle, and Saturday's game brought to a close a triangular series in which the gophers were twice defeated and once victorious.

Grand Rapids.—E. Officer, a well-known sportsman of Los Angeles and a contributor to many sporting magazines, had to pay $75 before a justice of the peace for running onto too many deer.

Minneapolis.—Seventeen hundred families in Minneapolis were provided with Thanksgiving dinners by the various charitable organizations working through the Associated Charities as a central body.

Faribault.—G. O. Lee, a prominent resident of Medford was held up in this city by three men and robbed of $45 and a gold watch. Mr. Lee was on his way home and boarded a Great Northern train.

St. Paul.—Within ninety days the state militiamen will be wearing the new olive-drab uniforms, such as the regulars now have. Measurements are now being taken to equip the 3,000 men in the guard.

Duluth.—W. H. Cook, president of the Virginia, Rainy Lake & Northern railroad, running between Virginia and Rainer, Minn., today denied the statements that his road has been sold to the Canadian Northern.

Duluth.—There are rumors that the Canadian Northern, the McKenzie-Mann road, is to invade American territory and that Duluth has been selected as the terminus of the Canadian road upon this side of the boundary.

Duluth.—Henry A. Kilchli, 64 years of age, died here yesterday of heart failure. He has been a resident of the head of the lakes for fifty-four years, having come to Superior with his parents when he was only 10 years old.

Duluth.—A vendetta which had its start in Servia ten years ago had a bloody climax at Alborn, near here, when Lazzo Evanich's head was split open with a lumberman's ax. Two blows were delivered and each penetrated the brain.

Minneapolis.—School children of the state planted 19,560 trees in 1,286 school districts in the state during the past year. These trees were mostly set out on Arbor day, following suggestions of the state superintendent of public instruction.

St. Cloud.—The employes of the Great Northern have organized a branch of the American Railway Employes' Protective association for the purpose of using their influence to prevent the further reduction of rates by state legislatures.

Minneapolis.—One of A. H. Wood's successful melodramas, entitled "The Creole Slave's Revenge," will be the attraction at the Bijou the week of December 13th, and every effort has been made to imbue the play with true southern flavor.

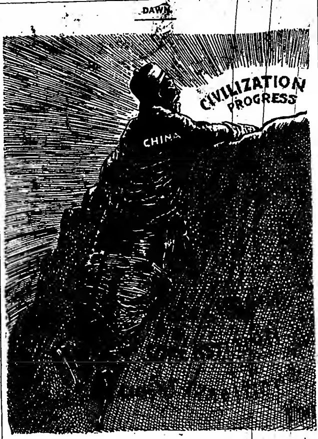
Brainerd.—The store of the O'Brien Mercantile company was burglarized. Burglars are supposed to have hidden in the store during the evening and been locked in. They opened the safe and scattered the papers around the office. No money had been left in the safe.

Rochester.—While left alone, Alfred, the six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Zeeman of this county secured some matches and amused himself by burning papers. His clothing caught fire, and he was badly burned about the breast and arms before assistance arrived. He has a fighting chance for recovery.

St. Paul.—The Minnesota supreme court heard arguments today in the Minnesota club case, involving the question whether a club must take out a liquor license under the state law. Demand was made by the Ramsey county authorities on the officers of the club, who claimed they needed only a government license.

Faribault.—The efficiency of a new method for the treatment of burns or scalds, tried probably for the first time in the Northwest, has been demonstrated with great success in this city. On Oct. 1 Frank G. Knehl, aged about twenty years, fell into a vat of scalding water at the packing plant of Carner Bros. & Kiekenapp while assisting in killing hogs.

Hibbing.—Hibbing was shaken by a violent explosion in which every building in town was rocked and a great deal of window glass broken. It was at first supposed that an unusually heavy charge of dynamite had been set off in one of the near-by mines, but a mysterious hole in the earth, 40 feet wide and 25 feet deep, was shortly after discovered in a field east of town.



LAMPHERE GUILTY OF ARSON

IS SENTENCED TO PRISON FOR TWO TO 21 YEARS.

Verdict Is a Compromise—Several Jurors Held Out Long for Life Sentence for Murder.

Laporte, Ind. — Ray Lamphere, charged with the murder of Mrs. Belle Gunness and her three children, by setting fire to the Gunness house April 28, was found guilty of arson Thursday evening by the jury which had the case since 5:30 o'clock Wednesday evening.

Within five minutes after the verdict was reported, Judge Richter had sentenced the defendant to the state penitentiary at Michigan City for an indeterminate term of from two to 21 years. He will be taken to Michigan City at once to begin his sentence.

Attorney Worden for the defense said that a motion for a new trial would be made, and should it be refused, an appeal to the Indiana supreme court would follow. The Indiana supreme court is two years behind in its work and so this case could not be reached until after Lamphere had served the minimum time of his sentence.

The verdict was something of a compromise. Several members of the jury, it is understood, held out long for murder in the first degree with a life sentence. So far as could be learned, none was for hanging.

Lamphere Thursday night said that he was confident the dead body in the fire was Mrs. Gunness' regardless of what other people may think. He reiterated his innocence of setting fire to the house, though admitting that he was on the road and saw the fire that night. He also declared that he did not see Mrs. Gunness kill Helgelein.

"I have no complaint to make about the verdict. Things looked pretty blue, but the verdict might have been worse."

THREE NEGROES ARE LYNCHED.

Mob at Tiptonville, Tenn., Hangs Slayers of Officer.

Union City, Tenn.—The little town of Tiptonville, bordering on Reelfoot lake, which has been the scene of many stirring incidents the past month, witnessed the lynching, late Tuesday afternoon, of three negroes, who were arrested in the morning for murdering Special Deputy Sheriff Richard Burrus, and fatally wounding Deputy John Hall.

The negroes were Marshall Stineback, Edward Stineback and Jim Stineback.

These brothers created a disturbance at a religious meeting near Tiptonville Saturday night. When the two officers attempted to arrest them a fight ensued in which the officers were shot.

Hannah Elias' "Angel" Dies.

Platt, the retired glass manufacturer who four years ago vainly sued Hannah Elias in the supreme court to recover $685,385, money which he alleged he had spent on the negress since he became acquainted with her in 1896, died Thursday at the home of his daughter here in his eighty-ninth year.

TOGA FOR CUMMINS AT LAST.

Iowa Governor Elected to Succeed Late W. B. Allison.

Des Moines, Ia.—Gov. A. B. Cummins became United States senator at 12:20 Tuesday. Cummins received 106 votes; Porter, (Dem.) 35. Three Republicans did not vote. He, long a leader of the progressive Republicans of Iowa, was formally elected United States senator to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator William B. Allison. No suspicion has arisen of a bolt by the stand-pat members of the legislature, which re-convened in adjourned session at ten o'clock Tuesday, pledged to elect the man chosen by the people at the special primary of the November election. Gov. Cummins addressed the joint session of the two houses immediately after his election.

Senator Cummins, in a speech of less than 1,200 words, thanked both the Republican and Democratic members of the legislature for the support they had given him during the seven years of his administration as Iowa's governor. He declared that in so far as he was concerned bitter factionalism in Iowa is at an end.

Tornado Dead Number 21.

Little Rock, Ark.—Latest reports from western Arkansas show that although first reports of the number killed in Monday's tornado were exaggerated, the property damage will be greater than expected.

Slayer of Husband Sentenced.

Vermillion, S. D.—Mrs. Christiana Clark, who was convicted of manslaughter in the second degree in the killing of her husband last August, was sentenced Friday to three years and ten months at hard labor.

HITCHCOCK CHOSEN

WILL BE POSTMASTER GENERAL IN TAFT'S CABINET.

HAS ACCEPTED THE PLACE

Republican National Chairman First One Selected Because of His Ability to Advise the President-Elect.

Hot Springs, Va.—Frank H. Hitchcock has been offered and has accepted the position of postmaster general in the Taft cabinet that is to be.

The official announcement of this conclusion regarding the first cabinet selection of President-elect Taft doubtless will not be made until Mr. Taft has completed his cabinet, at which time it will be announced en bloc. Because of this view of the situation no expression regarding the selection of Mr. Hitchcock was obtainable for publication from either Mr. Taft or the Republican national chairman. There were many reasons, it was pointed out, why it was expedient that Mr. Hitchcock's status should be fixed, at least so far as the principals are concerned, and a complete understanding is known to exist between them. As chairman of the Republican national committee, Mr. Hitchcock became more familiar than any other person with the political phase of questions likely to arise at the beginning of the Taft administration and the knowledge he gained regarding the personnel of the party will be of great service to Mr. Taft throughout his administration.

Besides these reasons the national chairman admittedly possesses a comprehensive as well as a technical knowledge of postal affairs, gained by a protracted experience as first assistant and acting postmaster general. Mr. Hitchcock, accompanied by Charles H. Boynton of New York, left here Friday night for Washington, where Saturday night he was the guest of honor at a dinner given by the executive and advisory committees of the national committee. He then will visit headquarters in New York. It is altogether probable that from this time on Mr. Hitchcock will be frequently in conference with Judge Taft.

ACTRESS ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.

Mrs. Eleanor Cowper Shoots Herself in New York Hotel.

New York.—Mrs. Eleanor Merron Cowper, a widely-known playwright and actress, shot herself in her room at the St. Regis hotel Friday and will probably die. She was a protege and business partner of the late James H. Wallick, manager and actor, who killed himself at his home in Middletown, N. Y.

Before shooting herself, Mrs. Cowper wrote letters to her lawyer, Judge Herbert B. Royce of Middletown, and to John Hood, manager of the King Edward hotel in West Forty-seventh street, where she formerly lived, advising them of her intention to kill herself. A brief history of her life, largely devoted to recounting her career on the stage, was found in her effects.

Elopers Are Given $50,000.

New York.—Pleased at his son's pluck in defying parental authority to the extent of wedding the girl he loved, whether or no, Capt. John Fleming, a wealthy contractor and prominent Tammany Hall man, after his first anger had cooled, summoned the couple to him Tuesday and placed a check for $50,000 in his son's hand.

"You're all right, my boy," said Capt. Fleming. "I'm proud of you because you went right ahead and married the girl you love. Now go where you like and don't come back until you have spent this."

Chauffeur Burned to Death.

Cleveland, O.—A pillar of flame as he ran and leaped in his torture, Palmer Williams, aged 26 years, a negro chauffeur, was burned to death as a result of a gasoline explosion Friday night.

MADE ROACHES HIS FRIENDS.

Act of Artemus Ward That Had Far-Reaching Effect.

George V. Kelcey, a veteran journalist of Cleveland, remembers Artemus Ward well.

"Ward called on me," he said the other day, "the night before one of his panorama lectures. There were some three or four large roaches scurrying about my room, and they attracted his attention.

"'I am very fond of roaches,' he said. 'Once, in my own home, I found a roach struggling in a bowl of water. I took a half walnut shell and put him in it; it made a good boat; I gave him a couple of toothpicks for oars. Next morning I saw that he had fastened a hair to one of the toothpicks, and had evidently been fishing. Then, overcome with exhaustion, he had fallen asleep. The sight moved me. I took him out, washed him, gave him a spoonful of boiled egg, and let him go. That roach never forgot my kindness, and now my home is full of roaches.'"

NEVER DOES ANYTHING.

Upon hearing of the sudden death of U. S. Commissioner L G Browning, of Thief River Falls, congressman Steenerson promptly wired to the Commissioner of the General Land Office asking that authority be given a qualified officer not named in the advertisement to take these proofs at the time and place designated in the notice, and this authority was granted, and all these proofs were taken and the homesteaders saved the expense of readvertiseing his notice, and having his proof delayed for at least two months. But of course congressman Steenerson never does any thing for the people! Oh no!; and we suppose that, if them same fellows should see a picture of a democrat plowman, ... for votes, to draw the ... of a congressman, and ... a statement that Steenerson was not doing anything ... that they would stand ... wide ... hide, hair, ... and ... say, that's ... Wasps' Jaws Make Colony's Nest.

Wasps readily succumb before the increasing cold of autumn. The few that escape the merciless scourge of mortality are the queens of next season. They pass the winter in some warm cranny, and when the spring arrives each comes forth from its hiding place and seeks a suitable place for the nest that is to be. This found the queen repairs to a fence or tree trunk and with her jaw rasps off a bundle of wood fiber which when moistened with saliva and kneaded forms the paperlike substance of which the nest is entirely constructed

Just as bees have invented a peculiar nest building material in wax, so wasps have prepared a special durable paper for the same purpose. The queen mother lays the foundations of the city with her own jaws She attaches a sort of stalk of wood paper to a chosen support. This may be the branch of a tree, a root in a cavity below ground or a beam in a garden shed. The stalk prepared, the queen builds a few shallow cells, in each of which she lays an egg. As these mature, hatch and develop into worker wasps the labor of the little colony is turned over to them, and thus a vast nest with thousands of cells is evolved.—Chicago Tribune.

The Wrong Nell.

Nell is a girl who lives up on Capitol hill. On Mondays a woman comes to Nell's house to wash clothes. The woman's name is Nell too. One Monday Nell, the girl, was in the sitting room reading when the telephone rang. Nell, the washerwoman, answered the ring. Nell, the girl, then heard Nell the washerwoman, say:

"Yes, this is Nell."

Silence.

"How's that?"

Silence.

"What! Am I mad because you missed me last night? Look here, man you're too fresh. Who are you anyway? I never kissed"—

Just then the telephone receiver was rudely snatched from her hand. Nell, the girl, blushing furiously, had grabbed it She hung it on the hook

"He wanted me," she said. "He always tries to tease me that way I—I never kissed him in my life."

As she disappeared up the stairs the washerwoman smiled and said:

"That's a big one."—Denver Post

A Tardy Act of Justice.

Marriages between English actresses and men of a high social position began in the eighteenth century, if not earlier. There was Lavinia Fenton, the Polly Peachum of Gay's "Beggar's Opera," who became Duchess of Bolton; there was Miss Farren, who married Lord Derby; also Miss Brunton became Lady Craven not long before Lord Thurlow married Miss Bolton. Earliest of the list, though, comes the Earl of Peterborough, who married Anastasia Robinson, the singer, and kept the marriage secret until a few days before his death in St. James' palace, when he assembled his relatives and friends and publicly acknowledged the woman "to whom he owed the best and happiest hours of his life," a tardy act of justice that caused the lady to swoon away.

Dog Pets in Hotels.

"The one thing we have more trouble with than anything else," said the manager of one of the large hotels in upper Broadway, "is the fact that women insist on smuggling their pet dogs to their rooms. We have no objections to dogs as dogs. If the animal is not too large or too fierce our guests may take them to their rooms during the day and may even feed them there. But we draw the line at having dogs in the bedrooms at night. Any woman with a pet dog can have the beast cared for by the porter at night, and we have specially constructed kennels for all kinds of dogs, and we give them the best of care. But owners of pets seem to think that no one save themselves understands Fido or Gyp The women seem to think that if doggie has not the comforting assurance of the owner's nearness then doggie will not sleep well. So women try to smuggle their pets to their rooms under their cloaks or by back ways or even bribe one of the porters to take it to their room, believing that we will not hear anything about it.

"As a matter of fact, the first thing the porter does after getting his tip is to tip me, and a couple of hours later the woman is called upon by a clerk who tells her dogs cannot stay in the bedrooms all night.—New York Press.

His Neighbor's Cat.

A Cleveland lawyer tells of a man living in a suburb of that city whose sleep had been disturbed nightly by the howling on his own back fence of his neighbor's cat. At last, in despair he consulted his lawyer.

"There sits the cat every night on our fence," explained the unhappy man, "and he yowls and yowls and yowls. Now, I don't want to have any trouble with this neighbor, but the thing has gone far enough, and I want you to suggest a remedy."

The lawyer looked solemn and said not a word.

"I am well within my rights if I shoot the cat, am I not?" asked the sufferer.

"I would hardly say that," replied the legal light. "The cat does not belong to you, as I understand it."

"No."

"And the fence does?"

"Yes."

"Then," concluded the lawyer, "I think it safe to say that you have a perfect right to tear down the fence —Lippincott's

Woes of a Drummer.

"I'm just a little discouraged with my work," said the tall New York boy who has started out on the road. "I was making my second trip west when I met an old drummer who had been on the road for more than thirty years. He sat with grip between his knees and talked to me.

"'Chuck it, my boy,' he said. 'If there is anything else in the world you can do, do it. Look at my gray hairs. I don't know what it is to have a home. For thirty years I have seen my wife about once in five weeks. I know that I've a wife and children in a flat in New York, but that's all I do know about them. The children have grown up and married, but I have not had time to attend their weddings. My wife has grown gray, too, but she has had the best of it. She has had a home and the children. If there is anything else in the world you can do, my boy,' he repeated, 'quit drumming, and do it.'"

Curious Blunders.

Some remarkable mistakes in memorials have totally escaped notice until it was too late to rectify them. The spurs on the boots of Cromwell's statue at Westminster abbey, London, are the most interesting feature of the monument, although they generally get no attention at all from sightseers. They are worn upside down. In a painted window on the staircase which leads from the floor of Westminster palace to the committee rooms an inscription on a sword wielded by the "Black Prince" has the words "Prince of Wales." Again, in the fresco depicting the embarkation of the pilgrim fathers in the corridor leading from the outer lobby at St. Stephen's to the house of lords the Mayflower is shown to be hoisting the union jack, a flag which did not come into existence until 250 years after the days of the historic Mayflower.

The Onion In Cooking.

The greatest of French cooks, being asked to give the secret of his success, answered: "The very foundation of all good cooking is butter and onion! I use them in all my sauces and gravies. They have the effect of making a customer come back for more. Butter without onion will drive the customer away after a few days. Boil the onion till it melts or entirely disappears; then add the butter and call the mixture stock."—Exchange.

A Sly Dog.

The late Dr. James Freeman Clarke used to tell this story of his dog:

"At one time my dog was fond of going to the railway station to see the people, and I always ordered him to go home, fearing he would be hurt by the cars. He easily understood that if he went there it was contrary to my wishes. So whenever he was near the station if he saw me coming he would look the other way and pretend not to know me. If he met me anywhere else he always bounded to meet me with great delight. But at the station it was quite different. He would pay no attention to my whistle or my call. He even pretended to be another dog and would look me right in the face without apparently recognizing me. He gave me the cut direct in the most impertinent manner, the reason evidently being that he knew he was doing what was wrong and did not like to be found out. Possibly he may have relied a little on my nearsightedness in his maneuver."

The Tailor and the College Humorist.

Perennial victims of the humorous paper of Yale are the familiar campus characters, Jim Donnelly, the policeman; Pop Warner, the "leering expression," so called because he delivers his goods in an automobile, and Rosenberg Sons, the suit pressers about whom, in a Pegasian flight of distress at the time of the junior prom., the Record uttered these winged words:

Oh, Rosenberg, dear Rosenberg,
Thy sons we'll ne'er forget.
That suit of clothes,
God only knows,
I'm waiting for them yet.

I'll miss that train. I'll go insane
And rip and tear and cuss.
Just out of reach
There goes that peach
I've missed my chance to fuss.

With this same suit presser as hero, the story is told on a popular professor that in leading chapel one morning he stopped short, leaned over and whispered excitedly to the choir, "What's the name of that song, 'Press On, Christian Soldier, Press On?'" "Rosenberg!" came from a dozen men at once. "We'll sing three stanzas of Rosenberg!" said the leader, with ecclesiastical assurance.—E. R. Embree in Bohemian

Starboard and Port.

Why do the sailors call the right hand side of the ship "starboard" and the left hand "port?" For the answer it is necessary to go back to the days of the Norsemen and Saxons. In the viking ships the warriors hung the "bords," or shields, on the side of the ship above the places for their oars. The viking himself held the steer oar, which was fastened to the right hand side of the stern. Thus the right hand side of the ship became known as the steer side, and as the bords of the warriors were hung there it was called the "steerbord," or starboard side, while the lower, or lurking side, became the larboard. Bord eventually became corrupted into board.

The Costliest Canes.

"A single joint malacca cane will always fetch from $400 to $500," said the dealer.

"Why?"

"Because malacca hardly ever grows with enough space between the joints to make a single joint stick. Usually the joints are not more than a foot apart. When you find in Singapore—that is where malacca comes from—a piece of malacca with the joints five feet apart, so that it will make a single joint stick, come to me, and I will give you $500 for it. Malacca sticks with the joints three feet apart are worth $30 or $40. Snakewood sticks, if they are marked well—snakewood comes from British Guiana—are worth $40 or $50. A yellow ebony stick—ebony comes to us in logs from Ceylon and Mauritius—is worth $20 or $25. Wanghee, from China, makes an excellent and costly stick. A perfect wanghee is worth $20."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Persian Peasants.

There is probably no peasantry in the world so ground down as the Persian. The agricultural laborer there, as in China, never tries to ameliorate his condition for the simple reason that if he earns more more is taken away from him by the rulers of the land. The general condition of the laboring classes, however, does not seem to be so bad as might be supposed. In a country so vast (550,000 square miles) and so thinly populated (5,500,000 in all) a small and sufficient supply of food is easily raised, especially with such prolific soil at the command of the poorest. At Shiraz there are two harvests in the year. The seed, sowed in summer and reaped in autumn, consists of rice, cotton, Indian corn and garden produce, and the "chatol" is sowed in October and November and reaped from May till July. This is exclusively wheat and barley. Here also grow grapes, oranges and pomegranates, for which latter Shiraz is famous Men, Woman and Adjectives.

Certain odjectives are reserved for men and others for women. A man is never called "beautiful." Along with "pretty" and "lovely" that adjective has become the property of women and children alone. "Handsome" and the weak "good looking" are the only two adjectives of the kind common to either sex. Even "belle" has no real masculine correlative in English, since "beau" came to signify something other than personal looks. It is singular that "handsome" should have become the word for a strikingly good looking person, since its literal meaning is handy, dexterous. But "pretty" likewise comes from the Anglo-Saxon word [illegible]

Great Writers Not Correct Writers.

There is not a single great author in our literature in whose works numerous errors have not been pointed out or thought to be pointed out. They are charged with violating rules involving the purity if not the permanence of the language. A somewhat depressing inference follows from the situation thus revealed. The ability to write English correctly does not belong to the great masters of our speech. It is limited to the obscure men who have devoted themselves to the task of showing how far these exalted writers have fallen short of the ideas of linguistic propriety entertained by their unrecognized betters. As a result of these critical crusades there is no escape from the dismal conclusion that the correct use of the language is not to be found in the authors whom every one reads with pleasure, but is an accomplishment reserved exclusively for those whom nobody can succeed in reading at all.—Professor Thomas R. Lounsbury in Harper's Magazine

The Solemn Back Bay Butler.

Some Boston editor intimated that Back Bay butlers made love to the housemaids. One of them has replied in defense of his class, and incidentally he shows how far culture has got down the back stairs of Boston society. He writes:

"I do not flirt with any of the female members of the household, and it is no exaggeration to say that I am not better than the average butler of the Back Bay, so far as morals are concerned. I have educated my boy in France and England and am now giving him a postgraduate course at an American college. Our feelings have been hurt by the article to which I refer, and we have undergone a great deal of mental suffering from the annoyance unwittingly caused us."

Between Supper and Breakfast.

Many persons, says a well known doctor, though not actually sick, keep below par in strength and general tone, and he is of the opinion that fasting during the long interval between supper and breakfast, and especially the complete emptiness of the stomach during sleep, adds greatly to the amount of emaciation, sleeplessness and general weakness we so often meet. It is logical to believe that the supply of nourishment should be somewhat continuous, especially in those who are below par, if we would counteract their emaciation and lower degree of vitality, and as bodily exercise is suspended during sleep, with wear and tear correspondingly diminished, while digestion, assimilation and nutritive activity continue as usual, the food furnished during this period adds more than is destroyed, and increased weight and improved general vigor are the results.—London Globe.

To forgive a fault in another is more sublime than to be faultless oneself.—George Sand.

This woman says that sick women should not fail to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as she did.

Mrs. A. Gregory, of 2355 Lawrence St., Denver, Col., writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I was practically an invalid for six years, on account of female troubles. I underwent an operation by the doctor's advice, but in a few months I was worse than before. A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it restored me to perfect health, such as I have not enjoyed in many years. Any woman suffering as I did with backache, bearing-down pains, and periodic pains, should not fail to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

As further inducement to settlement of the wheat-raising lands of Western Canada, the Canadian Government has increased the area that may be taken by a homesteader to 320 acres—160 free and 160 to be purchased at $3.00 per acre. These lands are in the grain-raising area, where mixed farming is also carried on with unqualified success. A railway will shortly be built to Hudson Bay, bringing the world's markets a thousand miles nearer these wheat-fields, where schools and churches are convenient, climate excellent, railways close to all settlements, and local markets good.

"It would take time to assimilate the revelations that a visit to the great empire lying to the North of us unfolded at every turn."—Correspondence of a National Editor, who visited Western Canada in August, 1908.

SPORTING GOSSIP

Kid Elberfeld, late manager of the lamented Yankees, has lost all his faith in the horseshoe as an omen of luck. Once upon a time the Kid looked on the rusty old shoe as the one best bet in the luck-producing game, but now he puts it in the same class as 13, the lemon and other producers of trouble. Once the Kid always carried a horseshoe with him on his travels, but he has tossed it in the attic with other forgotten memories such as .300 batting averages of the dim past. No manager ever had a more strenuous time of piloting a ball team than the "Tobasco Kid." During his short reign of terror and horror, the New York team managed to win a game every now and then. Such a feat would cause much rejoicing on the part of the Kid and give him renewed hope. Other interesting events in the Kid's short reign was the desertion of Chase, the quitting of Keeler and the releasing of Orth. It is said that Washington would welcome Kid Elberfeld into the ranks of the Nationals. While no room could be found be found for the Kid at short, he would be used at third base. This difficult position is the one weak point in the Washington line-up. Shipke is a wonderful fielder, but too weak with the stick to be a regular. Unglaub is a cracking good hitter, but will never master the fielding end of the game to make him the regular third-sacker. There are few better ball players in the American league than Elberfeld. He is a winner, takes all kinds of chances, can hit, field and run the bases, and there is never a minute that he is not in the game from head to foot. He might not be familiar with third base, but it would take him only a few weeks of practice to become a star in that position. Not only would the National have a stronger infield with Elberfeld at third, but the team would be strengthened in batting and base running.

A football sharp, who a couple of seasons ago was a player, in commenting on the tendency of some referees to cause the game to drag by not being quite sure of themselves or their duties, said he thought officials were prone to pay too much attention to "small things" which could be passed by. Referees are on the field to note small as well as big things, and for them to overlook small things so as to speed the game along would be to set a bad precedent. It is a fact, however, that the seeming uncertainty of some referees as to just what to do slows up the game. However, the central board of officials is trying hard to see to the schooling of officials and bring about the education of a sufficiently large number to handle all games properly. A good official not only must know the rules, but be something of an executive. One trouble is that football officials don't get enough practice. It isn't like baseball, in which the umpires are at it every day for six months. Once or twice a week is as often as the football official gets out, and then only for three months. He doesn't get the drilling or the experience that the baseball umpire does to have the game at his finger tips. A game drags sometimes not through any fault of the referee but of the players. In an important contest the other day one side was penalized four times because its center delayed the play unnecessarily. A vote of thanks was due that referee for having sufficient backbone to inflict the penalty, though the spectators didn't know what the penalty was for. More than half the time, when there isn't a score board to announce it, the spectators don't know the nature of the penalty.

Merkle, the player who lost the National league pennant for the Giants, came into the Southern Michigan league as a third baseman instead of a first-sacker, and the big, strong fellow had a speed ball across the diamond from the third base territory which almost whistled. He threw from the pick, but with tremendous speed. He gained the title of Big Peg Merkle from this cause, and his teammates naturally cut it to Peg.

"Why? What difference does it make?"

"It's the rule."

"But why should it be the rule?"

"Because in the past horsemen wore swords. They wore them on the left hip. Hence, had they mounted on the right side, the sword would have got in the way. So they mounted on the left, and we still mount on the left. Horses are accustomed to it, and if you try to get up from the right you are liable to be kicked."

Smile's Face Value.

Although most of us would hesitate to express what might be termed the face value of the "modern smile," we certainly realize at times that it is a form of currency which is depreciating. In the "modern smile" we recognize the crude, official thing which neither illuminates, cheers nor bridges awful gaps of silence. It may savor of suggesting a wave of imbecility to declare that we ought all to smile more, but it is certainly true that the charm of a women's smile was once esteemed even above beauty.

"The first morning I left off coffee I had a raging headache, so I decided I must have something to take the place of coffee." (The headache was caused by the reaction of the coffee drug—caffeine.)

"Having heard of Postum through a friend who used it, I bought a package and tried it. I did not like it at first but after I learned how to make it right, according to directions on pkg., I would not change back to coffee for anything.

They were so swollen that I could not get my shoes on for a week or more. I used five or six different remedies and got no help, only when applying them the burning was worse and the itching less. For two or three weeks the suffering was intense and during that time I did not sleep an hour at a time. Then one morning I tried a bit of Cuticura. From the moment it touched me the itching was gone and I have not felt a bit of it since. The swelling went down and in two days I had my shoes on and was about as usual. George B. HEAR MESSAGE OF PRESIDENT

DOCUMENT FROM CHIEF EXECUTIVE READ IN CONGRESS.

URGES CHANGES IN LAWS

Present Currency System Declared Imperfect—Control of Corporations the Province of the National Government—Conduct of Labor Leaders Criticised—For Postal Savings Banks.

Washington.—In his message to congress, read in both houses Tuesday, President Roosevelt makes important suggestions as to what he considers necessary legislation.

The president congratulates the nation on its present excellent financial standing, but calls attention to the need of remedying defects in the currency system. He says:

The financial standing of the nation at the present time is excellent, and the financial management of the nation's interests by the government during the last seven years has shown the most satisfactory results. But our currency system is imperfect, and it is earnestly to be hoped that the currency commission will be able to propose a thoroughly good system which will do away with the existing defects.

During the period from July 1, 1901, to September 30, 1908, there was an increase in the amount of money in circulation of $902,991,399. The increase in the per capita during this period was $7.06. Within this time there were several occasions when it was necessary for the treasury department to come to the relief of the money market by purchases or redemptions of United States bonds; by increasing deposits in national banks; by stimulating additional issues of national bank notes, and by facilitating importations from abroad of gold. Our imperfect currency system has made these proceedings necessary, and they were effective until the monetary disturbance in the fall of 1907 immensely increased the difficulty of ordinary methods of relief. By the middle of November the available working balance in the treasury had been reduced to approximately $5,000,000. Clearing house associations throughout the country had been obliged to resort to the expedient of issuing clearing house certificates, to be used as money. In this emergency it was determined to invite subscriptions for $50,000,000 Panama canal bonds, and $100,000,000 three per cent. certificates of indebtedness authorized by the act of June 13, 1898. It was proposed to redeposit in the national banks the proceeds of these issues, and to permit their use as a basis for additional circulating notes of national banks. The moral effect of this procedure was so great that it was necessary to issue only $24,631,980 of the Panama bonds and $15,436,500 of the certificates of indebtedness.

During the period from July 1, 1901, to September 30, 1908, the balance between the net ordinary receipts and the net ordinary expenses of the government showed a surplus in the four years 1902, 1903, 1906, and 1907, and a deficit in the years 1904, 1905, 1908 and a fractional part of the fiscal year 1909. The net result was a surplus of $99,283,413.54. The financial operations of the government during this period, based upon these differences between receipts and expenditures, resulted in a net reduction of the interest-bearing debt of the United States from $987,141,040 to $897,253,990, notwithstanding that there had been two sales of Panama canal bonds amounting in the aggregate to $54,631,980, and an issue of three per cent. certificates of indebtedness under the act of June 13, 1898, amounting to $15,436,500. Refunding operations of the treasury department under the act of March 14, 1900, resulted in the conversion into two per cent. consols of 1930 of $200,309,400 bonds bearing higher rates of interest. A decrease of $8,687,956 in the annual interest charge resulted from these operations.

In short, during the seven years and three months there has been a net surplus of nearly one hundred millions of receipts over expenditures, a reduction of the interest-bearing debt by ninety millions, in spite of the extraordinary expense of the Panama canal, and a saving of nearly nine millions on the annual interest charge.

The message reiterates the well-known views of the president that the control of great corporations, especially the railroads of the country, should be vested in the national government. He says:

I believe that it is worse than folly to attempt to prohibit all combinations as is done by the Sherman anti-trust law, because such a law can be enforced only imperfectly and unequally, and its enforcement works almost as much hardship as good. I strongly advocate that instead of an unwise effort to prohibit all combinations, there shall be substituted a law which shall expressly permit combinations which are in the interest of the public, but shall at the same time give to some agency in the national government full power of control and supervision over them.

The railways of the country should be put completely under the interstate commerce commission and removed from the domain of the anti-trust law. The power of the commission should be made thoroughgoing, so that it could exercise complete supervision and control over the issue of securities as well as over the raising and lowering of rates. As regards rates, at least, this power should be summary. . . . Rates must be made as low as is compatible with giving proper returns to all the employes of the railroad, from the highest to the lowest, and proper returns to the shareholders, but they must not, for instance, be reduced in such fashion as to necessitate a cut in the wages of the employes or the abolition of the proper and legitimate profits of honest shareholders.

Interests of the Wageworker.

Turning to conditions affecting the wageworker and the man of small means, the president says:

Postal Savings banks will make it easy for the poorest to keep their savings in absolute safety. The regulation of the national highways must be such that they shall serve all people with equal justice. Corporate finances must be supervised so as to make it far safer than at present for the man of small means to invest his money in stocks. There must be prohibition of child labor, diminution of woman labor, shortening of hours of all mechanical labor; stock watering should be prohibited, and stock gambling so far as is possible discouraged. There should be a progressive inheritance tax on large fortunes. Industrial education should be encouraged. As far as possible we should lighten the burden of taxation on the small man. There should no longer be any paltering with the question of taking care of the wageworkers who, under our present industrial system, become killed, crippled, or worn out as part of the regular incidents of a given business. As far as concerns those who have been worn out, I call your attention to the fact that definite steps toward providing old-age pensions have been taken in many of our private industries. These may be indefinitely extended through voluntary association and contributory schemes, or through the agency of savings banks, as under the Massachusetts plan.

Urgent Need of Reform.

Our present system, or rather no system, works dreadful wrong, and is of benefit to only one class of people—the lawyers. When a workman is injured what he needs is not an expensive and doubtful lawsuit, but the certainty of relief through immediate administrative action. No academic theory about "freedom of contract" or "constitutional liberty to contract" should be permitted to interfere with this and similar movements.

I renew my recommendation that the principle of the eight-hour day should as rapidly and as far as practicable be extended to the entire work being carried on by the government; the present law should be amended to embrace contracts on those public works which the present wording of the act seems to exclude.

I renew my recommendation made in a previous message that half-holidays be granted during summer to all wageworkers in government employ.

Judges Too Poorly Paid.

Coupled with a eulogy of the judiciary of the nation the president urges that, beginning with the supreme court, the judges should have their salaries doubled.

As was to be expected, the attitude assumed by certain labor leaders during the recent election comes in for bitter criticism. The president asserts that demands made on congress for legislation were unjust and impractical and could but work harm to the cause of labor. While declaring that our judicial system is sound and effective at core, the president says:

There are certain decisions by various courts which have been exceedingly detrimental to the rights of wage-workers. This is true of all decisions that decide that men are, by the constitution, "guaranteed their liberty" to contract to enter a dangerous occupation, or to work an undesirable or improper number of hours, or to work in unhealthy surroundings; and therefore cannot recover damages when maimed in that occupation, and cannot be forbidden to work what the legislature decides is an excessive number of hours, or to carry on the work under conditions which the legislature decides to be unhealthy.

There is also, I think, ground for the belief that substantial injustice is often suffered by employes in consequence of the custom of courts issuing temporary injunctions without notice to them, and punishing them for contempt of court in instances where, as a matter of fact, they have no knowledge of any proceedings. Organized labor is chafing under the unjust restraint which comes from repeated resort to this plan of procedure.

Injunction Must Remain.

The power of injunction is a great equitable remedy, which should on no account be destroyed. But safeguards should be erected against its abuse. In substance, provision should be made that no injunction or temporary restraining order issue otherwise than on notice, except where irreparable injury would otherwise result; and in such case a hearing on the merits of the order should be had within a short fixed period, and, if not then continued after hearing, it should forthwith lapse. Decisions should be rendered immediately, and the chance of delay minimized in every way. Moreover, I believe that the procedure should be sharply defined, and the judge required minutely to state the particulars both of his action and of his reasons therefor, so that the congress can if it desires examine and investigate the same.

Harm Worked by Law.

Discussing measures necessary for the proper control of giant corporations operating in defiance of law, the president says:

Real damage has been done by the manifold and conflicting interpretations of the interstate commerce law. Control over the great corporations doing interstate business can be effective only if it is vested with full power in an administrative department, a branch of the federal executive, carrying out a federal law; it can never be effective if a divided responsibility is left in both the states and the nation; it can never be effective if left in the hands of the courts to be decided by lawsuits.

The courts hold a place of peculiar and deserved sanctity under our form of government. Respect for the law is essential to the permanence of our institutions; and respect for the law is largely conditioned upon respect for the courts. It is an offense against the republic to say anything which can weaken this respect, save for the gravest reason and in the most carefully guarded manner. In no other nation in the world do the courts wield such vast and far-reaching power as in the United States. All that is necessary is that the courts as a whole should exercise this power with the far-sighted wisdom already shown by those judges who scan the future while they act in the present.

Forest Preservation.

The manifest necessity for forest preservation is pointed out as a duty the present generation owes to its descendants, and the president cites the case of China, where reckless deforestation has resulted in creating deserts, as an object lesson.

Inland Waterways.

Immediate action by the present session of congress for the improvement of our inland waterways the president declares to be imperative. He recommends the creation of a permanent commission authorized to coordinate the work of all the government departments relating to waterways, and to frame and supervise the execution of a comprehensive plan.

Postal Savings Banks.

Urging the immediate institution of postal savings banks, the message says:

I again renew my recommendation for postal savings banks, for depositing savings with the security of the government behind them. The object is to encourage thrift and economy in the wage-earner and person of moderate means. It is believed that in the aggregate vast sums of money would be brought into circulation through the instrumentality of the postal savings banks.

Parcel Post.

The much-discussed advisability of the establishment of a parcel post service is thus dealt with:

In my last annual message I commended the postmaster-general's recommendation for an extension of the parcel post on the rural routes. The establishment of a local parcel post on rural routes would be to the mutual benefit of the farmer and the country storekeeper, and it is desirable that the routes, serving more than 15,000,000 people, should be utilized to the fullest practicable extent.

Education.

Dealing with the important subject of education, the president says:

With the limited means hitherto provided, the bureau of education has rendered efficient service, but the congress has neglected to adequately supply the bureau with means to meet the educational growth of the country. I earnestly recommend that this unfortunate state of affairs as regards the national educational office be remedied by adequate appropriations. This recommendation is urged by the representatives of our common schools and great state universities and the leading educators, who all unite in requesting favorable consideration and action by the congress upon this subject.

The president points out the necessity of better organization of the various bureaus responsible for the public health, and urges the placing of all soldiers' homes under the jurisdiction of the war department.

Statehood.

On the question of statehood the president says:

I advocate the immediate admission of New Mexico and Arizona as states. This should be done at the present session of the congress. The people of the two territories have made it evident by their votes that they will not come in as one state. The only alternative is to admit them as two, and I trust that this will be done without delay.

An international agreement concerning interstate fisheries is at present being attempted, and in this connection the message continues:

I call the attention of the congress to the importance of the problem of the fisheries in the interstate waters. On the Great Lakes we are now, under the very wise treaty of April 11 of this year, endeavoring to come to an international agreement for the preservation and satisfactory use of the fisheries of these waters which can not otherwise be achieved. Lake Erie, for example, has the richest fresh water fisheries in the world; but it is now controlled by the statutes of two nations, four states, and one province, and this province by two different ordinances in different counties. All these political divisions work at cross purposes, and in no case can they achieve protection to the fisheries, on the one hand, and justice to the localities and individuals on the other.

Country's Foreign Policy.

This nation's foreign policy is based on the theory that right must be done between nations precisely as between individuals, and in our actions for the last ten years we have in this matter proven our faith by our deeds. We have behaved, and are behaving, towards other nations, as in private life an honorable man would behave towards his fellows.

I take this opportunity publicly to state my appreciation of the way in which in Japan, in Australia, in New Zealand, and in all the states of South America, the battle fleet has been received on its practice voyage around the world. The American government can not too strongly express its appreciation of the abounding and generous hospitality shown our ships in every port they visited.

Our Southern Neighbors.

The commercial and material progress of the 20 Latin-American republics is worthy of the careful attention of the congress. The International Bureau of the American Republics is doing a useful work in making these nations and their resources better known to us, and in acquainting them not only with us as a people and with our purposes towards them, but with what we have to exchange for their goods.

Panama Canal Being Rushed.

The work on the Panama canal is being done with a speed, efficiency and entire devotion to duty, which make it a model for all work of the kind. The men on the Isthmus, from Col. Goethals and his fellow commissioners through the entire list of employes who are faithfully doing their duty, have won their right to the ungrudging respect and gratitude of the American people.

For Ocean Mail Lines.

I again recommend the extension of the ocean mail act of 1891 so that satisfactory American ocean mail lines to South America, Asia, the Philippines, and Australasia may be established.

Citizenship for Porto Ricans.

I again recommend that American citizenship be conferred upon the people of Porto Rico.

Should Develop Hawaii.

I call particular attention to the Territory of Hawaii. The importance of those islands is apparent, and the need of improving their condition and developing their resources is urgent.

Progress in the Philippines.

Real progress toward self-government is being made in the Philippine islands. I trust that within a generation the time will arrive when the Filipinos can decide for themselves whether it is well for them to become independent, or to continue under the protection of a strong and disinterested power, able to guarantee to the islands order at home and protection from foreign invasion.

Good Work Done in Cuba.

In Cuba our occupancy will cease in about two months' time; the Cubans have in orderly manner elected their own governmental authorities, and the island will be turned over to them. Our occupation on this occasion has lasted a little over two years, and Cuba has thriven and prospered under it. Our earnest hope and one desire is that the people of the island shall now govern themselves with justice, so that peace and order may be secure.

The president urges that national parks adjacent to national forests be placed under the control of the forest service of the agricultural department; he also points out the benefits derived from pure food legislation.

The National Guard.

Now that the organized militia, the National Guard, has been incorporated with the army as a part of the national forces, it behooves the government to do every reasonable thing in its power to perfect its efficiency. It should be assisted in its instruction and otherwise aided more liberally than heretofore. The continuous services of many well-trained regular officers will be essential in this connection. A bill is now pending before the congress creating a number of extra officers in the army, which if passed, as it ought to be, will enable more officers to be trained as instructors of National Guard and assigned to that duty. In case of war it will be of the utmost importance to have a large number of trained officers to use for turning raw levies into good troops.

The Army.

As regards the army I call attention to the fact that while our junior officers and enlisted men stand very high, the present system of promotion by seniority results in bringing into the higher grades many men of mediocre capacity who have but a short time to serve. No man should regard it as his vested right to rise to the highest rank in the army any more than in any other profession. It is a curious and by no means creditable fact that there should be so often a failure on the part of the public and its representatives to understand the great need, from the standpoint of the service and the nation, of refusing to promote respectable, elderly incompetents. The higher places should be given to the most deserving men without regard to seniority; at least seniority should be treated as only one consideration. In the stress of modern industrial competition no business firm could succeed if those responsible for its management were chosen simply on the ground that they were the oldest people in its employment; yet this is the course advocated as regards the army, and required by law for all grades except those of general officer. As a matter of fact all of the best officers in the highest ranks of the army are those who have attained their present position wholly or in part by a process of selection.

The scope of retiring boards should be extended so that they could consider general unfitness to command for any cause, in order to secure a far more rigid enforcement than at present in the elimination of officers for mental, physical or temperamental disabilities. But this plan is recommended only if the congress does not see fit to provide what in my judgment is far better, that is, for selection in promotion, and for elimination for age. Officers who fail to attain a certain rank by a certain age, should be retired—for instance, if a man should not attain field rank by the time he is 45 he should of course be placed on the retired list. General officers should be selected as at present, and one-third of the other promotions should be made by selection, the selection to be made by the president or secretary of war from a list of at least two candidates proposed for each vacancy by a board of officers from the arm of the service from which the promotion is to be made. A bill is now before the congress having for its object to secure the promotion of officers to various grades at reasonable ages through a process of selection, by boards of officers, of the least efficient for retirement with a percentage of their pay depending upon length of service. The bill, although not accomplishing all that should be done, is a long step in the right direction; and I earnestly recommend its passage, or that of a more completely effective measure.

Japanese Exposition.

The Japanese government has postponed until 1917 the date of the great international exposition, the action being taken so as to insure ample time in which to prepare to make the exposition all that it should be made. The American commissioners have visited Japan and the postponement will merely give ampler opportunity for America to be represented at the exposition. Not since the first international exposition has there been one of greater importance than this will be, marking, as it does, the fiftieth anniversary of the ascension to the throne of the emperor of Japan. The extraordinary leap to the foremost place among the nations of the world made by Japan during this half century is something unparalleled in all previous history.

For More War Vessels.

The navy is the last subject dealt with. In that connection the president says:

I approve the recommendations of the general board for the increase of the navy, calling especial attention to the need of additional destroyers and colliers, and above all, of the four battleships. It is desirable to complete as soon as possible a squadron of eight battleships of the best existing type.

I most earnestly recommend that the general board be by law turned into a general staff. There is literally no excuse whatever for continuing the present bureau organization of the navy. The navy should be treated as a purely military organization, and everything should be subordinated to the one object of securing military efficiency. A system of promotion by merit, either by selection or by exclusion, or by both processes, should be introduced.

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

Democratic Fund.

St. Paul.—Although the state law does not require the state central committees to file expenditures for the gubernatorial campaign, Fred B. Lynch, treasurer of the democratic state committee, filed such a statement with the auditor of Ramsey county showing that it cost $18,013 to re-elect Governor John A. Johnson, leaving a debt of $1,685.

The name of Thomas W. Lawson of Boston, who favored Governor Johnson for the democratic presidential candidate, heads the list with a contribution of $1,000. Governor Johnson himself gave $500. Only the names of those who contributed more than $100 were mentioned in the statement, the smaller contributions merely being mentioned by amounts. Aside from the Lawson contribution, the statement shows the following donations:

Fred B. Lynch, $1,000; R. T. O'Connor, $1,000; Frank A. Day, $500; John F. Burchard, $500; Fred Wheaton, $900; John E. King, $200; Fred L. Ryan, $500; P. H. Nelson, $500; Gustav Carlson, $500; B. F. Nelson, $500; F. B. Jenney, $500; Otto Bremer, $200; D. Eberle, $250; R. J. Schiffman, $260; W. U. Winston, $200; Gustav Scholle, $500; Governor John A. Johnson, $500; W. W. Webber, $200; O. A. Robertson, $600; W. F. Kelso, $150; S. H. Wolfe, $26.

Several small donations netted $5,000, and donations of less than $100 amounted to $4,238.84. At the opening of the campaign there was $2,022.52 on hand, left by the 1906 committee.

Minnesota.

Minneapolis.—The first definition of "gross earnings" in the history of the state was given by the supreme court yesterday morning in a suit of the state against the Minnesota & International Railway company for taxes on unreported earnings. The state wins on a majority of its claims, and those involving the largest amount of money, and in the establishment of the principles will enable the state to collect thousands of dollars from a number of the thirty-five railroads doing business in the state.

The decision says that the earnings of a railroad, for the purposes of taxation, should not be confined to the returns on the actual traffic earnings. The lower court gave the state taxes upon two items involved in the suit and the higher court adds eight additional items in the seventeen claimed by the state.

The court holds that the road in addition to its receipts for transportation should pay taxes on receipts from lumber companies for loading cars for the companies, for the use of railway equipment by construction concerns and for the use of work trains by other roads. Income derived from interest on deposits, from the sale of old material and what might have been received from charging for hauling its own supplies, is not taxable.

Wages Are Increased.

St. Cloud.—More than half of the union men in the state received an increase in remuneration during the past two years, according to a report being prepared by Frank Hoffman of the state labor department.

Members of 140 unions to the number of 19,000 received an increase of 2 to 20 per cent in pay and 1,451 men had a reduction in their hours. There were 3,055 workers who received both an increase in pay and had their hours shortened. Only four unions reported a decrease in pay.

The union men raised $296,357 during the period for disbursement in aid of other members. Of this amount $199,550 was for strike benefits. Funeral expenses consumed $80,000 and $24,699 was expended in sick benefits.

Accidents.

St. Paul.—Only 44 persons were accidentally killed this year, against 72 in 1907 and 74 in 1906. The number of injured also shows a falling off, the number for 1908 being 67, against 87 in 1907 and 70 in 1906.

Over half the fatal accidents happened in the state of Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois and Michigan, the number in these states being 8, 8, 7 and 5, respectively.

NEWS NOTES.

St. Cloud.—Mrs. Frank Dueber was probably fatally injured by her twenty-year-old son, Bernard Dueber, in a row in this city.

Rochester.—The Men's Six o'clock club of the First Methodist church of this city will commence its deliberations for the winter.

Minneapolis.—Four young highwaymen arrested, confess to eighteen robberies in a few weeks; another member of gang supposed to be under arrest in state of Illinois.

St. Paul.—The Minnesota Transfer Railway company spent 2,249 times as much as it received during the year. Its revenue was only $36,986. The road killed three, and injured twenty-two during the year.

Cambridge.—Clarence Johnson, son of Gustav Johnson of East Cambridge, was drowned while skating on Rupp's Lake, about two miles east of this village. The boy was thirteen years old. The body was recovered.

Owatonna.—John L. Gibbs, former lieutenant governor of Minnesota and a decade or more ago one of the most prominent citizens of the southern part of the state, died at the home of his son-in-law, Thomas H. Kelly, in this city.

Duluth.—Through a raging blizzard, with the mercury hovering low in the tubes, four ministers of the gospel, two of them from Duluth, all day fought their way across the twenty miles of treacherous ice on Pelican Lake.

St. Paul.—Governor Johnson received a delegation from the Minnesota Retail Grocers' and General Merchants' association, and conferred with them regarding a peddlers' license bill to be introduced into the legislature this winter.

Two Harbors.—The last deer to be shot in Lake county this season was killed by Miss Emma E. Ookland of Duluth, who was hunting at Schauff Lake, north of Two Harbors. Assisted by friends, she succeeded in taking home with her a fine buck.

Minneapolis.—The attraction at the Bijou Opera House, Minneapolis, for the week of December 13th., will be "The Governor and the Boss." Wm. H. Turner, well-remembered for his excellent work in "David Harum," will enact the title role of the "Boss."

Duluth.—Mahlon Zearfoss, a fireman on the Great Northern Sandstone local, has a habit of falling from his locomotive while it is in motion. Two years ago he was confined to the hospital as the result of such a fall and he met with a similar accident which may prove fatal.

Crookston.—The meeting of the ninth district members-elect of the legislature this week may bear important fruit. After indorsing Rockne for speaker, and Rev. C. W. D. Ellis of Hawley for chaplain, the delegation was addressed by Professor A. M. Dunton, superintendent of the McIntosh schools.

Duluth.—An extensive program of reform is planned by the Duluth Civic league. The members of that organization are of the opinion that the city is running wide open at the present time even more than it was before the election of Mayor Haven, and they are going to take steps to make a more quiet city out of Duluth.

Minneapolis.—At the request of the bureau of education, at Washington, Dr. C. M. Jordan will order a special census of the children in the public schools to be taken some day next week. The request comes from Elmer Ellsworth Brown, commissioner of education, who explains that it is to be a special census differing entirely from the annual enumeration.

New Ulm.—Nick Ehrlich, aged sixty, committed suicide by hanging himself to a rafter in the hayloft of Herman Bentzin's farm in the town of Cottonwood. He was a native of Bavaria and worked around as a farm laborer in this vicinity for a number of years, and was somewhat addicted to drink. Sheriff Julius was deputized by Coroner Fritsche to take charge of the remains. The suicide had no relatives in the country as far as known.

St. Peter.—By the expenditure of $20,000 farm lands in Nicollet county having a value of at least $60,000 are to be reclaimed. This is being accomplished by the construction of the Rush river judicial ditch, work on which was begun four months ago. It is an engineering enterprise of vast importance to farmers in this and adjoining counties, and when it is completed soon after the first of the year, it will, in addition to restoring a large tract of land, drain some 10,000 acres.

Thief River Falls.—One voter in the town of Silverton, in this county, is responsible for the election of Oscar Ostrom, his fellow townsman, to the office of county surveyor. Of all the 2,600 or more voters in the country, the one in Silverton was the only one to vote for a man to fill the position, no one having filed and no name appearing printed on the ballot. By writing in the name of his neighbor, this voter elected Oscar Ostrom just as effectively as though every voter in the county had honored him with their support.

THE SUNBEAM.

A fair representation, according to population, on the board of County Commissioners, is the demand of the N.E corner.

There is some talk of getting up a monster petition to congress to get a little slice of cash from that river and harbor bill to dredge Red Lake River.

Northern Minnesota has no great kick comeing on the present winter, but we have not heard much talk about moving any farther north for the past two weeks.

County Att. Maybury has got right after the evil doers in the county of Polk, at the last session of the grand jury, and is making a neat clean house for Erik Hagen to move into January 1st.

It is claimed that Jacobson will not again be a candidate for governor, but you know we all resolve not to attend another fourth of July celebration on the morning of the fifth, but we get all over that tired feeling by the next year

The Polk County grand jury was in session last week, and the Crookston Daily Journal remarks "There will be a few who will breath easier when the grand jury adjourns. In not a few cases those who know they are guilty of law breaking are in doubt as to whether the other fellow knows it or not."

We note that the Eleven Towns editor has removed the cut of a sheep head from his editorial columns and substituted straight plate matter in its place. Better hunt up that old cut Al., and get it back in there, for we never saw a more appropriate place for a picture of a sheeps head than in the editorial colum of the Eleven Towns, although it is a little rough on the sheep.

All court cases, in the county seat removel, have been dismissed and the whole matter rests just where it started, nearly five years ago, but from its ashes there has arose a sentiment, in the northeastern part of this County, that demands a fair representation in the board of County Commissioners, accord to population, and we are going to have it, if we have to divide the county to get it. Red Lake County stands alone among all the counties in the northern part of the state of Minnesota, that have never re-districted, to give the newly settled portions of the county, a fair representation in the board of County Commissioners. We have petitioned in vain for justice, and we will either get it by re-districting, or division, and the move will be made as soon as the legislature ajourns next spring, which we expect to make some changes in the present law for the division of county's.

Glass Eyes for Animals.

Glass eyes are now made for horses, cats and dogs, as well as for human beings. These animals use a larger eye than man, and several are ordered for them at the same time, as a new one is necessary about once in six months. The edges become rough and produce irritation. [illegible]

Shadow Etiquette.

"I saluted the Kaffir chief respectfully and hearty," said the sailor. "Can you imagine my surprise when he give me a kick?

"'Get off my shadder,' he says.

"'Wot?'

"'Get off my shadder.'

"I was standing, by crims, on his shadder, the shadder of his stomach. I skipped from there to the face. He groaned. When I got on to suplit ground again he says to me:

"'Didn't you never have no bringin' up? Look at you now, lengthenin' out your shadder longer'n mine. Crouch, consarn you, or I'll warm your hide with this here club.'"

The sailor gave a loud laugh and emptied his glass of milk.

"Them Kaffirs," he said, "regards their shadders as part of themselves. A polite Kaffir would no more walk on another's shadder than a polite American would hit a lady. They have a regular shadder etiquette. You mustn't on no account let your shadder be longer than a superior's. You must crouch to make it smaller, and that there crouch for the purpose of diminishin' the shadder is thought by the Spencerian philosophers—I don't say I think so, mind—to be the origin of the bow."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

An Unexpected Burns Lecture.

John Augustus O'Shea used to be in considerable request as a lecturer on his military experiences. Once, at Dumfries, he came upon the platform wearing in his buttonhole a daisy, which he quietly removed and held up.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he began, "I hold in my hand a 'wee modest flower' I plucked this evening from the grave of Robert Burns." The audience was interested and became enthralled as the lecturer went on to speak of the national poet. Then, suddenly recollecting that Burns had nothing to do with his subject, he stopped abruptly. "And now," said Mr. O'Shea, "I will proceed to relate my experiences in the war."

But by this time he had thoroughly engaged the sympathies of his listeners, who would not hear of another subject. "Never min' the war, sir," they vociferated; "gie us Robbie Burns!" And he did. This extempore oration afterward became one of the most popular of Mr. O'Shea's lectures.—London Chronicle.

A Hard Knock.

Railroad claim agents have little faith in their fellow creatures. One said recently: "Every time I settle a claim with one of these hard headed rural residents who wants the railroad to pay twice what he would charge the butcher if he gets a sheep killed, I think of this story, illustrative of the way some people want to hold the railroad responsible for every accident, of whatever kind, that happens. Two Irishmen were driving home from town one night when their buggy ran into a ditch, overturned, and they were both stunned. When a rescuer came along and revived them the first thing one of them said was, 'Where's the train?' 'Why, there's no train around' he was told. 'Then where's the railroad?' 'The nearest railroad is three miles away,' he learned. 'Well, well,' he commented. 'I knew it hit us pretty hard, but I didn't suppose it knocked us three miles from the track!'"—Argonaut.

The Page Between.

A New Orleans woman, well known for her work for charity, recently accepted an invitation to speak at an anti-tuberculosis meeting. On the platform she found herself seated between a bishop and a rabbi, and the tone of the meeting seemed to be rendered extremely solemn by the combination.

In order to lighten the solemnity, she said, turning to the rabbi, "Do you know, I feel as if I were a leaf between the Old and the New Testaments."

The rabbi turned a sad eyed gaze upon her.

"Yes, madam," he said, "and, if you will recall, that page is usually a blank one."

Kenneth's Fear.

Kenneth the Youthful (much interested in papa's unexpected catch)—Easy, pa. Don't waggle your leg about so much or you'll lose him.

He Was Spurned.

"Believe me," said old Gotrox, "although I'm an old bachelor I'm sure I could learn to be a good husband. You know, a man is never too old to learn."

"Nor too old to yearn, perhaps," replied Miss Peching, "also I'm sorry to say you're not too old to spurn."—Philadelphia Press.

Suggested by a Lady.

"Let me have five two-cent stamps please," said a lady to the polite young man behind the counter in the post office.

"Yessum," he said, handing them out.

"Can't you let me have them in one piece?" she added.

"Certainly, ma'am," said the young man. "Can I send them home for you?"

"Oh, no; I don't live far away, and I am going straight home. I wouldn't put you to the trouble."

"No trouble at all," said the polite official. "I haven't very much to do today, and I could easily spare an hour."

"Very much obliged," said the lady, smiling sweetly. "Dear me," she added, putting on a stamp, "what a bother it is to stamp letters! Why can't we send letters and let the postoffice send in their bill once a month?"

"They might just as well," said the obliging young man sympathizingly. "I'll mention the fact in my next report to Washington."

"Will you? How nice! But you mustn't mention my name. Say the idea was suggested by a lady."

Coral Islands.

A coral island is sometimes torn to pieces by a great storm, showing that islands disappear in more ways than one. This happened to an atoll in the Marshall group in 1905, when it happened to be in the path of a terrible hurricane. Waves about forty feet high swept over the hapless speck of land, carrying every particle of verdure and every form of life into the sea, and not a human being was saved. The upper part of the coral was broken off and swept away, and a few days later nothing but the placid waters of the ocean was seen where the atoll had stood.

Samuel Warren's Vanity.

The vanity of Samuel Warren, the author of "Ten Thousand a Year," in his early years of authorship at least, was remarkable, and there is a story told of him to the effect that on one occasion at a friend's house he had to take down to dinner a lady whom he had not met before, and as soon as they were seated at table asked her if she had ever heard of Samuel Warren. "Oh, certainly," was the reply. "My husband prefers Warren's blacking to any other. We always use it."—Westminster Gazette.

It Didn't Come Natural.

"I have heard that man tell the truth once or twice," said one Wall street man talking of another. "He can tell the truth, I admit, but it does not come natural to him. He reminds me of the Russian moujik.

"A Russian moujik sat one day in the anteroom of the military commissioner of his town. There was an anxious frown on his face. A friend approached and said:

"'What is the matter, Piotr?'

"'I am worried,' Piotr answered, 'about my son. I don't know what to say when the commissioner asks me about his age. You see, if I make him younger than he is he will be sent back to school, and if I make him out older they'll stick him in the army. What the deuce am I to do?'

"'How would it do,' said the friend thoughtfully, 'if you told the commissioner his exact age?'

"Piotr slapped his leg and laughed delightedly.

"'The very thing!' he cried. 'I never thought of that!'"

Pay of Army Officers.

On graduation the West Pointer is commissioned a second lieutenant and receives a salary of $1,400 if unmounted or $1,500 if mounted. Increases at each five year period bring the pay at the end of twenty years up to $1,900 in the one case and $2,100 in the other.

The pay of first lieutenants begins at $1,500 and $1,600; captains, $1,800 and $2,000; majors, $2,500; lieutenant colonels, $3,000; colonels, $3,500. Each officer attains a 40 per cent maximum increase in twenty years.

On the average the salary of the army officer is higher than that of the college professor, the minister or the graded civil service employee. The officer has allowances for residence and personal attendance. He may buy household supplies from a government commissary at cost.—Detroit News-Tribune.

A Story For Papa.

There is a moral in this little story of child life.

"Mamma," asked little three-year-old Freddie, "are we going to heaven some day?"

"Yes, dear; I hope so," was the reply.

"I wish papa could go, too," continued the little fellow.

"Well, and don't you think he will?" asked his mother.

"Oh, no," replied Freddie; "he could not leave his business!"

Starboard and Port.

Why do the sailors call the right hand side of the ship "starboard" and the left hand "port?" For the answer it is necessary to go back to the days of the Norsemen and Saxons. In the viking ships the warriors hung the "bords," or shields, on the side of the ship above the places for their oars. The viking himself held the steer oar, which was fastened to the right hand side of the stern. Thus the right hand side of the ship became known as the steer side, and as the bords of the warriors were hung there it was called the "steerbord," or starboard side, while the lower, or larking side, became the larboard. Bord eventually became corrupted into port.

The Dog Quit.

A man from near High Landing was down to Thief River Falls recently to meet one of his old admirers, and him and his dog was thrown out of his room at 2 a.m., and had to roost in the office the balence of the night —Eleven Towns.

About the only trouth in the above article, so far as we are conserned is the fact that we recently made a trip to Thief River Falls, and had the dog along. We did not understand that the above referd to us until we understood that it was being reported by the "star reporters" for the above sheet, that we were the party referd to, and for fear that anyone would be deceived by such "hog wash" we will take time and space to answer.

When we went to register, the last time we were in town, we found the hotel at which we have always stopped when in town overcrowed, so that we could not get room, but were referd, by one of the clerks, who we always thought was a friend, to another house On our arrivel at the "joint" we found that it was where the editor of the Eleven Towns and his star reporters made ther headquaters, when in town, but as the hour was geting late we retired for the night We do not want to mention the name of the house, but if you ever drop in there you will know by a sign which reads, "bowl of soup 5 cents." We don't want to say any thing to ijure the old gentelman, proprietors business, for he appeared to be a nice old man, who must have some place on gods footstool to make his living, and we don,t know of a more fit place for him than keeping a five cent "soup joint," in Thief River Falls, so as to furnish a place for the editor of the eleven towns and his star reporters to hang out, when in town. After we had tried to eat a little breakfast, we got some dog feed among which was some pancakes, but our dog Sunbeam, would not eat them, but if reports are true, they would have just suited [illegible] for they were. Later; We understand Lattimore had kicked on prices of the soup, and secured a reduction to two bowls for a nickle, for him, and his star reporters, as regular patrons of the house.

A teacher in a tenement district hurried from the school to find the mother of a pupil who had been taken quite ill.

"Can you show me where Mrs. Angelo Scandale lives?" she inquired of a cherub transplanted from the sunny south to a dark, sunless alley.

"Yes, teach', I show you," and a willing, sticky hand dragged her on with such speed as to make her stumble over an Italian dame seated on the threshold.

After the teacher's breathless flight toward the clouds the little hand stopped tugging.

"There where Mees Scandale live," indicated the horizontal arm and finger, "but she downstair sitting on the step," finished the smiling lips.—Harper's Magazine.

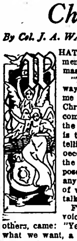
Story of an Army Christmas

By Col. J. A. WATROUS, U.S.A.



WHAT was my most memorable Christmas?

"The one which always comes back to me when thinking over Christmas festivities—comes rushing in at the head of the line—is that of 1862, but in telling of it it will be necessary to bring in the army, and I suppose you do not want anything that reminds of war in a Christmas talk."

From a number of voices, childish and others, came: "Yes, yes; that is just what we want, a story about Christmas in the army."

"The motion prevails, and you shall have what you vote for—a story of an army Christmas," said the veteran of three wars—the civil, Spanish-American and the Philippine insurrection.

"There were many troops in and about Manila in December, 1900. My temporary home was with an American family that had rented the large, beautiful mansion on San Sebastian street occupied by a Spanish admiral before Commodore Dewey sailed up Manila bay and said: 'You may fire, Gridley, when ready.'

"This patriotic man and his wife, a former Wisconsin teacher, planned a Christmas dinner and party. They invited a dozen or more officers and their ladies. The dinner did not differ materially from most Christmas dinners, yet it reminded the diners of holiday events in far off America, and the conversation soon turned in that direction.

"One little army lady began to tell about a home Christmas, its tree and the good cheer, when she was a small girl. 'No other Christmas had seemed quite so heavenly. I can see how lovely that tree looked; I can hear daddy's voice as he called off the presents; can see mamma's smile as we children danced and chattered; I can see the happy gathering about the table Christmas-laden; I can hear daddy's request for a blessing and—and, well it was all so sweet and beautiful. Before another Christmas came I hadn't any daddy.'

"The little lady's handkerchief was not the only one that brushed away a tear.

"'Captain, this dinner reminds me of one our fathers have told us about.'

"The captain was the son of a Wisconsin soldier of the civil war, and the speaker a lieutenant, the son of another civil war veteran.

"'Tell us about it,' said the wife of another captain.

"'Yes, we want that story,' said an old major of regulars, who had come down from the civil war.

"'It was after the battle of Fredericksburg, Va., in 1862. Four tentmates, one of whom was my father, and another the father of the lieutenant here, were remembered by their sweethearts. The four sweethearts got up the nicest kind of a Christmas dinner—did all of the cooking themselves—and sent it to their soldier boys. Accompanying it was a good, fat letter from each of the girls to her particular soldier boy. They told us of the table they set in their small tent, of the coffee they made, the comments as they ate the good things, of the four sweet girls, and how it was all enjoyed. Before the war was over all of the boys won commissions and were wounded, two of them twice, yet all returned home and married the four girls. One of those girls was the best woman ever born, and the lieutenant here will say the same about another of the four.'

"'And I will bear the same testimony as to another of those blessed sweethearts of 1862,' said the wife of the other captain. 'She was my mother.'

"'It is my turn to speak,' said the old major. 'I was one of the four to enjoy that Christmas dinner back of Stafford Heights, in 1862. The mother of my bairns was second to none of the four sweethearts.'

"Then the four—the captain, the lieutenant, the other captain's wife, and the old major—left the table, formed fours, shook hands, laughed, congratulated, and had such a reunion as seldom occurs.

"'Well, well, well, what a little bit of a world it is, anyway,' said the astonished hostess."

Under the Mistletoe.

Young Jones was coming down the stairs
A night not long ago,
And saw a figure in the hall
Beneath the mistletoe.

He chuckled softly to himself,
And said, "Now, here's a lark!

And kiss her in the dark!"

He did—but on her face the light
Fell suddenly aslant;
He looked, and to his horror saw
It was his maiden aunt!

"Yes, I know, pa; but then—I go to Sunday school—and you don't."

TORTURED SIX MONTHS

By Terrible Itching Eczema—Baby's Suffering Was Terrible—Soon Entirely Cured by Cuticura.

"Eczema appeared on my son's face. We went to a doctor who treated him for three months. Then he was so bad that his face and head were nothing but one sore and his ears looked as if they were going to fall off, so we tried another doctor for four months, the baby never getting any better. His head and legs had big sores on them and the poor little fellow suffered so terribly that he could not sleep. After he had suffered six months we tried a set of the Cuticura Remedies and the first treatment let him sleep and rest well; in one week the sores were gone and in two months he had a clear face. Now he is two years and has never had eczema again. Mrs. Louis Leek, R. F. D. 3, San Antonio, Tex., Apr. 15, 1907."

RECIPE FOR REAL TROUBLE.

Cheerfully Contributed to an Already Unhappy World.

Trouble making is an older industry than the manufacture of steel. Cain, the trouble maker, got into action before Tubal Cain, the iron worker; and Eve got Adam into hot water long before the Boiler Makers' union began business.

There are three kinds of trouble—imaginary, borrowed and real.

Imaginary trouble consists of railroad accidents, earthquakes, fires, suicides, the poorhouse, death, and the grave, carefully mixed and taken after a late dinner, or a drop in the stock market.

Borrowed trouble is the kind we get from our relatives. Its principal ingredients are visits, borrowed money, birthday presents, advice and expectations. But the real article is produced as follows: Put the sandals of endurance on your feet, take your life in your hands and follow by turn the How-to-Be-Happy Philosopher, the Preacher of Physical Culture and the Apostle of Diet.—Puck.

Grown-Up Children.

It is not only the frivolous whom the spirit of childishness is just now leading astray. Silliness is the fashion even among the wise. Women especially affect a kind of childish shrewdness in talking of serious subjects. Like children who have the habit of romancing, they lose the sense of reality, and because they never talk exactly as they think they begin to think exactly as they talk.—London Spectator.

CAUSE AND EFFECT

Indigestion and the attendant discomforts of mind and body are certain to follow continued use of improper food.

Those who are still young and robust are likely to overlook the fact that, as dropping water will wear a stone away at last, so will the use of heavy, greasy, rich food, finally cause loss of appetite and indigestion.

Fortunately many are thoughtful enough to study themselves and note the principle of Cause and Effect in their daily food. A N. Y. young woman writes her experience thus:

"Sometime ago I had a lot of trouble from indigestion, caused by too rich food. I got so I was unable to digest scarcely anything, and medicines seemed useless.

"A friend advised me to try Grape-Nuts food, praising it highly, and as a last resort I tried it. I am thankful to say that Grape-Nuts not only relieved me of my trouble, but built me up and strengthened my digestive organs so that I can now eat anything I desire. But I stick to Grape-Nuts."

"There's a Reason."

OF TWO EVILS, ETC.

Youngster Evidently Had His Own Idea as to the Choice.

My neighbor, writes a correspondent, has four young sons, whom he and his wife duly lead to church every Sunday. Just as the sermon was about to begin last Sunday one of the boys was observed to look very uncomfortable, and, having explained the nature of his sufferings, was sent home. His younger brother, in an urgent whisper, demanded of his mother: "Where's Tom gone?"

"He's gone home."

"What for?"

The mother whispered, low: "He's got toothache."

And the lad, as he sat up to listen to the preacher, muttered, in a stage whisper: "Lucky dog!"

LAME BACK PRESCRIPTION

The increased use of "Toris" for lame back and rheumatism is causing considerable discussion among the medical fraternity. It is an almost infallible cure when mixed with certain other ingredients and taken properly. The following formula is effective: "To one-half pint of good whiskey add one ounce of Toris Compound and one ounce Syrup Sarsaparilla Compound. Take in tablespoonful doses before each meal and before retiring."

Toris compound is a product of the laboratories of the Globe Pharmaceutical Co., Chicago, but it as well as the other ingredients can be had from any good druggist.

ENGLISH HUMOR.

She—Pooh! What is a kiss. It is nothing.

He—Well you once said you could refuse me nothing, you know.—Chips

Ready with the Answer.

Miss Baxter, feeling the effects of a torrid afternoon in June, was attempting to arouse the interest of her languid class by giving, as she supposed, an interesting talk on the obelisk. After speaking for half an hour she found that her efforts were wasted. Feeling utterly provoked, she cried: "Every word that I have said you have let in at one ear and out of the other. You"—pointing to a girl whom she noticed had been particularly inattentive throughout the entire lesson—"tell me, what is an obelisk?"

The pupil, grasping the teacher's last words, rose and promptly answered:

"An obelisk is something that goes in one ear and out the other."—Success Magazine.

Why He Remembered.

By some shuffling of the social cards the clergyman and the dog fancier were at the same afternoon tea. The wandering talk unexpectedly resolved itself into the question. Who were the 12 sons of Jacob? Even the cleric with the reversed collar had forgotten, but the doggy man reeled off the names without error, from Reuben down to Benjamin.

The clergyman looked surprised.

"Oh, I'm not great shakes on Scripture," said the man with the fox terriers, "but those are the names which some chap gave to a dozen puppies I'm willing to sell."

Not Anxious at All.

"One word of our language that is almost always misused," said the particular man, "is 'anxious.' You will hear people exclaim how anxious they are to see a certain play, or anxious to get a new hat, or anxious to take a trip to Europe, when they are not anxious at all, but eager or desirous. If anxious were used only in the right place we wouldn't hear it half so often."

A Death Each Second.

The number of deaths in the world annually is 33,333,333, or 91,964 per day, 3,730 per hour, 60 per minute, or one per second. It is estimated that the population of the earth at the present time is being increased at the rate of about 16,500,000 annually.

F. R. Pechin, for the past several years Supt. of the Wisconsin Division of the C. & N. W. R'y, has been tendered and has accepted the position of General Superintendent of the C., St. P., M. & O. R'y, with headquarters at St. Paul. Mr. Pechin was born in Pennsylvania and began his railway career with the North-Western as Brakeman at Chicago in 1880. By sheer force of ability, coupled with hard work, he rose rapidly, occupying by successive stages the positions of Conductor, Inspector of Passenger Service, Trainmaster, Ass't Division Sup't, Division Sup't, and now General Sup't of the Omaha Road. Mr. Pechin is a splendid type of the self-made man—strong, quiet, yet genial—still in the prime of life, he will go far, and deservedly so. He has a peculiar faculty for handling men, and always manages to get the best out of them. He has made hosts of friends who will watch his future career with the liveliest interest.

A Multiplicity of Fathers.

Ardyce had been learning to sing "America" at school and was trying to teach it to brother Wayne. One morning his father heard him shouting: "Land where my papa died, land where my papa died."

Ardyce interrupted: "Oh, no, Wayne, not that way. It is 'Land where our fathers died.'"

Wayne's expression could not be described as he tipped his head sidewise, and in a very surprised tone gravely asked: "Two of 'em?"—Delineator.

The Funny Corner

A good Samaritan, passing an apartment house in the small hours of the morning, noticed a man leaning limply against the doorway.

"What's the matter?" he asked. Drunk?"

"Yep."

"Do you live in this house?"

"Yep."

"Do you want me to help you upstairs?"

"Yep."

With much difficulty he half dragged, half carried the drooping figure up the stairway to the second floor.

"What floor do you live on?" he asked. "Is this it?"

"Yep."

Rather than face an irate wife who might, perhaps, take him for a companion more at fault than her spouse, he opened the first door he came to and pushed the limp figure in.

The good Samaritan groped his way downstairs again. As he was passing through the vestibule he was able to make out the dim outlines of another man, apparently in worse condition than the first one.

"What's the matter?" he asked. "Are you drunk, too?"

'Yep," was the feeble reply.

"Do you live in this house, too?"

"Yep."

"Shall I help you upstairs?"

"Yep."

The good Samaritan pushed, pulled and carried him to the second floor, where this man also said he lived. He opened the same door and pushed him in.

As he again reached the front door he discerned the shadow of a third man, evidently worse off than either of the other two. He was about to approach him when the object of his solicitude lurched out into the street and threw himself into the arms of a passing policeman.

'For Heaven sake, off'cer," he gasped, "protect me from that man. He's done nothin' all night long but carry me upstairs 'n throw me down th' elevator shaf'."

He Remembered

A restaurant-keeper hung out this sign:

"Coffee:
"Such as Mother Used to Make."

A customer asked, pointing to the sign:

"Is your coffee really such as mother used to make?"

"It is," replied the proprietor.

"Then," said the man with a reminiscent look, "give me a cup of tea."

Snooks, visiting at a country house, was put in the haunted chamber for the night. He did not feel the slightest uneasiness, but nevertheless, just as a matter of precaution, he took to bed with him a revolver of the latest American pattern.

He slept peacefully enough until the clock struck two, when he awoke with an unpleasant feeling of oppression. He raised his head and peered about him. The room was illumined by the full moon and in that weird, bluish light he thought he discerned a white hand clasping the rail at the foot of the bed.

"Who's there?" he asked tremulously.

There was no reply. The white hand did not move.

"Who's there?" he repeated. "Answer me or I'll shoot."

Again there was no reply.

Snooks cautiously raised himself, took careful aim and fired.

From that night on he's limped. Shot off two of his own toes.

The usual large crowd was gathered at the New York end of the Brooklyn Bridge waiting for trolley cars. An elderly lady, red in the face, flustered, and fussy, dug her elbows into convenient ribs, irrespective of owners.

A fat man on her left was the recipient of a particularly vicious jab. She yelled at him, "Say!"

He winced slightly and moved to one side. She, too side-stepped and thumped him viciously on the back.

"Say!" she persisted, "does it make any difference which of these cars I take to Greenwood Cemetery?"

"Not to me, madam," he answered, slipping through an opening in the crowd.

When Pat Laughed Last

A short time ago two Englishmen on a visit to Ireland hired a boat for the purpose of having a sail.

One of the Britons, thinking he would have a good joke at Pat's expense, asked him if he knew anything about astrology.

"Be jabers, no," said Pat.

"Then that's the best part of your life just lost," answered the Englishman.

The second Englishman then asked Pat if he knew anything about theology.

"Be jabers, no," answered Pat.

"Well," the second said, "I must say that's the very best part of your life lost."

A few minutes later a sudden squall arose and the boat capsized. Pat began to swim. The Britons, however, could not swim, and both called loudly to Pat to help them.

"Do you know anything about swimming?" asked Pat.

"No," answered both Englishmen.

"Well, be jabers," replied Pat, "then both of your lives is lost!"

Strong Water

Mr. Edison was once asked to send a phonographic cylinder to a fair. He sent this reply:

"You ask me to send you a phonographic cylinder and to say a few words to the audience. I do not think the audience would take any interest in dry scientific subjects, but perhaps they might be interested in a little story that a man sent me on a phonographic cylinder the other day from San Francisco.

In the year 1873 a man from Massachusetts came to California with a chronic liver complaint. He searched all over the coast for a mineral spring to cure the disease, and finally he found, down in the San Joaquin Valley, a spring the waters of which almost instantly cured him. He therefore started a sanitarium, and people all over the world came and were quickly cured. Last year this man died, and so powerful had been the action of the water that, before they could bury him, they had to take his liver out and kill it with a club.

Mark Twain on Etiquette

Mark Twain, at a dinner in New York, talked on etiquette:

"I once read a book of etiquette," he said, "and I still remember many of the rules. The most important rules were these:

"How to accept a proffered cigar—Slip the right hand into the box, draw forth two, place one absently in the upper pocket of the vest, insert the other between the lips, look inquiringly around for a light.

"How to leave a room properly—Open the door, place one foot over the sill, follow it up closely with the other foot, and then, turning slightly, shut the door.

"How to accept a dinner invitation—Eat a light breakfast and no lunch.

"How to accept an invitation to drink—Look careless. Say, 'Don't care if I do,' and fix the gaze on the other side of the room while the liquor is being poured into the glass. This will assure you a full portion."

Blissful Ignorance

A kind old gentleman, seeing a small boy who was carrying a load of newspapers, said, "Don't all those papers make you tired, my boy?"

"Naw, I don't read 'em," replied the lad.

"FROM DEATH TO LIFE"

BY FREDERICK WALES

Written expressly for this Magazine

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Edward Tyler, a young teller in the Cooper's National Bank, is told by the cashier, Robinson, to go to the race track and bet one thousand dollars on a horse named Selim Bay, giving him the money with which to bet. Selim Bay loses. Tyler, going to his lodgings after banking hours, learns that his accounts have been found one thousand short, while Robinson has reported to the president, Mr. Ellis, that Tyler had gone away under plea of sickness, and later had been known to have lost the missing sum at the race track. Tyler, feeling that circumstances are overwhelmingly against him, determines to take his own life. He goes to a hotel in a suburban village, writes some letters, then starts for the river. On the way a stranger joins him and forces his acquaintance. He has seen and recognized the young teller at the track and divined his intention, supposing, of course, that he is foolish and guilty. The stranger confesses himself Charles Brewster, a man of wealth, who has become engaged to a lady of his own social set and, later, under an assumed name, to a poor salesgirl, who has won his heart. Rather than face the odium of exposure, he chooses death and makes the fantastic proposal that they die together. Tyler agrees, and together, in the moonlight, they walk to the river. In return for Brewster's confidences, Tyler narrates the circumstances of which he is the victim. At the very brink of death Brewster, after making Tyler swear to the truth of his tale, forbids the act of death, and they return to the hotel. Here Brewster writes a letter to the president of the bank, inclosing a check for a thousand dollars, which he intimates was overpaid him by mistake. This will relieve Tyler from the charge of embezzlement and bring him back from death to life. Brewster, however, persists in his own determination to die. Tyler strives desperately with him, seeking to save the life of the man who has saved his own. He persuades Brewster to take brandy to steady his nerves and succeeds in rendering him intoxicated. In this condition Brewster is forced to go to bed, while retaining full control of his mental faculties and persisting in his determination to act as soon as the effects of the intoxicant have gone.

THE gray light of morning had come, the newsdalear had arrived with his bulky Sunday papers, the village was astir with the life, drowsy and slow, which betokens the morning of the day of rest. Tyler moved to and fro upon the sidewalk in ceaseless vigil. At last he went up to Brewster's room and knocked at the door.

Brewster, half feverish, half stupid from the effects of his recent intoxication, opened the door. He had not undressed when going to the room.

"What do you want?" he asked, irritably.

"I want," Tyler firmly replied, "my breakfast and you in my company. You are ill, and for a few hours you are in my charge. Whatever you do, you must restore your strength of mind. A quick, cold bath while I wait outside, then coffee and food and you will be yourself and know what to do."

Brewster hesitated, then closed the door with an abrupt promise to appear soon.

He came out a few minutes later, haggard, with bloodshot eyes, but calm and rational, though his features were set and stern.

"I think," he said, in quiet tones, "that you are very impertinent in your interference with my affairs."

"Quite as much as you were when you interfered with mine," Tyler answered quite as calmly. "Let us go to the dining-room. My interference will not go far. I have done what I believed was right. The coffee will clear our minds and we will know what to do."

The two men went to the table, and for a while they ate little, gulping down quantities of coffee and nibbling at the buttered toast.

Then first Brewster and then Tyler began in real earnest to eat.

"I have heard that criminals, on the morning of execution, usually eat well," Brewster grimly remarked, cutting at his steak.

"So I believe. And usually, I have heard, they take ham and eggs," Tyler responded.

"I think you are right. Waiter, bring me an order of ham and eggs."

"And me, also," Tyler said.

"Don't trouble to accommodate yourself to my taste," Brewster said. "I am only trying to carry the fashion."

"And I also," Tyler replied. "If the comparison applies to you, it does to me as well. We can speak plainly. You still feel that you are a criminal, deserving and doomed to death?"

"I certainly do."

"Very well. Last night I was to all intents a dead man. A benefactor appeared and brought me back to life. Now, if I permit him to die I am a criminal, deserving death. If I deserve that death I will receive my desert. You proposed going in my company. I will go in yours if you persist in going. I have said it."

Brewster looked at his companion in silence for a brief period. Then he spoke quietly.

"You are a fool," he said.

"Even so."

"Do you really mean to persist in such folly?"

"If such you term it."

"And render valueless the sacrifice I made in consenting literally to die a second time in order to save, not only your life, but your honor?"

"My honor is saved. You will not undo what you have done. My life has been spared thus far that I may make one supreme effort to save you. When I have made that effort, whether successful or not, the worth of your sacrifice has been proved. Last night you insisted on bearing me company through the white moonlight to the river. When all was ready you proposed half an hour's wait. I assented. Then you proposed still further delay. Now I propose that next Saturday night we again walk to the river at midnight. The moon will be shining then."

"But it might be raining! Ugh!"

"Then we will go far away and await another night such as last. But if in that time I can lay before you proofs—you to be the judge—that you can happily and honorably live, you will not refuse to do so?"

"Of course I would not. But what you mention is absurdly impossible."

"Nevertheless, it is my only chance for life. I ask you, in view of that fact, to agree to next Saturday night."

"What do you intend to do?"

"I hardly know. But I will do nothing which is not honorable, place you in no false light, tell no lies. With these conditions I ask liberty."

"Well," said Brewster, "you have won again. You are a fool, but a game and chivalrous fool. Saturday night let it be."

The meal was finished almost with cheerfulness. Then, Brewster agreeing to remain at the hotel, Tyler returned to his lodgings where he was promptly placed under arrest on a warrant sworn by Robinson, charging him with the theft of a thousand dollars. But, as he knew, bail was already provided, Brewster having telegraphed a friend for that purpose.

Next morning he unflinchingly presented himself at the bank. There was much staring and whispering, and then Mr. Robinson, red-faced and awful, appeared.

"I am astonished, young man," he said, "that you dare to show yourself after what has happened!"

"You mean after losing the thousand dollars you gave me to bet on Selim Bay?" Tyler responded, coldly, but in tones which could be heard by all near.

"What do you mean by such insolence?" Robinson blustered. "Do you think in that way to account for the thousand dollars you were short?"

"I think that is a very good way."

"Do you mean——"

"I mean that it is your word against mine. You know as well as I who is the liar and thief."

Robinson stammered in his anger, and while he was hunting for words to express his wrath a clerk came to ask both of them to appear before Mr. Ellis.

"So you were at the racetrack Saturday?" the president asked.

"For Mr. Robinson."

"And bet a thousand dollars on Selim Bay?"

"For Mr. Robinson."

"You know that my invariable rule is the discharge of any employee who bets at the tracks?"

"I do. It is a good rule."

"And yet you broke it?"

"For Mr. Robinson."

"And you now expect to be discharged?"

"I certainly do."

"And you acknowledge the discharge just?"

"I do."

"And what have you to say of the thousand dollars in which your cash was short?"

"By advice of my lawyer I say nothing. I believe a criminal charge lies against me."

"Mr. Robinson," said the president, turning sharply upon the cashier, "did you give this young man a thousand dollars to bet at the track?"

"I did not. I hope you don't believe——"

"Do you think he had a thousand of his own to bet?"

"I am sure he had not. You know that he came here just from college penniless, and that he has had only his salary since."

"Yes I know. But where did he get the money he took to the track."

"Well, of course, you know that the cash was a thousand short."

"Yes, Mr. Robinson, but that was by your act," said the president, sharply, "Look at that letter."

He handed over Brewster's letter, which had come in the morning's mail.

"Well, I—I——" stammered the cashier in bewilderment.

"And here is a letter for you in the mail," Mr. Ellis continued, handing over Brewster's letter addressed to Mr. Robinson, and watching the latter closely as he read it.

"Well, I—of course, I'm sorry," he said, very pale and trembling, "but under the circumstances I will acknowledge my mistake and will offer my resignation."

"Which is accepted," said the president, curtly. "And you will go to court at once and withdraw your charge against this young man. Mr. Tyler, I believe that you have told the truth. Whether you have or not, you have broken a rule, for which the penalty is loss of your position. I will give you recommendation as far as possible, and if I can assist you in any way I will do it. But I positively never will have in this bank any employee who ever places a bet on horseracing."

"I appreciate your justice and thank you for your kindness," said the young man, and, bowing, made his departure.

Outside the bank he stood for a moment with a kind of mistiness before his eyes as he realized that he was breaking irrevocably with the associations of his past business career. Then he went unhesitatingly to the railroad station and after an hour alighted at the village to which Brewster's letter to Miss Catherine Ball had been addressed.

An inquiry of the first passer-by and ten minutes' walk and he stood before an old mansion in the midst of beautiful grounds.

"I must see Miss Ball," he insisted, in reply to all the servant's inquiries, and at last a handsome woman of about thirty years, with a refined, intellectual face and somewhat sad expression, came to the door.

"I desire a conference with you," he said. "It is a matter, pardon me, of life and death. On your decision rests the matter of two lives."

"Come into the library," she said, leading the way. "Now what have you to say?"

"I have a letter for you," Tyler began. "A letter from a friend who contemplated suicide, but has been prevented for a time from carrying his plans into execution. He believes that his letter has gone by mail. I come to you in the desperate hope of assistance in overcoming his disposition for another attempt."

"Give me the letter."

He handed it to her. She read, then laid the letter in her lap and rested her cheek in her hand.

"It is what I expected," she said.

"Pardon me, Miss Ball. I do not know what the letter contains, but I know the history upon which it is based. The case seems nearly hopeless, but I must do what I can. I would spare you, but I would save my friend."

"Tell me frankly what you know."

"I know that he has long been engaged to you."

"Yes, and what else?"

"That he has—has——"

"Has engaged himself to another woman?"

"Yes."

"I knew that he did not love me," she said, still dreamily looking out of the window, "but I did not think this of him."

"It is an infatuation, a blindness," said Tyler, with all the sage wisdom of his twenty-five years, "to which men have been subject from the beginning of the world."

"Why do you speak so? What do you know of the young lady?"

"I know nothing, save that she is a salesgirl in a department store."

"And does that prove to you that she is unworthy?"

"God forbid!" said Tyler, flushing hotly. "My own mother, now among the saints of heaven, was once thus employed. I said that was all I knew. I believe her worthy. I used the word infatuation, partly because I could not understand—pardon me, I speak sincerely—this is no time for mere compliment—because I could not understand, after seeing you, why he should care for another. Partly, I believe, because I wished to use soothing words, knowing how you were hurt."

"I am not hurt," she said, in her soft, quiet way. "I am I, she is she. Charles Brewster loved her for some qualities I do not possess. All women cannot be alike. He is entitled to his preference. But he should have told me long ago."

"That is true. But it was his desire not to hurt you which held him back."

"Well, there is no reason why he should not marry the girl he loves. You can tell him so. I have never loved him any more than he loved me. But I liked him and I believed him an honorable man. I had, perhaps, a natural human desire to marry. But I see now that I was wrong to engage myself without love, and I am glad it is all over."

The man was by this time so fascinated by the noble and beautiful woman that he could not resist the desire still to preserve the engagement between her and Brewster.

"But, Miss Ball," he said, "suppose that I prove that Miss Laughlin is not really in love with Mr. Brewster, as he supposes?"

"That would have no interest for me."

"Would you not marry him if he should return penitent and ask your love?"

"Never!"

He was silent, for he felt that her word was irrevocable.

"Now tell me," she said, "how he was prevented from suicide after writing this letter."

Tyler sat in embarrassed silence.

"In this letter," she said, "he says that he is going down to the river in company with a bank thief."

Tyler flushed so painfully that Miss Ball instantly divined a part of the story.

"And you exchanged confidences," she said, sarcastically. "Par nobile fratrum."

Tyler's flush departed, leaving his face deadly pale.

"I beg of you, Miss Ball," he said, "to hear my story to the end. I am not a thief, though I contemplated and still contemplate suicide."

Something in his manner checked her rising scorn. She felt that she was indeed in the presence of tragedy.

Then in a few words he told her of his misfortune at the bank, of his rash determination, of Brewster's action in saving him.

Just Between You and the Editor

Election Bonfires

THOUSANDS of years ago, when barbarian man lived in a more precarious way than now and knew nothing of the teachings of science, he peopled the earth, sea and sky with demons who were able and willing to do him harm. They would prevent the discovery of game, they would bring destructive storms and droughts, they would keep the fish from his net, they would bring diseases upon himself or his cattle. What could he do to prevent their anger and secure their good will? His first thought, naturally, was that of bribery. He would give the god something to be let alone, something more if the god would show actual favor. How he hit upon the device of burning his offerings to the gods, who never deigned to appear in person to accept his gifts, cannot certainly be said, but there are a number of possible explanations. The most probable is that the utter destruction of the article offered implied giving it a spiritual quality like the soul of the dead. Numerous articles of food or use were burned or buried with the distinguished dead for use on their long journey, showing a belief that the most material things had a spiritual replica. In other cases there was a belief that the meat went up to the god in the form of smoke, that the god smelled a sweet savor and was vastly pleased with the gift and the giver. Possibly at first the sacrifice by fire was to some terrible fire-god only and afterward spread to other deities. At any rate, it was always the favored mode of sacrifice.

The hunter, when he had made his kill, would express his gratitude by giving the god a little of the meat. The herdsman, when he slaughtered, would make an offering in like manner. Then, upon any occasion of special undertaking, rejoicing or danger, there would be sacrifice offered, an animal being slaughtered for the purpose. But even then those undertaking the sacrifice thought that the god might well spare them a little of the meat and gradually it came about that when solemn sacrifice was offered the makers took all the best cuts and the gods got what was left. Finally, a few bones and perhaps a little fat and the entrails constituted the meal served up to the gods. The rest went to the devout worshippers.

This liberality of the faithful in bestowing bones upon the gods while eating the meat themselves could not fail to attract the attention of the irreverent, who have had their existence in every age, and the sacrificial fires were named bone-fires when out of hearing of the priests.

After the introduction of Christianity sacrifices fell into disuse, but the features which gave them popularity still survived. The political barbecue, with its ox sacrificed, roasted and eaten, is a lineal descendant of the old sacrificial feast. At certain seasons in Ireland, Scotland and a few places in England even to the present day fires are lit in commemoration of the ancient sacrificial fires lit with great ceremony at those very seasons. Now the only relics of the ancient customs are to be found only in the fire itself at the same season as of old; in the fact that everybody engaged in keeping up the custom understands that it is essential that there should be a bone in the fire, though they do not know why; and, finally, in the name which they give, that is, bon-fire. It is the bone-fire, neither more nor less, of the days of ancient sacrifice.

Victory over enemies, in those early days, was always followed by sacrifice and to this day the tendency to thus celebrate remains. The sacrificial gift no longer is cast into the flames, but still the victors gather round the fire as did their ancestors thousands of years ago; and the name bonfire still remains. In New York and perhaps other cities the custom has degenerated into a nuisance, in which there is no thought of celebration of victory. The small boys simply think that election night is the time to start bonfires. So, without a mention of politics, these little rascals work together, appropriating and stealing boxes, barrels, etc., and as soon as the sun has set on election night thousands of fires are lighted, the asphalt pavements are damaged to the extent of thousands of dollars and the fire department is kept busy looking after buildings endangered or actually burning. Such is the perversion of custom which ignorance brings.

Barbarism's Last Stand

Written expressly for this Magazine

THOSE readers of this magazine who went to school in the 'seventies may remember the classification of peoples into the sweeping categories of civilized, half-civilized and savage. In the first category were placed all people of European race, wherever found. In the second were placed all Asiatic and North African people, while the negro population of Africa, the American Indians with a few exceptions, and a majority of the Malay race were roundly set down as savage.

Profound indeed has been the change which thirty years have wrought. The old classification no longer can be considered. Barbarism is being swept from the face of the earth. In another thirty years every land will be civilized in the sense that was understood thirty years ago. The savage races, instead of undergoing the slow process of semi-civilization, pass at once to civilization. For a time, of course, there are grotesque lapses among the newly civilized, which is not surprising when we consider how large a streak of primal savagery we ourselves possess.

In America the Indian problem has been settled finally and forever. The Indians have accepted the inevitable, settled down to the occupations of civilized life and by intermarriage with the more numerous race are fast losing their identity as a people. In Central and South America and in Mexico the Indian blood predominates in the mixed race which is destined to remain in permanent control of those lands.

In Central Africa the naturally peaceful disposition of the negro race has enabled European civilization to penetrate without any of the sanguinary wars which marked the conquest of America. The railroad, the steamboat and the school are now found where a few years ago the maps marked the territory of the unexplored.

Japan, of course, is the classic example of a nation abandoning an old, fantastic, artificial and non-progressive civilization for the living, progressive civilization of those lands which have frankly accepted the necessity for continuous change. China, since the Boxer rebellion of a few years ago, when some of the conceit was taken out of the ruling officials, has been taking active steps to save herself by a like opening of doors and minds. It has been promised definitely that a constitutional form of government will be adopted within a few years. Persia has forced upon an unwilling ruler a constitution, but like the Russian Czar, he is trying in every way to cheat his people and render null a concession rendered in a moment of peril and fright. Turkey has obtained free government by a revolution and in a few years more will have a far more civilized administration than Russia, which long has been considered one of the family of civilized nations. Wherever freedom of religion, speech and education goes the self-interest of the intelligent leads to the adoption of the best features of civilization; and barbarism and ignorance speedily decline.

One spot where barbarism is making its last stand is the kingdom of Morocco, where there has been a successful though not fully consumated revolution, not, as elsewhere, against ancient wrongs, but against a ruler suspected of having a leaning toward civilization. Three years ago it seemed that Morocco speedily would gain civilization through peaceful penetration on the part of the French; but the unexpected action of Germany, actuated by jealousy at a move in expansion which she could not share, gave the Mahometan fanatics the needed encouragement and from that day to this Morocco has been engaged in war and steeped in misery. In time civilization will triumph here as elsewhere; but meantime, it is interesting to take a look at the country where barbarism is making its last stand.

The ancient name of Mauretania was applied to the present Morocco and a part of Algeria, the country to the eastward being known as Numinda. The native population—stretching westward from Egypt to the Atlantic, between the Great Desert and the Mediterranean, was a dark but not black people, one of the branches of what is generally called the Caucasian race.

These people, where they have preserved a measure of racial integrity, are called Berbers. From this name came the general designation Barbary States. They are a naturally peaceful people and ever have been the prey of the conqueror. They were conquered by the Carthaginians, the Romans and the Vandals in turn, always being despoiled and enslaved. Yet through it all the Berber has survived, though never having anywhere a shadow of national existence.

In the year 747 the Mahometan Arabs conquered the wretched country and the Arab commander, Akba, arriving at the west coast, rode his horse into the waves and bombastically exclaimed: "God of Mahomet, Thou beholdest that but for the elements which arrest me, I would have proceeded in search of unknown nations, whom I would have forced to adore Thy name."

The Arab conquerors had no difficulty in imposing their language and religion upon the Mauretanians or Moors and a fusion of the two races rapidly took place. From these mixed people came the Moors, who cut so large a figure in the history of Spain. During the time of their ascendancy in Spain these Moors arrived at a considerable state of civilization and learning, but with their fall a period of stagnation and decay set in and the Moors are now a degraded people, living under a government which is a villainous compound of tyranny and anarchy. For centuries Morocco, like the other Barbary States, maintained piracy and the enslavement of Christians and it was not until 1822 that this finally ceased.

Under the wretched native government the country amounts to little in a commercial way, but there was once a time when the Barbary States were the granary of Europe. Once the country was well wooded, but the forests have been wastefully destroyed, with resultant damage to the soil. Whole tracts have been turned to desert, to remain such until civilization undertakes irrigation and reforesting in an extensive way. The population is supposed to be not far from five millions. They have no national spirit whatever, being divided into innumerable tribes and clans who hate each other and who are united only in their hatred of the infidel. It was this hatred to which the rebel sultan-to-be was able successfully to appeal in his warfare against the sultan who, at the moment of writing, still clings to his tottering throne. There is a sprinkling of negroes and many of the Moors have an infusion of negro blood.

The prdouctions are those of a subtropical country, where everything is done in an extremely primitive way. There is no agricultural machinery and but few wheeled vehicles are to be seen. Foreign machines are considered as forerunners of opposition to the sacred religion of the prophet and work goes on in the old toilsome, profitless way. Not more than a hundredth part of the soil is cultivated and of this it is the custom to allow each field to lie fallow two years after one year of cultivation.

The Arabs are more or less nomadic in their habits, but the Berbers are inclined to live in houses. They inhabit, for the most part, the hilly country. The women are unveiled; and in other respects they are lax in following Mahometan customs. When the time comes, as come it will, that the French authority is paramount in Morocco the Berbers doubtless will learn rapidly and at last become a civilized people. Meantime, under the leadership of Arab fanatics in this corner of Africa, barbarism is making its last stand.

"Mr. Katzenlieb" on Receiverships

Written expressly for this Magazine

"I HAF hear that this wass the age of electricity, of steam, of combinations and of seferal other things already," remarked Mr. Katzenlief, as he laid down the daily paper. "That wass all wrong. It wass the age of receiferships. There wass going to be a council upon the affairs of Turkey and the great powers a little wass going to make themselfs the receifers yet of the assets by Turkey and the rest of that crowd. They wass going to preserfe the peace by Turkey. When they wass through, there will not only be peace by Turkey, but eferybody will haf a piece of Turkey. That wass the European way of obserfing Thanksgifing Day. That wass an American holiday yet, but Americans wass not the only people who haf an appetite for Turkey. This wass not the first time that Turkey wass in the receifer's hands a little. There wass one time, thirty years ago, when the Czar and the Sultan make a war and haf a lot of men killed and then the great powers make Bismarck the receifer by the affairs of Turkey. The great powers sit themselfs down to consider a little and when they get up they wass greater powers already. They wass receifers and they haf received.

"Now there wass a little Turkey that wass oferlooked at that time and the receifers wass called in once more. When they get through this time, maybe they leaf the platter und some bones, no?

"That wass the way by receivers. They wass there to receif. That was their business. Their motto wass not that it 'wass more blessed to gif than to receif.' Their motto wass that 'findings was keepings, already yet. Their next principle, when they haf any principles, wass that 'sharity begins at home.' When they haf no principles there wass not much difference by the results once. The debtor wass lifing by allowances. The creditors were lifing by hope a little and the receifers wass lifing by the fat of the land.

"The creditor wass hafing the satisfaction that the debtor wass not lifing by the creditor's moneys. The receifer wass entitled to his pay for gifing him that satisfaction. The debtor wass allowed to life und keep out by the chail and what more wass he wanting? The earth, a little? Und the receifer goes on receifing.

"At last the affairs by the debtor wass wound up. It wass different by a clock. When a clock wass wound up it goes, but when a business wass wound up it stops going. The reason wass that the feller who winds up the clock takes away the key and leafs the works, while the feller who winds up a business leafs the key and takes the whole works.

"There wass a receifer by a street railway company yet, who has put up a notice by the cars that a man who will receif a ride and not pay a nickel wass a dod-gasted tief, or words to that effect already. But he say that it wass all right for a receifer to get two nickels for one ride because he need the money. That wass not tiefing, he say; it was receifing. What wass the use of being a tief when you can be a receifer already yet?

"I haf hear that the reformers wass going to put all the trusts by the hands of receifers a little. Of course, the reformers wass going to name the receifers. Ach! The receifing that will be done! Und when the receifers haf received all the assets by the trusts, they will be ready to receif all the moneys of eferybody else. Iss it or iss it not?"

"Flames from Ashes"

Written Expressly for this Magazine
By JAMES PURRIE

DICK BURTON and Mary Cummings had lived side by side and had not spoken to each other for twenty years.

"I will never speak to you again," had been her last words which fell upon his ear, and that had been twenty years ago.

There had been no good reason. So Dick thought. Mary thought there was. Anyway, the quarrel had taken place, and Mary had kept her word.

Mary's father had died and her mother had died, and Dick's father and mother had died, and first Mary and then Dick had become the owner of a big stony farm and a century-old house. They had gone on their accustomed ways, and had ignored each other's existence as much as if they had been living on separate planets instead of on farms the boundaries of which wound in and out of each other after the fashion of boundaries of farms which date from old colonial times.

Never by any chance did either mention the other's name except when forced to do so, and then it was with a casual indifference which made their studious avoidance of each other's mention seem the merest chance.

It was election day and Dick had been to the polls and voted the straight Democratic ticket, after the fashion of his father and grandfather and great-grandfather. His road led past Mary's house. It was 1884, when Cleveland and Blaine were the contending candidates and when the opposing partisans advertised their preferences by wearing preposterous plug hats of felt—the Republicans black and the Democrats white. Dick had invested in one of these foolish hats and proudly wore it to the polls.

Constance Matthews was Mary's niece, and she was at the window when Dick went by. She began to laugh.

"Come to the window, Aunt Mary," she called out.

"What for?" answered Mary, who was deep in the mystery of pumpkin pies.

"Dick Burton is going by on his way to vote for Cleveland," was the response.

"Much good it will do him!" said Mary, with a disdainful sniff.

Mary was a Republican, partly because her father had been one, but chiefly because Dick was a Democrat.

"Come ond see him!" Constance maliciously insisted. "He looke fine. He is wearing a white plug hat."

"I wouldn't care to see a man makin' a fool o' himself," Mary snapped.

"Uncle Morris wears a black plug," Constance said.

"Well, that's different," Mary began. "It isn't so—so——"

"Well, he can do it and welcome!" Mary said wrathfully. "He won't wear it very long after he knows Blaine is elected."

"But Dick told me yesterday," said the girl, "that Cleveland is sure to be elected."

"That's all he knows about it," said Mary, red with indignation. "He'll change his mind later."

"He told me," said the niece, with keen enjoyment of her aunt's displeasure, "that he was going to pay the expense of having a brass band come out at the head of the Democrats who will march from the village to his house and have supper as a celebration two nights after the election.

"Won't it be fun to see them march past here, with their banners and torches, and playing 'Hail Columbia' or something like that?"

Mary was white with wrath.

"He wouldn't dare do such a thing!" she panted.

"Why not?" Constance queried.

"Uncle Morris will sic Bull on them as they go by," Mary suggested as a desperate remedy for impending evil.

"Fred English has sent him word that if he does he will shoot Bull full of fourteen holes," Constance cheerfully replied.

"Well, if they come past here, I'll——I'll——" Mary said, choking with anger. "But there is no use. They will not come. They are going to be beaten."

"Dick says not," Constance maliciously insisted.

Mary was too angry to reply. Anybody less privileged than Constance would have heard something decidedly to her disadvantage.

Constance went to the window and chuckled. Her chief interest in politics came from the fact that there was no school on that day and that it gave her opportunity to tease her Aunt Mary by quoting Dick's antagonistic opinions.

She sat by the window until Dick returned, when she mischievously called Mary to the window, ostensibly to see a red squirrel on the wall but actually to see Dick riding by with his white plug hat. Mary retreated swiftly and nursed her wrath until dinner, when her plan of revenge was fully matured.

"I think there are still some hickory nuts over on the hill opposite," she said to Constance, when the meal was finished. "Don't you want to go over there with me and see if we can't pick up a few?"

Of course Constance did and the basket was soon filled. Then, as it seemed that there were no more nuts to gather, Mary wanted to know if Constance didn't think it would be fun to pile up some brush for a future fire.

Constance thought it would. According to Constance's idea, the activities of this world could be classed under the general headings of study, piano-practice, dishwashing and fun. As piling brush did not come under any of the other headings, it must be fun.

Dick sat within his latticed porch with a spy-glass directed toward the pair. He would have died before he would have let anybody else know of his occupation. But he kept up the watch for hours while the brush heap grew bigger. He had given all his help a holiday and there was no danger of his being caught at his clandestine employment. So he laid down the glass and looked and then raised it and looked again. Trim and slim the two figures moved gracefully about, alike, yet different. Dick could not help thinking how much like Constance was now Mary had been twenty years before, still in short skirts and full of fun and life.

Boy and girl they had been, with manhood and womanhood just before them. He was very certain that he had been in love but he had never admitted it to any one else and now he was equally certain that his love had long been cold. But he thought it would be pleasant if they could be friends once more and talk of those old days and the confidences that had been exchanged so long ago. But he was not going to meet repulse again. He was sorry that Mary was so unforgiving and he would hold naught against her on that account. But that did not mean that he should expose his head to fresh wounds from the metophorical broomstick.

At last the brush heap was of sufficiently colossal proportions to suit Mary's vindictive intentions.

"There!" she said triumphantly, "that will make a big enough bonfire to celebrate Blaine's election!"

"Oh! Aunt Mary!" exclaimed Constance, whose exceedingly small stock of politics was of the Democratic persuasion. "And I helped pile it! What will father say? What will Dick say?"

If Constance had rested with the first question Mary might have felt conscience-stricken, but the last hardened her heart. And, to speak the truth, Constance asked the question with no other purpose than that of getting a rise out of Aunt Mary.

"What do I care?" Mary savagely demanded, while Constance turned aside to hide a laugh.

"You can tell them to look out for it about midnight!" Mary went on. "By that time I will know for sure, though I have been perfectly certain all along. I have sent Abner to the village to get the news as fast as it comes in. As soon as he hears that Blaine is elected he is going to hang a lantern in the gable of Widow Mason's barn."

"And what when he hears that Cleveland is elected?" Constance innocently inquired.

"Cleveland isn't going to be elected!" Mary emphatically responded. "But Abner asked me some such foolish question as that and just to satisfy him I told him he could borrow a couple of lanterns—a red and a green one—and put up the green one when he hears Blaine is elected and—but that's all there is to it."

Constance gave her aunt several more of Dick's confident predictions as to the result of the election and then mounted her pony and started home. She stopped in front of Dick's gate and the owner, with whom she had maintained an odd and jolly friendship as long as she could remember, came out to chat with her.

"Aunt Mary says that Blaine is sure to be elected," she announced.

"Not in a thousand years!" Dick emphatically returned. "Cleveland is elected just as sure as that sun is going down in the west!"

"Aunt Mary says not."

"Well, of course," said Dick, keeping in his temper as well as he could, "she doesn't know anything about politics. She reads the Tribune and believes it."

"Yes," said Constance, "and she says she is sorry for anybody who will believe anything the World says."

"She does, eh? Well, she will believe something different from what she does now in a few more hours."

"She has a big heap of brush over on the hill which she is going to light as a bonfire when she hears that Blaine is elected," Constance said, delivering the information which had been the express reason for her stopping at the gate.

"Well, if he doesn't light it until she hears that," Dick spoke with grim confidence, "the pile will rot away right where it is."

"She has sent Abner to town," Constance said, "to hang a lantern up when he hears Blaine is elected and she will light the fire at once."

"Good Heavens!" Dick exclaimed. "Surely she isn't thinking of setting such a fire with the wind blowing like it is now! She will set the whole country on fire!"

"But you say that Blaine isn't going to be elected!" said Constance.

"He isn't!" Dick insisted with passionate conviction. "But that fool of an Abner may hear and believe anything that isn't so—he's a Republican—and he may hang out a lantern without any reason for it. Go back, Constance, like a good little girl, and tell your aunt that it will be extremely dangerous to start a fire on a night like this. She will be almost certain to lose her house if she does."

Constance turned her pony's head and trotted back to Mary's house. "Dick says that you had better not set that fire tonight!" was the not particularly diplomatic manner in which she announced her message.

"He does, does he?" Mary answered furiously. "Well he can attend to his own business and I will attend to mine."

"He says that you will set the whole world on fire," Constance continued sweetly. "He says, though, that if you wait until Blaine is elected, you'll be lots older than you are!"

"Did he say that?" Mary asked in a voice choking with indignation.

"Well, those were not his exact words," Constance admitted. "But that was what he meant. He said that the pile would rot just where it lies. But he said that Abner was a fool of a Republican and that you were another—no he didn't say that—he said that Abner would believe any fool thing that he heard about Blaine being elected and would hang up his lantern and then you would believe it too and go burning up the whole country."

Mary could scarce speak for anger.

"You just go back and tell him," she said as soon as she could speak, "that he may look toward the Widow Mason's barn and when he sees a green light he will know that Blaine is elected. And then he can look over here and see a big bonfire burning in celebration of the victory over him and all the other mean, contemptible Democrats in the country."

"But, Aunt Mary, Dick says——"

"Don't mention his name to me again!" Mary exclaimed in passionate anger.

Constance saw that her teasing had gone too far and she now tried to sooth her aroused relative and persuade her not to set the dangerous fire. But she might as well have talked against the sweeping wind which threatened danger in case the angered woman persisted in her determination.

Back the pony went again and Dick was duly informed by a very much frightened and penitent Constance that Mary was determined to set her fire as soon as the green light appeared.

"Well, that settles it," Dick said. "I was going to the village to hear the news, but I'll stay here now to fight fire if she should set one going. Be sure to tell your father as soon as you get home to hurry over and see your aunt and reason with her."

"I'll send Uncle Morris," Constance "He is a Republican and Aunt Mary is too mad now to listen to any Democrat."

But when Constance got home her father and Uncle Morris and every other man and boy in the neighborhood had made for one or other of the villages to get the election news. Telephones were not common then as now and there was no way of reaching them. There was nothing to do but await the issue of events.

Dick, chafing with impatience, went in and out of his house, pacing around and around the yard, then back by his parlor fire, where he made an ineffectual effort to interest himself in a book. Each time he went forth he cast a dreadful glance in the direction of the Widow Mason's barn, but nothing was to be seen. The hour of midnight came and still he looked only into darkness. But from the window of Mary's house shone a light which showed that the owner was still keeping vigil. He grew miserably depressed and when he went out for the fiftieth time his face felt flying particles of ice, which the sweeping winds carried along, betokening the start of a snow.

"If a snow comes there will be no danger," he said to himself; but at that moment he looked again and saw the green light shining from the gable of Widow Mason's barn.

He turned a quick glance toward Mary's house and saw a lantern moving toward the edge of the wood. Without waiting to lock his door he hastened across his own field in the direction where the fire might be expected to spread.

He had with him a water pail and a shovel with which to beat back the flames. There was no water near the place where the fire was starting, but if it spread it might come within reach of the supply. The shovel was the best thing he could think of for beating out the fire as it spread through the dry grass.

He hurried over to his own line not far from where the brush heap stood, just in time to see Mary apply a "blazer" to the dried leaves at the base of the heap. She was on the windward side and the flame at once drove into the heart of the heap. A sharp snapping of twigs was heard, then the steady roar of the rising flames and the odor of burning bark rose pleasantly upon the air.

Dick stood by the stone wall which marked the boundary of the two places. He spoke no word and Mary knew nothing of his presence. In the strong light thrown by the brilliant fire Dick could see her features as clearly as if it were day. Hers was still a face of great beauty, though it had lost the youthful prettiness of twenty years before. There was in her face none of the exultation he had expected it to show. He saw her turn and look toward where his own light still burned, but she looked back with an expression of sad weariness which took away much of the resentment of the man, gray and grim, who stood watching outside the circle of light.

The wind came only in heavy gusts and during one of the periods of calm the flame rose in a perpendicular sheet which stood high as the neighboring tree-tops. Now was heard the sound of wind coming through the forest like the rushing of a distant train. The next moment it was upon them. There was a scurry of leaves, the trees shook and bent and the great flames, yielding to the mighty onrush of air, lay almost level with the earth. When the wind had passed, the fire was everywhere for many yards to leeward of the heap, burning fiercely among the dried grass and underbrush.

Mary stood for a moment in dazed fright, then picked up a crooked stick and began beating futilely at the advancing edge of flame. But the fire responded to her strokes only by a shower of sparks and she was forced to retreat step by step, while the area of flame went by leaps, in the direction of her neighbor's wall.

She dropped the stick and turned with the thought of running for help, but she realized that long before she could call

"The Peril and the Prize"

Written Expressly for this Magazine by David Kyle Nicholson

CHAPTER I.

LET others say what they may, I claim that for a bachelor there is no comfort like that of a furnished room. A hotel gives a certain measure of independence, but you are never for a moment unaware that you are in a hotel. You are one of many, and no matter how long you stay, you never feel that you are at home. A boarding-house is a place where you have all the disadvantages and none of the advantages of hotel life. Private board, so called, means that your privacy is in all respects reduced to the minimum. Extensive apartments make a man feel as if he were a fish and the only one in, say, Lake Ontario. But a well-furnished room with good light, proper heat and an obliging landlady will insure all the comfort any reasonable man can desire; and the feeling that he is lord of all within his four walls comes to him and comforts him when, wearied and disgusted, he comes home at the close of a trying business day.

I had engaged such a room as I had long desired. It had no outlook worth mentioning, but I am much more inclined to reading than to looking out of the window. If I were anxious for a view of out of doors, I had only a short walk to Riverside or Central Park. The room was spacious, my own belongings were duly placed, the fire was blazing in the grate and I settled down to my first evening's enjoyment of my newly occupied apartment. I was so well satisfied that I felt that it would be years before I should have occasion to choose other quarters. And yet so uncertain are the affairs of human life that I was destined never to spend a single night within those walls, even though the clock was just then striking the hour of ten.

I leaned back in my chair in dreamy enjoyment, accentuated by the fact that to-morrow was Thanksgiving Day and there was no going to the office. I am not lazy, but who does not enjoy a respite from the regular daily grind of business? I determined the hotel at which I would dine on the morrow, the excursion I would take, the theatre I would attend.

Then, though my years are not so many as they are now, I fell to thinking of the past. Everything is relative and the young man looks back a few years to what seems the distant past and sings "Auld Lang Syne" as sentimentally as the most ancient of his elders.

This was especially the case with me, who, in coming to the city years before, had in a moment completely severed with the past. On leaving the little academy which had furnished me with all that I could afford in the way of higher education, I had gone straight to the city and by an odd chance stumbled into a satisfactory position. I exchanged letters with my friends and relatives, but they grew less and less frequent and harder and harder to write. I had a few new-formed friends in the city, but they occupied little of my time or thoughts. So I worked through the day and at night went to my room and read and thought about the past.

That evening, which above all others must stand out in the memories of my life, I was thinking, as I often did, of Lucy Dean. I had known her but a year when I was at the academy, but she was still before me, a joyous vision such as I never expected to see again. There was a mistery about her, too, or rather, about her father and family. They had come to the little town and rented a house and Lucy had gone to the academy, the father had walked about with his head bowed and an aunt had kept the house and kept out visitors; and people wondered and talked and shook their heads. Where they came from nobody knew. Oftentimes the question was hinted and sometimes put point blank.

"Papa does not want me to talk about his affairs," Lucy would reply with so sweet a smile that there was no chance for offense. The two elders were shorter and more decisive in their replies.

One day the news went round the little town that the Deans were gone. They had rented a furnished house and the rent was paid three months in advance. They owed nothing in the village. Nobody had any word of their going. Nobody had seen them at the station. They had no horse, no carriage. They had not engaged any, so far as anybody knew. Their flight had been absolutely noiseless and unseen, as completely as if they had never existed. Their coming had been a mystery, their going had been a greater. They had gone Now seven years had passed and the mystery was as complete as ever. Not a single inquiry ever had been received to indicate that elsewhere in the world was anybody interested in their coming and going.

Now for good or ill I had chosen to make Lucy Dean the object of my romantic and sentimental regard. It was not sufficient to make me lose any of my good three meals a day or to cause me any particular grief at any time. It was rather a luxury than otherwise. It filled my dreams whenever I chose to be sentimental, gave me a chance to believe that I, too, had had my romance and supplied a vision whenever I hummed "Annie Laurie" or other lovesick tune. Also it is possible that her memory had prevented me from falling in love with some pretty stenographer whom I met in the course of my work and marrying and living happily ever after in a Harlem flat, up four flights of stairs.

I looked around my comfortable lodgings which I had determined should be my home for many years to come, and then took down a volume and began to read for the thousandth time Thackeray's "Cane-Bottomed Chair," sentimentally imagining that many years had passed and that I had grown old and white-haired, but still dreaming of the days of my youth and fitting my Lucy to the Fanny of the poem. True, she had never been in the room and I had no cane-bottomed chair, but when we are determined to be sentimental we do not stick at trifles.

I could hardly be blamed for my sentiment. With or without reason, sentiment is bound to play a part in our lives and—I had seen Lucy Dean. Seldom is given, below the stars, a vision of beauty such as I had beheld in the brief months of our acquaintance. The clear blue eyes, the light, rippling brown hair, the faultless complexion, the high, smooth brow, the frank, innocent expression, the merry laugh, the silvery voice, the dancing step never could be forgotten. And she was good as beautiful, with the strong intelligence necessary to complete goodness, kind, sympathetic and true. Never, I felt assured, would I see her again and, though I might grow old, Lucy would remain to me always the same.

How long I might have gone on dreaming I cannot say. We never may know, though we think we may, what would have happened if something else had not. I was brought back to earth by a loud knock at my door. I promptly opened and confronted my visitor.

It was the man with the raw-beef face and dingy green uniform of a public hack-driver.

"Ziss Mr. Westmark?" he asked in the language and husky voice of his kind.

"That is my name," I answered.

"Zare's a lady down in de street wants 'a see you," he said.

"All right, I'll come down," I said, though with profound wonder as to who could wish to see me. It must be, I vaguely thought, some distant relative from the country come to let me know the hotel at which she was staying.

I followed the hackman downstairs to the street where the carriage stood at the curb. He at once climbed to his seat after flinging open the door of the carriage. A face leaned forward from within.

"How de do? I suppose you don't know me?" came a thin voice. "I am Mrs. Minton, Professor Monroe's sister," she said, after I had admitted that I did not know. "The professor is in Brooklyn for a few days and he wants you to take dinner with him to-morrow."

"Why," I said, in astonishment, "I heard that Professor Monroe died three years ago!"

"Well, of all things in the world!" said the woman, with a feeble laugh. "If he is dead it is within the last hour. How on earth did you ever hear such a thing as that?"

"I had a letter from one of my classmates," I said.

"Well, you come over to Brooklyn to-morrow and see whether he is dead or not. Do you know if there are any more of his boys in the city?"

"I believe there are several," I said. "I will try to look up such addresses as possible and let you know to-morrow."

"I think it would be better," she said, "if you would give me the names now, and I will look up the addresses and have as many of them as possible to dinner to-morrow. But won't you get into the carriage while we talk? The air seems very chilly to me."

"Certainly," I said, and stepped within.

Just then the hackman shouted out some indistinguishable words.

"What is it?" said the woman, rising and putting her head out of the carriage.

"I say as how I've been drivin' round long enough," he said. "I've got to see the color of your money or I'll drive youse to the station, see?"

"No need of your insolence!" said the woman, taking out her purse and stepping to the sidewalk. "How much is the bill?"

What the hackman's response was I never knew, for the woman flung shut the door of the carriage, and at the same moment there was a forward lurch and the horses went away at a gallop.

I jumped up in the dark and tried the door of the carriage, but I could find no way to open it. I shouted, but in vain. I could hear a steady clattering of what I knew not, but it was sufficient to drown my voice, shut within the close confines of the swiftly moving vehicle.

On the carriage went—on and on and on, in spite of all my frenzied efforts to escape. Why I was being taken thus was a mystery. At first I thought of the ludicrous, if annoying, explanation that the woman was an impostor who had given the hackman the slip after beating him out of her fare and that the latter was taking me to the police station to answer for the sins of another. This explanation faded as the carriage continued on and on. I heard the crash of the elevated trains, the clang of the street car gong, together with the continuous beat of the horses' feet upon the pavement. Presently all these sounds ceased and we were going along dirt roads. The city was being left behind. I threw myself back on the cushions and defiantly awaited the outcome of my adventure.

I was utterly and hopelessly puzzled as to why anybody should take the trouble to kidnap me, for I was neither a maiden fair, a soldier brave nor a kingdom's heir, a traitor vile nor a millionaire, and why they should take such elaborate pains to carry off a broker's clerk with six dollars in his pocket was too much for my comprehension.

On we went. Like other foolish and impatient persons I asked if that ride ever would find an end. Of course it found an end, as does whatever is evil and distressing in life. The motion of the carriage slowed and then stopped.

There was a long wait and then the carriage door was thrown open and I looked upon a landscape brilliantly lighted by moonlight.

"Come out, young feller," said the husky voice of the driver. "Nobody's goin' to hurt you. But if you try to break away or go puttin' up a fight you'll come to a sudden stop, see?"

I saw, fortunately for my health and comfort. There were five or six fellows standing about and as tough-looking a lot as one could wish to see.

"This way, cully," said one of them, seizing my arm.

"Hands off!" I said, angrily, shaking myself loose. "I am not trying to get away. Here I am. What do you want with me?"

"Want you to go in the house and keep quiet!" said one of the gang.

"Mebbe you'd like to say something to me in particular!" said the one who had laid hands on me.

"I certainly would!" I said. "If the rest will see fair play, I'll promise you an interesting two minutes."

"I'm ready for you, all right," the bully said.

"Get out, you fool!" said another, chucking him unceremoniously aside; "the boss wouldn't stand for it."

"Don't be afraid, young feller," he continued, "you're goin' to get a square deal. Just be peaceable and you're all right. But there ain't no use gettin' mad about it 'cause there's no good in tryin' to buck the whole gang. Right in at that door!"

Common sense again came to my rescue. It would have been a fine piece of heroics for me to cry "Die, villain!" or something of that sort and fling myself at the toughs, but there is no doubt that I would have gained a broken head, a bloody nose, two black eyes and an assortment of sore, if not broken, ribs in return for my demonstration. I thought it over and decided to let the villains die at some other time and place, though I prayed that it might be soon. I walked unhesitatingly through the door and into a dark hall. The door closed with a bang, and I heard it locked from the outside. There was an uncomfortable wait, and then a door opened at the other end of the hall and a fat, middle-aged woman appeared, carrying a small lamp.

"How do?" she said, as she came forward with a kind of vacant grin, apparently intended to express welcome.

I stood stiffly and did not return her greeting.

"This way and I'll show you your room," she said, still grinning and showing a row of teeth which, while perfect, were absurdly small and with wide spaces between them.

I could see no reason for standing in the hall, so I followed without a word. Up two flights of stairs I went, and then I was shown a room which, while undoubtedly a prison for the time, was a most luxurious one. I saw a bed with snow-white linen, easy chairs, a table, a bookcase filled to overflowing. The room was spacious, the ceiling was lofty, the carpet was thick and fine. A grotesque feature, considering the undoubtedly criminal nature of the place, was a huge family Bible, occupying the place of honor on the table at the centre of the room.

"That looks comfortable, doesn't it?" said the woman, pausing at the door. "I hope the boys hain't been rough with you nor nothin', 'cause they had orders not to be. You'll be treated right, don't be afraid. The boss wants to see you a little bit in the mornin' and then you'll go all right, an' mebbe a tidy bit in your pocket. It's more of a joke like than anything else."

"Quite a joke," I said, stiffly.

"I'll be back in a minute," she said, shutting the door, which closed with a spring lock. I saw nor heard anything of the gang, but I knew that they were not far away, and it would be folly to attempt rushing past the fat woman who was constituted my jailer. She came back speedily, bearing a plate of sandwiches and a glass of milk.

"You'll find these are good," she said, putting them on the table. "You must be hungry after your long ride."

"Is it very far?" I asked, thinking thus to gain a clue, even if a slight one, as to where I was.

"Well, now! Do you think I'm such a green one as to answer questions like that?" the woman answered, laughing and shaking her fat—well, I believe that polite writers would probably call it her sides.

I drew up to the sandwiches without a word, and the woman was gone, bidding me a cheerful good-night.

I was indeed hungry, and the sandwiches were certainly good. I ate until I was satisfied, and then, though I knew it was far toward morning, I began looking around the room. The window was not barred, but it was at least thirty feet from the ground, and I could hear the steady crunch of the gravel in the walk in the garden beneath, which told me that there was some one doing duty as sentry to prevent any effort at escape. The walls were of stone, the door was of heavy oak. If I had attacked it with my penknife probably after many hours I could have pierced it, but to what purpose? I was there to stay until my captors saw fit to give me freedom.

I looked at the books. They were of an assortment such as any person of taste might select, and certainly nothing likely to indicate a criminal or even morbid taste. I looked in the flyleaves for some inscription, but found nothing, such search in one case having been anticipated by tearing out the writing. I looked at the pictures on the wall. There were three of them, paintings of rare merit. One was a landscape showing an excellent combination of lake and mountain. Another showed several boys engaged in a game of marbles. The other was a portrait of a lady, and in front of this I stood with starting eyes, just as my lamp, burning low, started to flicker preparatory to going out. It was a picture of Lucy Dean.

CHAPTER II.

The expiring light left me no choice but to go to bed. I had expected, in my feverish excitement, to lay awake until morning, but Morpheus is a god who plays some unexpected tricks, and the next thing I knew I was lying wide awake with the sunlight shining through the window. There was the natural start of surprise at my unaccustomed surroundings, and then I arose and began very deliberately to make my toilet, keeping back, so far as possible, my natural inclination to try to anticipate coming events.

"Peril and the Price"

I could hear somewhere a clock striking the hour of nine, and then there was a knock and, through what appeared to be the opening of a speaking tube, I heard the woman's voice bidding me prepare for breakfast, which would appear in a few minutes. It came, tenderloin, eggs, rolls, toast, fried potatoes, everything the best possible, together with a great, steaming pot of coffee.

"Seems you liked the sandwiches," she said, grinning as she removed the empty plate. "Mebbe you'l like the breakfast, too. There's lots worse places to stay than here."

"No doubt," I said briefly, as I sat down to the breakfast with an appetite which, thanks to youth and health, nothing could long keep away.

"An' there's a better dinner comin'," she grinned. "The boss told me to go the limit in fixin' up a Thanksgivin' dinner for you, an' what he says goes."

"When will I see the boss?" I asked as amiably as I could.

"Well, now!" the woman said. "I'll be when he is good an' ready an' not before. He never allows any questions. What I told you last night he told me to tell an' that's all. But he's a powerful nice man when you do what he tells you, an' when you don't, well! You'd just better look out, that's all!"

She left me, and in due time returned for the dishes. About four o'clock the dinner came, an elaborate affair with the inevitable roast turkey and a bottle of champagne. With it came several morning papers and a handful of cigars, the latter of which were of no use to me. I finished the dinner and retired to the sofa to read the day's news. But the paper soon fell from my hand as I sat staring, staring at the face of Lucy Dean. It showed her a few years older than I had known her, but there was no mistaking the face which had been in my dreams, sleeping or waking for seven long years. The mystery of that portrait in that house of crime was no less than that of my detention there.

I rose and paced about the room in wild excitement. Not only was there mystery upon mystery, but the floodgates were open after all those years and, for the first time in my life, I was in love! No longer was it a vague and soothing sentiment, but a burning passion, an absolute devotion, an unutterable longing, an overmastering desire. I would hunt for her until I found her, and I would make her mine. Unless——! The thought came to me and for a moment clutched my heart in a grasp of ice. Then I flung it fiercely away. She was living, she was unwed, she would be, should be mine!

The door opened softly and closed.

A gigantic person, whose purple face indicated many years of luxurious living, stood before me.

"I hope you enjoyed your dinner," he said, in soft, well modulated tones.

"I am your prisoner. Why do you waste courtesy upon me?" I answered, with anger almost choking me.

"You are my guest," he suavely answered. "May I take a chair? Thank you! I will admit that my invitation for you to spend Thanksgiving Day at my home was a trifle informal, but it was sufficiently pressing, as you must admit."

"I am helpless and must submit to your insults, as I did to your criminal attack upon my liberty."

"Insults? Not the least in the world. You are my guest because I chose to have you come. Have you had reason to complain of your treatment? Would any hotel in New York have given you better food? Have you ever slept in a better room or in one with more interesting pictures?"

He shot a glance at me as he asked the last question, which came very near its evident intention of surprising me into a confusion which would tell that I had recognized the portrait.

"Other than being unwarrantably and unlawfully deprived of my freedom, I have no complaint to make," I answered, coldly.

"For that deprivation of liberty I mean to compensate you," he said. "Just be reasonable and you will regard your coming here as one of the luckiest things of your life. Try another of the cigars."

"I don't smoke," I answered shortly.

"You miss one of the greatest blessings of life," he said, reaching for a cigar. "You don't mind if I smoke? Thank you!"

He lit a cigar and leaned back with his eyes upon the ceiling.

"Pardon me if I seem personal," he said, "but I presume that your salary is somewhere between one and two thousand dollars a year?"

"That is a matter concerning myself and my employers."

"To be sure! To be sure! And, pardon me, it concerns me also, for I have a mind to offer you double your present salary, whatever it may be."

"You have taken extraordinary means to bring your offer to my attention."

"Necessity, my boy, necessity! I did not wish, by any chance, to have any one else hear of my offer. And I did not desire to take any chance of having my offer refused."

"But I do refuse it!" I said, emphatically.

The man smiled.

"I expected to hear you say that," he said. "Of course you refuse, and that proves the wisdom and necessity of bringing you here. If I had made the offer at your lodgings you might have refused and persisted in your refusal. Now you will have time to reflect."

"Your talk is useless," I said. "Restore my liberty and then, if you have any proposition to make, I will hear you."

"Really," said the other, "I thought I had just this moment made it clear to you why that course is impossible. If I did that you might refuse. As it is," he added with a meaning look, "you will accept."

"And why," I asked, "do you think I would be useful to you in your business? I am very sure that I should not."

"I have my reasons," he said. "What do you think my business is?"

"I think," I said, very deliberately, but shaking a little at my own hardihood, "that you are some kind of a thief."

The man flushed a deeper purple.

"That is a pretty rude word," he said. "And sometimes, I may say—sometimes and under some circumstances—a distinctly dangerous word."

"No doubt," I said, "but I stand by my belief. If you were an honest man I would not be here. And a man who is not honest is a thief, according to his necessity and opportunity. Not all thieves are pickpockets or porch-climbers.'

"To be sure," he said, suppressing the anger which had started at the word, "there are gentry and vulgarians among—among——"

"Thieves," I suggested.

"I don't like the word," he said, knocking the ashes off his cigar. "But I will say that among the class you have in mind, as well as among others."

"And your assistants, who received me last night, belong to the class of vulgar thieves?" I queried.

"Undoubtedly. I don't use the word, as a rule. It offends more than one sensitive acquaintance of mine. But those fellows are, by no stretch of courtesy, anything but vulgar thieves. I must apologize for having forced such low company upon you."

"Don't mention it," I said, sarcastically.

"You will see no more of them," he said. "I have need of them and many others. I am, if my modesty will permit me to say it, something of a magnate in my line. I have need of your services, as well as of the services of those very different persons. You will perceive the high compliment I pay you in the estimation I place upon your moral qualities. If I should want—just supposing, of course—a citizen knocked down, a safe broken or a house burned, I would have only to say the word and those fellows would undertake it for a compensation which you would be bound to confess very reasonable. They will even, at my instigation, kidnap and bring to me an honest and virtuous young man whom I desire to see. In your case I have to take all precautions to prevent your excessive virtue from getting the best of your proper sense of self-interest."

"What do you want of me?" I asked, bluntly.

"There is a safe in your office of which you have the combination," he said. "Now, now," he added, waving his hand in a deprecating manner, "don't attempt any lies. I know and denial will do no good. I want the combination of that safe."

"That safe," I said, "contains not one cent of money at any time."

"I know that," he answered. "And if there were, it would not be touched. You can make an inventory every day, so long as you remain in the office, and nothing will be missing. Nevertheless, I desire and intend to have the combination to that safe."

"You will not get it from me."

"You say that I will not. I say that I will. Give me the combination to-night and you can be at your desk in the morning a thousand dollars richer than you are now. Keep silent three months and another thousand dollars will be yours."

"And if I refuse?"

"Then your employers probably will be making inquiries as to what has become of you."

"What you ask," I said, excitedly, "is dishonorable, and I will never do it."

"Take your time," said he. "There is no hurry. Mr. Whitwood, I know, is in Europe, and the combination will not be changed nor the safe opened until he returns. Meantime, until you have acceded to my request, you will remain my guest."

"My determination is made," I said.

"I will unmake it when the time comes," he answered, in smooth, even tones. "Now, before bidding you good-night, I will tell you a few things. If you attempt to climb out of the window you will get a bullet through your leg and be carried back to this room for treatment. If you attempt to set your room on fire you will be detected instantly and some of those vulgar thieves we were talking about will give you their undivided attention while others are extinguishing the fire. We are not amateurs and not easily frustrated. Now, good-night!"

His towering bulk stood before the door for an instant, his dark face wreathed with a wicked, cynical smile. Then I was again alone.

I sat down and thought of the difficult and dangerous position in which I was placed. The safe, to which access was demanded by the criminal chief was one containing papers only, and those chiefly of a confidential nature, relating to the character and whereabouts of clients and persons with whom they were involved in business matters. Many papers were sealed and had remained thus for many years. Some of these the criminals, for reasons known to themselves, desired to inspect. Their purpose was evil. Somebody must suffer if they succeeded. I determined to be strong as I could and at least never willingly agree to the dishonor of breaking my trust, nor accept the Judas price. But my blood ran cold at the thought of the possibility of torture, which I knew would be unsparingly applied.

The fat woman brought my supper of toast and hot milk.

"How do you like your room?" she asked. "I fixed it up myself especially for you. Them pictures an' books an' the Bible was all up in the garret, where there's lots of other old stuff. The boss has had new pictures in all of his rooms. He's a real sport, he is. When you come

We will then mail you this great book, now fresh from the presses, picturing more than 3,000 new-style things for the home. A part of the pictures are in actual colors. This book shows a greater variety of Furniture, Carpets and Housefurnishings than is shown in any retail store in Chicago. On each article it quotes a price lower than you ever saw. It shows the newest creations in furniture, draperies, etc. And it offers you credit on everything. Have whatever you want, at our lowest cash prices, and pay us a little each month.

WE TRUST YOU FOR ANYTHING USED IN THE HOME

We sell goods on credit at lower prices than ever were quoted for cash. You can have these home comforts now, and begin at once to enjoy them. No need to wait for the money. Simply pay as you can. We charge no interest and ask no security. Our dealings are all confidential. Any person who wants to make home more attractive is the right sort of person, and his credit is good with us.

OVER A YEAR TO PAY

Pay a few cents down on each dollar. Then take the goods, use and enjoy them, and pay us a little each month. On the average, we allow a year to pay. On pianos, two years. If misfortune comes, or loss of work, we do what we can to help out. Our whole effort, from the time you first deal with us, is to make you a permanent customer. And you will be. You will never buy housefurnishings elsewhere, and pay others' prices, after you once deal with us.

30 DAYS' FREE TRIAL

Whatever you select can be used for one month before you decide to buy it. Every article is sent on approval. You not only see it, but use it. You compare it with other similar articles, and compare our prices with others. If the article, for any reason, is unsatisfactory, simply send it back. You are under no obligation. The month's use will not cost you one penny.

FACTORY CASH PRICES

Cash mail order houses will try to convince you that credit costs more than cash. See for yourself if it does. Get our catalog and compare the prices. See who sells the lowest. The fact is, we sell on credit exactly as low as for cash. Our cash customers get not a penny of discount. To all we sell at factory prices, plus our one small profit. No middlemen of any kind get profit on our goods. We defy any other mail order house to show one price as low as we offer on a similar piece.

SAVING OF 15 TO 50%

We guarantee on every article a saving of 15 to 50%. We don't refer to your local store prices, for they are enormously high. We refer to catalog houses, selling for cash, and claiming to undersell us. Get our goods on trial. If you don't find that we undersell everyone else, simply send our goods back. Ask others to send goods on approval, as we do, and keep those which cost the least.

CAPITAL $7,000,000

This is the largest concern of its kind in existence. Our combined capital is $7,000,000. We have 450,000 customers. Our mail order buildings cover six acres of ground. In addition, we own 25 mammoth retail stores, in the heart of the largest cities, where we meet the fiercest competition in America. The only way in which we have grown to this size is by underselling all competition. Now we dominate the field. We control the output of scores of factories, and our enormous buying power enables us to practically fix our own costs. It would bankrupt any lesser concern to attempt to meet our prices.

You may pay cash if you want to, but we have no discount for cash. You may as well buy on credit, as half of the world is doing. You gain nothing by paying cash.

FOUR FREE CATALOGS

"Flames from Ashes"

assistance the whole woods would be in flames. Just then she saw, swiftly climbing over the wall, the tall figure of the man in whose despite she had set the fire. He swung a shovel above his head and with each whack the fire had ceased and a blackened area marked the place where the implement was brought down.

Grim and angry he worked away, breaking the line of fire and paying no attention to Mary, who followed after, stamping out the little flames which ever and anon started up where the fire had been checked.

As the fire reached the wall this obstacle checked the otherwise certain sweep, but there were bushes growing in and out which readily took fire and, burning in the crevices could not readily be smothered by impact of the shovel.

Dick dropped this implement and grabbing the pail rushed with all speed to a pond at a most uncomfortable distance and returning applied the water sparingly as possible to the wicked little flames he could not reach in any other way. Again and yet again he went for water. As he returned the third time, breathless and weary, he saw that the wind had changed and the flames were spreading in the other direction, toward Mary's house. Mary had taken up the shovel and was beating at the fire.

Up to this time neither had uttered a sound, but had silently fought the flames as if each had been alone and as far apart in person as they were in spirit.

Now silence was broken as Mary uttered a scream of terror and dismay. Her clothing was on fire.

Dick instantly flew to the rescue, catching the blazing skirts in his hands and smothering the flames against his own stout woolen garments. Then he seized the precious pail of water and bidding her lie down he succeeded in putting out the fire but not until her clothing was much burned and his own hands and face had received many a painful blister.

"Oh! Dick, this is dreadful!" were the words with which Mary broke her twenty years' vow.

Dick made no answer, but picked up his shovel and began whacking at the fire. He was angry at Mary, at Constance, at the Republican party, at Blaine, at the American electorate, at the whole world, including himself. He felt, too, a kind of unworthy satisfaction in being an injured innocent and in the certain knowledge that Mary could but recognize the fact.

JOHN M. SMYTH CO. 150-152 West Madison Street Chicago.

For an hour they retreated before the flames, battling their way inch by inch. But they were steadily reducing the breadth of the front they had to fight and getting nearer to the spring which would prove their ally.

"Oh! Dick!" Mary suddenly exclaimed. "The fire is spreading over your field!"

Dick, with his teeth set, was whacking away at the fire and as before, he made no answer.

"Dick!" Mary cried again. "Go home and save your own house."

"Bring out two pails," Dick commanded. "We can carry water now."

"But Dick! your own house will catch in a few minutes."

"Unless you want both houses burned down you will fetch the two pails!" was the rejoinder, between whacks of the shovel.

"Let my house go! It's all my fault!" Mary wailed. "Go and save your own!"

"Will you get the pails?" Dick demanded, with a mighty emphasis on the first word.

Mary departed on the run and soon returned with the pails and with these the fire was soon checked.

"Now run in the house before you catch your death of cold!" Dick commanded, turning to go.

"I'll go and help save your house!" Mary responded hopefully.

"Can't be done!" Dick responded shortly. "It will be on fire before I can get there. I will save what I can. You go in the house.

He jumped the fence and ran panting down the road without looking behind, where Mary, a sorry figure in burned and wet rags, followed in breathless haste after him.

A little brook ran between his house and the other buildings and here the fire was bound to stop. But it was clear that there was no chance of saving the house and Dick devoted himself to securing some of its contents.

First he carried out the pet birds, chasing out the cat and dog as he did so. Then came his legal and commercial papers, wisely kept in a convenient place for just such an emergency. Then came the family portraits and then the library. Mary had arrived and again they worked in silence, carrying out books and then odd pieces of furniture and the thousand and one little things whose loss would have been irreparable. As fast as everything was carried out, it was carried across the bridge which spanned the little brook.

"Don't go again!" Mary exclaimed, as the flames swept over the roof. "It's dangerous!"

"I must go!" Dick said. "I haven't a third of the things yet!"

"Let them go! Your life is worth more than the things in there!"

"I don't know that my life is worth so much!" Dick said bitterly, thinking that his house and most of his goods were burned without insurance, that he was a miserable old bachelor without a near relative, that Blaine was elected and the country going to ruin.

"I'm going back for a few more things," he said, starting toward the bridge.

"Don't go! Please don't go!" Mary said, following after.

Dick paid no attention, moving toward the back door, the lintel of which already was ablaze. He was destined, however, never again to enter the house in which he was born. As he neared the door Mary threw both arms around his neck and tightly held him back.

"You shan't go in! You shan't!" she said and clung with a grasp which nothing short of extreme violence could have shaken loose.

Dick tried to utter some word of protest, but his utterances did not amount to much. For one thing, Mary had him nearly strangled. For another, while he was brave enough to have gone into the burning house, like many another brave man, he was not altogether displeased at being prevented, against his will, from running into danger. Finally his veins were jumping in a most unaccustomed way at having Mary's arms around his neck and knowing that Mary was concerned as to his safety.

His show of resistance did not last long. There was a crash and a roar and a column of sparks mounting to the sky marked the site where the Burton homestead had stood for a time exceeding the memory of any living man. The pair retreated in time to escape the flying embers, and then Dick, seizing a pail, set himself to the further problem of preventing the fire from spreading into other fields. Fortunately it had been hemmed in by stone walls and the winding brook and only here and there was his attention required. Mary still worked by his side in spite of his repeated injunctions to go home lest she take her death of cold. They had not worked long when further effort was rendered unnecessary by a sudden passing shower which effectively dampened the dead leaves; and the fire which Mary had kindled was a thing of the past, save for the smoldering ruins which marked the spot where late the Burton home had stood.

The shower brought another necessity—that of hastily carrying into the barn the rescued goods which had been dumped helter-skelter upon the ground. The work was soon accomplished, for the amount saved was not large. Then, in utter weariness, they sat down within the shelter of the barn and gazed at the smoking ruin before them.

Mary, who had been too full of excitement and occupation before, now found time to begin to cry. Covering her face with her hands she bent her head and sobbed aloud.

"Never mind, Mary," said Dick, speaking kindly for the first time. "It was all an accident and can't be helped now."

"Oh! Dick!" Mary sobbed, "you are too good, too kind. I have acted dreadfully, and oh! it's too bad, too bad!"

Dick looked steadily at the ruins of the house in which were bound up the recollections of a lifetime and could not trust himself to speak.

"I will pay you for all this," Mary said. "Of course, I can't restore the old home, but I can pay all the money cost, whatever it is. I have more than twenty thousand in notes and bonds and I will agree to pay you anything you say. I will sign an agreement right now," she concluded pitifully.

"I won't take a cent," Dick responded energetically. "I will sell the farm for whatever it will bring and go out West and start life anew."

"You can't do it," Mary said. "You are too old."

"What!" exclaimed Dick with a jump. "I'm not forty years old yet."

"I know that," said Mary. "You are only two years older than I am, but you are old and I am old and everybody is old who ever had any part in the only days of my life I ever cared for. Everything is gone like that home which now lies in ashes."

"Ashes!" exclaimed Dick. "Ashes! What has my life but ashes? Every near relative I have had has been dust and ashes these many years. My friends have died, gone away, grown into new interests—what remains of those friendships but ashes? The home of my childhood is ashes. Once, early in life I felt about my heart the flames of as pure and ardent a love as ever man or youth has felt. That was long ago. For many years I have had—ashes. As you have said, I am now old."

"It was I who laid your home in ashes," said Mary, crying. "I will give you a deed to my house and the farm with it and go away myself. I was foolish and wrong, but you know I did not mean any real harm."

"I know it, Mary," said Dick, with a little husky catch in his voice. "Don't say anything more about it. It hurts me more to see you feel bad than it did to lose the house."

"How can you ever say that," Mary said, sobbing afresh, "after the way I have treated you for so many years?"

"Those years are past now, Mary," said Dick, with an unsteady voice, "and if we can be friends once more, I will think it has cost me little enough. Why," he suddenly and irrelevantly added, "there is a red lantern burning where the green one was. What does that mean?"

"It means," said Mary, rising and looking, "that Abner was mistaken when he hung out the green light and that those awful Democrats have won, after all."

Then, her face still wet with tears, she gave a little laugh so like that he had heard twenty years before in their thousand bantering arguments that Dick stood still, trembling with emotion.

"I had invited the marching club to come out and have supper Thursday night," he said, after a moment's pause. "But I guess I'll have to cancel the invitation."

"Don't," said Mary. "Let them come to my house and I'll see that they are taken care of."

Dick nearly fell over in his astonishment.

"Why!" he exclaimed, "Constance said that you were furiously angry because I purposed inviting them to my own house."

"I was," Mary admitted, "But I am going to try never to be foolish and narrow again. Haven't I a dozen cousins and lots of friends among them. Why shouldn't I entertain them? Besides, it will be your house then. I am going to make out a deed and have it recorded, whether you will or not and I will announce the fact when they come, together with an unsparing account of my foolishness and spite in setting that fire. They will come, if not on your invitation, then on mine."

Mary's face had brightened as she spoke, for she felt that she had found a way out of the difficulty. Her house was far finer than Dick's had been and she was giving up her childhood's home as he had lost his. Surely he would now know that she was doing what she could to atone.

"I don't want your deed," Dick cried. "I won't take it. I want more than that."

"I will do any thing I can," said Mary, hurt and trembling once more.

"I don't want your house, your land or your money," Dick said very deliberately. "I want you."

No true woman ever takes a chance of making a mistake. "You mean——" she said falteringly.

"I mean to ask you the question which for years I longed to ask. Then for other years there were ashes where once were flames. Now from the ashes the flames have sprung anew. I ask you, will you be my wife?"

"I will."

"And you will marry me when I say?" he asked.

"I suppose so."

"Then I will say to-day. We have let too many years go by as it is."

They went to Mary's house for breakfast just as the alarmed and mystified servants were preparing to search for their mistress.

Later in the day the minister and a very few friends were called, including the overjoyed and hilarious Constance, and the next evening the marching club received the surprise of their lives. Dick and Mary still live merrily and contentedly on their now united farms and one voter additional is relied upon to carry the traditional Burton politics. But his father and mother never weary of telling him never to be bigoted and always to remain good-natured in matters political, as well as in all other matters.

"BOBBY'S THANKSGIVING"

Written Expressly for this Magazine

By THOMAS MILBURN UPP

BOBBY was a little pig. Not a nice little pig with soft bristles and pink snout and cute little even hoofs, but a little pig who went around on two feet and wore shoes and snuffled and complained because dinner was not ready an hour before the appointed time. Who wanted all the titbits at table and the biggest apple and his own share and half of his sister's share from every box of candy. Who boldly asked the baker for a cake for himself when he made the family purchase and in like manner called for bologna sausage at the butcher's and nuts at the grocer's. Who, when he went visiting, kept his parents in continual confusion by his persistent and openly avowed greed. That was the kind of a pig Bobby was. There are lots more pigs like him and it makes us very sad to think that it is the other kind who have to grow up and get killed.

Bobby had his own circle of friends, mostly little pigs like himself, and they met in vacant lots and on street corners and infested lumber yards and livery stables and had to be chased away from the "firehouse" a dozen times a day.

One day Jimmy Geohegan announced a great bit of information which he had received.

"I got it from Sheeny Mike," he explained. "An' it's great. Dere's a lot o' rich guys got up a scheme to give de newsboys a feed on Thanksgivin' Day. Dere's goin' to be a million turkeys an' barrels of cranberry sass an' hull wagon loads of oranges an' nuts an' ice cream an' candy, an' everything else an' not a cent for nothin. Now where are they goin' to find enough newsies to eat all that, I'd like to know. They gotter have help. So Sheeny Mike an' Ginney Mike an' Mike the Mick is goin' to go in as newsies an' feed dere faces jes' as long as de rest. Dutch Peters an' Chicago is both on de committee of newsies to keep out de ringers an dey'll never peach on any of our gang. Not on your life!"

There was great excitement in the gang and it was unanimously decided to get tickets and go to the newsboys' feast. They were able fitile liars for the most part and with the base connivance of "Dutch Peters" and "Chicago" they were able to get tickets entitling them to attend.

When the time came, most of those who, like Bobby, had well-to-do parents, decided in favor of the home dinner and turned their ill-gotten tickets over to boys who were in greater need of a feast. Bobby, however, resolutely determined first to "feed his face" at the newsboys' dinner and then decorously go home and play his usual brilliant part at the family banquet.

So he lit out, dressed in his worst clothes, and took his place among the hungry newsboys. He was specially noted by the charitable ladies in charge.

"Poor dear!" they said. "One can see clearly that he never had enough to eat before."

But if this were so, they were determined that he should have enough this time. So turkey, cranberry sauce, figs, dates, candy and ice cream were forced upon him until he was as full of food as an inflated balloon is full of gas. At last, with his pockets full of candy and fruit, he made his escape, hurried home and put on his best clothes just in time to join the family in starting out to Aunt Sophie's, where they were invited for dinner.

Aunt Sophie said she "liked to see boys eat," and her liking was eminently gratified whenever Bobby came visiting.

The dinner was a glorious one, intended to give Bobby a chance to display in the highest degree his peculiar abilities, and Aunt Sophie watched him with pleasant anticipation.

Great was her surprise, soon turned to alarm, when Bobby barely tasted his soup, toyed with the turkey, took one bite of the pumpkin pie and put aside the ice cream.

"Have you been eating anything?" Bobby's mother questioned, but Bobby insisted stoutly that he had not and then, to turn the uncomfortable questioning, declared that he had been feeling ill since morning.

Fatal error! Aunt Sophie had been brought up in the country somewhere in Pennsylvania and, next after feeding boys, she enjoyed dosing them with medicines of her own concoction. Here was opportunity and she seized it.

She soon had ready her grand remedy above all others, her own particular pride. It was a mixture of powdered boneset leaves, rochelle salts and baking soda, which after being nicely mixed into a paste with castor oil, was fed to the victim from a spoon.

Bobby was led out like a lamb to the slaughter and indeed Aunt Sophie said something about his being a poor little lamb. Her error was a slight one. He was a little pig.

He vainly protested. His jaws were pried apart—they had been apart several times before that day—and the awful dose was forced upon him. His eyes rolled, his frame shook and catastrophe was clearly seen to be ahead. A quick alarm was sounded and appliances usual for such emergencies were summoned. After which, the deluge. Turkey, cranberry sauce, celery, figs and other incriminating evidence were there by the pound. Then came a period of weak wailing, followed by the confession that is good for the soul, supposing that little pigs have souls.

There followed a diet of bread and milk, toast and the like, before Bobby was himself again. But that time unhappily came and he is once more a little pig; but it is not likely that he will again attend any dinner intended for newsboys.

The Sloth

Written for this Magazine

THE laziest creature on earth, if it is proper to apply such a term to an animal who makes his own living and asks no favors of anybody, is that which is known by a name which implies just such a characteristic, the sloth. In the forests of the Amazon we find him hanging, back downward from the branches of a tree around which his great hooked nails are fitted. Here he hangs, eating or sleeping, which is practically all he does. He feeds, of course, upon the leaves of the tree in which his habitation is fixed and when he has eaten all the leaves within reach he moves a few inches, eats again and falls asleep. He hardly could fall if he tried, for he does not hold to the limb by muscular effort, but merely by the shape of his great curved claws. If he were shot and no death struggle followed the body would hang there until released by decay, when the great claws still would be left hanging. The long hair usually has some greenish vegetable organism on it and tends to hide the animal from any possible enemy. Taken to the ground, it can hardly walk and makes no attempt to defend itself, uttering only a feeble cry.

Esquimaux Children

WHEN Esquimaux children are very naughty they are punished by burning with a hot bone. Their hard-working mothers, who have bone needles and split sinews for threads, have the patience to sew up fur-clad dolls for the children when they are good. At each birthday a child has a bone put in a bag kept for that purpose, so he always can know how old he is. Most Esquimaux children can draw cleverly.

ONE of the safest ways to use coal oil for kindling fires is to fill tin cans about two-thirds full with fine coal or wood ashes then stir in enough of the oil to saturate the ashes and you will always have a good fire starter and one or two spoonsful is enough to start one fire. The oil moistened with the fine asbes that accumulate in stoves makes a fine polish for brass, steel and tinware and this mixture is also excellent for cleaning zinc and galvanized ironware. To freshen up gilt frames wipe with a soft cloth moistened with the oil of turpentine and then let dry without rubbing. Save all the egg shells and keep them in closely covered glass jars, and they will be good to settle coffee and fine for cleaning glass bottles, vinegar cruets and the like if they are put in the bottle with plenty of hot suds and the bottle then given a vigorous shaking and thorough rinsing. Waste fat may be utilized in the making of an excellent hard, white soap, for household use. Fry it out and strain, then to one-half pound reliable potash and a little water add three pounds of melted fat and stir for ten minutes, and then stir in one tablespoonful of borax dissolved in a little hot water and turn into pans to cool. The borax will soften the water when using the soap and the borax in it makes it good for toilet soap, and if it is to be used for the toilet, a little oil of rose added while the mixture is hot will give a pleasnt perfume. Before the soap becomes hard it can be cut into squares of the desired size. M. H.

Plaster of Paris Plaques

Take a picture clipped from magazine or a post card, place face down in a dampened dish or plate of size and shape desired; mix plaster of paris with water to make good paste, white or tinted with bluine, Venetian red, etc., cover picture with it. Do not let picture move, make plaque as thick as desired, work quickly before plaster stiffens, insert wire or ring at top to hang up, mark dish where top is before begining, let stand until dry, then slip out of dish. Ten cents' worth of plaster should make at least six plaques of medium size.

A Nice Tidy Piece

Take a piece of netting as large as is required for the back of your chair, lay it off in checks by looping the thread over five threads, working from you; then, when your checks are finished, work your letters "take a," then a "chair." In the remaining checks work a rose, beginning in the centre of the check, leaving four plain, then over and under two, then four, then six, then four, then two. Then repeat the other three sides the same until finished. Work the letters and the chair by counting the squares also.

Dear Editor:—Now-a-days, since there are so many parties and social gatherings, it is difficult for a hostess to have a new amusement. The game of "Proposal" is enjoyable for the younger set. Cozy corners and little nooks are arranged and a young lady placed in each. Then the young men start out proposing. Five minutes is given to each girl. At the end prizes are usually awarded to the girl who refused or accepted the nicest and to the boy who proposed the best. Each to vote.

The Penny Contest

Pass sheets of paper witb questions on, and plenty room for answers. Prize awarded to best one correctly. Place a penny on the table so all may see. Answers all found on it. What reptile? Copper head. What fruit? Date. What race? Indian. Which senses; Smelling (S-cent) What boundary? U. S. of A. What sees? Eye. What is given? Liberty. What emblem? Wreath.

Yours truly,

Good Old Times

Dear Editor:—What has become of the good old-fashioned cider apple butter made in a copper kettle, scoured until it was as bright as a new penny, and twenty gallons made at a time? The stuff that is now sold for apple butter is so badly adulterated that it is not fit for the human stomach. Oh, for a generous dish of apple butter like mother used to make when I was a child! Oh, those good old days on the farm will never be forgotten! We had good times then, and good things to eat, too. Every fall when the Rainbow apples began to get ripe all hands and the cook began to prepare to make apple butter.

It took two or three days to get ready and make the apple butter, too. We had to pick up and grind about twenty bushels of sweet apples for cider. The cider had to be made the last thing the day before the apple butter was made, so it would be sweet. All day long and sometimes away into the night all hands had to peel and core apples to "fill in with." The morning of the apple butter boiling by the break of day mother had the cider on to boil. She kept it boiling continually until noon, when she began to put in the sour peeled apples. As soon as the apples cooked to a pulp she began to stir. Now perhaps this was the most difficult part of the work, for the stirring had to continue for six or more hours. And this part of the work mother never trusted to any one. Although this "stirring off" may seem like hard work to the uninitiated, it is not as laborious as it seems. Everything was so conveniently arranged that mother could sit in the shade of the summer kitchen and with a long handled paddle stir the apple butter with ease and complacency. When it would not run off the paddle, and was of a dark rich color, it was sufficiently cooked to keep. Then it was dipped out in jars, large jars that would hold three or four gallons each. When they were cold a cloth was tied over them and they were put in the cellar.

Oh, how delicious this apple butter was on our hot cakes, for breakfast! And mother put it an inch thick on our bread when we went to school. Oh, those good old times, and good old dishes, are gone, never to return any more! Although I have just dined on Salisbury steak, amber pickles, potato salad, cabinet pudding and cream cake, yet I am hungry. I am hungry for a dish of old-fashioned apple butter, such as mother used to make. Although I am far from my birthplace, and mother has long since gone to dwell in the Silent City, in fancy, I can see her dear face, and ever busy hands, preparing the wholesome nourishment for her lusty sons, and fair daughters. S. E. B.

Washing New Prints

Dear Editor:—New prints should always be set before washing. The way to do it, however, depends much upon the color. Blues and greens are strengthened by vinegar in the rinsing or blueing water, allowing a teaspoonful of vinegar to each quart of water. Four ounces of alum to a tub of water is also considered efficacious. For black, black and white, deep purple and grays, salt is best. Dissolve pint in two quarts of boiling water and soak the garment in this for several hours. Then wring dry and proceed as usual. Madder tints may be soaked in a solution of sugar of lead, an ounce to a gallon of water. Strong black pepper tea in the first suds is best for setting some blacks. When in doubt it is best to try samples of the garment in each solution before going ahead. When ready to wash use clean, warm, not hot, suds, rinse thoroughly, wring dry, starch and hang in the shade. Never double a garment over the line.

About Eggs

The yolk of an egg well beaten can be used as cream in coffee; one egg will flavor three cups.

An egg boiled twenty minutes is more easily digested than one boiled ten. After being boiled twenty minutes they are dry and mealy and the gastric juice acts upon them readily.

The white of an egg beaten to a froth and mixed with a cup of warm sweetened water and used as a gargle will relieve hoarseness and tickling in the throat.

Mix a pint of water, a pint of milk and one egg, beat fifteen minutes, sweeten with granulated sugar, bring to a boiling point and when cold use as a drink for a cold.

Put coffee in pot, mix well with it the white of one egg before pouring in water (the yolk may be used in the same way at another time.) This makes fine morning drink.

Another old-time and good remedy for a cold is to place three unbroken eggs into very strong cider (make it stronger by boiling if necessary.) In three or four days the acid will eat the shells, then beat the mixture well and thicken with honey.

Take two coffee spoonsful before each meal. These are good tonic recipes. You need not publish my letter—only the information.

Wishing you much success, I am,
Very respectfully,
MISS ELLA M. SLOAN,
Pontoon, Ark.

Dear Editor:—For a cheap bread pan I have two dish pans, one smaller. I removed the handles from the smaller and it fits into the other nicely. A wire run in the rim allows it to hang up. To prevent odor of cabbage, onions, etc., use a tablespoon of vinegar while boiling and odor will pass. To kill bad odor on any article or in a room, smoke with burning cornmeal. Lamp chimneys baked forty-eight hours are better than to boil them as they last longer. To remove the lime from a teakettle fill with small potatoes and boil one hour. Remove lime while moist with a knife and ever after keep an oyster shell inside and the lime will not bother. Clean zinc or graniteware with coal oil. Soda will remove stain from egg spoons or teacups. Also put soda once a week in the sink pipe to cleanse it.

"Thirty-One Presidential Elections"

Written Expressly for this Magazine

WHILE this article is being written the result of the election of 1908 is not known. Otherwise the record of the thirty-one elections which have taken place since the foundation of the republic is complete, and readers of this magazine will have in compact form a history for which they would have to search many volumes. It should be preserved for future reference.

At the time of the adoption of the Constitution there was a party opposed to any party in favor of the Constitution as it came from the convention. The latter prevailed; but the opposition triumphed in forcing, in the various conventions called to ratify the instrument, an agreement that ten amendments should be adopted, embodying ideas which the original convention, under the influence of Hamilton, had refused to enact. By this compromise the Constitution came into effect with the assent of all parties.

The ten amendments, embodying the more democratic ideas of the party, at first known as Anti-Federalists and headed by Jefferson, were adopted and ratified according to compact. They forbid the establishment of any state religion and provide freedom of religion, speech, the press, assembly and petition; the right to bear arms; trial by jury and other safeguards for the security of the citizen against artibtrary authority; provision against the abuse of military authority and a final clinching in the Tenth Amendment, which says that "the powers not delegated to the United States nor prohibited to the States are reserved to the States respectively or to the people."

At the first election the electors voted for George Washington unanimously. As the Constitution then absurdly proposed that the electors should vote for two candidates, the person receiving the second highest number of votes to become Vice-President, the electors scattered their second vote among various candidates. John Adams received thirty-four votes to thirty-five scattered among various other candidates, John Jay and John Hancock among others receiving votes.

At the second election, in 1792, Washington again received the votes of every elector, but for second choice there was a division along party lines, John Adams receiving the vote of the Federalists, seventy-seven votes, and Governor George Clinton of New York fifty votes of the opposition.

In 1796, Washington having declined a third election, the two parties put forth their candidates—John Adams and Thomas Pinckney for the Federalists and Thomas Jefferson for the Democrats, Aaron Bur of New York, Samuel Adams of Massachusetts and others receiving Democratic votes for second place. Adams received seventy-one votes, Jefferson sixty-eight, two of Adams' votes being cast by electors who voted for both Adams and Jefferson.

In 1800 John Adams and Charles Cotesworth Pinckney were the Federalistic candidates, Thomas Jefferson and Aaron Burr being the Democratic nominees. Jefferson and Burr each received seventy-three votes, and it thus became necessary for the House of Representatives to decide. Although it had been fully understood that Burr was to have the Vice-Presidency, he now made a vigorous effort to become President, and received the support of the Federalist members of the House for that position. The balloting being by States, eight voted for Jefferson and six for Burr, while two divided evenly. There was thus no majority, until on the thirty-sixth ballot several Federalist members failed to vote and Jefferson received the vote of eight States. Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Connecticut and Rhode Island voted for Burr. The latter, laying the loss of the Presidency to Hamilton, who advised his party that Jefferson was preferable, nursed his revenge; and when, later, Burr being a Federalist candidate for Governor of New York and Hamilton again opposed him, Burr, as is well known, challenged and killed Hamilton in a duel.

In 1804, when the Constitution had been amended so that votes were cast for President and Vice-President that the scandal of the last election might not be repeated, the Federalists nominated C. C. Pinckney and Rufus King, who received fourteen votes, to 162 for Jefferson and George Clinton.

In 1808 the Federalist candidates were the same, and Piinckney this time received forty-seven votes, against 142 for James Madison, the Democratic candidate. Clinton was again elected Vice-President, and died in office.

In 1812 Madison was renominated, with Elbridge Gerry of Massachusetts for Vice-President. The Federalists nominated DeWitt Clinton of New York, a Democrat, with Jared Ingersoll for Vice-President. The vote was128 to 89, in favor of Madison.

In 1816 the Democrats named Jas. Monroe and Daniel D. Tompkins, while the Federalists put forward Rufus King for President, scattering their votes for the second place. King received thirty-four votes to 183 for Monroe. This was the last of the Federalist party. At this election their former President, John Adams, was at the head of the Democratic electoral ticket in Massachusetts.

In 1820 Monroe received all but one electoral vote, one elector breaking instructions and voting for John Quincy Adams, Monroe's Secretary of State, in order, as he explained, that Washington might remain the only President elected unanimously. Tompkins lacked fourteen votes of unanimous re-election.

In 1824 there were four candidates, all claiming to be the real sure-enough Democratic candidate—John Quincy Adams, Andrew Jackson, Henry Clay and William H. Crawford. No candidate having a majority, the election was, for the second time thrown into the House of Representatives, where Adams was chosen. John C. Calhoun was elected Vice-President by the Electoral College. This election caused much bad feeling and the dominant party split, the administration party calling themselves National Republicans and the opposition, headed by General Jackson, claiming the name Democrats.

In 1828 President Adams was defeated, receiving eighty-three votes to 128 for Jackson. Calhoun was re-elected Vice-President over Richard Rush.

In 1832 Jackson was re-elected, receiving 219 votes, against forty-nine for Henry Clay, while Martin Van Buren was elected Vice-President over a scattered opposition.

In 1836 Van Buren was promoted to the Presidency, with Richard M. Johnson as running mate. The opposition adopted the ridiculous device of nominating no candidate, leaving the voters each to think that the electors of the Whig party, as it now called itself, would vote for his own particular candidate. The combination carried 124 votes to 170 for Van Buren. Johnson failed of a majority, but, according to the Constitution, was chosen by the Senate.

In 1840, a bank panic having occurred, Van Buren was defeated overwhelmingly by William Henry Harrison, who had been his leading opponent. The vote was 234 to 60. John Tyler was elected Vice-President, and, the President dying a month later, Tyler succeeded to the Presidency. He soon broke with his party and, before his term was out, went squarely over to the Democrats.

In 1844 James K. Polk was elected President and George M. Dallas Vice-President by the Democrats over Henry Clay and Theodore Frelinghuysen, Whigs. The vote was 170 to 105.

In 1848 the Democrats nominated General Lewis Cass for President and William O. Butler for Vice-President. General Zachary Taylor, a recent war hero, was the Whig candidate and was elected by a vote of 163 to 127. The Democratic defeat was brought about by the candidacy of ex-President Martin Van Buren as a candidate of a faction of the Democrats who were dissatisfied with the party's position on the slavery question. The President dying, the Vice-President, Millard Fillmore, became President a little more than a year later.

In 1852 General Franklin Pierce of New Hampshire and William R. King of Alabama were the Democratic candidates, General Winfield Scott of New Jersey and William A. Graham of North Carolina being the Whig candidates. Pierce and King were elected by a vote of 234 to 42, the Whigs carrying only Massachusetts, Connecticut, Kentucky and Tennessee. This finished the Whig party, its members going into the newly arisen Republican party, into the American or Knownothing party or, in many cases, going over to the Democrats.

In 1856 James Buchanan was named by the Democrats with John C. Breckenridge as Vice-President. Opposed was the party which opposed the extension of slavery and which had taken the name Republican in order to attract the votes of Democrats who were attached to the older name of their party. The candidates were General John C. Fremont and William L. Dayton. Ex-President Fillmore as the candidate of the American party received the vote of Maryland—eight votes. Buchanan had 174, Fremont 114.

In 1860 the extreme pro-slavery element of the Democratic party bolted the convention and nominated Vice-President Breckenridge for President, the regulars nominating Stephen A. Douglas of Illinois. The "Constitutional Union Party," composed chiefly of old Whigs, named John Bell, who carried four Southern States. The Republican party named Abraham Lincoln, with Hannibal Hamlin for Vice-President Although the divided Democratic factions cast a vote greatly in excess of that of the Republicans, the latter had 180 electoral votes to seventy-two for Breckenridge, thirty-nine for Bell and twelve for Douglas The latter had a popular vote nearly equal to that of Bell and Breckenridge combined.

In 1864, at the height of the civil war, Lincoln was renominated, with Andrew Jackson, a Tennessee Democrat, for Vice-President. The Democrats named General George B. McClellan and George H. Pendleton. The electoral vote was 212 to 21 in favor of Lincoln.

The President having been assassinated by a crazy actor named Booth, Johnson succeeded. Attempting to carry out the known policy of Lincoln in reference to the readmission of the States, Johnson came into conflict with the leaders in Congress. In their determination to get rid of him, they attempted to do so by impeachment, but failed by one vote of the necessary two-thirds in the Senate.

In 1868 it became very probable that the

Why Don't Get This Phonograph

On

For almost three years I have been making the most liberal phonograph offer ever known! I have given hosts of people the opportunity of hearing the genuine Edison Phonograph right in their own homes without a cent of cost to them.

Think of it! Thousands and thousands and thousands of people have been given the opportunity to hear in their own parlors concerts and entertainments by world famous musicians, just such entertainments as the greatest metropolitan theatres are producing.

So far you have missed all this. Why? Possibly you don't quite understand my offer yet. Listen—

I will send you this Genuine Edison Standard Outfit (the newest model) complete with one dozen Edison Gold Moulded Records, for an absolutely free trial. I don't ask any money down or in advance. There are no C. O. D. shipments; no leases or mortgages on the outfit; no papers of any sort to sign. Absolutely nothing but a plain out-and-out offer to ship you this phonograph together with a dozen records of your own selection on a free trial so that you can hear it and play it in your own home. I can't make this offer any plainer, any clearer, any better than it is. There is no catch about it anywhere. If you will stop and think just a moment, you will realize that the high standing of this concern would absolutely prohibit anything except a straightforward offer.

I know that there are thousands and thousands of people who have never heard the Genuine Edison Phonograph. Nearly everyone is familiar with the screechy, unnatural sounds produced by the imitation machines (some of which though inferior are very expensive). After hearing the old style and imitation machines people become prejudiced against all kinds of "Talking Machines." Now, there's only one way to convince these people that the Edison is superior, and that is to let the people actually see and hear this remarkable instrument for themselves. That is why I am making this offer.

I can't tell you one-twentieth of the wonders of the Edison. Nothing I can say or write will make you actually hear the grand, full beauty of its tones. No words can begin to describe the tender, delicate sweetness with which the genuine new style Edison reproduces the soft, pleading notes of the flute, or the thunderous, crashing harmony of a full brass band selection. The wonders of the new style Edison defy the power of any pen to describe. Neither will I try to tell you how, when you're tired, nervous and blue, the Edison will soothe you, comfort and rest you, and give you new strength to take up the burdens of life afresh. The only way to make you actually realize these things for yourself is to loan you a Genuine Edison Phonograph free and let you try it.

Just sign your name and address on this coupon now, and mail it to us. I will send you our superbly illustrated Edison Phonograph Catalog, the very latest list of Edison Gold Moulded Records (over 1,500 of them) and our Free Trial Certificate entitling you to this grand offer. Sign this coupon or send postal or letter now. No obligations, just get the catalogs.

All I ask you to do is to invite as many as possible of your friends to hear this wonderful new style Edison. You will want to do that anyway, because you will be giving them genuine pleasure. I feel absolutely certain that out of the number of your friends who will hear your machine there will be at least one and probably more who will want an Edison of their own. If they don't, if not a single one of them orders a Phonograph (and this sometimes happens) I won't blame you in the slightest. I shall feel that you have done your part when you have given these free concerts. You won't be asked to act as our agent or even assist in the sale of a single instrument. In fact we appoint no such agents and at the rock-bottom price on this wonderful new outfit we could not allow any commission to anyone.

The Phonograph—that is if you wish to make the Phonograph your own, you may do so, but it is not compulsory. This is a free trial. You may send it back at our expense if you wish. I won't be surprised, however, if you wish to keep the machine after having it in your own home. If you do wish to keep it, either remit us the price in full, or if you prefer, we will allow you to pay for it on the easiest kind of payments.

There are so many people who really want a phonograph but who do not have the ready cash to pay for it all at once that I have decided on an easy payment plan that gives you absolute use of the phonograph while paying for it. $2.00 a month pays for an outfit. There is absolutely no lease or mortgage of any kind, no guarantee from a third party, no going before a notary public, in fact, no publicity of any kind, and the payments are so very small, and our terms so liberal that you never notice the payments.

THE MOST INTERESTING MAGAZINE OF THE DAY

Thanksgiving Fantasticals

IN New York City on Thanksgiving Days it is the custom for boys to associate themselves in small groups, and, wearing masks, usually formed of the grotesque false faces found in the shops and the further addition of suits as ragged and disreputable-looking as possible, to set forth on a begging expedition. They ring door-bells and silently hold forth their hands in expectation of what they may receive. This may be a penny or other small coin, an apple, bun, nuts, or whatever the donor may choose to give. In some neighborhoods the custom becomes a nuisance on account of boys who range extensive districts in purely mercenary spirit, but where the original custom is kept of merely canvassing their home neighborhood, it is not unpleasing. The money collected, as well as the eatables, go to make a supplementary feast for the youthful foragers, though where they find room to stow it after the regulation Thanksgiving dinner is hard to understand. In the outlying districts, where vacant lots are still to be found, it is a custom to make fires and roast potatoes, which the young rascals who have just come from a turkey dinner sit down and eat as if they never before had eaten in their lives.

It is probable that the custom originated in colonial times and that the first disguises were those of Indians. Any kind of grotesque now serves and the variety of disguise is endless.

November

THE ancient year began with March, so that November was the ninth month. The name comes from Latin novem, nine. When Julius Caesar reformed the calendar to make the year begin with January, November, of course, became the eleventh month. Originally it had thirty-one days, as had all the odd months. When the Roman senate, with an excess of servility, named August after Emperor Augustus, they could not bear that so great an emperor should have so short a month. Therefore they changed it to thirty-one days and then changed all the remaining months of the year, so that the alternation should be restored as nearly as possible. And that is why every school boy must learn that "Thirty days hath November."

Where there are only a few cabbages they may be kept for some time by placing them head down in a trench with the roots just above the ground. When the weather grows cold, the roots may be covered with soil or litter.

DINNER DAINTIES

THERE a great Thanksgiviog feast of turkey, several vegetables, salad, mince and pumpkin and apple pie, not to mention the puddings that many housekeepers offer to amplify the already huge dinner, has been served and eaten, the partakers thereof feel that never again will they want another bite. But the hours roll around and by and by some member (usually the youngest, especially if it happens to be a boy of about twelve years) begins to wonder if the past feast is to be the last meal he is ever to eat. But "Mother" has foreseen this state of affairs, and behold! here is a lovely Thanksgiving supper, just as good as the dinner, though not so abundant in variety. Hardly any one wants much for this meal, but all agree that perhaps "just a little bite of something" would not be a bad thing. The may be prepared while the dinner is getting ready and then reheated just before tea is served, or it may be eaten cold. It consists of: One can of salmon, half cup of melted butter, two beaten eggs, one cup of rolled cracker or bread crumbs, with salt, pepper and a little cayenne as suits the taste. Mix all together, put in buttered pan and steam or bake three hours.

Then a dainty salad, a green one (lettuce, endive, chicory, etc.,) by preference, but if not convenient, a potato salad with a nice dressing will add greatly to the enjoyment of the supper. Here are two excellent dressings, either one quite suitable for any salad.

Boiled Salad Dressing

The yolks of two eggs beaten with one tablespoonful granulated sugar and one teaspoonful salt, pinches of mustard and red pepper. Then add four tablespoonfuls of cream and set dish in hot water. When warm, add four tablespoonfuls of vinegar. Cook until it thickens, then cool.

Mayonnaise Dressing

Beat the yolk of one egg with half teaspoonful of sugar and one-quarter teaspoonful of salt. Then add one cupful of best olive oil, but add very slowly, beating all the time with the egg beater until the oil is all used. Then, when it is very thick, add one teaspoonful of vinegar. This makes a very nice and a very wholesome salad dressing, as there is nothing better than olive oil.

For this simple little meal nothing further will be needed except the tea (or coffee) and cake. A very good cake is as follows:

A Simple Cake

Two eggs, one-half cup of butter, one cup of sugar, one and one-half cups of flour, three-quarters cup of milk, with vanilla to flavor. Beat the eggs with the melted butter, and add the sugar, flour, milk and vanilla, all the time beating well. Then bake in a hot oven. The secret of a nice cake is in the amount of beating it gets. This amount will make three layers. If a chocolate cake is desired it may be spread with

Chocolate Icing

For which will be required one-quarter of a cup of Baker's chocolate, one and three-quarter cups of powdered sugar, two heaping teaspoonfuls cornstarch, one teaspoonful of vanilla and one cup of milk. Put the grated chocolate with the other ingredients in a saocepan and cook until thick and spread on the cake.

But if chocolate cake is not wanted, for not everyone cares for such a rich cake, the same cake may be used and spread instead with

Lemon Icing

Grate the peel of one lemon in one pound of confectioner's sugar, then add one-quarter cup of cream and one-half teaspoonful of vanilla. Mix well and it is ready to spread on the cake.

Then another and newer cake is:

Fudge Cake

Cream together one cup of sugar and one-half cup of butter, add two eggs well heaten, one-half cup of flour, two squares of melted chocolate, one teaspoonful vanilla and one cupful of chopped English walnuts, or other nuts, if preferred. Bake twenty minutes in a square pan and, while still warm, cut in little squares.

Peanut Butter

Shell fresh-roasted peanuts, and grind in the meat chopper, then mix with mayonnalse. One quart of peanuts in the shell will make a pint of butter. S. W.

Chocolate Creams

First make a fondant in this manner: Boil together, without stirring, two cupsful of granulated sugar, one of boiling water and one-fourth of a teaspoonful of cream of tartar, until a small quantity dropped in cold water can be rolled into a creamy ball. If, when tested, it is too hard (like taffy) add a little more water, bring to the boil again, and test a second time. When done set aside until lukewarm, and then stir rapidly with a woden paddle until it forms a white cream too thick to stir. Turn out on the molding board and knead until soft and creamy. Make into balls and dip in melted chocolate, using hatpin or toothpick. I use unsweetened chocolate for coating the creams, as it melts much better than the other kind. Shave or grate it into a bowl, and put enough paraffin in to make it nice and thin. Set over a teakettle to melt without stirring. When it is all melted, stir it well, dip the creams and place on a slightly greased platter.

E. M. H.

Ginger Apples

Take two pounds of cooking apples, peel, core and throw them into cold water. Take the weight of the apples after they are peeled and cored in the weight of loaf sugar, with half a pint of water to each pound of sugar. Put the sugar and water into a stewpan, and, when boiling, put in the apples and two and a half ounces of ginger (whole). Let them simmer until transparent (the apples should be whole); color the syrup with a little cochineal. This should be served cold, with custard or cream.

Mayonnaise of Salmon

Remains of cold boiled salmon, 2 large lettuce, watercress and beets, 4 hard boiled eggs and small quantity of oil and vinegar, pepper and salt, ½ pint mayonnaise sauce; thoroughly wash and dry the lettuce and use the outer leaves, dipped in oil and vinegar, to lay on the dish as foundation; upon this lay on a circle overlapping one another, small cutlets cut as neatly as possible from the salmon, and covered with the mayonnaise sauce. In the centre and around these put the remainder of the lettuce and the cress cut up, using first the hearts of the lettuce, cut evenly to alternate, with little groups of watercress, beet and eggs cut up round the dish, some of the sauce being put on top of the salad.

Delicious Salmon Pie

Take the yolks of 3 eggs well heaten, 3 tablespoonfuls of hutter (melted), the juice and grated peel of 1 lemon, 1 cup of sugar, ½ cup of milk, with 1 heaping teaspoonful of corn starch dissolved in the milk. Beat these all together, bake in one crust in a moderate oven.

Take the whites of 3 eggs beaten to a stiff froth, and 4 tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar and a little lemon juice. When pie is haked put this on top and slightly hrown in oven.

Berlin Salad

Cut 6 large sardines in pieces and put in the salad dish. Then put over them a layer of peeled and sliced tomatoes, then a layer of cold thin sliced cucumber. Then cover with a little finely chopped onion; garnish the dish with crisp lettuce leaves, and just before serving pour over a French dressing.

Smothered Chicken

Split the chicken down the back, season with salt and pepper and dredge well with flour, both sides. Put into a bake pan a small cup stock and a quarter pound butter. Arrange the giblets oo the bottom and on them lay the chickeo, breast down. Cover the pan closely and haste every ten or twelve minutes. Allow about fifteen minutes to the pound in roasting. When tender take out the chickeo and lay on a hot platter. Mash the giblets, add a cup rich cream and serve with buttermilk or beaten biscuit.

Chicken Gumbo

An old fowl is usually considered best for this. Clean, cut in pieces as for a frieassee. Put a tablespoonful lard in a graoite kettle or deep stewpan, and when hot add the chicken. Fry a rich brown, watching and turning carefully. When fried a good brown, add a tablespoonful flour and let brown, then add enough hot water to a little more than cover. Add two sliced onions, a pepper pod without seeds, and salt to taste. Cover and simmer uotil the chicken is tender. About fifteen mioutes before serving add fifty oysters and their liquor. When the oysters cockle on the edges, set back on the range and sprinkle in a tablespoonful of fine sassafras powder. Stir and serve immediately with a heaping tablespoonful of rice in each plate or soup bowl.

Crab Gumbo

Fry two tablespoonsful flour to one of lard until the flour is browned, but not blackened. Add a chopped onion, a chopped Irish potato, a tablespoonful mioced parsley, red pepper and salt and fry until the vegetables are colored. Add the meat of eight hard-shelled crabs that have been sealded and cleaned and three pints of boiling water. Cook thirty minutes. Wheo ready to serve add a teaspoonful of powdered sassafras rubbed to a paste with a sponful of butter. Stir in the soup until well mixed, then pour in hot tureen and serve with rice. Filet should oever be put in until nearly ready to use, as it spoils quickly if left staoding.

Butter Cakes

Sift together one quart flour, a teaspoonful salt, half a teaspoonful sugar and two large teaspoonfuls baking powder. Add a pint and a quarter of milk and mix into a batter a little stiffer than for pancakes. Have the pancake griddle heated evenly all over and lightly greased and on it lay the muffin rings. Half fill with the batter and bake until well-risen to the top of the rings. Turn carefully with the cake turner. They should not be too brown. When all cooked, pull each in half, toast delicately, butter well and serve. English muffins are also made with yeast. In this case sift to one quart flour, one teaspoonful salt and a half teaspoonful sugar. Add a cup and a half lukewarm water and a half yeast cake dissolved in some of the water. Beat the dough thoroughly, then cover and set in a warm place to rise. It will take about five hours. Shape the dough on a well-floured molding board into flat, oval pieces about twice the size of an egg. Lay on a greased griddle slightly heated and push back on the stove to rise gradually. As they begin to puff, bring the griddle forward and bake slowly, turning frequently. The entire process of rising and baking on the griddle will take about half an hour. The muffins should be a buff color when done. Pull apart and butter while hot.

In the last couple of years the hand embroidery craze has been spreading until now every woman who cares to make a good appearance, without being extravagant, appreciates these dainty little touches to her garments which hand embroidery adds. The work itself is very fascinating, and many a dull and tedious hour during the winter months can be spent very profitably on this kind of work, and any one can render themselves proficient in this kind of needle craft with due persistence and a little time. No wardrobe is complete nowadays without one or two pieces of clothing bearing this evidence of daintiness, and to make everything as simple as possible we are offering our readers of this page a pattern which can be very easily transferred to any kind of fabric or wood, and which should appeal to every economical woman, in the fact that it would make a clear, clean-cut pattern twelve or more times. We will be pleased to furnish our readers with these patterns for the sum of ten cents in stamps or coin, and would be glad to have them give it a try-out and see if it is not the most convenient they have ever used, as well as the most economical.

The Pleiades and Hyades

Written for this Magazine.

When you look at the Eastern sky in the early evening in November you will notice a small group of stars covering a space a little greater than that occupied by the new moon. All are intensely white, but they are of low magnitude for the most part and seem to shine through a kind of veil of suffused light. There are six stars readily visible to the naked eye on a clear night. Persons of exceptionally good eyesight may see from one to five more. There is an ancient legend which was current among the Greeks that the Pleiades were seven sisters, who for their goodness and beauty were placed among the stars. One of them, however, loved a mortal and, in consequence, retired abashed from view. Hence, no more than six afterward were visible. How this legend originated would require more space for discussion than may be given here. It is enough to say that those persons who declare that they can see the seventh star are by no means agreed as to which is the star of the several hovering on the edge of naked-eye visibility. They often still are called the Seven Sisters. A good opera glass will show about twenty stars. One star, brighter than the rest, is named Alcyone.

A small telescope will show additional stars, until, in the great observatory telescopes, no less than two thousand are to be seen. Observations begun more than sixty years ago and patiently followed, showed, when about fifty years had passed, that there was an actual association among the stars, that is, that they are revolving about each other. The displacement was of the very slightest after those years, so slight, in fact, that it could not be measured, answering to what is called, in chemistry, a trace. It is clear from this that the evolution must take a vast period of time, numbering tens of thousands of years. When we reflect further on the giant masses of these distant suns and reflect that even at a distance of thousands of millions from each other, the revolutionary movements must be many miles a second, we may gain some idea of the stupendous scale on which is constructed this object which glitters as an ornament to our autumn skies. The whole group, or at least a great part of it, is wrapped in glowing hydrogen. The name Pleiades, notwithstanding the pretty legend, is derived from Greek pleion "sail," from the fact that the easily recognized group was of great use to the sailors in those days before the magnetic compass. From the earliest days they were noted and many religious observances marked their appearance in the evening sky. The Hallowe'en observances and, stranger still, the date we have chosen for our November elections, may be traced to the ancient regard for the Pleiades.

The Pleiades belong to the constellation Tarus, the second constellation of the zodiac. Following them, at about an hour's interval, is the sister group, known as the Hyades. This is a V-shaped figure, having at the end of one arm the great red star Aldebaran. The Hyades were sisters of the Pleiades, according to the ancient legend, and were foster-mothers to Bacchus, after the death of his own mother. Aldebaran is receding from us at the rate of thirty miles a second, but being already more than a hundred million miles away from us, its rate of recession will not make any difference in appearance for very many thousands of years. The star next to Aldebaran is one of those rarities, a naked-eye double. That is, it appears as a single star on ordinary occasions, but on exceptionally clear nights it is shown as a pair of glittering stars very close together. The whole group is extremely beautiful and interesting and well repays study.

Facts about New York

IN a previous article we have imagined our entrance to the city from a completely rural neighborhood. We have gone only as far as the Conservatory of the New York Botanical Society and now will start downtown. We will take the elevated railroad or as, for brevity, it usually called, "the L." The station is at the northern terminus of the line. There is a level walk by which we approach from the park, but at all other stations we must ascend by stairs, sometimes to a considerable height. The road is standard-gauge, double-tracked throughout and with a third track for part of the way. It is carried along the streets on iron pillars, set near the curb on either side of the street. These lift the structure to such a height that moving vans, etc., can pass under without difficulty at the lowest places. Elsewhere, to avoid steep grades, the height is much greater.

We enter the station and buy a red ticket for each member of the party. They cost five cents each. These we drop in a box guarded by a solemn-looking individual in blue coat and brass buttons, known as the "ticket chopper," and pass out on the platform. We see two or three persons attempt to pass and hear them instructed to drop their tickets in the box. If this were a provincial village some of the bystanders would snicker at the greenness of the stranger. Not so in New York. In the village the stranger is a rarity. In the great city he is there by the thousands in fresh arrivals every day. The New Yrker looks at the stranger as does the hotel clerk and is not in the least amused by his unfamiliarity with new conditions.

A train comes up to the station, the gates are flung open and the crowd of arrivals hurries off the platform. Hurry is the word. In New York everybody hurries. If they do not they get run over. There are people from the outside who object to the hurry of New York, but, as usual, they miss the mark. There is nothing "feverish" about it, nothing of the "mad rush for dollars," which these groaning moralists discover. That the people of New York are any "madder" in this particular rush than the people of Kennebunk or Olympia is absurdly untrue. The whirl of speculation, which takes up columns of newspapers, affects but a minute fraction of the population of the city. The vast majority are working for wages, and the work and wages are similar to that in thousands of smaller towns. The dollars, for the most part, come in the same inconveniently small amounts, in the same familiar small bills and are passed out with the same promptitude to very similar-looking butchers, grocers, bakers and the rest. If stocks drop heavily on the Exchange a small fraction of the population will be excited. Another small fraction will read the big headlines, mention the matter to a friend as a means of carrying on a conversation, with about as much excitement as they remark the pleasant weather. The rest of the population pass without interest, emotion or remark to topics of whatever sort may suit their varied tastes. "Humbugs and fakers of the Lawson type have ten times as many dupes outside of New York as they have in it, and "Wall Street" is mentioned a hundred times, population considered, in What Cheer or Skookum Chuck to once in the city where it is known as a narrow street, opposite Trinity Church and having a great many banks and brokerage offices. So much for the "mad rush for dollars."

The real reason for the hurry in New York is that the downtown district—lower Manhattan—is many miles from the homes of the multitude who daily do business there. A considerable time each day is occupied in going to and from business. When this is added to the hours they are employed they have left enough time to sleep, and a little more. Naturally, this little more is a most precious asset and they make the most of it. They hurry to the train, they hurry from the train in order to get to their place of employment in time, to get the evening dinner while it is hot, to prepare for an evening away from home, to prenare for expected guests or to enjoy as much as is possible of the society of their families. A pale-faced, middle-aged clerk is sprinting toward the ferry in order to get his supper and take his daughter to a free lecture on "Constantinople" at the neighborhood assembly hall. And the visiting citizen of Blue Earth County sees him and shudders at the "mad rush for wealth," which is destroying lives and souls of the people of the metropolis.

When the great majority is hurrying thus most people accommodate themselves to the pace. A few fail to do so and possibly are bumped by some of the hurrying passers-by. The slow-paced bumpee hears the word "pardon" and sees the person who jostled him disappearing some paces ahead. He is surprised or, if ill-natured, indignant. But if he continues even a short time in the city he learns to move with the tide and, in time, if he bumps one of his leisurely going former townsmen, he will say "Beg pardon!" and scoot past with the celerity he has just witnessed.

We enter the train, which has on either side a long row of seats facing the centre. As we are starting from the terminus, many seats are vacant as the train leaves. Stations are about six blocks apart and are called, as we reach them, by the guards, who occupy the car platforms and who open and shut the gates. A crowd on the station platform surges forward as we arrive. "Let 'em off first! Let 'em off!" the guard shouts, and the crowd obediently, but impatiently, gives way as the debarking passengers hurry from the train. "Step lively, please!" is his next command, disregarding the fact that there may be present Philadelphians, whose feelings may be hurt. As a matter of fact, there has been an order that these words may not be used, but they are so to the point, so classic in their simplicity, that on occasion they involuntarily come forth, and the attempt of the railroad management to do away with one of the established customs of the city was, of course, doomed to failure.

A few stations, and we find that all the seats are occupied. It seems that nearly every passenger has a morning paper. There are all the well-known dailies printed in the English language and perhaps one or more in German, Italian or Yiddish, the latter in Herbrew characters. Another station and there are more passengers than seats. The men reach up and, grasping with one hand a strap which depends from a metallic rail, hold up the inevitable newspaper with the other and fall to reading with the unconcern born of long familiarity with accepted conditions. At the next station the crowd in the aisle increases and several women, bound upon shopping expeditions, are among those left standing. The sitting passengers sit tight and keep on reading. Our visiting friends from Tompkins Corners jump up in wild excitement and politely yield their seats. Still there are women left standing and our friends glare ferociously at the masculine sitters, but their glare gets no farther than the serried ranks of outspread newspapers, from which the readers do not lift their eyes. Their guide, a case-hardened New Yorker, cynically keeps his seat and bids them watch developments.

Another station is reached. A part of the crowd gets up to depart. The women who have been standing drop into the vacant seats. The men who have been standing keep on standing. Another crowd comes on. More men and women are standing. Another station is reached, more people get up, the women who were standing get the vacated seats, perhaps one or two fortunate men, after the women are all seated. And the visitors from Tompkins Corners still stand, with a pained where-am-I-at? expression, while their guide smiles and keeps his seat. They are getting at first hand some practical information on a subject of which they have read much, namely, the bad car-manners of New York men. We go on

TO WOMEN WHO DREAD MOTHERHOOD

Information How They May Give Birth to Happy, Healthy Children Absolutely Without Pain—Sent Free.

No woman need any longer dread the pains of childbirth, or remain childless. Dr. J. H. Dye has devoted his life to relieving the sorrows of women. He has proved that all pain at childbirth may be entirely banished, and he will gladly tell you how it may be done absolutely free of charge. Send your name and address to Dr. J. H. Dye, 210 Lewis Block, Buffalo, N. Y., and he will send you, postpaid, his wonderful book which tells how to give birth to happy, healthy children, absolutely without pain; also, how to cure sterility. Do not delay but write today.

mile after mile and still they stand. The ladies for whom they surrendered their seats long since have left the car. Gone but not forgotten, they think, as they shift their aching feet. They have observed with pain, mental and physical, that the women who come into the crowded car stand for one or two stations and then drop into a vacant seat. And they observe that their guide is sitting comfortably and letting the lesson burn in. Edmund Burke said that you could not indict a whole people, but provincial writers have not hesitated to indict a community of more than four million people. Our friends are beginning to understand a few things. One is that the woman who stands does so only until a nearby seat is vacated, which is likely to happen at the next or, at the worst, within a few stations. Not once in ten thousand times does a man drop into a seat for which a woman is waiting. After the women, the man who stands nearest the seat gets it without question, though frequently he makes a polite offer to another. The other fact of equal interest which they are beginning to comprehend is that the man who surrenders his seat to the first woman who is standing loses his seat for perhaps ten miles of wearying journey. If he makes the trip twice a day, in five years he will stand through enough miles to carry him around the earth. He will have saved various unknown women the inconvenience of standing a few blocks and he will have whatever satisfaction comes from the fact. Perhaps, also, he will have his reward in another world, to which his many hours of weariness are likely to distinctly hasten him.

Another fact, to which critics never refer, is that if a person of either sex who is old, lame or feeble, enters the car a seat is found instantly. The distinction is based upon humanity and common sense. New Yorkers lack neither. They have no more nor less than other people. They work out their own peculiar problems in their own way, without asking instruction from any quarter, and if the entire population were removed and replaced by others from any part of the country the customs based upon inexorable conditions would soon be as they are now. Some part of these observations and reflections have come to our visitors during their long ride downtown.

We change cars at Chatham Square and enter a nearly empty train, which carries us down to South Ferry. Behind us lies Battery Park, twenty acres of green grass, trees and shrubbery, with great winding paths to accommodate the passing and repassing crowds. On the north and east it is flanked by colossal buildings which we will not describe now. On the other side are the waters of New York Harbor, on which are moving the great hoarse-voiced ferry-boats and vessels of every kind, from the ocean liner, just going out, to the venturesome little sailboats with a crew of one or two men. The station from which we have descended is a part of the structure forming the ferry-house, from which boats to Staten Island and various parts of Brooklyn depart. That round, brownstone building is the Aquarium, once known as Castle Garden. We shall visit it, but not now. This nearby stone building is the Barge Office. In front of it is a great crowd of persons somewhat foreign in appearance, all dressed in their holiday clothes and in a high state of waiting excitement. Their eyes are eagerly directed across the bay. From an island in the harbor a boat is making its way toward the pier near which we stand. The excitement grows among the waiting crowd. The boat comes to the pier and the passengers in droves come ashore. They are decidedly more foreign-looking than the others who are waiting. As they come ashore there are exclamations, embraces and kisses, shrieks of delight, tears of joy. It is a lot of newly arrived immigrants welcomed by their friends already established in this country. They are a queer-looking lot, but their queerness is chiefly in their costumes, soon to be doffed and never worn again; and, in some degree, in the look of naive wonder with which they view everything before them. They seem as if in a dream and cling to their friends with a pathetic dependence. Quickly they are hurried away and we see them no more. But for each and every one of them that moment will stand as a great mountain peak rising out of the level plain of their hard spent lives.

We are now at the tip of the island of Manhattan, which, until 1874, constituted the whole of the city of New York. We might at once plunge into its mysteries and wonders, but will not do so. Instead we will take a waiting ferry-boat, which starts a few feet from where we stand. The fare is a quarter for the round trip. We are aboard, the gangplank is pulled in and we are moving across New York's peerless harbor toward a little island of about fourteen acres, above which towers the colossal Statue of Liberty enlightening the world. It stands above the sparkling waters of the bay, perfect in its dignity, sublime in its symbolism. It stands facing the entrance of the harbor, so that it seems to greet and welcome the newly arrived foreign lands as they come to the land of Liberty, Enlightenment and Law. As we draw nearer, it rises higher in our view, and as we approach the island the force of the gigantic conception comes to us as it has not before. It is more than three hundred feet in height, about half being occupied by the pedestal. A stairway, in the form of a double spiral is within the figure, and this we will ascend. Up and up and up we go. Having started, we must go to the top, for the stairs are too narrow for passing. There is a return stair on the other side of the spiral, so that those ascending and descending may not meet. At intervals are seats in recesses, so that the tired may rest without stopping those who may follow after. At last we are up in the head of the figure. In the front of the crown are twenty-six windows, from which we look out upon the harbor and surrounding shores. While we were climbing we might foolishly and impatiently have wondered if we should ever get there. We find on arrival that we are not very tired after all; and if we have not gone on a holiday or with a crowd of tourists we have plenty of time to sit down and recover our strength and spirits for the down trip. As we go down we are likely to feel a sudden weakness and trembling of the knees consequent on the long climb, but it amounts to little and soon passes. At the base of the figure we walk out on the pedestal and look out over the waters. We see the great span of Brooklyn Bridge between Manhattan and Brooklyn and marvel at the titanic buildings which now fill the area of lower New York. We take the boat to return and now the immensity of these buildings grows on us, as did that of the statue when our faces were turned the other way. We first entered New York from the back. Now we will enter by the front way, and what we see will be told in the next and succeeding articles.

A Scotch minister and his servant, who were coming home from a wedding, began to consider the state into which their potations at the wedding feast had left them.

"Sandy," said the minister, "just stop a minute till I go ahead. Maybe I don't walk so very steady and the good wife might remark something not just right."

He walked ahead for some distance, and then asked:

"How is it? Am I walking straight?"

"Oh, ay," answered Sandy, thickly, "ye're all recht—but who's that who's with you?"

A very attractive baby bonnet, made of Persian lawn. Around the front were two rows of embroidery, through which was run half-inch ribbon. On the back edge of the embroidery was a frill of lace, one inch wide. On front around the face was a double frill of lace half-inch wide; the crown was a wide inset edged with the wide lace. A bow of one-inch wide pink ribbon was on top under the back frill and embroidery. It was tied with white lawn strings and was easily made.

What to Plant in November

Written for this Magazine by Adelaide Bachman

As we jog along the highway we see here and there in favored gardens clumps of gay chrysanthemums and within the gardens that is about all there is of interest during these early November days. Everything else in the way of bloom is gone—vanished with the summer that now is of the past. What a pity it is that we cannot plant when the fit of enthusiasm is on, when the flower we desire is before us in all its beauty and we feel that we could make endless sacrifices of time and strength to have such plants for our very own. With a good many people planting a garden is like the experience the Arkansas Traveler encountered—when they have the inspiration they haven't the plants and when planting time comes they haven't the inspiration; and so it goes. It is such a long time to wait until spring and then, after spring has come and the garden planted it is such another long, long wait before anything comes of it. But no, though they may make the beholder quite green with envy and the desire to plant becomes strong within him, the Chrysanthemum is not one of the things to be planted this month. Unless, indeed, one makes cuttings, as some people do roses, putting them under glass jars for protection from the cold and banking the earth about the base. I have successfully planted them thus in eastern New York, but doubt if it could be done much further north or in the Middle West, where the severe cold comes so much earlier than here.

During the early part of this month a great many bulbs are planted. It would really be much better to plant them earlier, for once they begin to deteriorate they go rapidly. However, if for any reason the bulbs were not planted in October it may still be done in November and with excellent results in almost every case. It is too late for Crocuses and for Lilium candidum (which latter should be planted in August) but for Narcissi, Tulips, Snowdrops, Scillas, etc., and for most of the lilies, if the ground is not frozen, it is not too late. If the bulbs have been ordered but have not yet arrived and one is afraid of a hard freeze a place may be prepared by heaping fresh manure on it to keep the ground from freezing. This must, of course, be removed when the time to plant has come, for bulbs will not endure any contact with such heating material. In planting them, to more nearly insure against decay, set each bulb in a little jacket of fine sand, and then, if possible, cover the earth over them with a thick blanket of leaves which may have been gathered for the purpose. But there is one sort of planting to be done now which will cost nothing at all, except in time and trouble—and what gardener counts such cost?—to many, who have waste places to brighten up and the means to do it, though perhaps it has not been brought to their attention. It is the planting of berried shrubs and vines, to make green and inviting bowers during the summer and flashes of color in the fall and winter, to say nothing of attracting the birds. To be sure, if the birds do come and eat your berries, the berries will not be there to help out the picture; but as a rule, they are not little pigs and do not eat everything in sight. But even if they do and the garden picture is lacking in its brilliant tones, yet the birds will stay about and be the greatest attraction in themselves.

In going about in the country by the roadsides frequently and in woodlands nearby are to be seen these beautiful plants growing wild, and if the seeds are gathered and planted now there will be that much more of beauty for another year. The Bittersweet vine is first in the ranks and there is nothing anywhere that can equal it. Nature has planted it with a lavish hand and it grows wild and abundant in many places. It makes a beautiful picture with its brilliant fruits against the gray stone walls that line the roadsides hereabouts or clambering to the very tip top of some tall and slender red-cedar tree where the splendid color of the berries shows most vividly against the sombre green. The berries hang on pretty well through the winter, too, which certainly adds to the satisfaction of having them in the vicinity. Indeed, its very name, Celastrus (botanically it is Celastrus scandens) comes from a Greek word, kelas, meaning the latter season, referring, of course, to the fruit in the "latter season."

The Wahoo, Burning Bush or Staff Tree, as it is variously known, has fruits of a similar nature, but even more beautiful. It does not climb, however, but remains in bush form. Its foliage is beautiful in summer and the brilliant fruits adorn any grounds in fall and winter. Its botanical name is Euonymus atropurpureus and if there is any member of the Euonymus tribe which is not ornamental I do not know it. The Black Alder or Winter Berry, which some botanists class as Ilex verticillatus and some as Prinos verticillatus, is another acquisition in the way of berry-bearing plants for the winter garden, but truth to tell, the berries do not remain long where there are birds who know about them. The same may be said of the various Barberries, but Berberis Thunbergia, the Japanese Barberry, at least has handsome enough foliage through the summer and fall to insure its being planted. This last one, of course, does not grow wild in this country, but the others mentioned, and many besides, do grow wild and the seeds are very easy to get. The Woodbine, or Virginia Creeper, so universally found wild, has fine berries, though of not so brilliant a color as those before mentioned, but they are a great attraction to birds. Another blue-berried vine is the cat, or green-brier. Its foliage is very handsome in the summer but its thorns prevent its being such a desirable plant as the less protected ones. But it makes, when well established, a tangled and matted thicket where ground and low-bush nesting birds love to hide; so if one wishes to attract birds one cannot do better than to gather and plant a few seeds of it.

The Greasy Pan

Pour a few drops of ammonia into every greasy roasting pan or greasy cooking dish after half filling with warm water. A bottle of ammonia should always be kept near the sink for such uses. Never allow the pans to stand and dry, for it doubles the labor of washing, but pour in water and use ammonia, and the work is half done.

A gardener makes the following suggestion for the benefit of those whose plants are infested with insects: "Cut a potato in half, scoop out the inside and place it on the soil under the plant. The insects will gradually assemble in it."

Tell me how to make a durable and economical floor stain. How can I make a smooth hearth in front of an open fireplace? ROSEMARY.

One pound burnt sienna in oil, mixed with one gallon boiled linseed oil, makes a good stain.

Try Portland cement for this purpose. Mix with cold water and use quickly.

To Renew Mirror

To renew a mirror keep for this purpose a piece of sponge, a cloth and silk handkerchief, all entirely free from dirt, as the least grit will scratch the fine surface of the glass. First sponge it with a little spirits of wine, or gin and water, to clean off all spots; then dust over it powdered blue tied in muslin, rub it lightly and quickly off with the cloth and finish by rubbing with the silk handkerchief. Be careful not to rub the edges of the frame.

Please give me a recipe for indelible ink. How to mend rubber shoes, and oblige DER.

A good indelible ink is made by dissolving lunar caustic in water, but indelible ink of good quality is bought so cheap that it hardly justifies the home-making.

Rub the patch and shoe thoroughly with sharp sandpaper. Smear both with liquid rubber five times, letting them dry each time. Do this once more, and before they are dry apply the patch (with pressure, if possible), and the boot is mended. If liquid rubber is not obtainable, dissolve small pieces of pure rubber (not vulcanized) in warm spirits of turpentine to the consistency of syrup.

In the rubber stores you can buy rubber cement, which is said to do good patch work, but my experience leads me to believe that the only way to mend rubber shoes is with a new pair.

Please tell me how to make an Eolian harp. J. C. T.

An Eolian harp may be composed of a rectangular box made of thin boards five or six inches deep and about the same width and of a length sufficient to extend across the window where it is to be set, so that the breeze, coming, can sweep over it. Its strings are made as follows: At the top of each end of the box a strip of wood is glued about a half inch in height; the strings are then stretched lengthwise across the top of the box and may be either catgut or wire. For the purpose of making a fine-toned harp the strings should be tuned in unison by means of pegs constructed to control their tension, as in the case of a violin. The instrument is then ready to be placed at the window, which when party raised will admit a current of air, and this passing over the strings produces very pleasant sounds, which vary with the breeze. This harp receives its name from Eolus, the god or ruler of the winds.

How to Get Rid of Catarrh

A Simple, Safe, Reliable Way, and It Costs Nothing to Try

Those who suffer from catarrh know its miseries. There is no need of this suffering. You can get rid of it by a simple, safe, inexpensive, home treatment discovered by Dr. Blosser, who, for over thirty-four years, has been treating catarrh successfully.

His treatment is unlike any other. It is not a spray, douche, salve, cream, or inhaler, but is a more direct and thorough treatment than any of them. It cleans out the head, nose, throat and lungs so that you can again breathe freely and sleep without that stopped-up feeling that all catarrh sufferers have. It heals the diseased membranes and makes a radical cure, so that you will not be constantly blowing your nose and spitting, and at the same time it does not poison the system and ruin the stomach, as internal medicines do.

If you want to test this treatment without cost, send your address to Dr. J. W. Blosser, 239 Walton street, Atlanta, Ga., and he will send you by return mail enough of the medicine to satisfy you that it is all he claims for it as a remedy for catarrh, catarrhal headaches, catarrhal deafness, asthma, bronchitis, colds and all catarrhal complications. He will also send you free an illustrated booklet. Write him immediately.

Marble Stains

Can you tell me how to remove grease stains from marble? READER.

Make a paste of equal parts of pulverized pumice stone and chalk and as much washing soda as there is of the chalk and pumice stone together. Add water enough to make a paste and spread over the stains. Let it stand a few hours and then wash off with hot soapsuds.

Ink Spots on Leather

There has been spilled on a brown leather pocketbook of mine some ink. Now I value this pocketbook greatly and would like to know if there is any simple remedy to remove the stain? M. E.

To remove the ink make a saturated solution of oxalic acid and water and apply it with a cloth to the spot. As soon as the ink stain disappears apply a cloth wet in clear water. If the color is taken from the leather, as it may be, for the acid is a powerful bleacher, you can restore it with one of the dyes, so common in the market. Match the color of the leather, dilute the dye and touch the spot until the right color is restored.

A Red Sweater

I washed a soiled red sweater for my boy and seemingly ruined it. The greasy, woolly smell and greasy feeling of the garment makes it unfit for use. As it is perfectly good I wish you would tell me what to do for it? A READER.

You evidently did not wash it properly, probably used hard water and ordinary laundry soap. White soap is the best to use with any woolen goods, and a soap is made especially for just such laundering. Try again, using borax and white soap in the hot water, making a good suds. Do not rub soap on the sweater. Let it lie in the hot soapsuds until thoroughly soaked and then press gently with the hands until free from dirt. Rinse in more hot water, in which a little borax has been dissolved, and then press the moisture out of the sweater with your hands and hang in the shade to dry.

White Spots on Table

Will you kindly tell me through the columns of your paper what is good to take out white spots from my dining-room table? MRS. M.

The immediate application of raw linseed oil will usually restore the color. The oil should be left on the spot for several hours, or over night. If the oil does not restore the color, the spot should be repolished with a piece of cheese cloth moistened with turpentine.

What will clean willow furniture?
What will remove iron stains from marble HOUSEKEEPER.

Use salt and water. Apply with a brush and then rub dry.

Wet the marks with oil of vitriol, let it remain fifteen or twenty minutes, then wash off and rub dry with a soft cloth.

Kindly explain in your column the way to enamel a plain zinc bath tub and the necessary articles. Also how to dry rose leaves. How can I take paint spots out of a white dress? Kindly give your candid opinion of my writing. A READER.

Enameling a zinc bath tub would be labor thrown away. I have seen these tubs painted with an enamel paint, but even then they are far from clean and not sanitary. This enamel paint is best used on a foundation of iron, when, with great care, it may be kept presentable.

I put rose leaves in paper bags, where they dry and retain a delicious perfume. Some people use salt. In making a rose jar salt is always added to the accumulating leaves.

Soften and remove the paint with turpentine, then cleanse the spot with soft, warm water and a pure soap.

Keep Fruit from Spoiling

Many housekeepers are not successful in canning fruit, and frequently find their jars running over or "working" a few weeks after being sealed and put away. This may be due to several causes, viz., imperfect fruit, unsterilized cans, or tops that are imperfect and not air-tight. When caused by the latter, it is easily remedied by melting paraffin or sealing-wax and dipping the top of each jar, after it is tightly screwed down, in the melted wax. After allowing it to cool and harden, if any air-holes show dip again. L. L. D.

Excellent Machine Oil

"From Death to Life"

"But you have said that you still contemplate suicide. Why?"

"By that threat, and in no other way, could I dissuade Mr. Brewster from immediate suicide. I have one week in which to prove to him that he may honorably live. At the end of that time if I have not succeeded he will carry out his determination. I have made a vow which I shall keep to save him as he saved me or to die as he dies. I had not meant to tell you this. For such recital, into which I was surprised by your unexpected quotation from the letter I can only beg your pardon."

"Do you think suicide a brave or manly thing?" she asked.

"I do not. I should have endured the unjust prison term, the world's unjust scorn. I should have lived, done my best in the world's work and endured my sufferings as best I could. Peccavi. I have sinned. I was weak. But I may plead that the suddenness of my misfortune caused my weakness. What I now consider is different. I am offering my life to save that of another. In no other way could I accomplish my aim."

"I will do what I can," she said. "I want to save Charles. I want to save you and I want to save the happiness of that girl."

That evening Tyler related to Brewster the story of his experience at the bank. While thus employed a messenger came with a letter from Catherine Ball.

"I write," she said, "in the belief that it is possible that you may have stayed your hand before carrying out the dread deed of which you wrote. If such be—which Heaven grant!—I command you, by every sacred right, to desist. I esteem you no less than before, for your perfidy is counterbalanced by the fact that after all you are not incapable of real love, as I long believed. I grant your freedom and am glad of mine. I only ask that you will marry and not waste the years of the girl who loves and trusts you."

"You are a very genius at bungling, Tyler," Brewster said, when he had read the letter. "You have seen Catherine and told her that I am alive. That lifeless note tells the tale. She is willing to sacrifice her happiness for the sake of mine. Tell me the truth! You have seen her?"

"I have. She is a noble and lovely woman, and I marvel that you could desert her."

"No doubt. Perhaps you would marvel less if you saw the other."

"I am going to see the other. I have in my pocket the letter you were sending her. That unhappiness has thus far been spared her. I mean to test her love."

"That is not necessary, I know."

"Make this test. Write a check or draft for a hundred thousand dollars, if you can do so, in favor of Miss Laughlin. I will have it certified or accepted. I will take this to her with a note from you under your assumed name. Say that Mr. Brewster, your uncle—so small a deception may be pardoned—offers her this if she will accept it and give you honorable release. Tell her that you love her, but for her sake advise acceptance."

"She will refuse."

"Give me leave to try."

"And supposing she would accept?"

"You would return to your first love."

"Anna Laughlin is my first love. But if you mean Catherine Ball, it would do no good. She never will marry me or any other man. But I will do what you say."

Next evening, when the salesgirl returned from her work, she found Tyler awaiting her.

"I am a friend of Mr. Charles Brewster," he said, by way of introduction, "and I bring you a very important letter by his direction. I am to bear away your answer."

Miss Laughlin, a sweet-faced girl, with dark hair and violet blue eyes, was vastly surprised at a letter from the great Mr. Brewster, but when she saw the familiar writing her face broke into a smile.

She opened the letter and the accepted draft for a hundred thousand dollars fell out. She looked at it with a gasp of surprise, then turned pale as she began to read the letter. At the close she covered her face with her hands and moaned. Trembling, with great tears coursing down her face, she got her writing materials and wrote a short note, sealed it, addressed it to "Charles Bain," the name under which she knew her lover, and gave it to Tyler. He did not fail to note that she inclosed the draft. As he went from the door he heard behind him a great sob.

"What did I tell you?" shouted Brewster, when he had read the note. "Poor Anna! Poor Anna!"

"Why do you not keep your word and marry her? She loves you and is worthy of your love?"

"Have you forgotten Catherine Ball?"

"I have not. But Miss Ball has given you your freedom and desires you to accept."

"If I believed that I would be the happiest man on earth. But I do not believe it. When I think of what my grief would be if Anna were to marry another, I cannot live and feel the possibility that I am the living, daily cause of such grief in another. Tyler, my boy, you have lost. I release you and will keep my Saturday-night engagement alone."

"I refuse to accept release. But if two women love you, two will grieve when you are gone."

"Grief for the dead can be endured. More I knew that Anna would not sell her love for money. I know that she will not marry me if I tell her the truth that another woman lives unmarried because I have been faithless."

The next day Edward Tyler called once more on Catherine Ball.

"I have failed to convince him," he said, pale and grave. "It is not vanity which makes him believe in your love for him. It is his profound unwillingness to take chances with your happiness and his desire to give you the supreme proof of repentance for what, after all, was not his fault. My life cannot be saved. His may. I am going to sacrifice my life for his. I am going to ask you also for a sacrifice. Wrongly as he has acted, he has shown his appreciation of what he has done and is willing to die in what he fancies atonement. His life must be spared for the sake of his friends, for his own sake, for the goods works which he will do."

"And what do you ask of me? What can I do to assure him of what he will not believe?"

"I will ask that you will marry, or seem to do so, that he may be convinced and return to the girl who loves him. Listen, Miss Ball, to the proposal, fantastic though it may seem, which is the only way of saving this man, infatuated with his mad design. Let the minister be called and perform a ceremony by which, in appearance, your life will be united to mine. It will be in appearance only and not for long. A marriage certificate will be provided to be shown, if he does not believe, as he will, your letter. He will feel at last that he may live. A few hours more and you will know that my life has ceased and you will be as free as ever. None need know but the faithful clergyman and your chosen witnesses. Even for those few hours my name will not be a disgrace: My parents were poor, but there were none of better, more honorable race. My own life has never been stained by dishonorable deed. The certificate can be made bearing the name of Edward Mitford, my whole name being Edward Mitford Tyler. Thus Mr. Brewster would fail to understand."

"And would you really take your life to save that selfish man who drags others down to death with such unconcern?"

"It is a madness caused by his suffering," Tyler responded. "Few care for me, many for him. He saved my life. Why should I not sacrifice that which I owe to him alone?"

"Have you not a love, a sweetheart, who would mourn you as Charles's would him? None for whom you yourself greatly care?"

Tyler's face flushed to deepest crimson.

"I will speak the truth. Boyish fancies aside, I have never cared for any woman, save one. That one—pardon, my darling, for I speak but the words of one about to die—is yourself. The feeling that I had but a few days to live has forced into hours the experience of years. I have seen, admired, reverenced, loved. The sacrifice of my life is less because if I lived the greatest wish of my life never might be attained."

"I will agree to what you say," she said, abruptly.

A note was dispatched and the minister came and in the presence of the older servants, who were pledged to secrecy, the marriage ceremony was performed. The marriage certificate bore the bridegroom's full name, for Catherine rightly insisted that its production was unnecessary. Then she wrote a letter to Brewster.

"I have been married this day," she said, "to a man whom I esteem above all others I have ever met. Your folly in persisting in your unworthy suicidal design has hastened that marriage, but I assure you it would have taken place in any event. I am far happier than I ever could have been with you. Have done with vanity. Bear in mind that it is I who speak and that you have never known me to speak but the frank truth. I am unutterably glad of all that has happened and hope soon to meet your bride. Owing to the suddenness of my own marriage it must remain secret for a time, but if you absurdly doubt my word, I refer you to the Reverend Doctor Allen, who performed the ceremony."

When the minister had gone and the strangely united couple were left in the library it was the woman who first spoke.

"I suppose you know," she said, "that it is possible for you to give me freedom without the sacrifice of your life. I would rather be a divorced woman than have your blood on my hands, as would be the case if I allowed you to die as you proposed. You can go to some far Western State and there take such steps as are necessary. Promise me that you will do as I say, that you will not commit the crime of self-destruction, and that you will come to say good-bye before you go."

The promise was made and Tyler again sought the presence of the man whose life for a few days had been so strangely bound up with his. He found him in a state of wild excitement and happiness.

"You have won! You have won!" he shouted. "We both are going to live. I have a letter from Catherine, and what do you think! What DO you think! She is married! Don't know who the lucky chap is; can't imagine! Anyway, I am now conscience clear and a little ashamed of myself—that's all! Now what can I do for you? Want to go into business? Want any sum? Name it! I can't do for you what you have done for me, but I can start you in any money-making business you choose to name, and all the old bank clerkships in the country may go to thunder!"

"I would like," said Tyler, after proper congratulations on Brewster's new frame of mind, "to undertake gold-seeking in Alaska, on a proper partnership basis. If I win, you win also. If I lose, you can stand it, and the prize is worth the risk."

"Go ahead, my boy! I'll back you in anything you undertake!"

Brewster was insistent that Tyler should witness his wedding, but the latter persisted in his desire to arrange matters for an early departure and the business details were soon arranged.

Tyler then went to say the words of farewell to the woman who, for the time, was legally his wife.

He told her of his arrangement with Brewster.

"I studied mining when I was in college," he said. "I believe that I shall be successful, and perhaps in a few years may be a rich man. Meantime, I will faithfully carry out your wish in the matter of giving you freedom. But if, after a few years, I have won such a fortune that you will know yours is no temptation to me I will return and, unless you forbid, will offer you courtship with the hope of proving myself worthy of your love."

"But if you do not care for the fortune which I have, why should I care for the one you are going to get?"

"I don't think you would. I do not mean that."

"You mean that you would try by courtship to get me to care for yourself?"

"That is what I mean."

"Then why not save time by undertaking your courtship at once, without going to Alaska? Alaska is a dreadfully long way off."

"But I promised to give you freedom."

"You promised to do as I wished in that matter. I do not want my freedom. I believe in you and trust you absolutely. I am your wife. Are you going to desert me?"

Up to this time Catherine had had a very distant and star-worshipping sort of lover, but in an instant that was past, and she was answered by a whirlwind of hugs and kisses that would have convinced her had she needed convincing that it was herself and not her money that her husband loved.

Brewster was both surprised and pleased when Tyler informed him of his intention to wait until after the wedding, and was somewhat mystified a little later to learn that the Alaska business was off and that Tyler wanted no financial assistance whatsoever. But everything was cleared up when, on the evening of his wedding, Catherine begged to introduce her husband to the newly wedded pair.

"You were for sending him off to Alaska, to be eaten up by polar bears," she said, "but I have persuaded him to stay."

THE END.

Lincoln as a Poet

It is not generally known that Abraham Lincoln ever attempted poetry, but his copybook shows this effusion exactly as it was written at a very early age:

"Abraham Lincoln, his hand and pen;
He may be good, but God knows when."

"Peril and the Prize"

into line, he'll show his pictures to you. Nothing slow about them, I tell you."

"So he had sent those pictures to the garret?" I asked, indicating with a sweep those on the wall.

"Yes, and lots others. They were too slow for his taste. He's a real sport, he is. When I was fixin' up this room for you I brought down the Bible. I always do claim that every respectable house ought to have a Bible in it."

"I suppose you are a great Bible-reader?" I said.

"Indeed I be," she responded promptly.

"I suppose you find plenty of warrant there for your present life," I said.

"There hain't been any warrant for me in ten years," she answered.

"You didn't understand me. I say you find plenty of support for the business you now follow?"

"Oh, yes! I can support myself as cook an' housekeeper any time. It's lots safer, too."

I gave it up, realizing that her point of view was not mine, and that dull people cannot be led into interesting colloquy.

When she was gone I pounced upon the Bible in feverish haste. I was disappointed when I turned to the family record, for its pages had been torn out. There were four pages devoted to photographs, however, and here, though nearly all were missing, there was one full-length of Mr. Dean. A mark in red ink had been drawn across the throat, a cross had been placed above the heart and beneath had been written the word "Traitor."

This puerile exhibition of hatred had never been the work of the man I had seen that day, but of some weaker and less intelligent member of the criminal band. Of that I felt assured. But that Lucy's father had been a member of a gang of lawbreakers and had incurred their murderous hatred seemed clearly indicated, monstrous as the idea appeared.

I began turning through the great book, leaf by leaf, searching for some scrap of paper which would give me some future light. At last I came upon a thin sheet without signature on which I read these words:

"Have made investment as requested. Keep me constantly advised as to address. Use telegraph only. Have tipped the police as to G., but expect nothing, as usual."

That was all. There was neither date, signature nor address. But the writing was that of my employer, Mr. Whitwood. At the bottom was written: "Dear papa, F. brought this for you this morning. L."

A little more was clear to me. For profit or for vengeance, probably for both, the criminals wanted the address of Mr. Dean. They would find it in the safe of Mr. Whitwood. They were going to try to force me to yield up a secret which would mean to yield up a secret which would mean disaster, possibly death, for the father of Lucy Dean. More, I knew Mr. Whitwood was the very soul of honor and the man with whom he was dealing was not a criminal, however unfortunately he might be placed. My position was full of peril. I would die before I would say one word which would bring grief to the girl I loved. If I escaped that peril, I would myself gain her address and seek the great prize of her love.

Democrats would nominate General U. S. Grant, who was a member of their party, but they were outwitted by their opponents, who, fearing the popularity of the successful leader of the army, held an earlier conveniton and nominated him themselves. As this gave him a certainty of election he would have possessed more than ordinary human nature had he refused. He had 214 votes to eighty for the Democratic candidate, Horatio Seymour of New York. For Vice-President Schuyler Colfax was chosen over F. P. Blair.

In 1872 the Republican party being seriously divided on the question of the harsh measures adopted toward the Southern States, the dissatisfied leaders nominated Horace Greeley and B. Gratz Brown, and these were indorsed by the Democrats. The Republicans renominated Grant, with Henry Wilson as Vice-President. The electoral vote was 285 to 80, but Greeley having died before the meeting of the electors the Democratic vote was scattered according to individual fancy, forty-two votes being cast for Thomas A. Hendricks.

In 1876 occurred the first disputed Presidential election. The Democratic candidates were Samuel J. Tilden and Thomas A. Hendricks, the Republican, R. B. Hayes and William A. Wheeler. There were disputed returns in several States, and, the House of Representatives being Democratic and the Senate Republican, it was agreed to refer the matter to a committee composed of fifteen members chosen from the two houses and the Supreme Court. The returns from Florida choosing the Republican electors were pronounced fraudulent by the Republican Supreme Court of that State and the Tilden electors declared elected. The commission, however, by a party vote of eight to seven, declared that the Hayes returns being first received were bound to be counted and that they "could not go behind the returns." So Hayes and Wheeler were declared elected by 185 to 184.

In 1880 the Republicans nominated James A. Garfield and Chester A. Arthur; the Democrats, General Winfield S. Hancock and William H. English. The vote was 214 to 155. Garfield fell by an assassin's hand and Arthur became President in September following the inauguration.

In 1884 the features of the campaign were, a revolt in the Republican party which carried many of its leaders and newspapers out of the ranks. Cleveland carried the State of New York by a narrow plurality and was elected by an electoral vote of 219 to 182. For Vice-President Thomas A. Hendricks was elected over General John A. Logan.

In 1888 President Cleveland was renominated by the Democrats, with Allen G. Thurman as Vice-President. The Republicans named General Benjamin Harrison and Levi P. Morton, who were elected by 233 to 168.

In 1892 President Cleveland was again nominated, with Adlai E. Stevenson as running mate. The Republicans renominated General Harrison, but replaced Mr. Morton by Whitelaw Reid. The newly formed People's Party, the individual members of which after much painful thought were denominated Populists, nominated General James B. Weaver and James G. Field. The Democrats gained a sweeping victory, having 277 electoral votes for Cleveland, against 145 for Harrison and twenty-two for Weaver. This is the only time since 1860 that a third party has gained electoral votes.

In 1896 the Democratic politicians in control of the national convention decided to abandon the issues and traditional principles of their party and adopt those of the Populists. They nominated on such a platform William J. Bryan and Arthur Sewall. Bryan was indorsed by the Populists, who, however, persisted in running their own candidate for Vice-President, Thomas E. Watson. A great defection of old-fashioned Democrats followed this action. The Republicans named William McKinley and Garrett A. Hobart, who were elected by an electoral vote of 271 to 176.

In 1900 the Democrats again nominated Bryan, with former Vice-President Stevenson for second place. The Republicans named McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt. The electoral vote was 292 to 155.

In 1904 the faction inclined to the earlier position of the Democratic party prevailed in the Democratic convention, which nominated Alton B. Parker of New York and Henry G. Davis of West Virginia. The defeated faction very generally voted for the Republican candidate, Theodore Roosevelt, who had become President upon the assassination of President McKinley in 1901. He was elected by a vote of 336 to 140.

STILL IN MISERY? STILL IN PAIN?

Why don't you give Dr. Lynott a chance? Why don't you let him show you what he can do for you? He asks you to sign nothing! No contracts! No agreements! He asks for no money! Not one cent! He is the King and Peer of all Specialists in Uric Acid Diseases, such as KIDNEY TROUBLE, BLADDER TROUBLE and any form of RHEUMATISM

If you are suffering today—still suffering—from kidney trouble, from a bladder complaint, from a racking, grinding rheumatism, if heat weakens you and cold chills you to the bone, it may be because you have failed to give Dr. Lynott a chance to show you what he can do for you. His skill and his remedies have done wonders for thousands of people—have cured many a torturing backache, many a bedwetting child, many a twisting, wrenching case of rheumatism, many a troublesome case of too frequent desire to urinate, many and many a case too numerous to mention of the ravages caused by Excessive Uric Acid Deposits in the system. This excessive uric acid is the Twentieth Century Germ of Trouble. In you it may get in the kidneys; in another in the bladder; still in another in the muscles, joints and nerves, causing peculiar forms of rheumatism. It may induce constipation and liver trouble; interfere with digestion and sleep; depress the heart and lungs; destroy the tone of the nervous system and reduce the bodily vigor.

Has it done any of these to you, or to anyone you hold near and dear? If so, consider it your greatest duty for this day to write Dr. Lynott. These are the diseases that are his specialty; these are the diseases that he is most successful in curing; these are the diseases he has cured by the hundred. He has done it; he can PROVE he has done it—not one case or several cases, but legions of them—from youth to extreme old age. And if for so many others why not for you? He will nurse you back to health. He will give your case the same time, attention and painstaking care that he has these others, and he will bring you out of your sickness and misery as he has them. It remains for you to give him the chance. The way to give him the chance is by writing him. Below are the symptoms he treats and a certificate which is easy and convenient to fill out, and which you are then to send him. If you wish, of course, you can explain your case in the form of a letter, but he will understand just as well if you fill out the certificate and send it. DO IT TODAY.

The above is a likeness of Mr. E. D. Merrick of New Brighton, Pa. He is 76 and suffered for over 20 years. He appeared before a Notary Public in his city and made an affidavit as to the benefits derived while being treated in his home by Dr. Lynott.

Dr. Lynott's Free Gifts to You

THE FREE TREATMENT

Fill out the certificate below, being sure to give the numbers of your symptoms, and Dr. Lynott will promptly send you a supply of Free Home Treatment. There is absolutely and positively no expense or charge. He will bear all the expenses himself. Put your faith in Dr. Lynott; try his grand, highly endorsed but free remedies; take the free home treatment, and then, but not until then, will you realize how easy it is to be cured when the right remedies are sent you.

FREE LETTER OF ADVICE

When your envelope comes giving the symptoms of your complaint, Dr. Lynott will study your case carefully, and besides sending you a free home treatment, he will also write you a letter of medical advice giving his opinion of your case and stating just how you can be cured. Many people have said that this letter of advice has been of more value to them than all the efforts and medicines of other doctors.

FREE LARGE MEDICAL BOOK

For years Dr. Lynott has published and distributed the largest free medical book on kidney, bladder and rheumatic diseases. The book is 68 pages of good size and nicely printed on a high grade of paper, and beautiful illustrations of the different parts written about run through the book. Everybody writing Dr. Lynott will receive a complimentary copy of this grand book—entirely free.

Fill out and send the free certificate to Dr. Lynott at the address given and have your case studied free of charge by this Master Specialist, receive the Free Home Treatment, the Medical Letter of Advice, and the Illustrated Book—all prepaid without a cent of cost to you.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. VIII. SUNBEAM, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, DECEMBER 18, 1908. NO. 38.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

Campaign Funds.

Minneapolis.—L. S. Swenson, treasurer of the republican state central committee, has filed with the auditor of Hennepin county a financial statement showing that the campaign receipts and expenditures of the committee were $22,314.49, and that the committee is in debt to the extent of $1,504.66. The statement is brief, and lawyers say that Mr. Swenson and the treasurers of the different campaign committees in Hennepin county who have filed statements with the county auditor have failed to obey the provisions of the state law and are liable to prosecution for misdemeanor.

The state law provides, in section 258 of the code, that the treasurer of a political committee shall prepare and file with the auditor of the county in which he resides "a true and detailed statement, subscribed and verified by him, setting forth each and every sum of money by him received or disbursed for such purposes, the date of each receipt and disbursement, the name of the person from whom received or to whom paid, and the purposes of each. Such statement shall also contain a detailed list of the unpaid debts, if any, of such committee, with the nature and amount of each, and to whom owing; and, if there are no such debts, the statement shall so allege."

The code makes failure to file the account required by law a misdemeanor.

Plums.

St. Paul.—Gov. Johnson before his departure for Washington admitted that the following officeholders were practically sure of reappointment:

Frank A. Day, private secretary.

Harvey Grimmer, executive clerk.

John E. King, state librarian.

Thomas Downs, capitol building custodian.

Fred B. Wood, adjutant general.

George S. Wood, assistant adjutant general.

W. H. Hatcher, military storekeeper.

J. A. Hartigan, insurance commissioner.

J. W. Olsen, superintendent of instruction.

C. G. Schulz, assistant superintendent.

Anton Schaefer, public examiner.

In the labor department, W. E. McEwan, now oil inspector, will be placed at the head while the office vacated by him will be filled by E. J. Lynch. These two appointments have already been announced.

Ore Shipments.

Duluth.—The News-Tribune's compilation of iron ore shipments for 1908 from the Lake Superior region gives the tonnage at 25,420,752. This is complete with the exception of two or three cargoes which will leave Escanaba, Mich., tomorrow or Monday.

The Mesabe range in northern Minnesota produced the bulk of the ore, its output being 17,231,804 tons. Shipments from ports were as follows:

Duluth, 8,808,000; Two Harbors, 5,702,237; Superior, Wis., 3,563,111; Escanaba, Mich., 3,346,149; Ashland, Wis., 2,513,670; Marquette, Mich., 1,487,485.

Last season the iron ore production of the Lake Superior region was 42,245,070 tons. Indications are that last year's record-breaking tonnage will be equaled or beaten by the output of next season.

Fifty Families Needy.

Duluth.—Mayor W. A. Haven of this city, chairman of the relief committee appointed by Gov. Johnson to succor the unfortunates in this section who suffered by the forest fires this year, has a list of fifty North Shore families deserving of assistance. At first it was estimated that not more than fifteen families would need assistance, but investigation has increased the original estimate. Many of the settlers need lumber to rebuild their houses, and it is planned to hurry the necessary building material north as soon as possible. N. J. Miller is making a tour of the North Shore investigating meritorious cases, and upon his return, definite advices as to actual needs of the fire sufferers will be available.

Wheat Receipts.

Duluth.—The following table gives the receipts of wheat, in bushels, at the four principal spring wheat markets from the beginning of the crop year, Aug. 1, 1908, to Dec. 1, and for the same time a year ago.

Duluth.—Increased mining of iron ore and decreased shipments this year means increase in taxes for Minnesota.

St. Paul—Tag day fund aggregates $17,500, according to reports received at meeting of tuberculosis relief committee.

Minneapolis—C. A. Smith Timber Company announces its intention to reforest half a million acres of timber land; American firms expect to follow.

South St. Paul—Carl Braun and P. P. Boland were fined $5 each by Judge Doss for failure to obey the school laws relative to sending their children to school.

St. Paul.—An industrial home for crippled children may be established in St. Paul by the coming legislature in conformance with a recommendation of the state board of control.

St. Paul—A tax on the present water power of the state to form a sinking fund to wipe out the cost of deepening the Minnesota River and constructing impounding reservoirs is the idea a number of engineers of the state have expressed.

Brainerd—The district court convened here. One of the most important cases to come before it will probably be that of Ralph Morey, the eleven-year-old boy, who on Saturday, November 9th, shot and killed John Bushway, Jr., a lad of about his own age.

Duluth—The recount of votes in the Riddell-Riley contest for sheriff of Itasca county, completed at Grand Rapids, Minn., gives Riley a gain of one vote, making his majority over Riddell fifty. On Thursday the contestants will introduce evidence as to alleged irregularities.

Duluth—There is now no doubt that the steamer D. M. Clemson went down with all hands near White Fish Point. Twenty-three hatch covers have been washed ashore there and their description convinces the Provident Steamship company that they belong to the missing boat.

Minneapolis—According to a report of Frank Hoffmann, statistician of the state labor department, there have been thirty-three strikes during the past two years, which involved 8,818 labor union men. There are 2,063 members of twenty unions still on the strike, although some are working.

Crookston—Regular passenger service on the Greenbush-Warroad line of the Great Northern road will be established on Dec. 21. There will be one train each way on the line daily, leaving Crookston at 8:40 a. m., arriving at Warroad about 2 p. m. The train will leave Warroad at 3 p. m. and will arrive in Crookston at 10 p. m.

St. Paul—W. H. Williams, retiring labor commissioner, in the recommendation sent with his biennial report suggests that the office be made elective rather than appointive, but suggests the election should not take place until November, 1910. He also believes that the twenty odd inspectors of the department should be placed under civil service.

Washington, D. C.—Governor John A. Johnson of Minnesota, in an address today before the joint conference of the national commission and the governors of different states, brought an enthusiastic message of accord from the great Middle West in the scheme of conservation, and declared that the paramount problem of the hour is the development of inland waterways.

Duluth—Wholesale importation of French women into the United States and more particularly into the Northwest was disclosed through the arrest by William H. Dean, inspector in charge of the local United States immigration office of Clemantine Dailly, a native of Paris, who says she was brought to Duluth under contract by Mary Gain, 234 St. Croix avenue.

St. Cloud—The roads in Minnesota last year caused the death of 151 people and injured 1,720, according to the sworn statements of the roads filed with the railway and warehouse commission. These figures include the report of thirty-four roads for the year ending last July. Six small roads, like the Duluth Belt line, and similar short stretches are the only ones which have no injury record.

St. Paul—Two resignations from state boards reached Governor Johnson. John Frank of Austin resigned from the state livestock sanitary board because of disability. He became totally blind some months ago and has not been able to attend a meeting of the board since his appointment. Edwin H. Hewitt of Minneapolis has resigned as a member of the governing board of the state art society, pleading lack of time to attend to the duties of the position.

PRES. NORTHROP RESIGNS

EMINENT INSTRUCTOR DESIRES TO RETIRE.

Having Reached the Age of 74 Years He Believes a Younger Man Should Take the Burden.

President Cyrus Northrop of the University of Minnesota, whose resignation after 25 years of service was tendered to the board of regents at the annual meeting Tuesday, and its acceptance declined, has not decided whether to enforce the acceptance of his resignation.

When questioned as to his action Dr. Northrop would make no definite statement as to whether he would accede to the request of the board of regents and withdraw his resignation.

The matter will come up again at the next meeting of the Regents.

Nothing is known of the action that will be taken by the regents with regard to the resignation, but it is probable that the request of President Northrop will be granted. It is probable that he will be given the title of president emeritus.

Dr. Northrop has no plans for the future and will take a long rest before attempting any further work of any kind. It is probable that he will make a prolonged visit abroad.

Some weeks ago rumors of Dr. Northrop's intention to resign were current but at that time he denied them in strong terms, declaring there was absolutely no truth in any statement that he was contemplating the step he has just announced his intention of taking.

Dr. Northrop, lawyer, editor, author, Yale professor and second president of the University of Minnesota, has permanently associated his name with the notable growth of the university and with the advancement of education throughout the Northwest.

During the twenty-five years that he has directed this institution he has seen it rise from the rank of an academy, or, at best, a minor college with 300 students and one building, to the rank of a true university with 4,000 students and twenty buildings. Under his sagacious control the [illegible] at the university has become the largest, with one exception, that is enjoyed by any state university in the United States. He has elevated the standard of scholarship moreover, to an equality with that of any other American university.

To his achievements as an educator he has added much successful labor in the fields of politics, literature and religion. He has impressed upon the state no less than upon the university, through his sterling, beneficent character, a personal influence that cannot be definitely gauged, but that is recognized by his associates as the best of tributes to his worth.

Born at Ridgefield, Conn., Sept. 30, 1834, Dr. Northrop attended introductory schools and an academy in his native town. At the age of 17 he entered Williston seminary, at Easthampton, Mass. A year later he became a student of Yale college. Having lost one year through illness, he was graduated in 1857. During his college career he was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Skull and Bones, Delta Kappa Epsilon and Alpha Sigma Tau. He was the first president of the Brothers in Unity, a literary society that embraced half the student body. In 1859 he was graduated by the Yale Law school. While taking his law course he taught Latin and Greek at a private school in New Haven, and he also fitted two classes to enter the college.

In 1862 he withdrew from the legal profession to become editor of the New Haven Daily Palladium.

But another year had barely elapsed when he was called to adorn with his talents a third profession, being summoned quite unexpectedly to the chair of rhetoric and English literature at Yale. In this congenial station he remained twenty-one years.

Meantime during the Civil War and the days of "reconstruction," he again interested himself actively in politics and made many addresses. He was even a candidate for congress in 1867. He retired wholly from the political arena in 1876, except that he retained during the administration of President Hayes, the position of collector of customs at New Haven, to which office he was appointed by President Grant.

He was elected president of the University of Minnesota in 1884.

From Yale he received the degree of LL.D. in 1886; from Illinois college and the University of Wisconsin, in 1904; and from South Carolina college in 1905.

Always a prominent Congregationalist, he served as moderator of the national Congregational council at Worcester, Mass., in 1889, and at London, England, in 1891, as delegate to the international Congregational council, and as one of the two American vice presidents of this council.

On his 28th birthday Dr. Northrop was married, in 1862, to Miss Ann Elizabeth Warren, of Stamford, Conn. They have two children.

OPENS WAR ON PRESIDENT

HOUSE ADOPTS RESOLUTION FOR COMMITTEE ON MESSAGE.

Story That Roosevelt Is Preparing Return Blow—Legislative Appropriation Bill Quickly Passed.

Washington. — Immediately after the convening of the house Friday Representative Perkins of New York introduced a resolution, which had heretofore been agreed upon, providing for the appointment of a special committee of five members to consider the proper means of dealing with that portion of the president's message which criticises the course of congress in prohibiting the detail of secret service men to duty outside of their own bureau. The resolution is preceded by a preamble reciting some expressions of the message. No effort is made to give voice to the feeling of the house. The resolution was passed.

If the plan of the house to censure President Roosevelt does not stir up a genuine explosion, it won't be the president's fault. He is now at work, it is reported, getting together data concerning the personal and official life of a number of the congressmen, which he expects to fire into congress to show what might happen were there to be a genuine investigation of congressmen, such as he said in his message the congressmen seemed to fear.

Of course the present talk may be intended only to frighten some of the more timid congressmen—especially those who may have some loose skeletons in their desks—into a sudden apathy on the promised censure.

When the legislative appropriation bill was called up in the house of representatives Friday by Mr. Bingham of Pennsylvania the extraordinary situation was presented that for the first time in 12 years no general debate was asked for. Even the first reading of the bill was dispensed with by unanimous consent.

Mr. Bingham, having the measure in charge, explained its provisions, the main features of which already have been printed. Its reading for amendment then was begun.

OFFICER AND FANATIC DEAD.

Two More Victims of Kansas City Street Battle.

Kansas City, Mo.—Two more names were added to the list of dead as a result of Tuesday's battle between religious fanatics and the police here, the total number of dead now being four.

Shortly before noon Louis Pratt, 45 years old, the foremost disciple of James Sharp, died at the general hospital, and an hour later Michael Mullane, a policeman, succumbed to his wounds at St. Joseph's hospital. Policeman Albert O. Dalbow and Lula Pratt died immediately after being shot Tuesday.

Sharp was arrested Thursday night at Monticello, Johnson county, Kansas. He gave himself up without resistance. "Adam God" was wounded in both hands. He told the officers that he was willing to be taken now that he had "finished the work that God sent me to do."

Found Guilty of Murder.

Duluth, Minn.—William Schreiber was found guilty of murder in the first degree here Friday. He killed Frank Massapust, a settler, near Ashawa, last February. His acquittal had been generally expected.

FATALITIES IN GARAGE FIRE.

Chicago Mother Leaps with Child and Both Die.

Chicago. — With men and women of Chicago's most exclusive and fashionable residence section as horrified spectators, two persons, a mother and a child, received fatal injuries in a garage fire Friday night.

Two others were burned so badly they are not expected to live.

While Mrs. George M. Pullman, Mrs. Secor Cunningham, Mrs. Stanley Field and other leaders of Chicago's social world stood by watching the flames, Mrs. Florence Carr, wife of a chauffeur employed by James K. Deering, threw herself from a window of the burning building to the ground below, carrying in her arms her young son.

Arthur Meeker placed the boy in his auto and raced across the city toward the nearest hospital. The boy died soon after the hospital was reached.

J. W. Thorne of Montgomery Ward & Co. used his automobile to convey the mother to a hospital. She died as the machine was rushing across the streets.

ATTEMPTS TO BRIBE UMPIRES.

Officials of Deciding National League Game Make Charges.

New York.—Even more sensational than the tumultuous close of the recent National league playing season were the closing hours of the league's annual meeting here Friday when charges of attempted bribery of the umpires who officiated at the game that decided the championship of 1908, between New York and Chicago at the Polo grounds, October 8, were sprung and the magnates appointed a committee to probe them, even intimating that criminal prosecutions might follow the investigation committee's report. An official statement by the league says none of the persons named are in any way connected with organized baseball.

MANIAC HOLDS UP VILLAGE.

Edgewater, N. J., Terrorized by "John the Baptist."

Edgewater, N. J.—Proclaiming himself to be "John the Baptist, come to save the world," an armed fanatic, wrought up to a high pitch of maniacal fury, terrorized this village for a full hour late Friday. He appeared suddenly on the main street, waving a big revolver, held up the proprietors of several stores, exchanged many shots with a hastily formed posse and at last was wounded when the police and a mob of citizens ran him down. In all the fusillade no one was hit but the maniac himself, and his wounds are not regarded as dangerous. He says he is Oscar Pomeroy of Nebraska.

France Lets Castro Land.

Bordeaux.—Cipriano Castro, the president of Venezuela, was allowed to land on French soil Thursday when he arrived at Pauillac, 30 miles from Bordeaux, on the steamship Guadeloupe. After a conference with a representative of the French government, President Castro came ashore and proceeded to Bordeaux in a special car. The announcement was made that the president would go to Paris. Thursday evening an agent of M. Pichon, the foreign minister, informed President Castro that he would be welcomed as a private citizen, and that as a chief of state he would be given every protection during his sojourn in France.

ABE RUEF IS GUILTY

FORMER 'FRISCO BOSS IS CONVICTED OF BRIBERY.

DRAMATIC END OF TRIAL

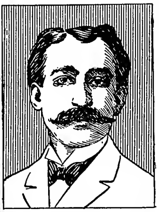
Francis J. Heney Hears the Verdict Read—Defendant May Get Fourteen Years in the Penitentiary.

San Francisco.—Abraham Ruef, former political boss of San Francisco, was convicted Thursday of bribery. The verdict was returned exactly upon the stroke of four o'clock when the deliberations of the jury had been prolonged throughout a period of 24 hours.

As the jury filed into the courtroom and took their seats in the jury box, Judge Lawlor asked Foreman McNamara:

"Have you gentlemen reached a verdict?"

"We have," replied the foreman as he handed a folded slip of paper to Clerk Welch. An impressive silence followed. Attorneys, defendant, spectators, detectives and police held their breath as the clerk slowly and deliberately, yet with apparent agitation, unfolded the paper and then, as every eye in the courtroom was riveted upon him, read the words: "We, the jury, find the defendant, Abraham Ruef, guilty as charged."



Abe Ruef.

Immediately all arose to their feet. There was a murmur of approval, but no demonstration.

At the other end of the counsel table, near the place where his blood had dyed the floor a deep crimson red which had been effaced with sandpaper, sat Francis J. Heney, who appeared in the courtroom for the first time since the day he was shot.

Ruef sat between his father and Thomas B. Dozier of the defense when the verdict was returned. He had spent the greater part of the day in conversation with his aged parent and though his face paled and his eyes remained fixed for a long time upon the men who had pronounced his fate, almost his first thought was for the elder Mr. Ruef. He whispered a few words of encouragement to the old man and sent him out of the room to break the news to the defendant's mother and sisters.

Ruef's conviction renders him liable to a maximum penalty of 14 years in the penitentiary.

PLANS ACTION FOR LIBEL.

President Threatens Authors of Canal "Graft" Charges.

Washington.—"If they can be reached for criminal libel, I shall try to have them reached," said President Roosevelt in speaking Thursday afternoon about "those Americans who have been guilty of infamous falsehood concerning the acquisition of the property and the construction of the (Panama) canal itself."

It was to the committee of one hundred of the Lakes-to-the-Gulf Deep Waterway association, headed by Gov. Deneen of Illinois, who were received by the president in the east room of the White House, that he made this declaration.

Forming Big Lumber Trust.

Duluth, Minn.—The lumber interests represented by the Weyerhaeusers, O'Brien & Cook of St. Paul and Duluth and Edward Hines of Chicago are here working on the formation of a lumber trust which will control practically all the pine in North America. The greatest secrecy is being observed, but it is known that the deal is almost finished and the details may be given out in a day or two. The transfer of the Duluth, Virginia & Rainy Lake railroad is said to be the only sticking point.

Cortelyou May Head Trust Company.

New York. — It was stated here Friday night, though the statement was not officially confirmed, that the presidency of the Union Trust Company had been offered to George B. Cortelyou, secretary of the treasury. The Union is the fourth largest trust company in the city.

He was not a very rapid wooer, and she was getting a bit anxious.

Again he called, and they sat together in the parlor, "just those two."

"Oh, bother!" she said. "Who can be calling?"

"Say you're out," said the deceirer.

"Then say you're engaged," he urged

"Oh, may I, Charlie?" she cried as she threw herself in his arms.

A Rejection Slip.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Miss Clara Barton says she has not become a Christian Scientist.

At the age of eighty years Mrs. Jacob Peters of Venango, Pa., is a correspondent of five newspapers.

Mary Dawson, aged eighty, still works as a maid in the New England House, Boston, where she has served for sixty years. Her first employer was Paran Stevens.

Miss Julia Chapman won a set of silver knives, forks and spoons in a board sawing contest given in Steiwer hall, Fossil, Ore., recently. She went through her board before any of her competitors had got well started.

The dress of Miss Elizabeth Loughridge of Lexington, Ky., who was leading a grand march wearing a wreath of fire, known as an electric sparker, took fire, and she escaped injury. The dress took fire a second time, and she was severely burned.

Mrs. Evelyn Fellows Masury, a society woman of Boston, surrendered her house the other night to her maid, Delia Landers, who gave a party to her friends. The house was theirs for the night, and dances, refreshments and music filled the evening.

The family of Mrs. Eliza Allen of Augusta, Me., claim that she is the youngest great-grandmother in the United States. Mrs. Allen is fifty years old and has been a great-grandmother more than a year. She is a vigorous woman and personally manages her farm.

Pen, Chisel and Brush.

The late Professor Jebb is said to have done considerable work, as yet unpublished, on the "Fragments of Sophocles," and this work is to be carried on by a competent Cambridge scholar.

Professor Gustav Eberlein, one of the foremost German sculptors, has arrived in New York. For the last seven years he has worked exclusively for Emperor William. While in this country he expects to make busts of President Roosevelt, J. P. Morgan, E. H. Harriman and other leading Americans.

When Mr. Crane and his wife send out invitations to their "at homes" and other functions, they always commence "Master and Mistress Crane request the pleasure," etc. They are exceedingly popular as hosts

Sporting Notes.

The first heat trotted below 2:10 on the grand circuit during the season of 1907 was 2:07½, by Highball.

Lee Talbot, the Mercersburg hammer thrower who made such a sensation with his schoolboy hammer records, appears in a new light at Cornell university—the champion wrestler of the university.

An American trainer has this to say of the Orloff trotter, "The Russian horses look well and do well in front of a family carriage, but they would be badly out of place on the race track of any other country than their own."

Pet Boars.

The nicest pet the French forest affords is the marcassin, or baby wild boar. It is almost human in its cleverness, delights in funny pranks, has an evident sense of humor, makes friends of children and dogs and even lends itself to mimic hunts, playing the part of the hunted animal. Its antics are varied and original. The only creature to which the marcassin objects is its distant relative, the pig. Directly it sees that animal its back is up and its growing tusk is bared. In babyhood it has a lovely sleek coat of very dark brown and tan. When the silky hair is shed and bristles take its place the temper grows uneven. If marital and paternal cares come on, the wild boar puts away its childish ways and wants to take its family to the forest to feed them on acorns and beech mast. Woe to the hound or to the keeper who wants to keep him back. In the forest this paterfamilias may be called the first line of defense, the sow the second, and the little ones gambol round her.—Paris Cor. London Truth.

Not So Rash After All.

It was on a street car in the city of Washington. Two colored women in cheaply gorgeous splendor were talking, and one chanced to mention a Mr. Jinks in her conversation.

CHICKEN HEARTED MEN.

Every One of Group Dreaded to Hear of Some Injury.

"I could hear the bone in his wrist snap," said a man who was describing an accident to a group of men.

"Oh, cut it out, for heaven's sake!" called out one of the group. He was a big fellow, but he was as white as a sheet.

The speaker laughed jeeringly. "I didn't know you were so chicken hearted," he said.

The big man began to explain. "I'm not what you would call a timid sort of person, but the mention of any injury to the wrist always turns me faint. I can stand seeing blood flow or hear thrilling tales of broken limbs and smashed heads, but I can't stand any wrist stories. I don't know the reason. It seems to be merely a matter of temperament."

A quiet little man came to the rescue. "I know just what you mean," he said. "You're not the only one who has a peculiar aversion to a certain sort of injury. Now, my particular aversion is on account of trouble with the eyes. Immediately I begin to blink and wink and my eyes smart until I can't stand it. I'd rather hear an account of a brutal murder than any description of an eye disease."

The man who had jeered at the big man had been thinking. "I have one of those aversions, too, now I come to think of it," he said. "It is accounts of paralytic shocks, to which I particularly object. I feel myself growing numb all over when I hear such tales, and I always make an excuse to get away as soon as possible."

His remark was a signal for a universal confession. One acknowledged that the sight of blood gave him a sensation of extreme nausea; another said that reading or hearing of a fracture of the skull gave him "a gone feeling at his stomach," and another said he shivered so his teeth chattered every time he heard an account of an operation for appendicitis.

The big man, was triumphant "Well, I'm not such a big baby after all," he said.—New York Tribune

One Kind of Fame.

Authorities who have in charge some of England's ancient treasures try to discourage the habit of carving initials on these relics. A fine of $15 was recently imposed on a man who had chipped his name in letters six inches high on one of the stones in the "Druids' Circle" near Keswick. Close to the giant stone globe at Swanage a special slab is provided for the harmless reception of the names of all who are addicted to this self advertisement. On popular Alpine summits it is customary for names to be left on cards in emptied wine bottles.—Chicago News.

A Story of Beau Nash.

Beau Nash was not entirely a butterfly, as is proved by the following anecdote: His father was a partner in a glass business at Swansea. This was little known, and the Duchess of Marlborough once twitted him with the obscurity of his birth. "Madam," replied Nash, "I seldom mention my father in company not because I have any reason to be ashamed of him, but because he has some reason to be ashamed of me."

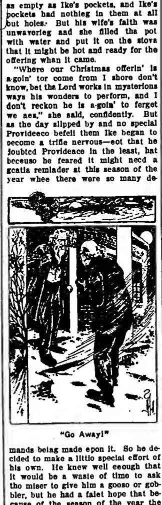
THERE once lived on a plantation a miser so mean and stingy that even his pigs were eternally disgruntled, while his geese hissed at him as he passed, and his hens cackled derisively at the very sight of him. He never paid anybody more than half of what they were entitled to, and even the mosquitoes avoided him in disgust as having a hide like an automobile tire and with no more sustenance beneath it. No man, woman, child or beast was ever fed by him without rendering services in advance for more than the food was worth, and his neighbors were afraid to shake hands with him for fear that he would steal their finger-nails. He skimmed his milk twice, made his decayed apples into cider, and when his horses got so old they could not work for him any longer he killed them and made them into glue, and then used the glue to stick another mortgage on some neighbor's house. Of course everybody hated him worse than they did the fever and ague, but he did not mind that much because in one way or another he kept getting money and that was revenge enough for him.

Now, half a mile away from this man's house was the little cabin of old Ike Clay and his old wife Sally. Ike was so poor that even the mice could not afford to board with him, much as they liked him, and his poverty was generally due to the fact that as soon as he got anything he would give it away to the first one who asked him for it, for Ike and Sally lived in the belief that it is more blessed to give than to receive. Also they were very humble and religious and devoutly believed in everyday miracles and that the Lord would feed his children even as he did his sparrows and fishes. And up to this time it had always turned out that way, but now the day before Christmas had arrived and the cupboard was as empty as Ike's pockets, and Ike's pockets had nothing in them at all but holes. But his wife's faith was unwavering and she filled the pot with water and put it on the stove that it might be hot and ready for the offering when it came.

"Where our Christmas offerin' is a-goin' tor come from I shore don't know, bet the Lord works in mysterions ways his wonders to perform, and I don't reckon he is a-goin' to ferget we nes," she said, confidently. But as the day slipped by and no special Providence befell them Ike began to become a trifle nervous—not that he doubted Providence in the least, but because he feared it might need a gentle reminder at this season of the year when there were so many demands being made upon it. So he decided to make a little special effort of his own. He knew well enough that it would be a waste of time to ask the miser to give him a goose or gobbler, but he had a faint hope that because of the season of the year the old skinflint might perhaps soften enough to give him credit on his well-known honesty. So he set forth in the gathering dusk and sifting snow upon his mission and in a little time was tapping at the miser's back door.



"Go Away!"

For several minutes he tapped away and scuffled his feet and at last the miser came forth—not as a man comes forth, but in the manner you would expect to see a miser appear, first a nose and then a foot and then a hand and finally the rest of him, as if he grudged even his presence, and stood frowning at Ike through the gloom. Ike's clothes were ragged and flapping in the wind and his toes were leaking from the end of his shoes, but the smile on his face was cheerful and would have made a friend of any one except a miser who loved no man or woman or child or beast, and whose soul was shriveled and warped, and whose conscience was as tough as the hoof of a horse.

"What do you want?" he asked in a voice as disagreeable as the sound of filing a saw.

Ike took off his hat and his bare head began to bob conciliatingly up and down like the bobber of a fish line when the fish nibbles at the hook below. "I has come to see yu', Mistah Skimpum, fo' the reason that I am most pow'ful hungry an' because there is no meat in we-nn's cabin. And because this is the evenin' of the most blessed day in the whole world when the good book says there should be peace on earth and good will to man, I am a-goin' to ask yu' to do me a mighty favor."

"I haven't got anything to give," interrupted the miser, hastily. "And I don't believe in Christmas giving, anyway. It is merely an excuse for beggary. I wish you would go away."

Ike's head bobbed again. "Yes, suh, but I am not begging. I'll do yu' two days' hard work to pay yu' for a turkey."

"I don't need any help. I do my own work."

"Yes, suh, I know that. But if you'll loan me a turkey for a couple of days I'll work for somebody else and pay yu' in cash."

"No, I wouldn't trust you. And, besides, if the Lord wanted you to have a turkey he would send you one without your begging for it. So go away."

"Didn't I Tell Yu' So?"

Ike took a step backward with quiet dignity. "All right, suh, I reckons yu' is correct. Thank yu', suh," he said and then went plodding homeward empty of hands and as hollow inside as an old bee tree, the wind nipping at his bare toes and howling after him like a wolf, and as a matter of fact the wolf of hunger was very close to him indeed. But Sally did not despair when she heard his story.

"That offerin' is shore a-comin', Ike," she asserted, as she put another stick on the fire to keep the water in readiness. "I don't know jest how we-alls is a-goin' to get it, but I feels it a-comin' in the air. And jest yu' mark what I tell yu'."

Then they sat down together by the bare table and listened to the wind. And, my, how it began to howl! Away off in the northwest a great storm had been brewing that day and now it was approaching them like a giant in a rage. And as it passed along it came to the home of the miser and with a growl fell upon it. It gripped the house and shook it as a terrier does a rat, roaring down the chimney and whistling under the door until the shingles flew from the roof like feathers and the bones of the cringing miser rattled together in his fear. Then it pounced upon the fowlhouse, and cuffing off the roof blew with all its breath within, and in a second the night air was filled with flying fowls that flapped and squawked as they went sailing into the distance like puff balls scattered by a blast.

Over in their little cabin Ike and Sally heard the uproar and fell upon their knees in prayer. Frightened though he was Ike did not forget his hunger.

"They say it is an ill wind that don't blow anybody good, dear Lord," he began. "And I prays that out of this heah mighty gale will fall a few grain from yu' bounteous store." And scarcely was the prayer finished than there came a fearful gust and the crash of a heavy body against the door. And the latch broke and the door flew wide and upon the floor there fell with a thud a ten-pound gobbler, wind-blown and ruffled to be sure, but fat, tender and soul-satisfying—the very bird, in fact, that the miser had fattened for his own sharp teeth.

Sally arose and held the big bird high in her hands. Faith, charity and happiness illuminated her lean face until it shone as from a light within. "Didn't I tell yu' so, old man," she cried, exultingly. "Didn't I tell yu' I felt it a-comin' in the air? Bless the good Lord, for he shorely works in mysterious ways his wonders to perform."

Good Cause for Gladness

"Alas!" sighed the moody man, "there is no gladness for me in this joyous season."

"Tut-tut!" said the optimist. "Surely there is a ray of sunshine for you, as there is for all of us if we but look for it?"

"No," replied the moody one. "I have not a single friend, and no relatives with whom I am on speaking terms."

"Cheer up, then," advised the other, with a shade of envy in his tone. "Can't you be glad because you will not have to buy any Christmas presents?"

Hiding the Christmas Gifts

By J. M. WALCH

"HUH! looks something like snow, at that," said the man awaiting his turn at the barber shop, going to the door and looking out. "Beats the dickens what a short time there is between Fourth of July and Christmas, these years. I can remember the time when there was a stretch of about 14 years between the Fourth of July and Christmas, can't you, fellers? Why, Christmas'll be clomping along before we know it. Right now the time is drawing pretty close when a fellow will have to be mighty careful about opening bureau drawers when his wife is in the room if he doesn't want to be scared into a conniption when she notices what he's doing. Y'see, this is just about the beginning of the season when wives start to hiding the Christmas presents they've bought for their husbands. Funny gag, that, too.

"Then there's another thing about this Christmas present hiding business. Most men stick it out that women are the curious, inquisitive sex, don't they? Well, I don't believe it. In my opinion men are a whole heap more curious and inquisitive than women. Fact is, I know it.

"For instance, a husband, 'long about this season that's approaching, is groping around for a fresh shirt upon getting up in the morning. He yanks out the wrong drawer of the bureau. Well, on this morning he pulls out the bottom bureau drawer, say, and his wife, who is fixing her hair at the chiffonier in another part of the room, catches him in the act just in time, lets out her little squawk, and races over to the bureau and pushes the drawer shut.

"'So it's there, hey?' he says to her. 'Scuse me for living,' and then the mullethead goes on grinning like a chimpanzee while he brushes his hair. Then he turns to her.

"'Watchoo got in there, anyway?' he asks her.

"She tells him, with a grimace, and very properly, that it's none of his business. And she adds something about folks that 'rubber.'

"'But, say, g'wan and tell me whatchoo got in there, won't you?' he tries again, wheedlingly.

"Whereupon his wife makes mention of that feline that met an untimely end through curiosity.

"'That's all right about the cat,' says the husband then, 'but I'll bet you a new rubber plant that it's cigars that you've got in there.' And then he begins to look a bit alarmed. 'Say, I hope not, though. I'm thinking about swearing off smoking soon now, anyhow.'

"But this hint of his about the cigars doesn't get the least bit of a rise out of her. Not much. Nothing whatever doing in the conversational line on her part.

"'Oh, I'm a pinhead, sure enough,' her husband says then, after a pause, and still consumed and just eaten alive by curiosity. 'I might have known all the time that it's a shaving outfit. That's exactly what it is, for a sure thing.'

"However, his wife most carefully adjusts her side combs and quite refrains from talking. Then he sticks his hands into his trousers pockets and looks her over quizzically.

"'Aw, come on, now, like a good girl, and tell me if you've gone and got me that bath robe that we were looking at in the shop window the other afternoon,' he says to her in his most persuasive tone.

"'Say, Minnie, you might let a feller see what you've got tucked in there, at that.'

"Just compare the attitude of the average husband in this Christmas gift business with the position of his wife on that same subject. She doesn't really want to know what he is going to give her for Christmas. She wants to be 's'prised.'

"'Look, here, hun,' he says to her some morning along toward Christmas—usually he puts it off till about the last day, when everything is all picked over in the stores—'Look a-here, my dear, whatchoo want for Christmas, hey? It's up to you, you know.'

"'Why, the very idea!' she exclaims. 'Up to me! Preposterous! Why, it wouldn't be any Christmas gift at all if I told you what I wanted you to get for me.'

"'Oh, that's one way of looking at it,' he says. 'But, d'ye know, I was thinking about getting you—'

"'Sh-sh-sh! Stop!' she cries. 'Don't you dare tell me, Jack Gosling. Don't you dare!'

"All the same, she's foxy, at that. After a while an idea strikes her.

"'You know, of course, Jack,' she says, musingly, 'that if you are worried about the sizes of things, why, your sister Agnes and I wear exactly the same sizes in everything, and she—'

"'But, nix,' he breaks in. 'It isn't anything that comes in sizes. It's one of those—'

"And again her fingers go into her ears. The 's'prise' is the whole thing to her, and she is resolved not to hear in advance what he is thinking of getting for her.

"Now, if all this doesn't come pretty near proving that women are really less curious than men, then I dunno, I dunno, hey?"

INVALID'S SAD PLIGHT.

After Inflammatory Rheumatism, Hair Came Out, Skin Peeled, and Bad Sores Developed—Only Cuticura Proved Successful.

"About four years ago I had a very severe attack of inflammatory rheumatism. My skin peeled, and the high fever played havoc with my hair, which came out in bunches. I also had three large bed sores on my back. I did not gain very rapidly, and my appetite was very poor. I tried many 'sure cures' but they were of little help, and until I tried Cuticura Resolvent I had had no real relief. Then my complexion cleared and soon I felt better. The bed sores went very soon after a few applications of Cuticura Ointment, and when I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment for my hair it began to regain its former glossy appearance. Mrs. Lavina J. MINNESOTA NEWS

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

Amend the Laws.

St. Paul.—The state railroad commission is preparing to notify the legislature next month that there is not a single railroad rate law in the state which can be enforced, and that amendments are absolutely necessary to make them effective.

Members of the commission have come to this conclusion as a result of the decision by the United States supreme court in the Young case. The highest court in the land approved the fine assessed against Attorney General Young for contempt, by Judge Lochren, on the ground that the state law he was trying to enforce was invalid. The reason for declaring the law invalid was that its penalties were excessive.

The court's language applied especially to the commodity rate law of 1907, which was drastic in the penalties invoked. It gave no option of a fine, but provided that every railroad official guilty of refusing to apply the maximum rates fixed in the bill should be subject to imprisonment for not more than ninety days for each offense.

Mid-Winter Fair.

Hamline—"I think a mid-winter fair could be made a success and would be of great educational value to the farmers and to the people of the state generally," said Dean E. Randall of the state agricultural school in speaking of the suggestion that such a fair, along the lines of the annual event at Guelph, Ontario, might be held at the state fair grounds.

"Of course it would entail a considerable expense at first, if the buildings at the fair grounds should be used, as a heating plant would have to be installed. A fair could be held in either one of the Twin Cities, but in that case it would not be so extensive as the one that could be housed in the buildings at the fair grounds.

"However, on first thought, I believe that such a fair would be as successful here as the Guelph fair, or the Omaha corn exposition, which are both held in the mid-winter."

Railway Building.

Duluth.—The total increase in mileage of the railroads in Minnesota for the year ending June 30, 1908, according to the annual reports of the various roads, is 145.27 miles. For the year previous the increase for all the roads was only 90 miles, so that the gain is large. The total mileage of the state now, exclusive of terminal and belt lines is 8,168.36 miles.

The largest increase was 49.40 miles of a new line on the Duluth, Rainy Lake and Winnipeg from Ashawa to International Falls. The figures of the railroad and warehouse commission show that in 1862 there was 10 miles of railway in the state. The increases by decades are: 1900, 3,332, 5,615, 7,166, and in 1908, 8,168 miles.

Minnesota Wins.

Minneapolis.—That Minnesota is the state where wheat is king is proved by the prize the Minnesota wheat exhibit won at the national corn exposition at Omaha, where Minnesota carried off sweepstakes in wheat. Prof. D. D. Mayne of the agricultural school received a telegram from Prof. C. P. Bull announcing the prizes.

Minnesota took first in clover and first in oats, and sweepstakes in wheat, which is a great showing for the state. Minnesota did not capture anything in corn.

Prof. C. P. Bull and L. B. Bassett of the agricultural school are the representatives from Minnesota, and have charge of the Minnesota exhibit at the exposition.

Miscellaneous Notes.

St. Paul.—The good roads committee of the Commercial club decided to ask the legislature for a bond issue of $200,000 for good roads in Hennepin county.

Minneapolis.—Mrs. Emma M. Lebaire, singer, sues Minneapolis & St. Louis road for $25,692.50 as result of automobile accident in which Ginecks were killed.

Minneapolis.—Minneapolis police have been asked to search for Lord Herbert Russell of Bridgeport, England, who disappeared from a Chicago hotel ten days ago while en route to Spokane.

Minneapolis.—The attraction at the Bijou Opera House, Minneapolis, for New Year's week, starting Dec. 28, will be a new melodrama from the pen of Harry Clay Blaney, the author-actor, entitled "From Sing Sing to Liberty," with Jack Dorris as the star.

Mankato.—The annual hunt in Pleasant Mound township resulted in the slaughter of 204 rabbits.

Little Falls.—Bishop Trobec has appointed Rev. Father Waip to take charge of the Catholic school.

St. Paul.—Authorization is given at Washington for construction of steel bridge across the Mississippi near Dayton's Bluffs.

St. Paul.—A draft for $14,204.58 was received from the state grain inspection department, representing fees collected in five days.

Mankato.—The annual poultry show of the Central Poultry association began here with nearly 600 exhibits. It is the best show yet held in Mankato.

Winona.—John W. Dye, a former local young man, who for two years has been in the consular service of the United States at Berlin, has just been promoted to be deputy consul general at Genoa, Italy.

Minneapolis.—Between 25 and 30 saloon-keepers will be forced out of business when the Gateway park becomes a reality, because of the law that prohibits a saloon to be operated within 200 feet of the park or parkway.

Minneapolis.—Forty insurance companies which have written policies on state university paid in a lump today for the recent fire loss on the medical building. They settled with the state treasurer in one draft for $13,405.57.

Moorhead.—A local man has invented a potato bug exterminator. The contrivance consists in part of a pan into which the bugs are brushed by revolving wire fans. We predict that two applications of Paris green will be found far more effective.

St. Paul.—The legislature may be asked at the coming session to permit the issuance of $1,000,000 bonds for goods roads work in Hennepin county. The proposition was discussed at the meeting of the public affairs committee of the Commercial club.

Duluth.—That the Canadian Northern road has acquired a controlling interest in the Duluth, Virginia & Rainy Lake road, and will ultimately extend it to Duluth, and that the road has not been included in the so-called timber pool is the official information received in Duluth.

St. Paul.—In addition to the $120,000 asked of the Great Northern in the 1905 test tax case, which has been carried to the supreme court, the state has started another suit for unpaid taxes alleged to be due for the years 1906 and 1907. The amount for these two years is about $272,389.

Minneapolis.—Resources of state banks in Minnesota have increased nearly $15,000,000 during the past year. Compilation of the returns from the call dated Nov. 27 has just been completed by the public examiner's department, and it shows total resources of $96,974,383.21.

St. Cloud.—A universal gun license for Minnesota will be recommended in the biennial report of the state game and fish commission. A fee of $1 for each resident hunter, it is calculated, would pay all expenses of the department and make a more thorough protection possible. Wisconsin realizes $96,000 a year from this license system.

Hamline.—Unless the office of forestry commissioner is abolished or consolidated with the fish and game commission, as has been proposed, Gen. C. C. Andrews, who has been head of the department since 1895, when the office was first created, will be reappointed commissioner. The announcement was made by State Auditor Iverson, who has the appointing power.

Minneapolis.—Doctors must not poach on dentists' preserves, and when their patients require dental work physicians must turn them over to a licensed dentist. Such was the finding of the state supreme court in the case of Dr. Ernest R. Taylor, of Minneapolis, who tried to establish the right of a physician to do anything he pleases for the bodily welfare of his patient.

St. Paul.—Suit was begun by E. T. Young, attorney general, to recover $5,123 said to be due in unpaid taxes from the Mason City & Fort Dodge railroad and $25,581.97 from the Wisconsin, Minnesota & Pacific railroad.

Minneapolis.—It is probable that the silver service for the battleship Minnesota will be presented to the ship when it returns from the trip around the world. It will arrive at Newport News about Feb. 22, according to information from the captain.

HEARST'S PUBLISHER ACCUSED

S. S. CARVALHO CHARGED WITH CRIMINAL LIBEL.

J. D. Rockefeller, Jr., [illegible] on Article Saying He Originated Peonage in Stockade.

New York.—On a charge of criminal libel, made by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., S. S. Carvalho, president of the Star Company, publishers of William R. Hearst's New York American, was arrested Thursday and arraigned in police court before Magistrate Finn.

At the solicitation of Clarence J. Shearn, attorney for the Hearst publications, and without any objection being raised on the part of Assistant District Attorney Garvan, who had charge of the prosecution, Mr. Carvalho was paroled in the custody of his lawyer until December 26, for examination.

Mr. Rockefeller, accompanied by his counsel, Lawyer Murphy, appeared in District Attorney Jerome's office early in the day and made complaint that the article published in the New York American of December 17, under a Chicago date of December 16, with the head line, "J. D. Rockefeller, Jr., originated peonage in stockade, it is said," tended to injure his good name, reputation and credit and to make him appear ridiculous.

He submitted a typewritten affidavit embodying these charges to District Attorney Garvan, to whom the case was assigned. On the presentation of the affidavits to Magistrate Finn, he issued warrants for the arrest of Mr. Carvalho, Bradford Merrill, treasurer, and Edward H. Clark, secretary, of the Star Company.

Mr. Carvalho was found in his office. Merrill and Clark were not in their offices. Mr. Carvalho took his arrest good naturedly.

Bradford Merrill, treasurer of the Star Company, explained Thursday night that the article at which Mr. Rockefeller had taken offense had come from Chicago in the regular routine way, that it had not originated in New York, and that an investigation would be started at once. "If we find that we have wronged Mr. Rockefeller," said Mr. Merrill, "we will, of course, do everything in our power to atone for it."

TOBACCO COMBINE ILLEGAL.

Federal Circuit Court Decree Orders Trust to Dissolve.

New York.—Nine companies, with their subsidiaries, are named as constituting an illegal combination in the final decree, filed Tuesday in the United States circuit court, putting into effect the judgment recently obtained by the government in its suit to dissolve the so-called tobacco trust.

The companies named are the American Tobacco Company, the American Snuff Company, the American Cigar Company, the American Stogie Company, MacAndrews & Forbes Company, P. Lorillard & Co., R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Blackwell's Durham Tobacco Company and the Conley Foil Company. Each of the first five of these companies the court declares is in itself a combination in violation of law.

The order enjoins these companies from continuing as parties in the combination and restrains them from engaging in interstate or foreign trade until "reasonable competition" between them is restored. Appeals by both the government and the defendants will act as a temporary stay of the decree.

Blizzard in Newfoundland.

St. Johns, N. F.—The worst blizzard experienced in Newfoundland for many years has been raging for 60 hours and heavy damage has been done to fishing vessels, a number of which have been blown ashore.

TWO NEBRASKA BANKS ROBBED.

Bandits Dynamite Safes; Fight Citizens and Flee in Auto.

Gibbon, Neb.—Six robbers, after dynamiting the safes of the Farmers' State bank of Keene, at Keene, 28 miles south of Gibbon, and the Commercial bank of Gibbon, engaged in a pitched battle here with a number of citizens early Friday and escaped in an automobile with $5,500. One of the robbers is believed to have been wounded and [illegible] to have been carried off by his comrades.

The Keene bank was first entered. Here two vault doors were opened by the force of an explosion. The robbers secured $3,000, climbed into an automobile and started north. A farmer, aroused by the explosion, saw the robbers as they sped out of town [illegible] made no attempt to interrupt [illegible] hour later the robbers reached Gibbon and while four of their number began work inside of the Commercial bank, two others kept guard outside. Here the explosion attracted a number of citizens to the scene, among them G. T. Holloway, president of the bank. Holloway, approaching the two men stationed outside the bank, accosted them, believing them to be acquaintances of his. For reply two bullets whizzed by him, one piercing the banker's overcoat but doing no harm. While a posse was gathering the robbers inside the bank kept steadily at work, the guards meanwhile keeping up a steady fire on the citizens. Finally the citizens partly surrounded the building and for 15 minutes a lively fusillade of shots was exchanged. Finally, at a given signal, all six robbers made their escape through a rear door and soon made off, again escaping in their machine. An investigation disclosed blood stains on the bank floor, indicating that one of the robbers had been shot. They had taken $2,500 from the bank's vault. The posse started in pursuit but the robbers soon gained the lead and were lost to sight.

FREEDOM DAWNS IN TURKEY.

New Ottoman Parliament Is Opened by the Sultan.

Constantinople.—Turkey made her bow as a full fledged constitutional monarchy Thursday, when the new Ottoman parliament held its first session.

Thursday was proclaimed a general holiday in honor of the parliament and the city did its best to observe the occasion fittingly. The decorations were unprecedented and most of the population was in the streets eagerly discussing the prospects of the new regime. Practically every regiment in the Constantinople garrison lined the route under arms when the sultan drove to open the assembly, while school children stationed at vantage points along the way sang the hymn of liberty as the imperial cortege passed.

Well-Known Author Dead.

New Haven, Conn.—Donald Grant Mitchell, 84 years old, the well-known author who wrote under the nom de plume "Ik Marvel," died at his home, "Marvelwood," in Edgewood, a suburb of this city, Tuesday night. At the bedside at the time of Mr. Mitchell's death were his sons, Harold of New London and Walter of Newark, and his daughters, Mrs. Walter Hart of Rye, N. Y.; Mrs. Mason Hoppin and the Misses Elizabeth, Bessie and Harriet Mitchell, all of New Haven.

Burton Not to Be in Cabinet.

New York.—It was authoritatively announced Wednesday night that the offer of a cabinet position to Congressman Theodore Burton of Cleveland had been withdrawn by Mr. Taft and would not be renewed.

KNOX TO BE PREMIER

ACCEPTS STATE PORTFOLIO IN MR. TAFT'S CABINET.

PRESIDENT-ELECT IS HAPPY

Invites Senator to Augusta to Advise Him—Wickersham Not Yet Selected for Attorney General.

Augusta, Ga.—William H. Taft, president-elect of the United States, Friday night announced the appointment of United States Senator Philander C. Knox of Pennsylvania as secretary of state in his cabinet.

The announcement followed the receipt by Mr. Taft of a telegram which came late in the afternoon conveying the information from Mr. Knox that he would accept the premiership of the Taft cabinet.

"I feel that I am to be congratulated in securing the services of Senator Knox in my cabinet," said Judge Taft in making the announcement. "In selecting a secretary of state I wanted first, a great lawyer, and second, a man who would fill the public eye, not only here but abroad, as a man who stands out preeminently as a great American.

Philander C. Knox.

"Mr. Knox was a great attorney general; he was a prominent candidate for the presidency, and he is recognized in the senate and elsewhere as one of the great lawyers of that body."

Judge Taft also feels that from a political viewpoint the selection of Mr. Knox is most happy. He explained that there was often a feeling that the state of Pennsylvania, with its assured Republican majorities, was slighted in the matter of recognition in the high councils of the party. That this will not be the case in the next administration was indicated by the announcement by Mr. Taft that he should invite Senator Knox to come to Augusta that he might consult him freely with reference to filling other places in his cabinet.

Regarding the report that George W. Wickersham of New York would be attorney general in his cabinet, Mr. Taft said that he had not yet determined on anyone definitely for the attorney generalship.

KILLS GIRL WHO REJECTS HIM.

Brutal Murder by Young Man in Somerville, Mass.

Somerville, Mass.—Enraged because his former sweetheart, Miss Maud Hartley, had rejected him, James B. Harmon, the 18-year-old son of Police Sergeant James M. Harmon, shot and killed her on the street here Friday. Miss Hartley was of the same age as her slayer, and was the daughter of Mrs. Agnes Hartley, a physician. When Miss Hartley fell, Harmon lifted the body and threw it on the steps of a near-by store with the remark: "There, I've finished her." He then fled, but half an hour later surrendered to the police.

Given Maximum Penalty for Fraud.

Harrisburg, Pa.—John H. Sanderson, contractor for the furnishing of the new state capitol; ex-Auditor General W. P. Snyder, ex-State Treasurer W. L. Mathues and ex-Superintendent of Public Grounds and Buildings James M. Shumaker, convicted of conspiracy to defraud the state in the cases growing out of the capitol scandal, were sentenced Friday to two years in the penitentiary, $500 fine and costs, the maximum punishment allowed by law, and were released on $100,000 bail on supersedeas.

CARACAS STIRRED BY RIOTS

MOBS SWEEP THROUGH CITY, UNHINDERED BY POLICE.

Crowds Burn Statues and Pictures of President and Pillage Property of His Friends.

Caracas, Venezuela.—The people of Caracas arose against President Castro. An infuriated mob, unhindered by the police, swept through the city, wrecking the property of his henchmen and his closest friends. The people rounded up all the statues and pictures of President Castro from the clubs and other semi-public buildings and burned them with rejoicing, on the Plaza Bolivar. Castro's rule in Venezuela probably is ended.

In spite of Holland's warlike activity on the coast, there have been no demonstrations against the Netherlands; they all have been directed against President Castro and Acting President Gomez.

The Venezuelan capital witnessed an outbreak of disorder, following the warlike activities of the Dutch warships along the coast, that made it necessary by nightfall to declare martial law in order to put an end to the rioting and pillaging. There were several attacks on private property on the part of the mob before the authorities got the situation in hand, and several of the agitators were arrested. There was no actual conflict between the people and the police. The pillaging was confined to the properties of Venezuelans, notably Senors Rivas and Thielen. No foreigners were molested.

Further dangerous demonstrations are anticipated. No official act deposing Castro from the presidency of Venezuela yet has been taken, but such a step is expected any moment.

Berlin.—President Castro of Venezuela maintains his composure in the face of alarming reports which have been published here regarding the disturbance in Venezuela. When dispatches were shown to him Wednesday that the people of Caracas had arisen against him, he said quietly:

"I don't believe it. I had dispatches from Caracas this morning, but they mentioned nothing of the kind."

TOTAL POPULAR VOTE GIVEN.

14,853,059 Ballots Cast in the Last Election.

New York.—The total popular vote of the various presidential candidates at the last national election was made known Wednesday in an official form by the filing of the last of the official votes, that of Michigan.

The totals show the following votes cast:

Taft (Rep.), 7,637,676; Bryan (Dem.), 6,393,182; Debs (Soc.), 448,453; Chafin (Pro.), 241,252; Hisgen (Ind.), 63,186; Watson (Pop.), 33,871; Gilhaus (Soc. Lab.), 15,421. Total for all candidates, 14,853,059.

This grand total exceeds by 1,342,351 the total number of votes cast in the presidential election of 1904, when the grand total was 13,510,708.

Compared with that election, the candidates of the Republican, Democratic and Socialist parties increased their vote this year. The reverse is true of the candidates of the Prohibition, Populist and Socialist Labor parties. The Independence party did not figure in the presidential election of four years ago.

PLUNGE TO DEATH WITH AUTO.

Milwaukee Man and Chauffeur Drown in the River.

Milwaukee.—An automobile containing three men dashed into the open draw of the Oneida street bridge at one o'clock Thursday morning and went to the bottom of the river, carrying two of the occupants to their death.

The dead are Oscar Z. Bartlett, member of the board of trade, and Albert Kunz, chauffeur.

A. F. Solliday of the Solliday Motor Company was rescued.

The car approached the bridge from the east, coming down the Oneida street hill at a high rate of speed. The driver apparently did not notice that the bridge was open until the car was within 20 feet of it. Kunz then made a frantic effort to avoid the river, but only succeeded in turning the car as far as the curb, where it bounded into the air, turning a complete somersault between the dock and the center pier of the bridge.

Two New Records for Wright.

Le Mans, France.—Wilbur Wright, the American aeroplanist of Dayton, O., established a new world's record for heavier-than-air machines Friday while trying for the Michelin cup, remaining in the air 1 hour, 53 minutes and 59 seconds. The best previous record is 1 hour, 31 minutes and 51 seconds, made by Mr. Wright September 21.

Mr. Wright closed a triumphant day by achieving another record, flying to a height of 360 feet in a strong wind and winning the Sarthe Aero club's prize for height.

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

Amend the Laws.

St. Paul.—The state railroad commission is preparing to notify the legislature next month that there is not a single railroad rate law in the state which can be enforced, and that amendments are absolutely necessary to make them effective.

Members of the commission have come to this conclusion as a result of the decision by the United States supreme court in the Young case. The highest court in the land approved the fine assessed against Attorney General Young for contempt, by Judge Lochren, on the ground that the state law he was trying to enforce was invalid. The reason for declaring the law invalid was that its penalties were excessive.

The court's language applied especially to the commodity rate law of 1907, which was drastic in the penalties invoked. It gave no option of a fine, but provided that every railroad official guilty of refusing to apply the maximum rates fixed in the bill should be subject to imprisonment for not more than ninety days for each offense.

Mid-Winter Fair.

Hamline—"I think a mid-winter fair could be made a success and would be of great educational value to the farmers and to the people of the state generally," said Dean E. Randall of the state agricultural school in speaking of the suggestion that such a fair, along the lines of the annual event at Guelph, Ontario, might be held at the state fair grounds.

"Of course it would entail a considerable expense at first, if the buildings at the fair grounds should be used, as a heating plant would have to be installed. A fair could be held in either one of the Twin Cities, but in that case it would not be so extensive as the one that could be housed in the buildings at the fair grounds.

"However, on first thought, I believe that such a fair would be as successful here as the Guelph fair, or the Omaha corn exposition, which are both held in the mid-winter."

Railway Building.

Duluth.—The total increase in mileage of the railroads in Minnesota for the year ending June 30, 1908, according to the annual reports of the various roads, is 145.27 miles. For the year previous the increase for all the roads was only 90 miles, so that the gain is large. The total mileage of the state now, exclusive of terminal and belt lines is 8,168.30 miles.

The largest increase was 49.40 miles of a new line on the Duluth, Rainy Lake and Winnipeg from Ashawa to International Falls. The figures of the railroad and warehouse commission show that in 1862 there was 10 miles of railway in the state. The increases by decades are: 1900, 3,732, 5,615, 7,166, and in 1908, 8,168 miles.

Minnesota Wins.

Minneapolis.—That Minnesota is the state where wheat is king is proved by the prize the Minnesota wheat exhibit won at the national corn exposition at Omaha, where Minnesota carried off sweepstakes in wheat. Prof. D. D. Mayne of the agricultural school received a telegram from Prof. C. P. Bull announcing the prizes.

Minnesota took first in clover and first in oats, and sweepstakes in wheat, which is a great showing for the state. Minnesota did not capture anything in corn.

Prof. C. P. Bull and L. B. Bassett of the agricultural school are the representatives from Minnesota, and have charge of the Minnesota exhibit at the exposition.

Miscellaneous Notes.

St. Paul.—The good roads committee of the Commercial club decided to ask the legislature for a bond issue of $200,000 for good roads in Hennepin county.

Minneapolis.—Mrs. Emma M. Lebaire, singer, sues Minneapolis & St. Louis road for $25,693.50 as result of automobile accident in which Gluecks were killed.

Minneapolis.—Minneapolis police have been asked to search for Lord Herbert Russell of Bridgeport, England, who disappeared from a Chicago hotel ten days ago while en route to Spokane.

Minneapolis.—The attraction at the Bijou Opera House, Minneapolis, for New Year's week, starting Dec. 28, will be a new melodrama from the pen of Harry Clay Blaney, the author-actor, entitled "From Sing Sing to Liberty," with Jack Dorris as the star.

Mankato.—The annual hunt in Pleasant Mound township resulted in the slaughter of 204 rabbits.

Little Falls.—Bishop Trobec has appointed Rev. Father Welp to take charge of the Catholic school.

St. Paul.—Authorization is given at Washington for construction of steel bridge across the Mississippi near Dayton's Bluffs.

St. Paul.—A draft for $14,204.58 was received from the state grain inspection department, representing fees collected in five days.

Mankato.—The annual poultry show of the Central Poultry association began here with nearly 600 exhibits. It is the best show yet held in Mankato.

Winona.—John W. Dye, a former local young man, who for two years has been in the consular service of the United States at Berlin, has just been promoted to be deputy consul general at Genoa, Italy.

Minneapolis.—Between 25 and 30 saloon-keepers will be forced out of business when the Gateway park becomes a reality, because of the law that prohibits a saloon to be operated within 200 feet of the park or parkway.

Minneapolis.—Forty insurance companies which have written policies on state university paid in a lump today for the recent fire loss on the medical building. They settled with the state treasurer in one draft for $13,405.57.

Moorhead.—A local man has invented a potato bug exterminator. The contrivance consists in part of a pan into which the bugs are brushed by revolving wire fans. We predict that two applications of Paris green will be found far more effective.

St. Paul.—The legislature may be asked at the coming session to permit the issuance of $1,000,000 bonds for goods roads work in Hennepin county. The proposition was discussed at the meeting of the public affairs committee of the Commercial club.

Duluth.—That the Canadian Northern road has acquired a controlling interest in the Duluth, Virginia & Rainy Lake road, and will ultimately extend it to Duluth, and that the road has not been included in the so-called timber pool is the official information received in Duluth.

St. Paul.—In addition to the $120,000 asked of the Great Northern in the 1905 test tax case, which has been carried to the supreme court, the state has started another suit for unpaid taxes alleged to be due for the years 1906 and 1907. The amount for these two years is about $272,369.

Minneapolis.—Resources of state banks in Minnesota have increased nearly $15,000,000 during the past year. Compilation of the returns from the call dated Nov. 27 has just been completed by the public examiner's department, and it shows total resources of $96,974,383.21.

St. Cloud.—A universal gun license for Minnesota will be recommended in the biennial report of the state game and fish commission. A fee of $1 for each resident hunter, it is calculated, would pay all expenses of the department and make a more thorough protection possible. Wisconsin realizes $96,000 a year from this license system.

Hamline.—Unless the office of forestry commissioner is abolished or consolidated with the fish and game commission, as has been proposed, Gen. C. C. Andrews, who has been head of the department since 1895, when the office was first created, will be reappointed commissioner. The announcement was made by State Auditor Iverson, who has the appointing power.

Minneapolis.—Doctors must not poach on dentists' preserves, and when their patients require dental work physicians must turn them over to a licensed dentist. Such was the finding of the state supreme court in the case of Dr. Ernest R. Taylor, of Minneapolis, who tried to establish the right of a physician to do anything he pleases for the bodily welfare of his patient.

St. Paul.—Suit was begun by E. T. Young, attorney general, to recover $5,123 said to be due in unpaid taxes from the Mason City & Fort Dodge railroad and $25,581.97 from the Wisconsin, Minnesota & Pacific railroad.

Minneapolis.—It is probable that the silver service for the battleship Minnesota will be presented to the ship when it returns from the trip around the world. It will arrive at Newport News about Feb. 22, according to information from the captain.

HEARST'S PUBLISHER ACCUSED

S. S. CARVAHLO CHARGED WITH CRIMINAL LIBEL.

J. D. Rockefeller, Jr., Bases Complaint on Article Saying He Originated Peonage in Stockade.

New York.—On a charge of criminal libel, made by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., S. S. Carvalho, president of the Star Company, publishers of William R. Hearst's New York American, was arrested Thursday and arraigned in police court before Magistrate Finn.

At the solicitation of Clarence J. Shearn, attorney for the Hearst publications, and without any objection being raised on the part of Assistant District Attorney Garvan, who had charge of the prosecution, Mr. Carvalho was paroled in the custody of his lawyer until December 26, for examination.

Mr. Rockefeller, accompanied by his counsel, Lawyer Murphy, appeared in District Attorney Jerome's office early in the day and made complaint that the article published in the New York American of December 17, under a Chicago date of December 16, with the head line, "J. D. Rockefeller, Jr., originated peonage in stockade, it is said," tended to injure his good name, reputation and credit and to make him appear ridiculous.

He submitted a typewritten affidavit embodying these charges to District Attorney Garvan, to whom the case was assigned. On the presentation of the affidavits to Magistrate Finn, he issued warrants for the arrest of Mr. Carvalho, Bradford Merrill, treasurer, and Edward H. Clark, secretary, of the Star Company.

Mr. Carvalho was found in his office. Merrill and Clark were not in their offices. Mr. Carvalho took his arrest good naturedly.

Bradford Merrill, treasurer of the Star Company, explained Thursday night that the article at which Mr. Rockefeller had taken offense had come from Chicago in the regular routine way, that it had not originated in New York, and that an investigation would be started at once. "If we find that we have wronged Mr. Rockefeller," said Mr. Merrill, "we will, of course, do everything in our power to atone for it."

TOBACCO COMBINE ILLEGAL.

Federal Circuit Court Decree Orders Trust to Dissolve.

New York.—Nine companies, with their subsidiaries, are named as constituting an illegal combination in the final decree, filed Tuesday in the United States circuit court, putting into effect the judgment recently obtained by the government in its suit to dissolve the so-called tobacco trust.

The companies named are the American Tobacco Company, the American Snuff Company, the American Cigar Company, the American Stogie Company, MacAndrews & Forbes Company, P. Lorillard & Co., R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Blackwell's Durham Tobacco Company and the Conley Foil Company. Each of the first five of these companies the court declares is in itself a combination in violation of law.

The order enjoins these companies from continuing as parties in the combination and restrains them from engaging in interstate or foreign trade until "reasonable competition" between them is restored. Appeals by both the government and the defendants will act as a temporary stay of the decree.

Blizzard in Newfoundland.

St. Johns, N. F.—The worst blizzard experienced in Newfoundland for many years has been raging for 60 hours and heavy damage has been done to fishing vessels, a number of which have been blown ashore.

TWO NEBRASKA BANKS ROBBED.

Bandits Dynamite Safes, Fight Citizens and Flee in Auto.

Gibbon, Neb.—Six robbers, after dynamiting the safes of the Farmers' State Bank of Keene, at Keene, 28 miles south of Gibbon, and the Commercial bank of Gibbon, engaged in a pitched battle here with a number of citizens early Friday and escaped in an automobile with $5,500. One of the robbers is believed to have been wounded and to have been carried off by his comrades.

The Keene bank was first entered. Here two vault doors were opened by the force of an explosion. The robbers secured $3,000, climbed into an automobile and started north. A farmer, aroused by the explosion, saw the robbers as they sped out of town but made no attempt to interrupt them.

An hour later the robbers reached Gibbon and while four of their number began work inside of the Commercial bank, two others kept guard outside. Here the explosion attracted a number of citizens to the scene, among them G. T. Holloway, president of the bank. Holloway, approaching the two men stationed outside the bank, accosted them, believing them to be acquaintances of his. For reply two bullets whizzed by him, one piercing the banker's overcoat but doing no harm. While a posse was gathering the robbers inside the bank kept steadily at work, the guards meanwhile keeping up a steady fire on the citizens. Finally the citizens partly surrounded the building and for 15 minutes a lively fusilade of shots was exchanged. Finally, at a given signal, all six robbers made their escape through a rear door and soon made off, again escaping in their machine. An investigation disclosed blood stains on the bank floor, indicating that one of the robbers had been shot. They had taken $2,500 from the bank's vault. The posse started in pursuit but the robbers soon gained the lead and were lost to sight.

FREEDOM DAWNS IN TURKEY.

New Ottoman Parliament Is Opened by the Sultan.

Constantinople.—Turkey made her bow as a full fledged constitutional monarchy Thursday, when the new Ottoman parliament held its first session.

Thursday was proclaimed a general holiday in honor of the parliament and the city did its best to observe the occasion fittingly. The decorations were unprecedented and most of the population was in the streets eagerly discussing the prospects of the new regime. Practically every regiment in the Constantinople garrison lined the route under arms when the sultan drove to open the assembly, while school children stationed at vantage points along the way sang the hymn of liberty as the imperial cortege passed.

Well-Known Author Dead.

New Haven, Conn.—Donald Grant Mitchell, 84 years old, the well-known author who wrote under the nom de plume "Ik Marvel," died at his home, "Marvelwood," in Edgewood, a suburb of this city, Tuesday night. At the bedside at the time of Mr. Mitchell's death were his sons, Harold of New London and Walter of Newark, and his daughters, Mrs. Walter Hart of Rye, N. Y.; Mrs. Mason Hoppin and the Misses Elizabeth, Bessie and Harriet Mitchell, all of New Haven.

Burton Not to Be in Cabinet.

New York.—It was authoritatively announced Wednesday night that the offer of a cabinet position to Congressman Theodore Burton of Cleveland had been withdrawn by Mr. Taft and would not be renewed.

KNOX TO BE PREMIER

ACCEPTS STATE PORTFOLIO IN MR. TAFT'S CABINET.

PRESIDENT-ELECT IS HAPPY

Invites Senator to Augusta to Advise Him—Wickersham Not Yet Selected for Attorney General.

Augusta, Ga.—William H. Taft, president-elect of the United States, Friday night announced the appointment of United States Senator Philander C. Knox of Pennsylvania as secretary of state in his cabinet.

The announcement followed the receipt by Mr. Taft of a telegram which came late in the afternoon conveying the information from Mr. Knox that he would accept the premiership of the Taft cabinet.

"I feel that I am to be congratulated in securing the services of Senator Knox in my cabinet," said Judge Taft in making the announcement. "In selecting a secretary of state I wanted first, a great lawyer, and second, a man who would fill the public eye, not only here but abroad, as a man who stands out preeminently as a great American.

Philander C. Knox.

"Mr. Knox was a great attorney general; he was a prominent candidate for the presidency, and he is recognized in the senate and elsewhere as one of the great lawyers of that body."

Judge Taft also feels that from a political viewpoint the selection of Mr. Knox is most happy. He explained that there was often a feeling that the state of Pennsylvania, with its assured Republican majorities, was slighted in the matter of recognition in the high councils of the party. That this will not be the case in the next administration was indicated by the announcement by Mr. Taft that he should invite Senator Knox to come to Augusta that he might consult him freely with reference to filling other places in his cabinet.

Regarding the report that George W. Wickersham of New York would be attorney general in his cabinet, Mr. Taft said that he had not yet determined on anyone definitely for the attorney generalship.

KILLS GIRL WHO REJECTS HIM.

Somerville, Mass.—Enraged because his former sweetheart, Miss Maud Hartley, had rejected him, James B. Harmon, the 18-year-old son of Police Sergeant James M. Harmon, shot and killed her on the street here Friday. Miss Hartley was of the same age as her slayer, and was the daughter of Mrs. Agnes Hartley, a physician. When Miss Hartley fell, Harmon lifted the body and threw it on the steps of a near-by store with the remark: "There, I've finished her." He then fled, but half an hour later surrendered to the police.

Mathues and ex-Superintendent of Public Grounds and Buildings James M. Shumaker, convicted of conspiracy to defraud the state in the cases growing out of the capitol scandal, were sentenced Friday to two years in the penitentiary, $500 fine and costs, the maximum punishment allowed by law, and were released on $100,000 bail on supersedeas.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. C. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Red Lake County Minnesota.

We must all admit that our Teddy sometimes makes mistakes, and one of his latest is to jump onto the editors, who will chew him up at their leisure.

There is bound to be a big fight made in the next legislature to repeal the primary election law but it is already repealed so far as candidates for office are concerned, as a party nomination was of no value to any candidate for office in the last campaign. It proved to be one of those things that are hard to get, and aint worth a darn after you get it.

Lieing Don't Go.

Judging from the heart rendering yells that came from the eleven towns kennel, our shot of two weeks ago must have taken fatal effect with the gang of mongers of a forlorn hope, and they resort to down right out and out lieing in their attacks made on us. To illustrate: Supposing they were arrested for criminal libel and had to prove in court, that a man from near Highlanding and his dog were thrown out of his room at 2 o'clock a. m., and had to roost in the office the balance of the night; or if they had to answer for criminal libel, or prove in court, that we got any cents worth of our printing plant of any other place, than of the Minnesota type Foundry, and have their receipted bills for all of it on file in this office. Would they not have to pay a fine or be jailed for criminal libel? There is not a word of truth in either of his, Lattimores statements made about us and no one knows it better than he does, as he has lived on sour dough pancakes so long, since he went up to Erie, and has stoped when he was in town where he gets the same kind of feed, that we fear he is loosing what little sense he used to have, when he was traveling around the country as a tramp printer. We never paid any attention to him or his sheet, as we, nor any other editor of a newspaper in northern Minnesota ever concidered him any more than a tramp printer, that just had brains enough to set up the type and print matter from copy. But this last year he has begun to brattle out, and the sour dough pancakes sour down in his stomach and gave him softening of the brain, and then he discoverd that he could write and see it in type that some one went to town. That gave him the "big head" so bad he thought to tack to THE SUNBEAM. He commenced by publishing short sketches of rot, and as we did not concider them worthy of notice he soon started in to lie about either us or some one else living near Highlanding, supposing, of course that we would not pay any attention to him, as usal. But we learned, from watching our cat catch rats, to not try to nab them until they stuck their heads up far enough to be sure to get them by the neck. Now we make the Eleven Towns this proposition: Either prepare to prove in court, that we or some other man near Highlanding and his dog were thrown out of a room in Thief River Falls at 2 o'clock a. m., or take your medicine for criminal libel. Also be prepared to prove that we beat anyone out of a dollar in buying this plant, or bought a dollars worth of it of anyone but the Minnesota Type Foundry.

A GLUTTON FOR WORK.

Story of the British Civil Service In the Last Century.

The British civil service during the middle of the last century was a delightful place for young gentlemen who wished a "job" with nothing to do. Mr. Arthur W. A'Becket in his "Recollections of a Humorist" describes his first day in the war office. After reading the Times through—no short task—and listening to the conversation of his colleagues for awhile he ventured to address his chief.

"Can I do anything?" I asked. "Is there anything for me to do?"

He seemed a little perplexed. The other denizens of the room paused for a moment in their conversation to hear his reply. It seemed to me that they appeared to be amused. My chief looked at me and then at the papers in front of him.

"Ah!" said he at last, with a sigh of relief. "Are you fond of indexing?"

I replied I was fond of anything and everything that could be of the slightest service to my country. If those were not the exact words I used, that was the spirit of my answer.

"I see, a glutton for work," observed my chief, with a smile that found reflection on the faces of my other colleagues. "Well, A'Becket, just index this pile of circulars."

I seized upon the bundle and returned to my desk. Oh, how I worked at those circulars! There were hundreds of them, and I docketed them with the greatest care and entered their purport into a book. From time to time my official chief, so to speak, looked in upon me to see how I was getting on.

"I say," said he, "there's no need to be in such a desperate hurry. I am not in immediate need of the index. You can take your time, you know. Wouldn't you like a stroll in the park? Most of us have a little walk during the day. We none of us stand on ceremony and are quite a happy family."

But, no! I stuck to my indexing and after some three days of fairly hard work found my labors done. I took up the bundle of circulars, now in apple pie order, and laid them on my chief's desk.

"I say, A'Becket," said he, "this won't do. You are too good a fellow to be allowed to cut your own throat, and for your brother's sake I will give you a tip. Don't do more than you are asked to do. Now, I gave you those circulars to index because you would bother me for work. I didn't want the index. Now it's done it's not the least bit of use to me. Of course it may come in useful some day, but I scarcely see how it can, as the lot are out of date. But of course it may," he added to save my feelings.

DEVELOPING A STAR.

How Mansfield Coached Margaret Anglin as Roxane.

Richard Mansfield in his preparation for "Cyrano" was unsparing of himself, and he was unsparing of others. Everything he had and everything he hoped for was at stake. Struggle and desperation were in the air. Nearly every one in the cast resigned or was discharged over and over again. Mr. Palmer's days and nights were devoted to diplomacy, and, thanks to his suavity, the heady heat of the day before was forgotten in the cool of the next morning.

An actress of international reputation and experience was engaged for Roxane. Rehearsals were under way when she resigned by cable. The orange girl's single line in the first act was being rehearsed by a young Canadian, Margaret Anglin. Mansfield had not seen her act, but he remarked the wondrous loveliness of her voice, and his intuition told him she had temperament. "Can you make yourself look beautiful enough for Roxane?" he asked. "I think I might if you can make yourself ugly enough for Cyrano," she answered. The part was hers on the instant. He coached her relentlessly. Again and again she cried that she could not do it. He reassured her, but not with soft persuasions. "You can, my dear, and you must. Now, again!" After rehearsals she went regularly in tears to Mr. Palmer to resign. He appealed to Mansfield to be more lenient. "I am only kind," was his reply.

"Roxane is a great part. Only one who has suffered can play such a role. This girl has the temperament and the emotions, but she is young and inexperienced. I cannot persuade her spirit. I must rouse it." And every day she reached new depths and new heights.—Paul Wilstach in Scribner's.

A Multiplicity of Fathers.

Ardyce had been learning to sing "America" at school and was trying to teach it to Brother Wayne. One morning his father heard him shouting, "Land where my papa died, land where my papa died."

Ardyce interrupted. "Oh, no, Wayne; not that way. It is 'Land where our fathers died.'"

Wayne's expression could not be described as he tipped his head sidewise and in a very surprised tone gravely asked, "Two of 'em?"—Delineator.

A Good Qualification.

The mystery of the negro mind is illustrated by a story which the Philadelphia Record prints. John, the colored applicant for the position of butler in a family living in one of the fashionable suburbs of Philadelphia, strove to impress his would be employer with his entire fitness for the place.

"Oh, yes, suh," he said, "I's sholy well educated, suh. I'se passed a civil service examination."

"Indeed," responded the gentleman, "that is very fine, I'm sure, but I can't say that that will be of any particular value to me in a butler."

"No?" said the surprised applicant. "It shore is strange how gemmen's tastes do differ. Now, Mr. Williams," naming his former employer, "he say, 'John, one thing I deman' is civil service to muh guests,' an' he done gave me a zamination ri' there, suh, an' that's the truf."

Then the gentleman saw a great light. He replied:

"Yes, you are quite right, John. Civil service is a very important and rather unusual virtue, so if you have passed that examination I think we'll consider you engaged."

A Mogul Hero.

Here is a little vignette of Babar, the first of the great moguls. At eleven, he succeeded to his kingdom of Ferghana. His father was accidentally killed, and "I," says the boy, "immediately mounted in great haste and, taking such followers as were at hand, set out to secure my throne." He succeeded in holding it, nearly lost it by trusting a traitor who was "the best player at leapfrog he had ever seen" and actually lost it by grasping at the possession of Samarkand. Then came two years of wandering. Then he got Ferghana again and lost it a second time by trying to make his Mongol soldiers restore their loot to the peasantry. And all this before he was seventeen! Thirty-two years later he died, the last scene being the most striking of all. His darling son Humayun was desperately ill. Only some great sacrifice could save him, said the doctor. He entered the chamber, walked round the bed three times, saying, "On me be thy suffering," and a few days afterward died.—London Spectator.

Concerning His Kissing of Her.

Only one person with a mean disposition would have figured out this little prose poem. It runs as follows:

Which do you think is the greatest sinr?

DID he kiss her?

Did HE kiss her?

Did he KISS her?

Or,

Did he kiss HER?—Cleveland News.

Hasen't Got Space.

The pinnple head that thinks he is running a newspaper up at Erie, says he will not use space on leave out "news" to answer "That Sunbeam, published on scandal a'fr." Why don't the idiot admit the trouth, which is; that he is about as well qualified to take care of an edditorial controversy, after he has stird one one up, as an old hen is to take care of a flock of young ducks, which she has hatched out, when they come to a pond of water, for when the ducks goes in swimming all the old hen does is to stand and sputter on the bank. He has been picking on THE SUNBEAM for the past two years and leaving out some of his valuable "news", and now the dard fool hasen't time to answer. The fact is he can't answer, for he has not got brains enough to fill a mustard seed, and how could he answer a live newspaper. He never wrote an editorial in his life and has not got brains enough to write up a history of his bed bug fights that he has had in the claim shanty at Erie which we think would make more interesting reading than some of his "news," that he is so afraid of leaving out.

ABOUT THE LADY DOLPHINS.

Child's Inquiry Natural, Perhaps, to One of Her Sex.

A theatrical manager at the Players' club said of the school of classical dancing that Miss Isadora Duncan conducts:

"Miss Duncan hears some quaint remarks as she converses with her child pupils. One day, preparatory to the first lesson in a dolphin dance, she delivered to her class a little lecture on this fish. She described the grace of the dolphin, and afterward she described its habits and mode of life.

"'And, children,' she said, 'a single dolphin will have 2,000 offspring.'

"A little girl gave a start.

"'And how about the married ones?' she gasped."

"My son Clyde was almost completely covered with eczema. Physicians treated him for nearly a year without helping him any. His head, face, and neck were covered with large scabs which he would rub until they fell off. Then blood and matter would run out and that would be worse. Friends coming to see him said that if he got well he would be disfigured for life. When it seemed as if he could possibly stand it no longer, I used some Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Resolvent. That was the first night for nearly a year that he slept. In the morning there was a great change for the better. In about six weeks he was perfectly well. Our leading physician recommends Cuticura for eczema. Four Celebrations of New Year's Day

NEW YEAR is celebrated in this country at least on four different dates in addition to the regular national New Year's celebration on January 1. The first of these foreign celebrations will be that of the Greeks and Russians and a few other nationalities which adhere to old style dates. They will have New Year on January 14, 13 days later than the New Year of the new style. Next in order comes the Chinese New Year, on February 13, and, but a day later, February 14, comes the Mohammedan first day of the year. The Jewish New Year falls nearly nine months later, about the middle of September, on the first day of the month of "Tishri."

The celebrations vary both in accordance with the religions of the various peoples and their climatic, racial and national characteristics. With the Greeks, Russians, Servians, Bulgarians and Macedonians, all of whom adhere to the Greek Catholic church, New Year's is one of the most pleasant if not the pleasantest festival of the year. With the Jews, on the contrary, the New Year, Rosh Hashena, as it is called, is far from being a pleasant affair. It is a day of retribution, of judgment. It is preceded by weeks of prayer, fasting and penitence, and is followed by ten days known as the days of repentance, which wind up with Yom Kippur, the day of atonement, a most gruesome and weird day, dreaded by every orthodox Jew.

Greeks Celebrate Two Days.

The most interesting and joyous celebration of the New Year is that of the Greeks. The Greek New Year lasts two days. In these two days the Greek nature with its unbounded joy of life comes into its own. The heart of every Greek thrills on that day with unbounded joy. Passionately he awaits the evening, when in his little Greece, in a genuine Greek restaurant, with male cooks and attendants, he can get his genuine Greek food, Hellenic dishes, and wash them away with Greek wine which was purposely imported into this country for the holidays.

"Christmas is a great holiday with us," said a prominent Greek, "but it is after all a solemn day. It is a religious holiday. No gifts are exchanged on Christmas and the three days which the holiday last are given over to religious meditation. How different it is with the New Year! Next to our national holiday on March 25, which commemorates the date of our independence, just as July 4 commemorates the birth of the American nation, New Year's days, for we have two of them, are our greatest holidays. In Greece New Year is essentially a family holiday. There we have a children's afternoon which is devoted entirely to the young ones, who are given the utmost opportunities to enjoy themselves. In this country, however, it is slightly different. Out of the 13,000 Greeks living in Chicago only 200 have their families here. There are only between sixty and eighty children, and as we are only just planning to build a school of our own, we have not yet the means nor the call for a children's afternoon on New Year's day."

Still, many of the Greek families will observe this ancient custom in this country. They will have their children's afternoon. They will have their delicious New Year's pudding known as "king's pudding." In fact, in many cases the pudding will be even more delicious than it would have been in old Athens. For one of the ancient customs among the Greeks is to hide some gold coin in one portion of the pudding and he who gets the share of the pudding with the gold coin in it becomes the favorite as well as the leader of the two days' joy and sport. In this country, where gold is more plentiful than in Greece and where it is more easily earned by the Greek father, the pudding promises to contain more gold and be much more delightful to the finder of the same.

Perhaps the most unique Greek dish on New Year's eve is the roast lamb, set up in Greek style, of which each son of Hellas must partake. The roasting of the lamb is attended with a great deal of pomp. The entire carcass of a lamb is set up on a pole and this is held over a fire until it is duly roasted. Then it is sliced and apportioned among the various persons present at the feast and the roast is eaten along with the other strictly Greek dishes and washed down with Greek wine.

Russians Like Our Food.

Russians in this country celebrate but one day, and they, too, attempt to produce a home atmosphere. However, home food is not thought of. The bread, the meat, and the wine of the United States are considered as good as and even far better than the products of their own land.

The Macedonians, Servians and Bulgarians celebrate the New Year, perhaps less elaborately, also on the same day as their Greek and Russian co-religionists.

The Turks celebrate their first of the year with the modesty characteristic of people who have not yet any hold on a place.

The Chinese will have their customary celebration of the Chinese New Year on February 13 with feasting and enjoyments with which the holiday is observed in the Celestial empire.

In striking opposition to the spirit of joy and happiness which pervades the New Year of the Greeks and Christendom generally is the New Year of the Jews. With the Jews, who also observe the New Year for two days, the days are not days of feasting and enjoyment but days of judgment. According to the belief of every orthodox Jew, every member of the Jewish race is tried on the New Year. The books kept in heaven are opened on that day, the record of each man for the year just ending is looked through, and taken under advisement for ten days. On the tenth day, the day of atonement, the fate of each man for the coming year is drawn up, whether he should live or die, prosper or be poor. On the day of atonement the fate is sealed and nothing can change it any more.

Chicago will see all the top-notch billiardists in a tournament for the 18.2 world's championship late in February or early in March, according to present plans of the moving spirits in the cue world. Hoppe, who relinquished the title for 18-inch balk-line, two shots in, will be one of the participants and the other stars will include Sutton, Slosson, Calvin Demarest, the former amateur champion; Morningstar and one other, probably Cutler. It was hoped that Jake Schaefer would be able to enter the tourney, but he has written the promoters from Denver that his health would not allow him to return to the east before spring. Just at present Schaefer is not even practicing at billiards, so he would be in no form to contest with such a galaxy of talent. All of the stars expected to enter are busily engaged in practice matches at 18.2 now, and the event looms up as one of the most interesting billiard affairs ever given. Chicagoans will be especially interested in the showing of Calvin Demarest. It will be the first big tourney for the youthful cue marvel, and his friends are anxious to see what he can do when stacked up against the best professionals. That Demarest will some day be the champion of champions is the firm conviction of lovers of billiards in Chicago. His playing has improved steadily, and at the present time competent judges are reminded by his playing of Schaefer when the "wizard" was at his best. Of course it is experience in crucial games that Demarest needs most of all. So fast has he perfected his style that Chicago critics say he needs only about two years more to distance the whole field.

Hamilton Fish, Jr., the newly-elected captain of Harvard's football team, is one of the best-liked athletes at Cambridge. As a member of a prominent New York family, and having come from St. Mark's school, Fish was naturally slated for Harvard's most exclusive undergraduate clubs. He is a member of the Porcellian club, and also of the Sphinx, Institute of 1770 and D. K. E. He rooms in Hampden hall, one of the many private dormitories at Harvard. Fish's home is at Garrison-on-the-Hudson in New York, and he is a son of Hamilton Fish, former assistant treasurer of the United States. As the result of his election to the football captaincy he will undoubtedly be chosen one of the prominent class officers next year at the senior elections. He will also be a member of the Hasty Pudding club in the course of a few weeks, when its elections from the junior class are held.

HAMILTON FISH JR.

In Johnny Evers, Chance has one of the quickest thinking players that ever stepped upon a diamond, and when Chance gets ready to quit Evers is his logical successor as manager. Evers is the only second baseman in a class with Lajoie. Evers, however, is still a youngster, while the Nap manager has passed the zenith of his baseball career as a player. It was six year ago that Evers, a recruit from the Troy (N. Y.) club, joined the Cubs as an understudy to Bobby Lowe, who had been playing great ball for Chicago. He was only 18 years old then, and looked as if he should be attending grammar school instead of trying to make good with a big league club. Lowe broke his leg, however, and Evers was sent to second. Immediately the baseball writers began to rave about the kid second baseman, and for six years they have never ceased, for he has never gone back. When Lowe recovered he never had a chance to resume his regular position, and finally was released. Good a manager as Chance is, it is doubtful if he has anything on his youthful second baseman when it comes to possessing baseball acumen. The "Kid" lies [illegible] nights to think out plays and [illegible] problems. Schools for Missionaries.

The immense Northfield schools and colleges for the training of missionaries and preachers were erected out of the profits derived from the sale of Moody and Sankey's "Sacred Songs and Solos." Miss Ada Ellen Bayly ("Edna Lyall") built St. Peter's church, Eastbourne, England, with part of the money she received from "Donovan" and "We Two." She also presented a fine peal of bells to the neighboring church of St. Saviour and christened them after the heroes of her books—Eric, Hugo and Donovan.

Quaint.

Prof. Brander Matthews, the brilliant writer and teacher, was discussing literary quaintness at Columbia. In illustration of the quaint he said:

"A little girl I know was very bad one day. She was so bad that, other corrections failing, her mother took her up to her room to whip her.

"During this proceeding, the little girl's older brother opened the door and was about to enter. But in her prone position across her mother's knee the little girl twisted 'round her head and said severely:

"'Eddie, go out! Can't you see we are busy?'"

"The Last Best West"

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

The government of Canada now gives to every actual settler 160 acres of wheat-growing land free and an additional 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. The 300,000 contented American settlers making their homes in Western Canada is the best evidence of the superiority of that country. They are becoming rich, growing from 25 to 50 bushels wheat to the acre; 60 to 110 bushels oats and 45 to 60 bushels barley, besides having splendid herds of cattle raised on the prairie grass. Dairying is an important industry.

The crop of 1908 still keeps Western Canada in the lead. The world will soon look to it as its food-producer.

"The thing which most impressed us was the magnitude of the country that is available for agricultural purposes."—National Editorial Correspondence, 1908.
